MY HEART AND I

Enough! we're tired, my heart and I,
We sit beside the headstone thus,
And wish that names were carved for us.

BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG.

Leaving the burial place at Gettysburg from the South side, a visitor follows the crest of Cemetery Ridge, keeping before him the bold figure of Round Top Mountain as a beacon.

interested by a considerable accession of conscripts, and by the more important reinforcement of two divisions of Longstreet's corps that had been operating south of the James river.

To understand aright the initial movements of the campaign, it would be necessary to begin on the Rappahannock, and thence follow northward the advance of Lee's columns and the retrograde movement of the army of the Potomac.

But in another and larger sense, Gettysburg itself is the real high-water mark of the rebellion. For not only was Gettysburg in a geographical sense the most forward and salient point of the Confederate army, but it was upon that field that the Star of the Confederacy, reaching the zenith, turned by evil and headlong plunges toward the nadir of outer darkness and collapse.

Yet vast as is the accumulation of facts, memoirs, and monographs relating to the part borne by the Union army in that memorable contest, it is surprising how scant as yet is our stock of information touching the equally important part borne by the Confederate army.

It has been the good fortune of the present writer to have lately seen a considerable mass of manuscript official material touching the operations of Lee's army in this campaign; and from this, as also from details gathered in conversation with prominent officers of that army, it is proposed to make in this paper some notes on the Confederate invasion of 1863.

There is, first of all, to be noted one characteristic feature that distinguishes this campaign from all other operations undertaken by Lee, whether before it or after it. This is, that it was the first, last, and only campaign of invasion, formally designed as such.

The condition of the army of Northern Virginia was at this time highly favorable to a bold offensive of this kind. As General Lee was wonderful Gen. Longstreet has since told the present writer that the Southern army was then "capable of anything."

cent rains, and it was only after prodigious exertions that he gained the Maryland shore. Stuart then ascertained that the Federal army had crossed the Potomac the day before, and was moving toward Frederick, thus interposing itself between him and Lee.

Least it should be doubted that Lee originally designed crossing the Susquehanna. I add the following, hitherto unpublished extract from his official report in support of the assertion: "It was expected that as soon as the Federal army should cross the Potomac, General Stuart would give notice of his movements; and nothing having been heard from him since our entrance into Maryland, it was inferred that the enemy had not yet left Virginia."

If, however, it be asked what was Lee's ultimate design in this bold movement, an answer does not readily present itself. The plan was so audacious, so full of risk, that its justification would demand immense compensatory advantages.

Eight miles east of Chambersburg, the great road to Baltimore passes through the South Mountain range at the iron furnaces of Thad Stevens. Thence continuing eastward, it passes through the town of Gettysburg, which to Lee was an important strategic point, as it was there that the first roads east of the South Mountain range led southward to the Potomac.

While these movements of the Confederate army were going on, General Meade succeeded Hooker on the 28th, and the next day he put his columns in motion. Being ignorant of Lee's actual maneuvers as Lee had been of Hooker's, he adopted the only course then considered practical by him, which was to move his army northward, by the east side of the South Mountain range, toward the Susquehanna, until he should have caused his opponent to lose his hold of that river.

Now, it will be noted that when the corps of Hill and Longstreet were concentrated at Chambersburg, Ewell's corps, thrown far in advance, was operating toward the Susquehanna, and had occupied York and Carlisle. Lee was just on the point of putting Hill and Longstreet in motion to follow the path of Ewell, and cross the Susquehanna, when his purpose was stayed by intelligence received on the 28th of June, regarding the movements of his opponent.

As it may seem surprising that Lee was so ill-informed of his antagonist's movements as to have been unaware, until the night of the 28th, that the army of the Potomac had crossed the Potomac into Maryland, (the passage having been made two days before) it will be proper to point out the singular circumstance by which this came about. It has been seen in the citation already made from Gen. Lee's report, that when the Confederate Infantry moved into Maryland, Stuart, with the Cavalry, was directed to hold the passes of the Blue Ridge leading into the valley, as long as the Union army should remain south of the Potomac.

The condition of the army of Northern Virginia was at this time highly favorable to a bold offensive of this kind. As General Lee was wonderful Gen. Longstreet has since told the present writer that the Southern army was then "capable of anything."

Eleventh) and four Confederate divisions—the divisions of Heth and Pender, of Hill's corps, and those of Rhodes and Early, of Ewell's corps. This battle was fought upon a rolling plain, to the west and north of Gettysburg.

As the action was over by four o'clock in the afternoon, and as the Union troops retired through the town in wild disorder, and were with difficulty rallied on the crest south and east of Gettysburg, it has always been a matter of surprise why the Confederates did not follow up their success by seizing Cemetery and Culp's Hills; for had this been done, it is obvious Meade could never have made a stand at Gettysburg.

General Ewell was therefore restricted to carry the hill occupied by the enemy, if he found it practicable, but to avoid a general engagement until the arrival of the other divisions of the army, which were ordered to hasten forward.

By the following morning—Thursday, July 21—the whole of Lee's army had reached the ground, with the exception of Pickett's division of Longstreet's corps, which had been left behind at Chambersburg, to convoy the trains.

In the dispositions of the Confederate army previous to the attack, Longstreet, with the divisions of Hood and McLaws, held the right of the line of Seminary Ridge; Hill's corps formed the center, and was drawn along the same ridge to the Seminary, whence Ewell's corps, extending through the town of Gettysburg, skirted the base of Cemetery and Culp's Hills, in front of which the Confederate left rested.

The Confederate commander, in his official report, makes the following statement: "It had not been intended to deliver a general battle so far from our base unless attacked; but coming unexpectedly upon the whole Federal army, to withdraw through the mountains with our extensive trains would have been difficult and dangerous. At the same time we were unable to await an attack, as the country was unfavorable for collecting supplies in the presence of the enemy, who could restrain our foraging parties by holding the mountain passes with local and other troops."

But the former part of this statement is not ingenious. There was no obstruction in his withdrawing his trains through the mountains, over which he ultimately retreated after a damaging defeat. The real motive to attack is hinted at in the latter part, where Lee states that "the success already gained gave hope of a favorable issue," or as one of his lieutenants pungently put it in conversation to the writer: "Lee got a taste of blood in the first day's fight, and he then lost his head."

TEMPERANCE MASS MEETING IN BOSTON. Arrangements are being made by the various Temperance organizations in Massachusetts to hold a monster meeting in Boston during anniversary week. This is well. It is eminently proper that this reform should be represented on the occasion of the annual meetings of the various moral Christian enterprises of the day.

TAXATION AND REPRESENTATION.

President Johnson insists that taxation and representation should go together. He says: A great principle was to be restored, when our fathers were contending against Great Britain. What was one of the principal causes of their complaint? It was that they were denied representation. They complained of taxation without representation.

Good Food. It has been wittily said that "the way to a man's heart is through his stomach." Mrs. Sigourney, in describing her childhood's home, gives a new application to the proverb in the following common sense reflection: The provisions for our table, though simple, were always admirably prepared.

AN OUTSPOKEN SOUTHERN JOURNAL.—There is one paper in Mississippi which utters its sentiments with remarkable candor, and as it expressly claims to speak "in the name of the Southern people," some of its remarks may be worth quotation. It is the Clarion, published in Jackson, the State capital.

After some further congratulations as to the good results of Booth's deed, and praise of President Johnson, the Clarion peals forth as follows: "If Southern men do not admire and applaud such a man as this it is because the God that made them has reconstructed them in a manner hitherto unheard of—taking away their old heart and giving them instead a heart of dirt."

GOOD FEELING.—The following good-tempered extract is from the Norfolk Old Dominion: "The people of Virginia are to-day in the enjoyment of more freedom than they have possessed at any time since the spring of 1851. Every man can go about his business—make money—enjoy the fruits of his labor—rest secure in his house—express his opinions—vote as early and often as ever—and read what newspapers he chooses to buy."

TO HAVE SUNSHINE IN THE HOUSE.—Put the children to bed early, with light suppers that they may sleep well. They get up bright-eyed, clear-headed, sweet tempered, with sunlight in their countenances. Try it—and take a little of the prescription yourself. The effects are magical. So writes one who has tried it. Says that with well rested brains and limbs she does more in twelve hours than she used to accomplish in eighteen, and finds far less friction in the household movements now than then.

A colored man is serving on a jury in the Rhode Island Supreme Court, and a correspondent of the Providence Journal thinks such an event unprecedented in any State of the Union. The very same thing has happened at Worcester, Massachusetts, during the present year.

FARMING ON A SMALL SCALE. I have thought for some time of writing in relation to the farming operations of a neighbor of mine who conducts the business on a small scale, but with remarkable success.

His farm consists of only seven acres, yet the produce of that seven acres, last winter, carried through, in the best manner, 40 sheep, two cows, one horse, and he thinks he had hay enough left to have wintered two cows more.

According to some of our scientific writers, this early cutting of grass will ruin the sod, and cause it to run out. He thinks the reverse is the case, and I don't see why his practice does not prove it so, as he has followed this system for many years, and his grass sod has not deteriorated, but is steadily improving.

Visit his barn and you will not see a straw or an ort left in his yards or sheep racks, and his sheep will fatten without grain. When looking at his barn in the fall, some of his neighbors told him he could not winter what stock he had, but although his sheep were kept up till near the middle of May, he had hay enough left to nearly winter two cows.

The Maine Supreme Judicial Court has just decided a suit against a Life Insurance Company on a policy of $3000, in favor of Joseph Easterbook, Jr., late of Camden, deceased. The insured was in health when the policy was made, but became debilitated and eventually died, and in this condition committed suicide by shooting himself.

The New York Daily News devotes an editorial to wondering at the "remarkable accident" by which General Grant, "a man without any marked ability, fortunes or influence," stands at the head of our armies, while General Buell, with his "great abilities and rare accomplishments," favored with every advantage and opportunity, is "without fame and without position."

The Ellsworth American says Deer Isle is making history. There are five new cases for divorces from that Island on the new docket; and what is singular, and also bad for the fair record of a good name, all the parties in the male line of these tangled alliances, bear the name of George Washington.

A curious mouge has just been established in Jardin des Plantes. In an iron cage have been placed a young lioness, an Algerian wild boar and a little dog. This last is quite the master, the lioness generally amusing herself with teasing the boar. When, however, the lioness goes too far the dog interferes and re-establishes order.

The owner of a large dog at Grand Rapids, Michigan, placed a one hundred dollar looking-glass before the animal to worry him. The dog flew around, barking and growling. The owner was delighted, and cried "sick 'n'!" "The dog 'sick 'n'!" and the mirror and the "other dog" disappeared at the same time. The bystanders discovered at this point "where the laugh came in."

TOUCHING SERMON.—The editor of the New York Evening Post having attended a Quaker meeting in New Bedford, describes the preacher: Taking off her bonnet, she placed it in the hands of the sister next to her, and rose like the rising of a pure and timid star. With her arms folded and her eyes cast down, she uttered in a sweet womanly voice, but very clear and firm, "Blessed is he that considereth the poor;—the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble;—and a better or more touching sermon was not preached that day in all the world than she preached."

The President declares that in 1861 he opposed traitors North and South. Will he tell us what traitors he opposed North, except among a class of Democrats? who are now his prominent supporters? asks the Detroit Tribune.

CORPORATION MEETING.

The annual meeting of Ticonic Village Corporation on Monday last, was very fully attended. Hon. D. L. Milliken presided as Moderator, and the following officers were chosen: H. B. White, Clerk. Joseph Percival, Supervisor. C. R. McFadden, Treasurer.

SUPERVISOR'S REPORT.

The Corporation now own two Fire Engines, Ticonic No. 1, so called, a Munnean machine, has been in service 28 years, and is now in good repair. No. 3, a Button machine, has been in service 12 years, and has within the past year been overhauled and partly rebuilt, and put in thorough repair (by the Engine Company) at a cost of some $900, as will be seen by the Report of the Chief Engineer.

CHIEF ENGINEER'S REPORT.

The rolls of the Fire Department comprise at the present time 150 members. We have in service two Engines, No. 3 and new No. 1—both in good condition, and well manned. No. 3 having been rebuilt during the past winter, at a cost of some $900, which the Company has assumed.

low, and the same Engine went,—the fire was in Mr. Jones' House. Respectfully submitted, W. A. CAFFEY, Chief Engineer.

Messrs Editors:—It was our good fortune to attend the Prize Declamation of the Sophomore Class on Wednesday evening, and while we enjoyed the entertainment, and were much pleased with the exhibition of rhetorical skill on the part of the class, yet we were greatly annoyed by the loud whispering or talking aloud of some persons who no doubt would desire to be called gentlemen and ladies.

We thought it very strange that any one could thus disturb not only those who desired to listen to the declamation, but, in particular, those who were declaiming; and we felt like politely requesting them to leave the house, and, if they were so anxious to engage wholly in private conversation, go where they would not disturb others.

Besides the impoliteness of the thing it looked very ungenerous, when the Sophomore Class had provided a Band and had endeavored to the extent of their ability to make the exercises of the evening as interesting as possible, and when the entertainment was made entirely free, for any one to go there just for the purpose of annoying them.

We have mentioned these things hoping that those who acted thus may think of the trouble they must have given those who were endeavoring to please them, and that in the future they will either stay away from all such places, or, if they do attend, that they will endeavor to preserve due decorum.

PAINFUL ACCIDENT.—Mr. Elbridge G. Sawtelle, a well known citizen of Sidney, met with an accident on Tuesday afternoon, which resulted in his death on Wednesday evening. He was coming to this village with a loaded one horse wagon; and while descending the hill just below the iron foundry, the harness broke, and in jumping out he received some internal injury.

VALUABLE HORSES.—Those interested will find advertised in our columns three very valuable horses.—Gen. Knox, of world-wide reputation; Don Juan, a splendid representative of Drew stock, and Mr. Gilbert's Knox colt, which seems destined to take a stand among the notable horses.

Slavery is the same devilish spirit everywhere and under all circumstances. The recent attempt upon the life of the Emperor of Russia was by a person who felt he had been injured by the arbitrary liberation of the serfs.

BAPTISM.—Three persons were baptized at the Bay, last Sabbath, by Rev. Mr. Fernald, and with two others, were admitted to the church. On the same day two persons were admitted to the Congregational church.

OUR TABLE.

BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE for April has the following contents: Sir Brooke Fosbrooke part XI; Shrewsbury School, past and present; The Confederate War, part VIII; Miss Majoribanks, part XXII; Gynetics; O'Connell—Men and Women; A Comparison; Demology at Home and Abroad; The Condition of the Government.

THE NORTH BRITISH REVIEW for March contains articles entitled: Central Arabia; A Jacobite Family; Austria; Faust, a dramatic poem by Goethe; Ecco Homo, and Modern Skepticism; The Poems and fables of Robert Henryson; The Ecclesiastical Commission; Reform and Political Parties.

ANOTHER EXTRA NUMBER.—As with every previous number this year, the American Agriculturist for May comes in extra size (40 large pages). It is rich not only in excellent reading matter, but also, as usual, in many beautiful and instructive engravings.

RESIGNATION OF JUDGE WARE.—Hon. Ashur Ware has resigned his office of Judge of the District Court of the United States for the Maine District, to which he was appointed by President Monroe in 1822, and which he has held for forty-four years.

JOHN BRIGHT ON NEW ENGLAND.—Mr. Bright recently addressed a Sunday school conference in Rockdale, and dwelt on the need of furnishing education to the children of the poor. In Manchester and Salford, there are 50,000 children who are utterly destitute of instruction.

A RACY DESCRIPTION.—I flatter myself that I know something about the horse race. I had a passion for horse racing when a lad, and used to run horses with a neighbor's boy in Tompkin's lane.

GOOD FOR THE SEASON.—For a good tonic bitter—adapted to the season—invigorating to the system—giving an appetite—a genuine remedy without the use of medicine—"Gilmore's Bitters" will bear strong and honest commendation.

POOR LOGIC.

The revolutionists, the party of the New York "World" and "News," of Garret Davis and Saulsbury, are trying to induce the President to set aside the acts of Congress, on the ground that certain States are not represented in that body.

DURING the discussion on the bill to revive the rank of General in the United States army, Thaddeus Stevens said, alluding to the praises which had been showered upon General Grant by various members, that he was willing "to give to the hero, not only the office created by this bill, but a still higher office whenever the happy moment for doing so shall arrive."

THE LEWISTON JOURNAL says, the liquor sellers of that city have petitioned the City Council for remission of penalties which now legally attach to those convicted, promising to engage hereafter in a more respectable business.

THE WIDOW OF Johnson Hatch, late of Wells, Me., now, says an exchange, upwards of seventy years of age, relates the following: "Something more than thirty years since she heard a discussion in relation to how long the germinating principle in corn would continue good."

BRITISH HOLDERS OF REBEL SECURITIES.—On the first inst., the President sent a message to the House, enclosing a letter from Secretary Seward giving the result of his examination of various propositions from British holders of rebel debt for adjustment to the satisfaction of the United States.

THE PRESIDENT has transmitted to Congress statements from which it appears that the total number of pardons granted is 4446. A communication from General Howard, transmitted at the same time, shows that 400,000 acres of land have been restored to pardoned rebels.

THE SATURDAY PRESS sentimentally informs a correspondent that before doing anything for the "movement" to deliver Ireland from the British Yoke it would like to do something towards a movement for delivering New York from the Irish Yoke.

THE CLARION says the Skowhegan Bank, the charter of which has expired, pays a final dividend of five dollars a share to the stockholders on and after Monday, 7th inst.

HOW TO FRESHEN SALT FISH.—Many persons who are in the habit of freshening mackerel or other salt fish, never dream that there is a right and a wrong way to do it.

PETROLEUM COMPANIES.—By a statement made in the Philadelphia Press, it was seen that "oil" is more easily to be found on paper than in boring for wells.

WHEN HITCHINGS, the last surviving revolutionary soldier in the State, and the last but two or three in the Union, died on Thursday last at his residence in the town of Penobscot, in Hancock County, his funeral will take place with due honors on Monday next.

THE EAST MAINE M. E. CONFERENCE will meet in Waldoboro, May 17th.

RIGHTS OF MORMON MOTHERS.

In the case of Mrs. Brassfield, whose husband was recently assassinated in Utah, and who it will be remembered, applied to the court for the custody of her children, then in charge of another wife of the Mormon husband whom she had abandoned to marry Brassfield, Judge McCurdy has granted the petition, and restored the children to their mother.

A WORD TO THE WISE. Have you read the splendid inducements offered to canvassers and agents for THE AMERICAN STATESMAN?

A RIGHT SETTLEMENT. Major General Howard addressed the soldiers and sailors at Washington the other day—those who were present at the award of prizes for good land-filled penmanship. In the course of his speech he said:

As we stood steadfast in the field, so will we firmly adhere to our demand for a right settlement. Now is not time for us to put our necks upon the ground and allow our enemies to put their heels upon them.
