Mrs. Ellsworth W. Millett

16 Dalton Street

Waterville, Maine November 1966

Dear Friends,

I am very grateful to have this opportunity to thank the many alumni and friends who have been so generous with their thoughts and prayers for the members of Bill's family.

It has been a great source of strength to me to have your cards, notes and telegrams as reminders of your love and appreciation of his life's work.

May God bless you all and keep you interested in the welfare of the college that Bill loved so well.

Most sincerely,

Mary R. Millett

At an offcampus football game some seasons back, an alumnus tells of spotting Bill Millett across a swath of green lawn. It was his first sight of him in a dozen years; their previous meetings, too, had been both infrequent and brief. Bill saw him in the same moment, and began moving toward him in his deliberate way (he always reached you before you expected him to), hat at a jaunty angle, hand raised in greeting. The alumnus recalls the sight that soft fall afternoon: Bill, framed by shadowed trees and bright sunlight on gold and red maples, smiling his certain weathered smile — and hailing him by a nearly-forgotten nickname.

It was Bill Millett who always remembered. Anyone, they contend, can memorize, using the process of association and other crutches. That is, if one lacks the gift Bill had, a talent extending beyond name/face; he knew exactly what you were up to and what you had done. In talking together, you had the feeling you had picked up a conversation where it had left off — maybe years before.

In such a person is a particularly beautiful warmth. One is always delighted to see him. His life and work are intricately enmeshed; we speak of it as being 'committed.' It was often said of Bill that 'his life became the college.' It would be more accurate to say his life became, on the instant, whatever he undertook and, happily, much of this had to do with Colby College.

There is no way to say how he is missed. It must suffice that a warm and gently-humored man is gone, one possessed of an extraordinary ability to 'include you in' — to make you part of his own personal existence. With less fine memories, we can still hold that picture of the northern sun on fall-colored trees and recall the sight will never again be quite the same.

‘Through love we learn the deepest truth’

A remembrance

J. Seelye Bixler
PRESIDENT EMERITUS

THERE WAS A REMARK MADE BY SOMEONE WITH a gift for characterization and classification (it may have been Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick) and the remark was that people are divided into two groups — those who are part of the problem and those who are part of the answer. We who were friends of Bill Millett's think of him as part of the answer and not only in that he helped us to solve our problems by showing how easily problems could be solved when approached with love and friendship and the spirit of understanding. Not only was Bill so very skillful in that, but he also showed us what the answer is — the answer to life.

There is a phrase which is common to modern literature that I keep running across again and again: “Man has become a problem to himself.” Well, he has become a problem because he is frustrated about the means he should take to achieve his ends, and also because he doesn't really understand what his ends are. I think Bill did understand what the ends of life are, and, I think he was very eloquent in the way he showed us them. Bill, by the manner of his living, helped us to see what the good life is, helped us to see that it is attainable, and, that in essence, it's a fairly simple thing, something that people can keep before them and can win if they will expend the effort that is needed. This, I think, was part of the secret of the inspiration that Bill held for us.

I know I felt as if I knew Bill a long time before I saw him. The year before I came to Colby I'd be sitting there in Cambridge and every so often someone would appear from Waterville. Of course, they were trying to see what the new man was like and get a line on what might happen. And sooner or later the visitor would always say, “You know, there's a very exceptional person at Colby named Bill Millett." Naturally my curiosity was aroused. I was interested to see what Bill was like, and when I did get to know him I could understand just what it was these people meant when they talked about him so much.

Like everybody else, I saw the very exceptional quality in Bill — that extraordinary capacity for loyalty: loyalty to persons and to ideas and to causes with which he was concerned. I think that one can describe that loyalty as love tempered by and directed by imagination. That is Bill was not only lavish with his love but he was lavish with his love in an imaginative way.

Bill loved his friends with imagination. He knew the particular things his friends needed and the particular ways in which he could be useful to them. We all know that nobody was so eager to give, so eager to give gifts as Bill. And the gifts were tailor-made: they were gifts on which he had spent thought. It wasn't as if he had sent an order to the store and said "Send so much of this to such and such a person" — it was something which took thought and sensitivity and understanding. Bill knew what a gift should symbolize.

I can't resist telling a very trivial anecdote to illustrate how much further Bill's interest of this sort went than he sometimes knew. In 1951 we were abroad, and Bill, as always happened when we travelled, kept sending us clippings about Colby and about Waterville and about Maine and about sports, and one day in 1951 I was in Austria and the American GI's were patrolling. I happened to be out without my passport. I was asked for it and I said I didn't have it. To try me out he said, "Where are the White Sox?" I said, "Well, the White Sox are in fourth place and the Yankees are third, the Red Sox are second, and Cleveland has taken the lead." So he said, "Pass, Friend." And I thought, "Well, this I owe to Bill Millett" — Bill had kept me posted on the American League!

BILL KNEW WHAT THE OLD NEEDED; HOW MANY older people he kept corresponding with! He knew what the young needed; quicker than anybody else he sensed when a person was in trouble. Bill always reminded us that such and such a person was having this or that other kind of difficulty. His heart was wide enough to take in all these different circumstances, and his sensitiveness was most acute. I think I'd like to emphasize again that his love always expressed itself with imagination. For example, when Bill was a coach he used to take the boys on athletic trips. Well, now Bill didn't simply look after their physical needs. Bill took these boys to art galleries, to museums, and he said, "Now here's your opportunity; this is the thing that you should be interested in." That was the kind of imagination he showed; he saw an opportunity for a boy to expand and enlarge his interest.

I used to feel when we got into a jam over some personal issue I would appeal to Bill and say, "Now, Bill, what is this situation all about, what is this person thinking?" And Bill always was helpful; he was perfectly extraordinary in that regard. He seemed to have a kind of intuitive sense: "This is the way the person feels; this is the way he should be met," and so on.

He had a chuckle and a laugh that expressed good fellowship fully as much as it expressed humor. I remember a little private joke we would resort to sometimes on alumni trips when we were tired or low in spirits. I would refer to the time when we at Colby had an unbeaten season in football (it was a time when Bill was coach). Now this was during the war and we had a limited schedule. We had two games,

'A feeling for what is ultimately good in itself'

both of them with Bowdoin, and the first we won and the second was a tie. Bill and I always referred to our unbeaten season: "We were right up there with Notre Dame," we said, "and we had nothing to be ashamed of here!" And so when things got a little thick I'd say to Bill, "Well, remember the unbeaten season when you were coach," and Bill would always respond with that marvelous chuckle.

On these alumni trips we'd go to the alumni dinners. We'd heard each other's speeches and we knew what we were going to say. Bill had heard mine so often that he could repeat it verbatim, and when I'd come to the point where I was going to tell a joke (and Bill would feel the joke coming), he'd start to laugh. I'd start the joke and long before I'd reach the end, Bill would be laughing, and everybody would work into such a feeling of good humor that it didn't matter whether the joke was any good or not.

WHAT WAS HE MOST LOYAL TO? LOYAL ABOVE all to Colby College. That was his greatest love and great loyalty. But he was loyal to Colby with imagination. Now Bill belonged to the old college; he grew up in the old Colby. But as we went around to alumni meetings, again and again I've heard him explain to alumni who didn't seem to understand what the new Colby was all about: "Why, this is the outgrowth of the old Colby, this is what the old Colby was reaching for." Bill had been caught by the vision of Dr. Johnson, as Ernest Marriner had been caught, as Galen Eustis had been caught. Bill also felt the new college was a fruition of what the old was attempting to do, and he was very eloquent, very persuasive, on this behalf.

We were criticized by the students and others in those days for using the expression 'the Colby family,' but sentimental as it is it's a wonderful expression, and Bill not only used it but lived it. I think he gave us a feeling of the kind of family life that Colby could have as well as anybody ever did. You must have heard Bill say, "Every day I've worked for Colby—nearly forty years—I've been happy in my work, happy because the college is what it is and I'm so glad I can fit into a place in it."

Those of you who received letters from him know that towards the end of his life (and I mean not very recently when he was ill, but beginning about six or seven years ago) a tone of sadness came into his letters. It was inevitable for a person as sensitively attuned as he to the lives of other people. But so often Bill would say, "Well, so and so has died" or "So and so has had an accident" or "So and so has been in the hospital." And then always: "Too much unhappiness in the world." That was the theme which became so (I won't say dominant) pervasive in the letters which came toward the end. Bill lived in the kingdom of ends; I mean by that he lived in the presence of those things which are worthwhile in themselves. There are people who live for money, which is a means, or political influence, which is a means, or power. There are others, like the artist, who see beauty as something which you don't bargain with, which just is what it is in its own goodness. Or like the moralist who sees the law of righteousness as something which in itself has a right to make its demands on us. Or the philosopher with his love for reasoning.

Now Bill found his ends in the realm of friendship. He loved his friends for what they were, not for what they could do for him. There was no feeling of a transaction, no bargaining. Bill moved from this particular end—the end of friendship—to a feeling for what is ultimately good in itself, a feeling for the religious. It is that which, in its own goodness and perfection, has a right to make demands on us that we must not question.

WE ARE LEARNING A GREAT DEAL FROM THE present student generation, magnificent young people that they are. But there is one emphasis they make which seems to me to push to its extreme. They are very eager for integrity, which is a marvelous thing. They seek what they call their identity which becomes an almost excessively individualistic thing. Their favorite quotation, of course, is that marvelous "To thine own self be true and it follows as the night the day thou canst not then be false." But I have sometimes wondered whether Shakespeare put that into the mouth of Polonius just because Polonius was a sort of half-way intelligence — and that's a half-way truth. To thine own self be true — yes, but how can you be true to yourself without being true to that which is greater than yourself, that which is other than yourself?

And that's what Bill knew. He was true to himself because he was so true to others than himself and to that which was greater. And so I think that the excessive emphasis on freedom (which sometimes becomes a freedom to be alienated) is corrected so beautifully by Bill with his knowledge of the freedom to join, the freedom to be with, the freedom to share.

In writing those alumni letters, Bill used to end rather quaintly with a list of those who had died and then he would say, "We bow our heads in prayer for our departed friends." Well, we bow our heads in prayer for Bill and with thankfulness for what Bill taught us of life and now, I think, of death. Death can't be so bad if people like Bill face up to it and experience it this way. I saw an article which said, "Let's face it — we're alone in life, we're alone in death." Bill shows us how shallow that is. We aren't alone in life and we aren't alone in death.

One of the great philosophers of the day has made much of the fact that death is the great individualizer, it cuts us off, it's a private thing. Of course there's truth in that, but it's not the whole truth. Death is what comes to all of us, we're all looking forward toward death, it's a shared experience, and Bill I think shows us the manner in which it can be shared. If we share the experience of death as we share the experiences of life, with love, then we are sharing an understanding that death is a part of life, nothing to be feared in itself but something which in its commonness is what we must accept. So Bill taught that through love we learn the deepest truth, and he exemplified the statement that William James made in referring to certain types of teachers: "Certain persons do exist with an enormous capacity for friendship and for taking delight in other peoples' lives, and such persons know more of truth than if their hearts were not so big."

Portrait of a College

ROBERT E. L. STRIDER

The title of this discussion may be understood from an analogy. One is familiar with the four Gospels in the New Testament. Three of them, namely the Gospels according to St. Matthew, St. Mark, and St. Luke, are generally known as the Synoptic Gospels. We might think of them in a way as photographs embodying the life of Jesus. These photographs are taken from different angles, of course, and some of them very artfully, especially that of Mark, rich in symbolic suggestiveness. If there were a photographer's award, my opinion is that Mark among the Synoptic Gospels would be the winner. Nevertheless, these three Gospels resemble photographs in that they are biographies, an art form that was well known in this era contemporary with Plutarch, constructed from certain written records and embellished here and there with elements from oral tradition.

The Gospel according to St. John, on the other hand, might be described as an imaginative portrait. It is less precise in its delineations but more profound and more revealing of the significance of the life that it describes.

What I would like to do is suggest some of the elements that I would hope to find in a portrait of Colby College. My remarks would not be useful if they represented merely a set of photographs of the college. Here, like the Gospels, different photographers would probably develop images of the same subject. It is very helpful for photographers to do this kind of thing, and indeed, here on the Colby campus those of us who observe the college scene continually do just that. The columns in the Echo, for example, do not always seem to me to be describing the college I think I am working for. There are trick photos and enlargements and treatments of interesting angles and shadows. On this occasion, however, I intend to deal with the general and the abstract, and to attempt to suggest not only angles and shadows but planes, balances, parallels, and perspective. Certain photographic asides will be inevitable, but it is in the context of an imaginative portrait that I wish to suggest some of the things we should aim for.

The first of the elements I would point to might be described as a combination of continuity and contemporaneity. Here again an analogy to the Church is illuminating. The Holy Communion (or Eucharist, or Mass) and the sacramental traditions of the Church represent continuity. The theologians who argue the current 'Death of God' position, and such major figures in Church affairs as Bishop Pike might be said to represent contemporaneity. To pursue the parallel, the academic program of the Colby of today has elements of the old (the classics, history, literature) and the new (nuclear physics, ecology, and explorations of the interdisciplinary area of human development). In our social affairs, whereas fraternities were originally founded as literary societies, symposia and discussion groups have taken their place toward this end. The Peace Corps and visita have in a way taken a good deal of the place of the urge toward missionary service. There is activism and there is involvement. And yet there is continuity evident in the similarity of the motivations. Or, for that matter, take architecture. The particular problem at Colby (it might be described as photographic) comes into focus in terms of general principles, and the board of trustees has arrived at an understanding of what these principles imply (here the analogy to the portrait is relevant).

A second element that we must strive for in a college is intellectual rigor. In many ways learning itself is more rigorous, or is thought to be, than in an earlier day. Yet we must not forget that classical learning was rigorous too, and we cannot be condescending to the Colby that produced in the half century between 1870 and 1920 a number of distinguished graduates. One of them was Albion W. Small, later president of the college and, while he was at Chicago, founder of the science of sociology. Another is Henry R. Spencer, chairman for several decades of the department of political science at Ohio State University. Another is Marston Morse, certainly one of the preeminent mathematicians of the present day, who has been for some years a member of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton. Another is Frederick Pottle, the eminent Boswellian and professor at Yale.

We must remember that the forms in which educational rigor expresses itself may change from decade to decade, but the principle remains the same. The answers to questions may prove to be different, but the questions repeat themselves. Asking the right questions is more important than getting the right answers, especially when too many of the most important questions either there are no right answers or we will never know what they are. Our present day task at Colby is to devise ways of asking these questions and of stimulating students to try to answer them. Students and times change, and those things that were satisfying to Albion Small are not satisfying to the students of the nineteen-sixties. We have therefore developed the January Program, Program II, courses in Far Eastern language and culture and in Indian thought, and the interdisciplinary area of human development. When we talk about a poem we do not discuss its 'message.' We try to see it as a whole in which form and content are inextricable. We approach mathematics from a functional and even esthetic point of view. We are likely to look at history as 'problems' rather than a series of dates and events. These observations (which might fall into the category of photographs) suggest the validity of the principle that intellectual rigor must be maintained. We want the students at Colby today to emerge with inquiring as well as well furnished minds, that they will in the course of an educational career glimpse something of what it means to be human.

A third element is freedom. Freedom is the basis of our way of life, and the president of the United States gives medals for it. But, as E. B. White said when he received his Medal of Freedom here at Colby, "Freedom is an elusive thing." We have wrestled with it from the point of view of academic freedom, and during those years when the disclaimer affidavit was a built-in part of the National Defense Education Act Loan Program, we felt so strongly about it that we withdrew from the program until the offensive provision was removed. We think academic freedom involves the right to say what one thinks and to explore any avenue toward truth for both students and faculty. As for social freedom, we applaud the pursuit of this objective but we recognize that this kind of freedom, as all kinds of freedom are, is of itself limited. There is a difference between freedom and license. As Milton said in the Areopagitica in 1644: "I cannot praise a fugitive and cloistered virtue, unexercised and unbreathed, that never sallies out and sees her adversary, but slinks out of the race, where that immortal garland is to be run for, not without dust and heat." And yet Milton himself, a few years later, deplored in one of his great sonnets what he regarded as the degeneration of that freedom which he had eloquently defended into mere license. Freedom brings and imposes responsibility, and the balance between the two we must constantly seek.

A fourth element in this portrait of the college must be integrity. There is nothing more difficult to define and to achieve. In our present era the philosophy of "Everybody else does it so why shouldn't I?" is espoused even by national leaders. It is easy to impugn someone else's integrity simply to argue the case for one's own disagreement, but it is difficult to define the dimensions of one's own integrity comprehensibly. Yet this is something that must be done. Surely a college must strive to live within a context of integrity. For example, to lapse once again into photographic rather than imaginative terms, I have long been concerned that a proper honor system has not been made to work at Colby. Without such a system as a manifestation of integrity the college will crumble at the edges and go soft in the middle.

The final element we might call spirituality. This is not exactly the word but it comes fairly close. The transcendent reality of the intangible must not be lost sight of. Indeed, it must be emphasized. This is one reason why colleges think it important to have chapels and chapel programs. It would not be appropriate in an institution such as ours for a chapel program to be doctrinaire, for there are many ways of discerning the transcendent reality of the intangible. It is part of the total intellectual, emotional, and spiritual experience of the college years to explore them. For some, an orthodox and even fundamentalist approach to the principles of Christianity is most satisfying and revealing. For some, an exploration of ethics alone is the appropriate avenue. Literature and the arts provide records of the moments of highest intensity in the greatest minds in human history, and the philosophical and scientific treatises of Spinoza, Newton, Kant, or Einstein likewise attest to the incontrovertible fact that our lives are made up of more than biology and chemistry, or dollars and cents.

In our groping toward a program to provide for us the community we seek to have on Mayflower Hill, we must of necessity deal with specific measures and possibly radical changes. They must be seen, however, against an imaginative backdrop involving continuity and contemporaneity, intellectual rigor, freedom, integrity, and an awareness of the reality of spirit. These are elements in the portrait we have been painting. As the great painter, Whistler, once remarked, "It takes many years for a man to begin to look like a good portrait." This axiom is no doubt as true for institutions as for men. A good portrait, furthermore, can serve as the guiding beacon while we grope our way.

'70 - a profile

The Class of 1970, of 366 students (twenty-one are enrolled in PROGRAM II), represents an enrollment of forty percent of those offered admission. This was fairly evenly split, with men at 39%, women at 41%. Public schools sent 281, private schools, 85; and there were sixteen valedictorians and eleven salutatorians. 155 of 178 women were in the top fifth of their classes; 107 of 188 men were in that rank. And there were 37 sons and daughters of alumni, and 40 with other Colby relatives (picture, page 40).

A few generalizations about this profile were suggested by the dean of admissions, Harry R. Carroll:

We are now at a point where over 70% of our entering students rank in the top one-fifth of their graduating classes and where their median college board aptitude test scores are at the level of the top 17% of seniors who enter college. As in past years, the greatest percent of our freshmen (66%) come from New England.

Our retention rate (the percent of students accepting our offer of admission) has decreased slightly again this year, even though the 'quality' of the class has improved. Apparently, we appeal to a number of well-qualified students who have multiple offers of admission.

The number and percent of the students entering from private preparatory schools has remained at about the level of the last three years (23%).

Notes & Comment

*Sturtevant, Leonard and Marriner;

The Naming of Halls

Leonard / Marriner / Sturtevant / Taylor — these are the names of the new residence halls being built on the hill west of Lorimer Chapel. They reflect, obviously, four men, each in his manner profoundly influential on the college's history and heritage.

Honorary life member of the board Neil Leonard '21 was chairman from 1946 to 1960 — the years of the move from downtown to Mayflower Hill. He was national chairman of the Ford Foundation Challenge Campaign and received an honorary LLD in 1958. Reginald H Sturtevant '21 was board chairman from 1960 until 1965 and headed the committee (1959) of selection for the new president following Dr Bixler's retirement. He received an LLD in 1963.

Dean Emeritus Ernest C Marriner '13 (LHD '53) has been known to more than four decades of students as librarian, professor of English, dean of men and dean of faculty. He retired in 1957 and was named college historian. Since 1949 a member of the state board of education, his books on history (KENNEBEC YESTERDAYS, HISTORY OF COLBY COLLEGE) are noted for being definitive yet full of wisdom and wit.

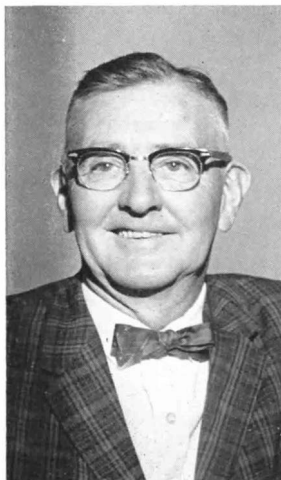

Julian Taylor, a professor of Latin for sixty-two years, died in 1931, a month after his retirement; his tenure is believed to be the longest of any college teacher in America. Four of the nine Colby presidents he served under had been his students.

Colby Night

Though the festivities were somewhat dimmed by Bill Millett's death, the returning graduates gathered to honor William A Macomber '27 and Dr Clarence E Dore '39 on Colby Night of Homecoming Weekend.

Macomber, who has served as director of adult education and extension since 1954, was told by President Strider that his "greatest triumph has been . . . success in building a most distinguished summer education program." Earle McKeen '29, in citing his accomplishments, closed his remarks with "This night we honor you, we salute you, and we love you for what you have been and what you have meant to your college."

Receiving a plaque, a Colby clock and a coffee table, and a book of letters, Macomber replied "I am glad to have been at the college during the period of its greatest progress and change. . ."

The tributes to Macomber, which were extended to his wife, Peg, also of '27, included a telegram from the former governor, John Reed, Alumni Council chairman Clifford Bean, Nathaniel Gallin, president of the New York Colby Alumni Association (who presented a plaque "for unselfish contributions to Colby") and Martha Rogers Beach, Alumni Council vice chairman.

More than 250 bulged the walls of Macomber's 'house' — Roberts Union — which he, with his wife, supervises. He was formerly a teacher, coach and principal in high schools in Maine.

Dr Dore, the college physician, was named Colby 'C' Club Man of the Year; 'C' Club member George Beach '41, recalling the "familiar figure and ever-present cigar," said that "Wearers of the 'C' salute you . . . by bestowing on you this coveted award. . . It is one way in which we all . . . can express to you our deep esteem and gratitude for the years of devoted service. . ."

Cornerstone

"Now we will have the varied facilities to suit the individual talents and needs of all," President Strider stated as the cornerstone of the athletic complex was laid on October 22. Among the articles placed in the stone were a photograph and description of the old campus fieldhouse, a listing of scores, dates and places of Colby's first competitions in intercollegiate sports, and a biography of Herbert E Wadsworth '92, for whom the original Mayflower Hill fieldhouse was named. Participating in the ceremony were Linnea Poulsen '67 and Richard Lemieux '67 for the students, trustee E Richard Drummond '28, Frank Carpenter '14 (member of the committee for the construction of the downtown fieldhouse in 1929), athletic department chairman John W. Winkin and Gilbert 'Mike' Loebs. Structure walls begin to rise on the hill. All foundation forms for the fieldhouse are done, and the contractor, H P Cummings Construction Co of Winthrop, Maine, has the walls underway. As for the residences and KDR house, blasting is completed and foundations, too, are complete. Stewart and Williams of Augusta are the contractors for this part of the building program.

Honor Roll

Annual Fund / 1965-1966

NOBUTAKA CHIGIRA '67

THE ANNUAL FUND FOR CONTINUING ACHIEVEMENT for the 1965-66 academic year was a spectacular success. There were those who thought our goal of a half-million dollars the product of over-enthusiastic idealism, reaching for an unattainable star. Colby had never before set sights so high.

And yet we made it, and more. When the final figures were in, our one-year total was $542,217!

The Alumni Fund raised $197,775, an increase of 165% since our last pre-Ford grant year. There were 2,901 contributors, representing 30% of the alumni body.

Our Colby parents, always a wonderfully devoted group, contributed a total of $57,324, nearly twice the goal they had set for themselves.

Friends, corporations, and foundations accounted for the remaining figure of $287,118.

To all those who helped Colby in this generous fashion we owe our deepest gratitude. This honor roll will tell you who they are. What this achievement will mean, in this year and in succeeding years, is the difference between a good college and an excellent college. This sum represents the income from $20,000,000 of endowment we do not yet have. Each year it will enable us to make appropriate advances in faculty salaries so that we can maintain our competitive position among colleges of our size and kind. Each year it will enable us to set aside still greater amounts for financial aid to students — already in this present year that figure is nearly three-quarters of a million dollars.

We knew that the impetus of the Ford Challenge Grant and the tremendous success of the Ford campaign would make it possible for us to reach for heights previously beyond our dreams, and to attain them. With the continuing generosity and encouragement of all our friends, the Annual Fund for Continuing Achievement will go still higher, alumni participation will climb still further, and Colby will prosper. In the meantime we are grateful to all of you beyond expression.

Robert E L Strider

BIG BANG A shaken Earl Smith, the college's news director, took the first photograph as a dynamite charge exploded in the shale ledge underlying the new dormitories. The second came a moment later, as smoke (and a few errant bits of rock) boiled up and out toward the picture-taker. Smith notes he has decided against any such further ventures.

Faculty

Leonard W. Mayo '21, professor of human development, has been elected to his sixth term as president of the International Union for Child Welfare; first elected in 1956, Dr Mayo addressed the general council of the Union in The Hague in August, and introduced Queen Juliana of the Netherlands.

Named assistant dean of men, Jonas O Rosenthal, assistant professor of sociology and formerly administrative assistant to the president. Rosenthal, on sabbatical this semester to fulfill requirements for his PhD (Pennsylvania), interned in academic administration at the Claremont Colleges in California last year.

The fifth visiting lecturer in philosophy from India is K. J. Shah, chairman of the philosophy department at Karnatak College in Dharwar. A graduate of Bombay, he holds his masters from Cambridge (1947); Shah is on the editorial board of the Journal of Indian Philosophy and a board member of the Indian Philosophical Association.

The Institute for Ecumenical Music has been established through the efforts of faculty member Adel Heinrich; she has been elected chairman of the Institute Council. The purpose of the national organization is to stimulate contemporary composition in sacred music; projects for the first year include commissioning of a major composition for chorus and symphony orchestra reflecting today's "spirit of ecumenism".

Notes

In November, WCBB, the educational television station operated and maintained by Bates, Bowdoin and Colby, observed its fifth anniversary. Its signal, a maximal 316,000 watts, reaches 8,000 square miles and some 57.6% (560,000) of the state's population. In-school instructional tv and adult education join with the regular Eastern Educational TV network programs to provide a five-day-a-week 'alternate' to the commercial stations.

The American College Public Relations Association awarded the college a certificate of special merit for 'total impact of publication program.' One of three given in this category nationally, this was the fourth national award Colby has received for its publications in the past four years.

Verse

Poetry, by Howard Mumford Jones (LHB '62 and commencement speaker that year) commemorating the cake (ALUMNUS, Spring 1966, p. 4) and Lynn Chadwick's STRANGER III (ALUMNUS, Fall 1965, p. 10).

Lines Suggested by the Photograph of a Welcome-Home Cake

Stray not, Strider, stray no more —
Do not get involved;
Consider Berkeley, I implore
Where nothing was resolved.

For Colby College is. God wot,
A pleasant plot of ground
Where kids can be serenely free:
And meditation seems to me
Worth more than campus riots be,
Or decibels of sound.

An Ode to Symbolism

When Robert Strider takes a stand,
He imitates the rocks of Maine;
Like armor he lights up the land,
His lengthy arm points o'er the plaine;
Through light and dark he stands and stays,
Stone bound and steel for days and days.

His head, determined, firm, and square,
Shows freshmen what a brick he is;
And there's a vague, paternal air
On what I take to be his phys —
But tell me why, Colby alumni,
Three-legged presidents are comely?

Chandler, with students following the 15th Lovejoy Convocation.

Lovejoy Fellow

Otis Chandler, publisher of the enormously successful Los Angeles Times, was named the fifteenth Lovejoy Fellow at the annual convocation in November.

A graduate of Stanford, he joined the Times-Mirror Corporation in 1953 (he had served in the air force), becoming assistant to the president in 1957 and Times publisher in 1960. He is presently a vice president of the Corporation as well as a director of several other publishing companies.

The Times, now rivalling its New York namesake, has one of the largest news 'enclaves' in Washington and has numerous bureaus throughout the world. The paper received a Pulitzer Prize (its fifth) in reporting for its coverage of the Watts insurrection.

In his speech, Why a Newspaper in an Electronic Era, Chandler took issue with Marshall McLuhan of Toronto; contending that the 'print media' will not become extinct, he cited man's 'acquisitiveness' — the desire to maintain "the intense identification (the readers) have with their newspapers." Chandler stated "A rapport 'develops' between a 'news personality' and . . . his audience . . ." thus insuring any lively newspaper of a fairly sure future even when pressed by the 'electronic media'.

President Strider, in his LLD statement, cited the Times and its "eminence as an instrument of social justice."

A giant lift for Colby track, already experiencing a renaissance under the exhilarating tutelage of Ken Weinbel, is the presence of Ethiopian speedster Sebsibe Mamo. Winner of the ECAC and IC4A freshman cross-country meets—with record-breaking times—he had run a 3:45.8 semifinal in the 1500-meters at the 1964 Tokyo Olympics. His time was equivalent to a 4:03 mile; Peter Snell of New Zealand was the 1500-meter winner in 3:38.

Mamo's time in the IC4A competition was 14:14.4 for three miles—a course record for New York's Van Cortland Park—and broke the 58-year-old event's mark by a minute and eight seconds. His ECAC time at Franklin Park, Boston, was 15:31, also a new meet and course high. He holds the Colby records, including a four-mile 21:51.

A Biddeford Peace Corpsman, Joseph Woods, met Mamo while teaching at the Haile Mariam Mamo School in Debre Berham. He persuaded him to come back to the United States with him, and to look over American colleges. Mamo enrolled in Colby last January, wrote a paper on Changing Concepts in African Literature, and settled into college life.

SPORTS

ONE VICTORY OVER New Hampshire (who later defeated Maine and lost to Massachusetts by three points) brightened a poor football season, and much of the trouble stemmed from the trouble in Bill Loveday's back. Without him effectively for part of the season, and not at all for the last games, the Mules couldn't put together a concerted attack. In losing to Bowdoin, they pushed the Bears all over the field for three quarters—and only scored once.

Sophomore Ed Woodin tried to fill the gap left by Loveday, and, though his quarterbacking was good, his lack of experience did show; especially in interceptions. These led directly to the wins by Trinity, Bowdoin, Maine and Bates. End Steve Freyer was outstanding on offense.

The Maine game ended the series that began in 1892—when Colby won 12-0. In 1895 the Mules piled up a 56-0 win; Maine scored 56-0 and 53-12 victories in 1955 and 1963. Maine, who holds the series edge, 47-23 (there were four ties), had won the last seven straight and 18 of the last 22.

A BUILDING season in soccer ended with a 5-6-1 record. The wins were over Boston U (2-0), Hartford (3-1), Bowdoin (1-0) and Maine (4-0, 2-1); losses were Bates (2-4, 1-3), Norwich (1-0), UNH (1-0), Bridgeport (4-0), and the tie was a 1-1 affair with Bowdoin.

CROSS COUNTRY fared better than in many years. The freshmen were undefeated (led by Sebs Mamo), and Ken Borchers and Tom Maynard led a successful varsity season.

Alumni Council

from the Chairman

This is the second article designed to keep you better informed of the council's activities and plans (as you will recall, the article which appeared in the summer issue of THE ALUMNUS enumerated the various working committees of the council and their chairmen). The purpose of this article is to describe in more detail for you the role and activities of one of these important working groups: the Alumni Fund Committee.

First of all, it is appropriate to spell out this committee's charter as described in the Colby College Alumni Association Constitution (as revised Feb. 23, 1963), Article VI, Section 3:

"There shall be an Alumni Fund Committee, the chairman and members of which shall be appointed by the executive committee (of the council). The duties of this committee shall be to direct the operations of the annual Alumni Fund for the best interests of the college and to secure from the members of the association and other interested persons voluntary contributions to the college through the medium of the Alumni Fund."

In actual practice this committee is involved in many aspects of our fund raising program: from making general policy and setting goals to working out, in conjunction with the development office, the mechanics of the various elements of the campaign. For example, at a September meeting of the Alumni Fund Committee (in Boston), the following items were completed:

- (1) establishing the 1966-67 goal of $225,000;
- (2) developing a schedule of solicitation mailings from the development office and the appeals to be used in each;

- (3) defining the role of the chief class 'fund raiser' in view of the proposed class organization plan being developed by the council;
- (4) formulating a plan to accomplish increased corporate matching gifts associated with individual alumni contributions;
- (5) preparing a series of 'messages' (to be delivered by President Strider at alumni club meetings) regarding uses made by the college of alumni fund contributions;
- (6) setting up the framework for a President's and Associates' Club of key donors, and
- (7) discussing general suggestions for improving our overall fund raising efforts.

This group covers much territory at each of its meetings, which number at least six per year. Naturally they work closely with Edward Turner, vice-president for development and Robert Bruce, director of annual giving, as well as with the development committee of the board of trustees so that the goals and policies are realistically and effectively implemented.

The hard-working members of this year's Alumni Fund Committee are: Arthur G. Eustis '52, chairman; William C. Foehl '59, Nathaniel M. Gallin '28, Helen Brown Gilfoyle '40, Robert S. Lee '51, Robert Sage '49, and Marion Drisko Tucker '24. These people serve you well because they serve Colby well. Our Alumni Fund — and you should recognize that it is truly 'ours' — is a significant part of Colby's overall financial program and contributes in a major way to student financial aid, faculty salaries, other operating expenses, the building program, and endowment.

I hope these brief articles are helpful to you in understanding what goes on within your Alumni Council. I would appreciate receiving any of your comments concerning them — including suggestions for future articles. Our next issue will include more information on the progress of our efforts towards building and strengthening Colby's alumni class organizations.

The Teachers

Four alumni — Maine educators for a combined century and a half — retired this spring.

Clyde Russell '22, honored at a dinner in May, retired after 21 years as secretary of the Maine Teachers Association. His work on behalf of better salaries (averages rose nearly $5,000 during his tenure), school consolidation, educational television, and retirement and sick leave benefits is well known, and his organization of MTA conferences for teachers and citizens instrumental in making the public aware of the needed educational advances in the state.

Russell, who had been a teacher and principal at Winslow High School for eighteen years, taught education at Colby from 1941 to 1945. He has been editor of THE MAINE TEACHER and is past president of Educational Press Association. In 1962 he received a doctor of pedagogy degree from Maine. He plans to continue management, with his brother, of the Pine Hill herd of registered Jersey cattle. His wife is the former Dorothy Garland '26.

Clair E. Wood '28 concluded nearly a quarter of a century as teacher and Waterville High School principal this June (he has been an educator for some thirty-seven years in Maine communities). Stating that he was "pleased to have had the opportunity to participate even in a small way to the development of secondary school education in Waterville," the former president of the Maine Principals Association and Maine Teacher's Association said that his long tenure had been both "pleasant and challenging." In addition to his principalships, he has served as director of the Boys Club and the Community Chest and his track teams at Waterville won five conferences, three state and one New England championship.

Members of the senior class of 1943, in a letter to the WATERVILLE SENTINEL, wrote of Wood: "His students loved and respected him, for he was one of the few dedicated to his chosen profession . . . It will be difficult for the city officials to find a replacement for (him) for they'll have big shoes to fill."

After forty-three years as a teacher of Latin, Mary E. Warren '23 leaves Waterville High School. A cum laude graduate, she also received her MA from Colby (1929); she helped found the Cum Laude Honor Society and has served as advisor and chairman of the faculty committee for all of that organization's twenty years. Miss Warren's devotion to the classics is legendary — a devotion that was instrumental in bringing about the rebirth of interest and study in that discipline. Memberships in numerous professional organizations (among them the American Classical League, Virgilian Society and Junior Classical League) and active participation in their programs have marked her long career. As marked are the legions of students who will always remember her teaching, and Miss Warren's memory of "the large number of challenging students she has taught."

The Gardiner area school district honored Raymond Stickney '29 and his wife upon their retirement at a dinner in May; both have served the Gardiner schools (he as high school principal, she as a primary teacher) for eleven years. Collectively, the Stickneys have some seventy-five years of experience in education.

Cited for a love and understanding of boys and girls, Stickney spoke of the exceptional educational advance that had been made in the decade of his principalship, and noted that it had been exciting to be part of that growth. He and Mrs. Stickney plan to live at their retirement home in Rangeley.

Pollution Control

H. Thomas Urie '20 has received two recognitions for his work in control of pollution. Sears Roebuck Foundation has named him Legislative Conservationist of the Year for "his efforts (in shaping) New Hampshire's water classification, aquatic weed control and sewage treatment programs." He was cited as "the kind of man we need in the never-ending conservation battle."

Urie was also made chairman of the Governor's Committee on Water Qualities and Pollution Control as a result of better than a decade of work as a member of the New Hampshire Legislature — the first state to grant 40% aid to towns and cities for the erection of sewage disposal plants.

Medical Boon

The first operative device to cure post-prostatectomy urinary incontinence, developed by John L. Berry '24, Chief of Urology Service at the Albany (N.Y.) Medical Center, has been used with great success. Dr. Berry, himself, has presented papers at leading hospitals and clinics, and the device was originally shown at the annual meeting of the American College of Surgeons.

Alumni Trustees

Nissie Grossman '32, Bettina Wellington Piper '35, and Eugene Struckhoff '44 were nominated alumni trustees at the fall meeting of the Alumni Council. Mrs. Piper and Mr. Grossman are renominated to the board.

According to the constitution of the Alumni Council (article VIII section 2) other alumni may be nominated by petition signed by 25 alumni and filed with the executive secretary. If there are no nominations by petition, the above named candidates shall be declared elected by the council at its annual meeting commencement weekend.

army hospital in England during second war, took part in a medical mission of twelve doctors from Albany to Algeria in 1963 during the revolution there. A severe shortage of doctors (some 1,900 had fled to France) prompted this mission of mercy to the beleaguered land. He has taught at Albany Medical College and also been a physician in Vermont and Connecticut.

In looking back, one discovers that Dr. Berry (whose two brothers attended Colby) was captain of the college's first recognized hockey team (1923), a football and baseball player and a trackman. He has established the John L. and Katherine Berry Scholarship for deserving students majoring in biology.

The Horner P. Little Student Commons at Clark University was dedicated in June in honor of the geologist's thirty-two years of service as professor and dean of the college. Dr. Little, who taught at Colby from 1910 to 1920, retired in 1954, and had also been director of Clark's summer school, officer of numerous community and professional organizations, and author of geological papers and articles.

50 Dean Ernest C. Marriner
17 Winter Street

Charles Dwyer '08, for many years athletic director at Hebron Academy and for whom the school's new athletic fields are named, now makes his home, together with Mrs. Dwyer, with their son in Glenn Falls, N. Y. . . Ernest Cole '12 has a story called A Community Hunting Match in the November issue of YANKEE MAGAZINE. It concerns an incident at Prospect Harbor when Ernest was a teenager.

Cyril Joly '16, vice-president of 'Fifty-Plus', leads a group of library trustees seeking additional land for the Waterville Public Library. . . Frank Carpenter '14, probably leads all other old timers in his persistent interest in Colby sports. Not only does he attend all home games, he also regularly shows up at the weekly luncheons of the Quarterback Club.

Frank James '15, a star pitcher at Colby and equally celebrated on the mound in the old New England League, was honored at a party given by the boys he coached forty years ago at Leominster (Mass.) High School. Frank now lives in Clearwater, Florida.

CLASS NOTES

With this issue, columns by class correspondents begin appearing in the class notes columns. Eventually, all classes will be represented by a correspondent, whose address will accompany his/her name at the head of the entry.

Because different people will be writing the notes, there will be variances in style, both of expression and of approach—a factor that should make these columns much more interesting to read.

Notes for correspondents' columns should be sent directly to the writers; notes for classes without writers should go to Colby's alumni office, to the attention of Sid Farr.

With hopes that this system, formerly used in THE ALUMNUS, will provide enlightenment and entertainment, and will give a broader view of alumni-alumnae doings and achievements, we wish you good reading!

. . . Roscoe Emery '07, was honored for fifty years of service to the Knights of Pythias at ceremonies in Eastport.

Their son Manley is a lieutenant colonel in the army stationed in Viet Nam. . . You all remember dear Professor Ashcraft. His widow Louise and son Tom, who now lives in North Carolina, came to Waterville again this fall to keep up their Colby contacts. They came to dinner at my home last year, so we are fortunate to keep in touch with them. . . I am back on a winter schedule at our Cumberland Library, where I have been a librarian for many years. Among the daughters of Colby for 1966 we are pleased to note the name of Jane Stinchfield, daughter of Ruth Hutchins Stinchfield. . . A. Frank Stiegler has been elected vice-president of the Woodsville (N. H.) National Bank.

Fifteen years ago Gus D'Amico became interested in art, and at the present time is unique among collectors.

Starting with a watercolor by Vincent Hartgen, he and Mrs. D'Amico now own over a hundred paintings, several hundred prints and engravings, one of the best collections of contemporary ceramics in America, as well as collections of sculpture, enamel and glass. They do not follow any specific trend, but buy what appeals to them.

Now a trustee of the Haystack School of Crafts on Deer Isle, Gus and Ruth are adding to their collection of glass — which is one of their newer interests.

Helping young artists along the way has also been one of their achievements, and many of their art works are bought from these young students. No wonder the D'Amico's say they are never bored. Their lives have been enriched by friends they have made, as well as by the pieces they have added to their collections.

It is easier to give than to give wisely

There is no finer way to show your lasting appreciation to your Alma Mater than by making a gift either outright or in trust. In these complex times, however, it is important that the gift be made in a manner that will be most beneficial not only to your college, but to your family and business as well.

Our experienced Trust Department will be glad to work with you and your attorney on the financial and trust aspects of an educational gift that will serve as your personal memorial in the years ahead. Write or telephone for an appointment now.

We'll be glad to send you a copy of "Facts Everyone Should Know About Charitable Giving," which you may find valuable at this time. Simply drop us a card today.

IN MEMORIAM

HONORARY

William Ernest Hocking, LL.D. '50, 92, died June 12 in Madison, New Hampshire. The eminent philosopher, author of some eleven books on idealism and pragmatism, studied at Harvard under the great 'philosophical four': Royce, Palmer, Santayana and James. "You have succeeded in combining their (James and Royce) special insights and adding others of your own in such a way as to make yourself the outstanding representative of the idealistic tradition in America today," read the citation for his honorary degree.

Hocking, who began as an engineering student, credited his change of direction to a reading of James' PRINCIPLES OF PSYCHOLOGY just before the turn of the century. He had been, until his retirement in 1913, Harvard's Alford professor of natural religion, moral philosophy and civil polity. He was Colby's Commencement speaker in 1950.

Linwood Leighton Workman, 88, died in Framingham, Massachusetts, on August 9. His long teaching career was highlighted by thirty six years as professor of social science and education at Framingham (Mass.) State Teachers College. He also taught science and mathematics at schools in New Hampshire, and was former principal of Southborough (Mass.) High School and Higgins Classical Institute.

Mr Workman, who received EDM from Harvard in 1927, was a member of Delta Upsilon and carried his interest in music from college, serving as choir director of Framingham's First Baptist Church for many years. He was co-author of the book, Testing and the Uses of Test Results, and had been in directorial positions in numerous educational and civic organizations. Mr Workman was instrumental in the drive to raise funds for the new campus and had been active in alumni affairs.

He leaves his wife, Mary, two sons, Linwood, Jr '40 and Edmund, who attended for one semester, and a sister.

Rex Wilder Dodge, 81, died on April 29 in Portland. A trustee of the college from 1915 to 1942 (he served the University of Maine in that capacity for six years), he was a native of Damariscotta and a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon. Mr. Dodge was a Representative to the State Legislature (1921), a director of the Chapman National Bank, and assistant to the president of Oxford Paper Company.

An investment banker, he was president of Charles H. Gilman Company of Portland until 1925, and was associated with H. C. Wainwright and Company from 1950 until the present. Mr. Dodge had been superintendent of Wilton Academy and for ten years an area manager of the New England Telephone Company.

He leaves his wife, Grace.

Charles Rush, 85, died on March 6 in Ashfield, Massachusetts. Superintendent of schools in the Barre-Hardwick-Petersham union for twenty seven years, he was a native of Holland, Vermont, and did graduate work at Harvard. He was former principal at Litchfield and Kennebunkport, and school superintendent for North Berwick-Wells district — all in Maine. In 1961 he and his wife, Maude, celebrated their golden anniversary.

Mr. Rush is also survived by his son Lewis '37 and a daughter.

Marguerite Robinson, 76, died in Putnam, Connecticut, on August 26. Formerly head librarian at New York State Teachers College in Cortland, she was a native of Waterville and prepared at local schools. Miss Robinson, a member of Sigma Kappa, received her BS in library science from Simmons in 1919 and did further study at the University of Chicago.

After several years of teaching in Freedom and Waterville, she accepted the librarian post in Cortland, serving there for thirty-two years until retiring in 1951. During 1940-41 she was chairman of the teacher training section of the American Library Association.

Miss Robinson leaves her sister, Esther Robinson Harvey '11. Her brother, Arthur G Robinson '06, died in 1964.

1918

Charles Hermes Piebes, 72, died in Tucson, Arizona, on July 29. From 1944 until his retirement seven years ago he was president of an automobile franchise agency in White Plains, New York; prior to that he managed Chevrolet Motors in Tarrytown. He leaves two sons.

1921

Bernard Elias Esters, 67, died in Waterville on July 18. The former publisher of the Houlton Pioneer Times had also served as a trustee of the college (1947-1953) and chairman of the alumni council (1944-45).

A native of Houlton, he prepared at high school there; at Colby he was on the Echo staff and was a member of Phi Delta Theta. Aside from his thirty five years as a newspaperman, Mr Esters was also active in politics; he was former chairman of the Aroostook County Republican Committee, and a delegate to the national convention in 1944. He served former Governor Clauson and present Governor Reed on the Executive council, had been recently named chairman of the board of voter registration, and was formerly director of the Maine Publicity Bureau and the New England Council. He had also been publicity manager for the Mayflower Hill development of the college campus.

A co-owner of WHOU in Houlton, Mr Esters had been president of Houlton's Chamber of Commerce and Regional Development Corporation, and was a trustee of Ricker College. His work for Colby was important through many trying years and he had been a generous benefactor.

Mr Esters leaves his wife, the former Marcia Davis '23, and a sister.

1923

Elton Stanley Kitchen, 68, died in Brunswick on July 11. A native of Palermo, he prepared at Cony High School in Augusta, and was a member of Kappa Delta Rho. He did graduate work at Harvard, Maine and California, and was a teacher and principal in Maine high schools for many years. Mr Kitchen also taught mathematics and coached skiing at Hebron Academy and, since his retirement in 1954, had been a substitute teacher and private tutor.

He leaves his wife, Lorene, a daughter, and two sisters.

Clarence Rodick Lyond, 66, died in Waterville on August 13. A native of North Vassalboro, where he resided at the time of his death, he prepared at Oak Grove and was a member of Lambda Chi Alpha. He received his B.S. from Harvard in 1932.

Mr Lyond was a teacher and principal at high schools in Liberty and in Brewster, Massachusetts. From 1928 until 1960 headed the science department at Weymouth (Mass.) High School; since his retirement he had been a chemist with the State Department of Health and Welfare in Augusta. He also held a professional certificate from Boston University and had done research for Bethlehem Steel Company.

He leaves his wife, Elsie.

1936

Arthur Oscar Brown, 54, died in Rochester, New Hampshire, on August 6.

One of the owners and vice-president of Brown and Horsch Insulation Company, he was a sports enthusiast, being a former president of the Rochester Little and Babe Ruth Leagues. At Colby, he played baseball, serving as co-captain in his senior year, and was a member of Delta Upsilon.

Mr Brown, who was born in Somerville, Massachusetts, worked in the sales departments of John P Squire Company of Boston and W H Cranton Company of Haverhill, before joining Brown and Horsch in 1948. Past grand-councillor of the United Commercial Travelers, he served on Rochester's zone planning board from 1958 until 1960.

He leaves his wife, Pauline, a daughter, two sons, one of whom is Paul '64, his mother and brother and two sisters.

Churches Were Cold

CHURCHES were cold in early Portland winters. The seats were hard and uncomfortable. The sermons and prayers were seemingly interminable. It was not until 1820 that stoves became common in meeting houses. Prior to that time foot-stoves of tin in a wood frame, containing a sheet-iron pan filled with live coals from the home fireplace were used to warm the feet of worshippers. But the church itself remained bitterly cold. Parson Smith and Dr. Deane mention in their book that the baptismal water froze so hard during the service, many times they could hardly break it.

The first house of worship in Portland to be warmed by stove was that of the Quakers, on the south corner of Lincoln Park. The stove was a large box-like affair set in the middle aisle, with loose bricks piled on the top. These bricks, when warmed by the fire in the stove, were taken to their seats by the members of the congregation, for the comfort of the warmth they held.

The stove was both a wonder and the subject of ridicule by the members of other churches, whose ministers and deacons were slow to adopt this "big city" idea of making worshippers comfortable.

Several years after the stove was installed in the Quaker meeting house, the First Parish Church on Congress Street purchased a stove. But the idea that it was just a "big city" luxury still held in some quarters, apparently, for when the church was demolished to make way for the present stone structure, there, hidden carefully in the rafters of the old church, were all the little tin foot-stoves, some with their owner's name painted on them. The wardens and vestrymen, in their wisdom, had these foot warmers carefully preserved, thinking, perhaps, that the new way of warming churches was just a short-lived Boston notion, and the little stoves would be needed again.
