COAX THE HOG.—A correspondent of the New England Farmer, speaking of the difficulty of swine-deiving, says it is "as easy as whisking after you know how."

A CLERGYMAN in the country had a strange preaching for him one day, and meeting his head he said to him, "Well Saunders, how did you like the sermon to-day?"

I shall try what I can do in the woods. I'd as soon go after poor Tom as stay living any longer like this.

"That is just one of the things I want to know," answered she. "Poor Tom is lying under the yard, or the skin of him, but whether that is the whole I don't feel so sure."

So the Dog wouldn't go, and the Cat set off by herself to learn how to be happy, and to be all that a Cat could be.

The Dog faintly opened his languid eyes, looked sleepily at the Cat for a moment, and dropped them again.

"Do you feel any better for it, Dog, after you have been standing on your legs?" asked she.

"Haven't I told you, you stupid Cat, that it hasn't agreed with me? Let me go to sleep, and don't plague me."

"But I mean," persisted the Cat, "do you feel improved, as the men call it? They tell their children that if they do what they are told they will improve, and grow good and great."

"You are a very nice Cat," answered her companion; "but what good is it knowing all this?"

and no trouble to get it; but I want something more."

"The body's meat is provided. You would now fill your soul."

"Delightful, delightful!" said the Cat. "What is it? I will try this minute."

"Well, but how are we to find out?" said the Cat.

"Bless the mother that laid you," said she. "You were dropped by mistake in a goose-nest. You won't do. I don't know much, but I am not such a creature as you, anyhow."

"Well, said she, 'I think it is hard; I do really—and, if the law could be altered, I should be the first to welcome it. But what can a Cat do? You eat the grass; I eat you. But, Rabbit, I wish you, would me a favor.'

"What is your duty?" said she. "I have seven little ones at home,—seven little ones, and they will all die without me. Pray let me go."

"What is your duty?" said she. "I have seven little ones at home,—seven little ones, and they will all die without me. Pray let me go."

The goose smelled excellent; the Cat could not help a wistful look. She was only come, she said, to pay her respects to her wild friends.

"I will tell you," answered the owl, "what I have been thinking of ever since the moon changed. You shall take it home with you and think about it, too; and the next full moon you shall come again to me; we will compare our conclusions."

"Well, but how are we to find out?" said the Cat.

"They all do justice to your abilities, Fox," said she; "but your morality, they say, is not high. They say you are a rogue."

"And this is the whole of it," said the Cat. "Well, it is very sad. What do you do with yourself?"

"My duty, to be sure," said the Fox; "use my wits and enjoy myself. My dear friend, you and I are on the lucky side. We eat and are not eaten."

"Pack of stuff! It is the only true book that ever was written. If it is not, it ought to be. Why, that book is the law of the world—la carriers aux talents—and writing it was the honestest thing ever done by a man."

"What! a rope in the yard! Well it must end some day; and when the farmer catches me, I shall be getting old, and my brains will be taking leave of me; so the sooner I go the better, that I may disagree myself the less."

"Think of what I have said," answered the Fox. "I'll call at your house some night; you will take me a walk round the yard, and then I'll show you."

"I have learned something," said the Cat. "Knowledge is never pleasant."

"Indeed, indeed!" said the Dog, "when I have got men and women. Children are well enough for foxes and wild creatures; refined dogs know better; and, for doing—can't I stand on my toes? can't I dance? at least couldn't I before I was so fat?"

"Ah, I see everybody likes what he has bred to!" sighed the Cat. "I was bred to do nothing, and I must like that. Train the cat as the cat should go, and the cat will be happy, and ask no questions. Never seek for impossibilities, Dog. That is the secret."

"The cat looked at him with her old green eyes. 'I never wished to marry you, dog; I shouldn't have presumed. But it was wise of you not to fret about it. But, listen to me, Dog—listen. I met many creatures in the wood, all sorts of creatures, beasts and birds. They were all happy; they didn't find it a bore. They went about their work, and did it, and enjoyed it, and yet none of them had the same story to tell. Some did one thing, some another; and, except the Fox, each had got a sort of notion of doing its duty. The Fox was a rogue; he said he was; but yet he was not unhappy. His conscience never troubled him. Your work is standing on your toes, and you are happy. I have none, and that is why I am unhappy. When I came to think about it, I found every creature in the wood had to get its own living. I tried to get mine, but I didn't like it, because I wasn't used to it; and, as for knowing, the Fox, who didn't care to know anything except how to cheat greater fools than himself, was the cleverest fellow I came across. Oh, the Owl, Dog—you should have heard the Owl. But I came to this, that it was no use trying to force it, and the only way to be jolly was to go about one's own business like a decent cat. Cats' business seems to be killing rabbits and such like; and it is not the pleasantest possible; so the sooner one is bred to it the better. As for me, that have been bred to do nothing, why, as I said before, I must try to like that, but I consider myself an unfortunate Cat."

"Very likely you do not," said the Cat. "By this time their breakfast was come in. The Cat ate hers, the Dog did panacea for his; and, if one might judge by the purring on the hearth-rug, the Cat, if not the happiest of the two, at least was not exceedingly miserable."

Mrs. Stowe expresses the opinion in the Hearth and Home, that every human being needs to have some thing in which he takes pleasure for itself alone—not as work, not as duty, but as diversion. In old times the children, strictly schooled and ruled through all the week, had Saturday afternoons when they did their own pleasure, and halcyon hours they were. She adds:

Where, poor dear mother of a great family of boys and girls, is your little comfortable play-ground? These noisy, bright romping, crowding boys and girls, who every one of them, press upon you and leave you not a moment to yourself, have they each a little amusement or solace? Tina and Bessie have their dolls and baby houses—Tom and Jack their boats and railroad cars—your daughter her embroidery and music. What have you? Is there a moment anywhere sacred to your own private peculiar pleasure? What is your Saturday afternoon? What thing do you purely for the pleasure it gives, and not as a duty? Some mothers have their reading, which leads to late hours. When every gay head in the house is on its pillow, and the clock ticks in the still hours, then comes the precious, quiet hour of reading. Blessed soul! who shall forbid it to her, but who does not wish she had been able to take it fresh and unwarmed, out of her morning hours? Some mothers have learned in early days mothercraft or artistic skill, and laid it aside in motherly self-annihilation. Dear mother, keep this gift for yourself—get out your boxes and colors—sharpen your pencils—sketch—paint—it will do you good; it will rest your nerves; it will brighten your thoughts; it will give spring, elasticity, and cheerfulness to your life; and the more you are, the more you will live to give to others. Every good husband should try to make his

SPECIAL NOTICE.

In a business of twenty years we find we have upon our books a large number and amount of over due and unpaid demands.

MISS LOGAN'S LECTURE.—Nobody expects the public lecturer to please, really, much more than a majority of the audience.

THE PORTLAND DAILY ADVERTISER, under the charge of Mr. H. W. Richardson, is steadily advancing in popular favor.

Any man who thinks there is a difference between good and poor orders, will at once know where to send his orders after eating a sample from the establishment 'favorably and widely known as Atwood's Wholesale and Retail Oyster House, 48, 47 and 49, Center St., Portland.

Whoever wishes for a good juvenile magazine, or would like an opportunity to earn some nice books for their own reading or to give to their friends, will do well to read the advertisement of H. O. Houghton & Co., headed 'The Riverside,' in another column.

A package marked 'Pure Cider Vinegar,' was seized at the Express office in Augusta, recently, and found to contain forty rod whiskey.

The State Constabulary act was defeated in New Hampshire on Tuesday, by a large majority. The vote was very light.

Victor Emmanuel is reported to be recovering from his severe illness.

THE BRIDGE AND THE UNION.

A few weeks since an unusual freshet, after doing serious damage on the upper waters of the Kennebec, succeeded in the removal of the Ticonic bridge; an account of which was truly chronicled in your next issue.

Here we have one leading object in itself, but divided, with the object aimed at to be gained in different ways. This is well and will engender a good deal of thought.

We publish the above communication from an esteemed citizen of Winslow, not so much for anything suggestive or intelligent that we see in it, as for our wish to give full freedom for both sides in the discussion of a free bridge between Waterville and Winslow, and a union of the two towns.

OUR TABLE.

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW for October has the following table of contents:—The Emancipation Council; Freshfield's Travels in the Caucasus; The Duc d'Anville's Lives of the Condis; Thornton on Labor; Count Bismarck; Robinson's Parks and Gardens of Paris; Ferguson on Trees and Serpents; Worsley; Diaries of Henry Crab Robinson; Indian Judges, British and Native; The Victrola of Don Pedro Nino; Mill on the Subject of Women.

The four great British Quarterly Review and Blackwood's Monthly are promptly issued by the Leonard Scott Publishing Company, 37 Walker Street, New York, the terms of subscription being as follows:—For any one of the four Reviews, $4 per annum; any two of the Reviews, $7; any three of the Reviews, $10; all four Reviews, $13; Blackwood and any two Reviews, $10; Blackwood and any three of the Reviews, $13; Blackwood and the four Reviews, $15—with large discount to clubs.

New volumes of Blackwood's Magazine and the British Reviews commence with the January numbers. The postage on the whole five works under the new rates will be but 66 cents a year.

PETERSON'S MAGAZINE for December is on our table in advance. It is a splendid number, with two steel engravings, a mammoth fashion plate, colored pattern in Berlin work, and nearly fifty wood cuts. We do not wonder at the immense circulation of 'Peterson'—said to be the largest in the world—for it really gives more for the money than any other.

BALLOU'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE.—We are in receipt of this marvellously cheap and handsome magazine for December. Its table of contents is varied and charming, embracing the usual fine variety of serials, sketches, stories, poems and attractive engravings.

PETERS' MUSICAL MONTHLY for November, with its usual amount of agreeable miscellany, has the following pieces of music:—Whispering Waves, words by Geo. W. Birdseye, music by M. E. Luther; The Little White Lot in the Lane, music by A. E. A. Muse; Whisperings of Love, song for mezzo soprano or tenor, words by Neighbor, music by C. Kinkel; Song of the Sewing Machine, by Will S. Hayes; La Belle de Diamants, Valse, by Rudolph J. J. De Roodt; Lily of the Valley Polka, by C. Kinkel; The Last Rose of Summer, arranged by C. Kinkel; Little Halle, quartet for mixed voices, with piano or melodeon accompaniment, by H. O. Work; Thou art Beautiful as an Angel, Serenade for three male voices, with guitar and violin accompaniment; Praise to God, Immortal Praise, opening chorus, by Charles Frey; Oh! what is Earthly Pleasure.

We can't avoid the conclusion that the Bangor Jeffersonian demands some strange qualifications for its candidate for the Speakership. Possibly we fail to catch his idea. Suppose Mr. Foster be able to disclose just such a personal history as the Jeffersonian professes to be looking for in the Mail:—that he admits his membership in the 'Paper Credit Ring,'—that he knows the coming legislature will have and investigate his full record after the choice of Speaker, and when all the committees of the House shall have taken their appointments at his hands,—that some towns have already entered suits against him to recover a part of the money that suddenly made him a rich man at the close of the war and the 'Ring,'—and finally that all these things are known to certain committees and many members of the legislature as matters of weight to be shouldered and carried by the republican party after his election as speaker has given him all its advantages in covering up tracks and wiping out records? Suppose all this, and then what?

We meet the Jeffersonian's 'expectations' with the Irishman's plea to the charge of assault. After hearing in the language of the law, that 'being instigated by the devil, he did assault, beat, pound, maul, thrash, wound, batter, &c., &c., Patrick frankly plied 'Guilty!' guiltily as the devil, your Honor, to the chap as done all that—but I'm not the man!

Mr. Foster has no such record, and the Jeffersonian must look for a candidate somewhere else. His record for the war will show that he hired and put into the Union army a good substitute before the law compelled him to do so. When the draft came he was found—'not fishing to sell 'paper soldiers' to the State—but already represented in the field and armed for duty. Nor will he now be found tainted with any of the odium that calls for 'sandwiched affidavits' to convince the people that he was not a ringleader in the villainous 'Paper Credit Ring' that took advantage of the dark days of the war to defraud the State of so many thousand dollars.

Few persons are aware at what rate our mail matter is increasing. In four years the average daily amount conveyed over the Maine Central railroad has increased from 1100 to 1700 pounds. The people of Maine are eminently a reading people.

WILLIAM BAKER, of Alna, in this State, as we learn from the Boston Advertiser, was swindled out of $125, by a man in that city, who, pretending to be hard up, sold Baker a check on a New York Bank for $750, which proved to be fraudulent.

WEST WATERVILLE SAVINGS BANK.

The trustees of this institution on Monday, Nov. 1st, declared a semi-annual dividend at the rate of eight per cent. per annum. The deposits now amount to over ten thousand dollars and are rapidly increasing.

West Waterville, Nov. 5th, 1869.

A correspondent of the Boston Advertiser says that petitions will go to the Maine legislature this winter from the towns of Warren, Union, Appleton, Searsmont, Belmont and Morrill, asking for a charter to build a railroad from the Knox & Lincoln Railroad in Warren, through these several towns, with permission to subscribe 20 per cent. of their valuation to the capital stock of the proposed road.

Mr. P. O. Vickory, an experienced printer of Augusta, will propose to the coming legislature to do the little part of the State printing known as engrossing, at a saving of $750 from present prices.

Senator Sprague has concluded not to buy the Washington National Intelligencer.

For three years the women in Vineland, N. J., have 'gone through the motions' of voting. They have been provided with a separate ballot box, and some of the more earnest and active ones have brought in voters, after the manner of men.

JOSIAH L. PIKE, who murdered Thomas Brown and his wife, two aged persons, at Hampton Falls, N. H., in May, 1868, was hanged in Concord on Tuesday. In his speech on the gallows he attributed his ruin to strong drink, and he gave a solemn word of warning and entreaty to the drinker and the seller.

John Murray, the London Publisher, announces that 'The London Quarterly Review' for October will contain hitherto unpublished Letters from Lady Byron to Mrs. Leigh, in 1816, which completely disprove Mrs. Beecher Stowe's story.

Some months ago Colonel Yergar, of Jackson Miss., shot the military Mayor of that city, because of his seizing for taxes a piano in the residence of Yergar, but which it seems, was not his property. The killing was a deliberate, cold-blooded affair and the only attempt to palliate it by the friends of the murderer was in the assertion that Yergar was insane and had been so for years.

Hon. Robert J. Walker, and Hon. Amos Kendall are both sick at Washington, with no prospect of recovery.

Gen. Wool died in Troy, N. Y., Wednesday morning. His age was 86 years.

SMALL BUSINESS.—Counterfeit five cent pieces are in circulation.

VICTOR EMANUEL, King of Italy, lies dangerously ill, with small prospect of recovery.

The Lawrence Cook breach of promise case was settled in court at Augusta, on Tuesday, 'entirely satisfactory and highly honorable to all parties,' it is said. A wise course.

Josh Billings says: 'Makrel inhabit the sea generally; but those which inhabit the grocery always taste to me as though they had been fattened on salt. They want a deal of freshening before they're eaten, and also afterwards. If I kin have plenty of makrel for breakfast, I kin generally make the other few meals out of water.'

HISTORICAL.

Perhaps there is no part of the American Continent richer in historical interest, than that part of our own State, known to the Indians as Sagadahoc. This territory probably extended from the mouth of the Kennebec River, to Merrymeeting Bay, certainly no farther inland, than the last named point.

Here was made the first attempt by the English, at colonization in New England. This was thirteen years before the settlement of Plymouth. The attempt was however a failure, and the colony returned to England within a year after their landing, having lost their leader (Capt. George Popham) and many others by death.

Here was built the first ship ever launched in American waters. The 'Virginia of Sagadahoc.' She was built by the Popham colonists, and in her they returned to England in 1608.

At Pemaquid Point, in the present town of Bristol, resided the royal Governors during a portion of our colonial history. 'Shawmut,' (Boston) was then a suburb of Pemaquid.

A committee of the Maine Historical Society, of which Dr. Harris, President of Bowdoin College was Chairman, recently visited that locality, and in their explorations actually found paved streets. These have been considered a myth, but the high character of the committee must settle the question.

During a recent visit to Sagadahoc, we visited several places of interest. Among them the old Drummond burying ground in Arrowsic formerly a part of Georgetown. It was at one time the Parish burying ground. It is now a pasture. Most of the grave stones are moss-covered or in fragments. 'Old Mortality' would here find congenial employment.

Patrick Drummond, Esq., ancestor of the Drummond family, lies buried here. We learn from the inscription on his Grave Stone that he was born June 11, 1694; emigrated to America in 1729. His wife was Susannah, daughter of Rev. Robert Butherford. She died Sept. 12, 1771, aged 43 years.

The descendants of Patrick Drummond were distinguished for business enterprise and integrity. They were also remarkable for physical strength and power of endurance. They nearly all 'took to the sea' and mostly became ship masters.

The Drummond family are largely represented in Sidney and Winslow. Hon. Josiah H. Drummond, now of Portland, and Everett R. Drummond, Esq., of this town, are also descendants of Patrick and Susannah Drummond.

West Waterville, Nov. 10, 1869.

'THE CAT'S PILGRIMAGE,' an amusingly satirical article, written by Froude, the historian in his younger days, we copy from Appleton's Journal. It is not too young for the old, nor too old for the young.

Next Sabbath is to be observed as a day of special prayer by the Young Men's Christian Associations throughout the country. A Union meeting will be held in the evening at the Methodist Vestry in our village.

The following is per se Hyacinth's reply to an address and invitation to visit Boston, tendered him through a committee, and representing numerous evangelical ministers of that city and vicinity:

'I am very sensible of the high honor paid me in the greeting from the clergy whom you represent. I am touched by your expression of Christian sympathy and affection. I am a catholic and hope to remain one. I have not broken with the church, but its abuses. I recognize true Christians in all the protestant bodies, for I believe that the true church embracing all who hold Christ as their head is far wider than any earthly organization. My purpose in coming to America is to escape excitement and rest a little. I shall soon return to Europe, but I hope again to visit this country. I shall visit Boston early in November if possible and then should be glad to see those whom you represent and to explain more fully my position. The future is dark and uncertain, but I shall obey my conscience to the end. Greet in my name with Christian salutation those in whose name you greet me.'

'To God's Kingdom, Sir.'—King Frederick of Prussia was once travelling in his dominions, and passed through a pretty village, where he was to stop an hour or two.

'And to what kingdom this?' continued he as he took from his pocket a gold coin. 'To the mineral kingdom,' she answered. 'And to what kingdom do I belong?' inquired he, expecting of course, that she would answer in the right order, 'To the animal kingdom.' But she paused, and colored very deeply, not knowing what to say. She feared that it would not sound respectful to answer to a King that he belonged to the animal kingdom; she puzzled her brain for a reply.

Remembering the words in Genesis, where it says that God 'created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him,' she quickly looked up and said, 'To God's kingdom, sir.'

Mr. Horace Greeley is a good man to tell stories about. Somebody reports the following conversation between him and the editor of the Elmira Advertiser:—Greeley:—'I shall expect Chemung County to give a republican majority this fall. Your paper can't have much influence if it can't control the vote of the county.' Editor of the Advertiser:—'Well, I don't know about that, but it will come as near controlling it as the Tribune does the vote of your county.' Greeley:—'Umph, that is very good!'

Two men named Williams and Libby broke out of Wiscasset jail Thursday night. Williams was arrested Saturday at South Gardiner and the officers are now in pursuit of Libby.

sidewalk. Mr. Tufts' name was early associated with power and hand presses and other valuable articles of machinery used by printers, but more recently he has been identified with the safety elevators used in hotels and warehouses and driven by machinery of his own invention. His age was 67.

A man by the name of Isaac E. Adams, as it appears from papers found upon him, was dropped by persons unknown at the almshouse at South Berwick, on Tuesday, Nov. 2d. He appeared to be very ill, and said he had just left the cars en route from Biddeford to Boston. He died suddenly on Wednesday afternoon. He stated that he had been an actor and a Temperance lecturer. His relatives can address the Selectmen of Berwick. Deceased was probably a brother of the celebrated Yankee Adams, and was well known in this State twenty-five years ago, as an actor and a member of several travelling companies.—[Portland Press.

The Lyceum building at Gardiner, used as the High School House, was destroyed by fire Sunday afternoon, and is supposed to be the work of an incendiary. Most of the books belonging to the scholars were also burned. It was built of granite in 1818, and valued at $1800. Insured for $900.

AN UNEXPECTED QUESTION.—Within a few days an English gentleman interested in the cause of education has been visiting several of the public schools, making such an investigation as he desired. At one of the schools, by the request of the master, he asked one class receiving such prompt and accurate replies that he was induced to say that any of the pupils who desired any information regarding England were at liberty to propose any question, which he would endeavor to answer. There was a pause, when one bright little girl arose and very modestly said: 'I should like to inquire what made England take side with the South during the recent rebellion?' The shot came so unexpectedly that for a moment the stranger hesitated, but he finally suggested something about the love of the English for the weaker side, and concluded the exercises.—[Boston Journal.

The elegant display of Dresses, Shawls, Jackets, Cloaks, &c., made at the great retail store of Jordan, Marsh & Co., Boston, comprises all that is newest, nicest and most beautiful in garments for ladies' wear, from the French modistes. Quality, style, durability and economy have all been consulted in this selection. As manufacturers of ladies' garments to order their facilities cannot be excelled. Their store is really 'the Emporium of Fashion for New England.'

A citizen of Brunswick cannot visit Lewiston without contrasting what it has done, with what Brunswick has not done, and what it probably never will do, according to present appearances. The same falls, on the same river,—a larger flow of water at Brunswick, and all things considered, viz: railroads and access to tide water, the larger facilities for manufactures and traffic with Brunswick. Yet Brunswick is nowhere except at home, with the incubus of a Rip Van Winkle slumber resting upon her, and Lewiston everywhere with her manufactured goods and everything at home.—[Telegraph.

General Butler has given an independent opinion of the interviewer. 'If God ever made a nuisance,' said he the other day to one of these worthies, 'the interviewing reporter is one, and you can make a personal application of the statement if you want to.'

A remarkable discovery has been made in the town of Lafayette, in Syracuse county, New York. It is a human form of huge proportions entirely petrified, or a statue, no one knows which. The total length from the top of the head to the lower surface of the instep is 10 feet 2 1-2 inches; across the shoulders the width is 3 feet; across the palm of the hand, 7 inches; the large finger is 8 inches long; the thigh is 12 inches, and the leg below the knee 9 1-2 inches in thickness. The figure was found lying on the right side, one hand placed upon the abdomen, the other upon the back, and the left leg thrown across the right. It seems to be composed of a soft grayish limestone, with which this region abounds.

MISCELLANY.

SEED-TIME AND HARVEST.

Go, sow, and scatter the seed o'er the ground,
For seed-time is passing away;
The reapers will come to garner the grain;

Oh, scatter the seed as you journey along,
Though some by the wayside may fall;
The birds may devour and the sunbeams may scorch;

WHY THE PLAGE WENT DOWN.—I was riding past a large farm a few days since in a public conveyance, when a man remarked, as he looked out, "This seems to take to red sorrel the best of anything. I should rather have it in red clover."

Then followed some conversation between him and the driver with regard to the owner of the property. Once he was offered eight thousand dollars for it; now it would not bring half the money.

The Boston Advertiser says the new Temperance paper in this State will be distinctively a party paper and will aim to represent the views of the extreme Temperance men who voted for Mr. Hichborn at the last election.

Would you like to know the secret of such thriftlessness? It was a whiskey barrel in the cellar.
The Boston Advertiser says the new Temperance paper in this State will be distinctively a party paper and will aim to represent the views of the extreme Temperance men who voted for Mr. Hichborn at the last election. It will be edited by Mr. Sawyer and published by Major H. A. Shorey, recently of the Bath Times.
