Jerusalem the Golden'
Where loftly they sing,
O'er pain and sorrow olden
Forever triumphing!
Lowly may be thy portal
And dark may be the door,
The measure is a reconstitution. The mansion is immortal!—God's palace for his poor.

Jerusalem the Golden!
There all our birds that flew,—
Our flowers but half unfolden,
Our pearls that turned to dew,
And all the glad life-music
Now heard no longer here,
Shall come again to greet us,
As we are drawing near.

Jerusalem the Golden!

I toll on day by day;
Heart-sore each night with longing,
I stretch my hands and pray
That midst thy leaves of healing
My soul shall find her nest.
Where the wicked cease from troubling—
And the weary are at rest.

[From The Lady's Friend,] JOCK. A TRUE STORY. BY MRS. M. A. DENISON.

"I don't iknow how to turn- I don't know what to do. If I could lose my senses, it seems to me I should be happier. If I could die—if -but no; the children-the poor children."

"Mammy," cried a sweet voice. The woman started, put down her ragged apron, and glanced up. A little face, exceeding fair through all the dirt, looked appealingly. "Black Dick's got my shoe; he's a sailing it down the gutter."

"If it didn't go that way, child, 'twould the other," said the woman gloomily; but, nevertheless she arose to go out in the filthy street and reclaim the shoe, which was not yet quite worn out.

Black Dick, however, was nowhere to be seen; so she returned with her slow, dispirited step, back into the place she called home. There another child awaited her-a boy, looking down from the perch he had mounted. I can't find no bread, mammy," he cried.

"There's no bread there to find." "But you said you'd buy some this morn-

"Your father took the money for gin," said the woman, bitterly.
"I'm hungry," said the boy, kicking his feet, sullenly. "Thou'lt have to go hungry, my lad," returned the woman, "unless—oh! how can I— only brother of the host and hostess, he could how can I?"

But she went out, even as she spoke, and pawned her w.dding ring. It brought her three shillings, every cent of which she expended in food, that was hidden as soon as she entered the house, save the portion she gave the children.

Poor Molly Mainright—hers had been a hard life. Poverty and drunkenness, twin evils, had always hovered about her path, since the very first year of her marriage. None at that time ever mistrusted that Jock, a fine straight young fellow, would become that hid-cous thing-a drunkard. But he had fallen every year lower and lower, till now, when little Bert was seven, and little Mary five, he was despised by everybody in the town. Molly had done her wifely best. Everybody advised her to leave him; but she had worked till her fingers were bent and brown, to keep her poor little family together. Now, however, it seemed as if the last straw had been placed upon her shrinking shoulders. He had been gone two days, she knew not where, only re-port said he had been raging about the street. drunk, of course, and perhaps had gone down to the river side and fallen in. Poor Molly's shrunken face looked ghastly as she sat considering. Two people who liked and respected her had wished to take her children; but how could she give them up? On the other hand, how could she see them living under such corrupting influences as that old court fostered; her fair-haired May—her bright, beautiful, dark eyed Bert? No wonder she felt, that day, as if some decision must be made; no wonder she longed for death.

"Be you have turned reformer, I hear," said one gentleman to another, as they walked together in a by street of Aberdeen.

There were three of them; two, tall, slender, clerical-looking men; the other, a merchant from America on a visit to Scotland.

shirtless neck. A tattered rag of cloth looped shirtless neck. A tattered rag of cloth looped up by a solitary button in a gashed button-hole, hung across his naked breast. One hand, as if half crippled, was cramped under his side, while the other grasped the torn rim of his crownless hat which rude children had endeaved to take from him. There was no deaveted to take from him.

"It's Jock Wainright," was the next excla ation. "Alas! I pity his poor wife."
"Jock!" he cried.

There was no response. "Jock, I say."

WATERVILLE, MAINE FRIDAY, MAY 22, 1868.

NO. 47.

Still all was silent-motionless.

"Jock, doa't you hear me? Get up." "Oh! pray leave the brute alone," said the first speaker, standing off in no counterfeited disgust. " Really, it seems degrading to stand here talking to such a foul mass as that."

"Then, my friend you should not walk with a reformer," said the other smiling, but still lishment. Renan displays a somewhat similar intent upon his task. "Something tells me to try and save this man. Gordon," he asked, addressing the other gentleman who had as yet said nothing, "you and I must get this miserable carcass up and put him on his teet."

"You are not in earnest?" cried the first speaker, quite startled. "I am indeed in earnest," was the reply.

Gordon, what do you say ?" "I think we can lift him."

"Agreed." And both stooping, to the in-tense disgust of the looker-on, they soon had him on his feet.
"He can't stand."

"Can we carry him, think?" " Where to?

"To my house. It is just round the corner My wife will be-not exactly glad to see him, but she knows my peculiarities so well that she is always willing to humor them; and, indeed, sometimes she gets up such little freaks on her own account. Come, Jock, come, my friend," whispered the reformer, softly, in the ear of the drunkard, " try to help yourself. You are with friends."

By this time the degraded man had rallied little. He tried his best to straighten himself; and rolling his eyes faintly from one face to the other, recognizing who were there, and that one was a stranger, he gave his supporters a peculiar drunken look as he muttered-Seems to me that stranger's ashamed of his company," and relapsed again almost into insensibility.

"Upon my word, this seems too ridiculous," said the young man referred to. "Are you really in earnest about taking that miserable, dirty fellow to your house?"

"Bes' house in all Scotland," muttered the reeling drunkaad, opening his eyes again. And then he reiterated that they knew he wasn't drunk, only slightly the worse for liquor, add-ng that he was a gentleman. The trio started. It was a strange sight for ha streets of Aberdeen to see two well-dressed and well-known public gentlemen holding up and leading the shattered, ragged drunkard along the crowded sidewalk. The residence of the reformer was in a handsome and fashionable part of the city, and thither, through all the gaping, commenting throng, the two gentlemen bore the poor inebriate. There a comfortable home was prepared for him, and everything arranged for his convenience. If he had been the not have been treated with more kindness. Clothed, fed, nourished, and brought under all the influences of hope, courage, confidence and self-respect, he had been less than a man if he looking at the handsome, well-dressed man, 'you have the advantage of me."

Then you don't know me-that's good. He doesn't know me, Mr. Sinclair. I suppose, my face."

The three were now at the door of a handsome mansion.

" Come in," said the man who had met Mr. Gordon so cordially. "Mr. Sinclair will refresh your memory before long, I doubt not."

They entered a beautiful drawing-room.

Presently a well-dressed and stately woman

" My dear Molly, here are some friends-"Mrs. Wainright," said Mr, Sioclair, with a beaming face, "this is Mr. Gordon."

"It can't be possible that you are Jock!" cried Gordon, turning to the man he had not recognized before.

"Yes, I am Jock, the bundle of rags, the wretched drunkard, the outcast from love-the man once hated, despised, lost." That was a delightful surprise indeed—a blessed morning. "Yes, sir, you see before you a living evidence of the power of kindness. Not only did this dear brother restore me body and soul, I might almost say, but, thank God, he found me employment. He gave me a line to a fishme employment. He gave me a line to a fish-merchant of Aberdeen, encouraging him to furnish me with a small supply of fish for sale among the inhabitants. I was determined to "Well, they give me that name," replied the other, smiling, his dark, dreamy face lighting strangely as he spoke. "I trust I am trying in my way to save some of my poor fellow be

REFORMATORY .- A society of ladies of the very highest rank has been formed in Paris to correct some of the evils of modern fashionable attire. For some time past, as the skirts of dresses have increased in length the upper portions have diminished, till a lady in full dress resembles in the exhibition of her charms -we do not of course suppose in morals also the frail beauties of the times of Churles the Second, as depicted by Sir Peter Lety. This. abuse, the society to which we refer is determined to correct. They call themselves " Christian Women," and each member on joining, signs this declaration : "I engage lienc forth never to appear decollete." They also promise not to employ any dressmaker who will make robes in the objection ble fashion, while those who will confine their labors to the fabrication of modest attire, are to be termed "Christian Dressmakers." As French women are credited-generally by those who know nothing about them-with not being over scrupulous in the that the art of undressing their shoulders is long been famous for it. A good story is told conducted by a footman to her boudoir, and on entering the room found the lady dressed for dinner. The lavish display of her charms so astonished the good man, unaccustomed to the ways of fashionable society, that he supposed the servant had made a mistake and shown him Napier, in his Abyssinian expedition, compellinto the lady's dressing room before she had ed "a lofty African desert to yield water by an completed her toilet. Modesty in dress is after all very much an affair of custom, and varies in differsum of the stones." So it seems that America has played ent countries and times, but there is undoubtedly room for a reformation to-day, and we wish the new society every prosperity. A young Tennesseean, while fighting in the Union army, fell in love with the portrait of a Yankee girl living in Bangor, wrote and received letters, made a declaration of love and was accepted. He came on to Bangor, to meet claimed, "How—are—you—Caterpillars?" his love, and after a personal courtship of two weeks they were married. Gibbon used generosity. A man who lives within his income and pays his honest debts is apt to be regarded as but a stingy, close-fisted curmudgeon, while the spendthrift who makes free with other people's money, gets the reputation of a good fellow. Our Southern brethren, when they were living upon other men's labor, and leaving their Northern creditors to whistle for their pay, were accounted the soul of generosity and hospitality, entirely above the Yankee meanness of looking after the almighty dollar. As to this charge of "meanness" against Northern men, Henry Ward Beecher in one of his Ledger contributions well says; I hear a good deal of Yankee meanness—of the spirit of trade and dicker—of the stinginess and parsimony of Northern men. But, while the manner of showing economy may be unfortunate, the essential spirit of thrift and economy is a thousand times nobler than that of free-hanbed squandering of money which gives a spurious reputation of generosity to people who are on the road to bankruptcy, and who have long spent money not their own with a special gracefulness !- [Portland Transcript.

Are the Republican nominees for Presiden and Vice President-the former being unani mously chosen on the first ballot at Chicago and the latter on the sixth. For Vice President, Wade was ahead at first, add on one ballot had 204 votes when 325 were necessary for a choice. Hamlin received but 30 votes on any ballot.

Impeachment has probably reached its climax in the acquittal of the president on one of the main articles embracing the charges against him. He is saved by one vote only :and yet in the great jury of his countrymen he stands convicted, with hardly a dissenting voice if we except those who were banded together in the rebellion. The American people pronounce him guilty-guilty from the mement he made his drunken speech at the inauguration of president Lincoln; guilty in every insane speech he made while "swinging round the circle;" and doubly guilty in his systematic efforts to defeat the plan of reconstruction urged by the representatives of the people. He may be allowed to hold his office for the few months yet remaining in his term, but he is virtually both impeached and disfranchised in the very core of the American heart.

The entire monument is made of Hallowell ranite, the design embracing six pieces. The ase is seven feet four inches on each side. The die which rests upon the plinth is finished with a coat of arms and a motto on one side, and on each of the three other sides is a raised panel with a moulding around the edges, and upon these panels are to be inscribed the names of the brave men of Fairfield who have given their lives to their country. Toward the top of the die the four corners are worked off making it octagonal in form, and upon each corner is cut a star, with a moulding above to comon the die is set a cap with corresponding finish; and upon this is set the shaft thirteen feet high, finished with panels on each side. The finish on the top is of the most beautiful design, and the whole work on the monument is executed with a nicety rarely, if ever before seen in granite. The people at Kendall's Mills will have reason be proud of the monument when set in its place; and we are told they have a lot for it of two acres in extent, one of the most beautiful sites for such a pur pose that can be found in the Kennebec val

MR. GILBRETH'S HORSES .- Those who have only heard of "Gilbreth's Knox," know but little of what Mr. Gilbreth is doing, at his stables at Kendall's Mills, in the way of raising choice horses. "One of the very best, if not the best representative of Gen. Knox," are words we heard from the owner of Gen. Knox in speaking of Gilbreth's Knox. With this starting point Mr. G. evidently has in mind a large establishment for improved horses. We have seen at his stables as fine a collection of colts, of various blood, as can be found-lacking only in number to compete with anything in Maine. With his horses "T. S. Lang," and "Trotting Blood," in the lead of his " Knox," Mr. Gilbreth has a combination of Knox, Drew, McC'lellan and Messenger blood, such as nonbut a shrewd breeder would be likely to secure at one stable. We commend Mr. G's. enterprise, with much confidence, to the attention of farmers in this vicinity.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS keeps Round-the-World Joe travelling, treats its readers to more of Wil liam Henry's private correspondence, holds Dr. Hayes still cast away in the cold, and sets youthful pianists at work on two more of Mr. Eichberg's compositions. The stories, poems, pictures and puzzles are good as usual. Published by Ticknor & Fields, Boston, at $2 a year.

THE "RIVERSIDE" for June opens with wo established favorites; for Mr. Stephens has a frontisiece containing his ideas of how the Sow looked when she came in with the Saddle, as Mother Goose affirmed she did come; and Vieux Moustache comes, with his grizzled front, once more to delight the boys with a story begun here and to continue in large installments through he rest of the volume. Other Riverside favorites are well represented; Jacob Abbott by " Hunter and Tom; Porte Crayon " by the "Young Virginians;" Mrs. Wells by an illustrated story in verse; and Nellie Eyster by a particular account of a historic and barn-like church n Pennsylvania. There is another Shakespeare story also—and another biographical paper,—this time on Mezart; while "Little Lou's Sayings and Doings " stop for the present, and some new contributors offer varied tories of prose and verse. The reaction against the infamous license law which was enacted through the influence of the P. L. L. element in the Massachusetts egislature is very strong. Almost the entire Republican press of the State, including those papers that favored the repeal of the prohibiory law is opposed to it. THE REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION WILL be held in Portland on the 8th of July. The call, which is out, is addressed to " all citizens of this State who rejoice that our great civil war has happily terminated in the discomfiture of rebellion; who would hold fast the unity and integrity of the republic, and maintain its paramount right to defend to its utmost its own existence while imperilled by secret conspira-cy or armed force; who are in favor of an economical administration of the State and national expenditures, of the complete extripation of the principles and policy of slavery, and of the speedy re-organization of those States whose governments were destroyed by the rebellion, and the permanent restoration to their proper practical relations with the United States, in accordance with the true principles of republi-can government." GILBRETH KNOX STALLION.

THIS besitiful Horse will be kept for the improvement of stock this season, at KENDALUS MILLS, for a limited number. Terms—$50 to Warrant; $35 for one Burtles or Season; close aug. 1st.

He was sired by General Hnox; dam, the Cahlil mare of Augusta; was six years old May lat, 1963; is 15 34 khads high, and weight 1,080 pounds; is black without marks, and is perfectly sound, never had a sick day, and that great endurance. His limbs and feet are perfect, and he maser his one foot against another or his legs. If as splendid style, is a fast walker, a first rate roadster, and a fast crotter. Has a pleasant disposition, and in fact 1 believe him to be the Most person of the very first quality, of good size, and promising for first tooters.

Those now intending to have his services, to avoid disep-I have also another beautiful" KNOX COLT," called

T. S. LANG.

This colt was bred by Mr. Lang from his "General Kaox," and his Messenger mare "Phantom," a descendant of "Winthrop Messenger." This colt is dark gray, with mane and tail nearly black. He is large and perfectly formed. His style of movement and trotting action I believe to be perfect. Will serve a few this season at $25 to warrant.

TROTTING BLOOD

Will be five years old this Spring; is a dark chestnut, medium size, very spirited, and undoubtedly would have been very fas had he not broken his leg when young. All of his stock have remarkable trotting gits.

In a letter from Hiram Drew, Esq., of Levant, concerning the pedigree of this colt, he says—"Trotting Blood" was sired by my hore, known as the "Old Drew," his dam by Gen. McClellan; these are undoubted facts."

Terms, $15 to warrant; $10 the season. Pasturage $1 per week. No risk taken,
Persons which ig to see any of this stock, will please call at my Hardware Store.

No vastavious will be hade from the above terms.

Who is Miss Sawyer? Miss Sawyer lives in the City of Rockland, Knex County, Maine. The has devoted the best years of her life to nursipe the rick, and has find mor experience in the cure of abstinate diseases, old Sores and Ulcers, and has also been consulted in more cases of accidents and has Burne, Scalds and Bruses, than any of her person in New England, professions to otherwise. She has competed successfully, with the most ance physicians in the States, as well as with aurees and Indian dectors. From time to time she has compounded remains for use in certain diseases in her own practice. Among other compounds she has for many years made a Salve which soon other to the states and is now in great damand alroad, as well as in private families and among the hundreds of men segared at Rockland and vicinity in the heardess business of quarry log rock and burning lime, and also among the season of Maine. So pepular did it become 'hat while it was only put up in old mustard bone, without labels or the help of advertisements, hiles Sawyer is ceived orders for it from nearly or quite every Ftate in the come 'het while it was only put up in old mustard bose, with out labels of the help of advertisements, hiles Sawyer received orders for it from nearly or quite every Flate in the Union. The demand finally became so extensive that she was unable to meet it, and she made an arrangement with L. M. ROBEINS, a druggist of Rockland, to take charge of the business and supply the trade. The agent is so well astisfied with the merits of the Medicine that he guarantees; to core all diseases for which it is recommended, and any one who fives it a trial incording to directions, and is not satisfied, is fived it a trial incording to directions, and is not satisfied, is fived to a trial recommended. Full directions with such box.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

The following are a few selected from the multitude of recommendations in the possession of the Agent.

IFrom Mrs. Elisabeth Coumbs, Brunswick 1

Brunswick, Aosili 4, 1867.

Miss Sawyru:—I received your letter last evening and was very glad you concluded to let me take your Salve I think I can do we'll with if, and it will be quite an accommodation to my hunband, as he cannot get along without it. He bass they describe the less and he shed had been more than you recommend it to be all and even more than you recommend it to be. We have had it in the family 5 or 6 years, and I have used it for everything, and can truly say we have never found its equal. I use it for west back an 1st acts like a charm. Mr. Coombs has had a F-ver Force on his leg for thirty years and would be a cripple to-day, if he had not found a remedy in you'f Salve. It keeps it healed, and takes out the inflammation proud flesh, and swelling, and does for him all that he car ask. I can recommend it for a good many things that you have not, for I use it for verything. I consider it invaluable for a finity. If you can put this testimony together, and it can be of service to you, you are welcome.

You can send me large boxes if you please, and a Tew' tones. I can do better with the large coes!

Yours &c., Elizabers Cooms.
