MITHRIDATES AT CHIOS.

Know'st thou, Oh slave curd land! How, when the Chians came...

The gods at last pay well! So Helios sang her taunting song...

It is recorded by Nicholas the Peripatetic that the Chians...

FITZ WHIRLIGIG.

Hans Decker was a stupid boy over his books, and a heedless boy about doing errands.

When the mornings were sharp and pinching, he looked at his red, mittless fingers...

At school, he made the children laugh by his strange blunders. When asked, "Who discovered America?"...

Boys who are dreaming cannot learn much; it is only wide-awake boys who make good scholars.

And his mother, when he teased her for fairy-tales, looked very sad and said she could only think of the mournful story of Fitz Whirligig...

Poor Fitz Whirligig, said she, "he was a prince and lived in a castle unlike any building you ever saw."

"Where were no other servants?" asked Hans. "I think so great a prince must have had a train of attendants as long as our floral procession on the Fourth of July."

"Ah, said his mother. "You might count the stars in the sky, and the feathers in a flock of birds, and never find out the number of servants he had!"

"Fitz knew this, and he knew too that if he kept his slaves busy they were happy; but if he allowed them to be idle, they got into mischief at once, and gave him a vast deal of trouble."

"That is precisely what Fitz ought to have done," replied his mother, "but he didn't. They were given by the great King to make a man of learning and power, worthy to sit on a throne and wear a crown when he should be old enough."

"But why little Fitz never remembered that this wonderful castle was not his own, that the servants were only given him for use. No, he cared only to eat pea nuts and candy, hear fairy stories, and have a good time."

"Does it? Well, it must be confessed that little Fitz was quite too much like boys now-a-days. He didn't like the trouble of sending his servants over the world picking up information for him, he tried to remember it all; it was too much like work."

MR. LANG'S DURHAM STOCK. After all that has been said, by the press and by visitors, of the excellence of Mr. Lang's Durham stock...

But, mother, where are my five body-guards? Your five senses, my boy, which stand like sentinels always watching and warning; and the servants are thousands and tens of thousands of thoughts...

"Yes, mother," said Hans, solemnly, "you mean God." "I do, my son; the good God, our Father in Heaven, who watches you every moment, who loves you far better than I can."

"Oh, mother, how bad I must be," said Hans, looking alarmed, "and you don't begin to guess what worse than silly thoughts I have sometimes! But I think they come bit or miss, without any of my doings."

"With our Heavenly Father's aid," said his mother, gently. "I mean that, mother. I always mean that when I don't say it, you know. I won't have that boy, Hans, grow up a dunce!"

The Belfast Aze says that Lieut. Frank W. Dickerson, 5th U. S. Cavalry, of that city, was wounded in the head, over the ear, by a Minnie ball, in the late cavalry fight at Bradley Ford.

It is thicker in America goes beyond respectable dinner-table depth, your true Englishman takes it for a personal affront, and hastens to make an ass of himself in the Saturday Review.

A Western paper strikes the names of two subscribers, because they are not recently changed. The publisher said he was compelled to be severe, because he did not know their present address.

The Utica Telegraph has fished up a man in that city so mean that he has taken to biting the ends of his fingers to save the amount of the new tax on cut-mail.

Mr. Partington says she can't understand these "are market reports. She can't understand how cheese can be lively and pork can be active, and feathers dropping—that is, if it's raining; but how whiskey can be steady, or hops quiet, or spirits dull, she can't see."

Parties at a dead lock should extricate themselves by a skeleton key. Say what you will of old maids, their love is generally more strong and sincere than that of the young...

Den's Aldrich's excessive fondness for his pipe was so notorious among the students at Oxford that on one occasion a wager was laid between two of them that the dean, who was at that time in his study, it being ten o'clock in the morning, would be found in the act of smoking.

There are now six rebel privateers, four steamers and two small vessels, at sea, committing their depredations upon our commerce.

from Vicksburg dated on the 12th inst. says that Gen. Dennis has been reinforced at Milliken's Bend, and has started on an expedition to Richmond, to break off the rebel connection.

Latest.—The rebels in strong force, are reported 25 miles from Harrisburg, and a battle with our opposing force must be fought immediately.

The body of Mr. Myon's little boy was found in the Bay, last week, and Mrs. King was taken from the river at Getchell's Corner, on Tuesday.

The communication of C. C. C. will appear next week.

BE NOT DECEIVED.—The public are particularly cautioned against being deceived by some persons who from ignorance, selfish motives, or some other reason represent that Speer's Sambuci wine is made of elderberries, or what is termed elderberry wine.

WAR OF REDEMPTION.—Rumors, hints and isolated statements make up our record this week, and there is not much else to be had. The position of Lee and his intentions are yet involved in mystery, though some are quite confident that he contemplates a dash into Ohio and the capture of Cincinnati.

BLOODY TRAGEDY.—On Sunday last two deputy sheriffs from Belfast, named Mahoney and McKinney, pursued two men named Grant and Knowles, of Detroit, charged with horse stealing and store breaking, into the town of Plymouth, where they made an attempt to arrest them.

On Wednesday of last week, one of the most desperate cavalry fights of the war occurred at Aldie, in which the Maine regiment, by a spirited charge finally decided the contest in our favor, but the victory was dearly bought by the death of Col. Doughty.

On Monday morning, another sharp cavalry engagement occurred at Upperville, in which the rebel force was driven with heavy loss, retreating to Ashby's Gap.

The rebels, in force, have returned to Chambersburg, and are slowly and cautiously moving in the direction of Harrisburg. Ewell's forces, to the number of 35,000, are reported in the Boonesboro' valley, Maryland, foraging.

Some of the correspondents are very severe upon Gen. Milroy for his hasty retreat from Winchester, and the loss of property and men. They characterize it as disgraceful and humiliating.

The Confederates iron clad Atlanta was recently captured by two of our iron clads off Savannah, after an action of 30 minutes. Several other important captures have recently been made by our fleet.

The rebel pirate Tacony has been operating off the coast of Massachusetts, destroying six vessels in one day.

Col. Bangs, under date of June 9th, writes from Port Hudson that the Waterville boys of his regiment were well, and with gangs of men were at work on the entrenchments.

Col. D'Uassy in Prison. The Sing Sing Republican, announcing the arrival of Colonel D'Uassy at the prison in that place, says: "When he was assigned to a shop he asked his keeper to allow him to go alone to the shop to the mess room, remarking that he deemed it too degrading for him, having been a colonel and an acting brigadier general in the United States service."

EMANCIPATION.—It is rather remarkable that in the remotest nooks of the Southern Confederacy which have been reached by our cavalry expeditions, the slaves know all about the Emancipation Proclamation.
