AMERICAN AND ENGLISH OPERATIVES .-Anthony Trollope, in his interesting work on America, thus contrasts the appearance of the operatives in Lowell, Mass., and Manchester, England:

. That which most surprises an English visitor on going through the mills at Lowell is the personal appearance of the men and women who work at them. As there are twice as many women as there are men, it is to them that the attention is chiefly called. They are not only better dressed, cleaner, and better mounted in every respect than the girls em ployed at manufactories in England, but they are so infinitely superior as to make a stranger immediately perceive that some very strong cause must have created the difference. We all know the class of young women whom we generally see serving behind counters in the shops of our larger cities. They are neat, well-dressed, careful, especially about their bair, composed in their manner, and sometimes a lit le supercilious in the propriety of their demeanor. It is exactly the same class of young women that one sees in the factories at Lowell. They are not sallow, nor dirty, nor demn all fishermen as a worthless set of 'ne'erragged, nor rough. They have about them no signs of want, or of low culture. * * One would of course be disposed to say that the superior condition of the workers must have been occasioned by superior wages: and this, to a certain extent has been the cause. But the higher payment is not the chief cause. Women's wages, including all that they re ceive at the Lowell factories, average about 14s. a week, which is, I take it fully a third more than women can earn at Manchester, or did earn before the loss of the American cot ton began to tell upon them. But if wages at

Of similar attempts in dispatches from the battle field Sunday mornthought that not less than five pounds leaves other localities they make respectful mention; ing. The dispatch states that the most severe his body through the skin. And of these five but for this enterprise, on the Kennebec, in pounds a considerable per centage escapes during the night while he is in bed. The larger part of this is water; but in addition, there is much effete and poisonous matter. This being in great part gasseous in form, permeates every part of the bed. Thus, all parts of the bed, mattress, blankets, as well as sheets, soon become foul and need purification. The mattress needs this renovation quite as much as the sheets.

Munchester were raised to the Lowell standard, the Manchester women would not be clothed.

To allow the sheets to be used without washing or changing, three or six months, would be regarded as bad housekeeping; but I insist. if a thin sheet can absorb enough of the poi sonous excretions of the body to make it unfit for use in a few days, a thick mattress which can absorb and retain a thousand times as much of these poisonous excretions, needs to be purified as often certainly as once in three months.

A sheet can be washed; a mattress cannot be cleaned in this way. Indeed there is no other way of cleansing a mattress but by steaming it, or picking it to pieces, and thus in fragments exposing it to the direct rays of the sun. As these processes are scarcely pructicable, with any of the ordinary mattresses, l am decidedly of the opinion that the good old fashioned straw bed, which can every three months be changed for fresh straw, and the tick be washed, is the sweetest and healthiest of beds.

If, in the winter season, the porousness of the straw bed makes it a little uncomfortable, spread over it a comforter, or two woolen blankets which should be washed as often as every two weeks. With this arrangement, if you wash all the bed covering as often as once in two or three weeks, you will have a delightful, bealthy bed. Now, if you leave the bed to air, with open windows during the day and not make it up for the night before evening, you will have added greatly to the sweetness of your fest, and in consequence to the tone of your health.

The preservation of furs, or articles of clothing, is perfectly simple, cheap and easy. Shake them well, and tie them up in a cotton or linen bag, so that the miller cannot possibly enter, and the articles will not be injured though the bag is hung in a woodhouse or gar ret. This is cheaper than to build cedar closets, and better than to fill the bedelothes and garments with the sickening odor of camphor, tobacco, or any other drug, all of which are

We once knew a Quaker who was forced into a fight with a quarrelsome neighbor. After a little scuffling, the Quaker's nose came into violent contact with the other man's fist, causing our friend's nose to bleed profusely. Quaker became enraged, and immediately took his opponent down, and getting astride him addressed him thus: 'Friend, I won't hurt thee, neither will I strike thee, but I will let my nose bleed in thy face; which he did entirely to his own satisfaction and to the great disgust of his adversary.
