October 2013

Alumni at Large

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.colby.edu/colbymagazine

Recommended Citation
Available at: http://digitalcommons.colby.edu/colbymagazine/vol102/iss3/9
Life during Wartime | Theodora Wright Weston ’42

During her time at Colby, Theodora Wright Weston ’42 came to know legendary Dean Ninetta Runnals, chatted with visiting First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt, traipsed around the pastures of Mayflower Hill (a favorite destination for Colby romance; she got poison ivy), and, in January of her senior year, got married.

It was a long engagement (three years), and a very brief middle-of-the-night ceremony in Connecticut, attended by “the guy who drove us and the wife of the minister.” Three days later her husband, University of Maine graduate and U.S. Army 2nd Lt. Don Weston, went to war.

This was a few weeks after Pearl Harbor was attacked, a day that lives in infamy—and in Weston’s vivid memory of the news reaching Colby. “It was a shocker,” she said. “We knew it had changed our world. It just happened. How fortunate we were. How fortunate it was, in that there was a war.”

Instead it was a mass exodus, from Colby and the country, as men (and some women) joined the war effort. “The men were leaving,” Weston said. “They weren’t finishing. Many in my class didn’t graduate in forty-two. They left. They were called up before June.”

Lieutenant Weston, who ran artillery units and was eventually promoted to major, didn’t return for nearly four years, and their relationship was conducted through letters during that long separation.

“He never had any leave,” Weston said at her longtime home in Winterport, Maine. “There was no phone connection. You didn’t have any TV. None of the things they have now to work with. I don’t begrudge them, but it was different. All we had was what we could write to each other. We numbered our letters because they didn’t arrive in just the order you wrote them. We got up to nine-hundred ninety something or other.”

The letters are gone now, she said. They were mostly love letters, nothing she wanted to share, and besides, her husband wasn’t allowed to say anything about where he was or what he was doing. “I didn’t know where he was at all,” Weston said. “Just South Pacific. It was hot.”

A mathematics major, she spent the war years in Schenectady, N.Y., working at General Electric’s Jet Propulsion Lab. Weston did thousands of calculations by hand, though there was an early calculator.

“It was stored on the top floor of one of those buildings,” Weston said. “We went to see it. It was as long as this whole house and full of purple lights.”

By June 1945 Weston was home at her family’s farm in Vermont. Her husband had been in the Philippines preparing for the invasion of Japan when the atomic bomb was dropped. (Later he would say that he wouldn’t have survived the invasion, as he would have been on the beach early to set up artillery.)

Theodora Weston has vivid memories of his return that November. “I just couldn’t believe it,” she said, smiling at the thought. “I saw him get off that train and I thought, ‘My God. He’s here.’”

The couple would soon move to Caribou, Maine, where Don Weston worked as an engineer, first at a pea-packing plant and later at Loring Air Force Base. They had four children and then moved to Winterport so he could take a job at Dow Air Force Base. They bought an antique Cape Cod house, where Weston still lives, not far from the Penobscot River. She taught mathematics at Hampden Academy, up the river. They both retired in 1979, and Don Weston died four years ago.

“It was tough, sitting home and worrying,” Weston said, recalling that time seven decades ago. “It really was. But how fortunate we were. How fortunate we were.”

—Gerry Boyle ’78

1920s-30s
Colby College
Office of Alumni Relations
Waterville, ME 04901

1940-43
Gerry Boyle ’78
classnews1940@colby.edu

Gerry Boyle ’78
classnews1941@colby.edu

Gerry Boyle ’78
classnews1942@colby.edu

1944
Josephine Pitts McAlary
classnews1944@colby.edu
Frank Strup
replied to the questionnaire I sent out. He and his wife live in Lawrenceville, N.J., in the house they have owned for 55 years. Their son and his wife live in Sanibel, Fla., and their daughter and husband live in Fairfield, Conn. They have three grandchildren: one in New York City, one in Chicago, and one in Indianapolis. Frank belongs to the Johnson & Johnson Retirees Club. As I write in late August, I am very sad. I have just lost my 68-year-old daughter—my golden girl—to cancer ... as I turned 90.

1945
Gerry Boyle ’78
classnews1945@colby.edu

1946
Gerry Boyle ’78
classnews1946@colby.edu
Audrey Dyer Houghton and Paul Adams were the only ones who showed up for the lobster bake at reunion last June for the second year in a row. Paul asks, “Where are the rest of you guys and gals? We had a great time visiting with each other and are in relatively good health for a couple of ‘oldies’!”

1947
Gerry Boyle ’78
classnews1947@colby.edu

David Weber and his wife relish the cooling breezes from the Pacific at their home in Newport Beach, Calif. To be near their children, they moved there in 2011 after
Trailing Truffles | Alana McGee ’05

The cold morning air carried the scent of pine and damp earth as Alana McGee ’05 and her dog, Lolo, headed into the forest in the foothills of Washington’s Cascade Mountains. Lolo—a brown and white Lagotto Romagnolo, an Italian breed—caught the scent and bolted through the ferns. When Lolo stopped at a Douglas fir and barked, gently pawing at the ground, that was McGee’s cue. She caught up, dug briefly with her garden trowel, and lifted out a ripe black truffle.

“I love the adrenaline rush I get when the dogs find something and watching them use their natural instincts to do what we’ve professionally trained them to do,” said McGee, owner of Toil & Truffle in Seattle. One of just a few such companies in the country, its eight dogs hunt down truffles throughout the United States and Europe. McGee and the dogs specialize in the native Oregon black truffles and also white varieties for the region’s home cooks and restaurants. McGee also offers canine truffle-scent training.

“No one got sick or hurt—so for a week we just had fun.” Bob doesn’t see many Colby grads except for Marjorie McDougal Davis ’43, his son’s mother-in-law. “No one got sick or hurt—so for a week we just had fun.” Bob doesn’t see many Colby grads except for Marjorie McDougal Davis ’43, his son’s mother-in-law.

David Marson
classnews1948@colby.edu

Betty Dyer Brewster spends her summers in Memphis and reports that it was relatively cool this year. She visited her sister, Nancy Dyer Bacon, on Martha’s Vineyard this summer. She’s busy with new friends she’s made at Trezevant Manor, a retirement community in Memphis, and will return to Naples, Fla., in December.

“Patience and the ability to adapt,” she said. “They’ve made me more aware of my surroundings and how I move in the world. They’ve made me a better person.”

—Claire Sykes
It seems David Barr Kirtley ’00 was destined to become a science fiction writer. Before he could even read, Kirtley was writing stories, dictating them to his mother. His father was a sci-fi-loving physics professor. An avid reader growing up, Kirtley published his first story at 16.

Kirtley went on to find a place in the genre as a short story writer. He has published stories exploring time travel, shapeshifting, and cloning, among other things. His work has appeared in magazines including Realms of Fantasy and Weird Tales.

In 2010 Kirtley added another title to his résumé: podcast host. Kirtley is cohost of the popular Geek’s Guide to the Galaxy podcast. According to the show’s website, it receives 25,000 downloads per month. In April it was ranked as the top podcast in iTunes’ literature category.

The epiphany to do a podcast came after Kirtley and his friend, John Joseph Adams, finished a short interview about a zombies anthology book Adams edited, for which Kirtley was a contributor. Adams “did a radio interview but realized that he still had a lot more to say,” Kirtley recalled. “With a podcast, you can talk as long as you want to.”

Creating the podcast is a two-week process for the pair. Adams schedules the guest, and then the research begins. Kirtley reads the guest’s book and listens to interviews the guest has done elsewhere to prepare for the interview. They also arrange a panel discussion on a topic. Both the interview and the discussion are conducted via Skype. After sessions are recorded, the editing process begins. Then it’s time to upload.

According to Kirtley, one of the best parts of the podcast is having the chance to explore so many different fields. “I have a broad range of interests,” he said. “It gives me a reason to learn something new every week. It’s an intellectual challenge. When we interviewed Neil deGrasse Tyson, I got to read up on black holes.”

The list of people who have appeared on their show includes luminaries of science and science fiction. George R.R. Martin has discussed his Game of Thrones series. Another episode featured Chuck Palahniuk, the author of Fight Club.

Kirtley finds it fascinating to peer inside the minds of writers. In fact, before there was an Internet, he would read writers’ introductions over and over to glean clues to their craft. Now he—and thousands of listeners—go right to the source.

“T’m fascinated,” Kirtley said, “to know how they do what they do.”

—Andrew Clark

The Write Stuff | David Barr Kirtley ’00

1949
Anne Hagar Eustis
classnews.1949@colby.edu

Hallelujah! I have news to share thanks to all who responded to my letter. ★ When you come back to our 65th reunion, a must-see is the new Alford-Lunder Family Pavilion at the Colby Museum of Art. I’m not a connoisseur of art, but I found the opening exhibition marvelous—from Claes Oldenburg’s whimsical sculpture of a typewriter eraser, which only those of our generation would recognize, to the more serious paintings of Winslow Homer and Whistler, to name only two of many.

The exhibition is open through Reunion Weekend 2014. Don’t miss it! ★ Ruth Endicott Freeman and her husband, Miles, have two daughters, three grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren who live in Washington, D.C. At 97 Ruth still volunteers every Wednesday at the Congregational church free dinner, and her trips consist of driving herself down the hill to her dentist’s office. ★ Carol Carpenter Bisbee has four children, 14 grandchildren, and nine great-grandchildren. Carol keeps busy volunteering, traveling, reading, and riding around in her yellow Saab convertible. She volunteers in Belfast, Maine, for the Waldo County Hospital Aid gift shop, the Chamber of Commerce, and Friends of the Library, and she is a church deacon.

Her travels have taken her to Egypt, where she hot air ballooned over the Valley of Kings and Queens, and more locally on a wine-tasting cruise on Penobscot Bay. She’s a member of a coed bridge group who preface their bridge playing with cocktails, hors d’oeuvres, and pizza. On a more serious note, she’s taken lots of Senior College courses through the University of Maine. ★ Anne Bither Shire writes that she has lived at Piper Shores, a retirement community in Scarborough, Maine, for 10 years and loves it. She summers in Jonesport, Maine. She’s a fanatic duplicate bridge player. No trips anymore, but in the past she and her husband traveled all of Europe and Asia and a good deal of Africa. ★ Marjorie Plaisted has been plagued with health problems since the early 1980s when she was diagnosed with neuropathy of her left hand and foot. In December 2012 she fell, breaking four ribs and puncturing her left lung. This spring was spent in and out of the hospital with low oxygen and low heart rate, but she’s been home since May 4. Now she can enjoy reading and watching sports on TV—all the Boston teams as well as tennis, golf, and college and local sports. Good luck, Marge! ★ Mary Ellen Bonsall Guptill and her husband run a sanctuary for 50 to 100 cats in their property in Westport, Mass. Since the 1970s Mary Ellen, as a volunteer, has arranged exhibitions of arts and crafts and historical memorabilia at the Westport Free Public Library. With two friends she has traveled yearly to Italy and France and studied the arts and history. With her husband she has traveled by car across the United States several times and visited state houses and museums. • Jean Sheppard Silva lives in a retirement community in Camden, Maine, in her own cottage where she has a very small garden. In October her three children and five grandchildren had a family reunion for her “big” birthday. Her hobbies are reading and singing, which she does with the Down East Singers and in her church choir. In 2009 she traveled to Serbia, Bulgaria, and Greece with the Down East Singers. She also volunteers at her church thrift shop, Heavenly Threads, and at their weekly soup lunch November through March, and she ushers for Bay Chamber Concerts. • Lucille Farnham Sturtevant and her husband still live in their home (with the laundry moved to the main level) after 58 years. She does some gardening and plays golf a few times a year. She also volunteers at her church with the flower guild and as a lay reader. In April they took a five-day golf trip to St. Thomas. She sent the Westport Free Public Library. With two friends she has traveled yearly to Italy and France and studied the arts and history. With her husband she has traveled by car across the United States several times and visited state houses and museums. • Jean Sheppard Silva lives in a retirement community in Camden, Maine, in her own cottage where she has a very small garden. In October her three children and five grandchildren had a family reunion for her “big” birthday. Her hobbies are reading and singing, which she does with the Down East Singers and in her church choir. In 2009 she traveled to Serbia, Bulgaria, and Greece with the Down East Singers. She also volunteers at her church thrift shop, Heavenly Threads, and at their weekly soup lunch November through March, and she ushers for Bay Chamber Concerts. • Lucille Farnham Sturtevant and her husband still live in their home (with the laundry moved to the main level) after 58 years. She does some gardening and plays golf a few times a year. She also volunteers at her church with the flower guild and as a lay reader. In April they took a five-day golf trip to St. Thomas.

to my home state of Rhode Island, where I have served as interim minister. I also serve as chaplain of the WWII National KSM Navy Association. Locally I am chaplain of the Society of Colonial Wars and the Sons of the American Revolution. I do a lot of praying!” • Connie Leonard Hayes, Connie Foxcroft Perrigo, Stubby Crandall Graves, Ellen Kenerson Gelotte, Pat Root Wheeler, and I had lunch during our annual gathering in Jaffrey, N.H. My sister, Allie Jennings Castelli, couldn’t make it this year because she is in the process of selling her home. She and Bob plan to move into a retirement community once the house is sold. • The alumni office sends out e-mails four times a year asking for news. We have about 120 classmates but only 40 who have e-mail addresses registered with Colby. If you don’t use e-mail, please send a note to me via the alumni office (4310 Mayflower Hill, Waterville, ME 04901) anytime during the year about what you have been doing since our 50th reunion. They’ll forward your note to me so I can include it in our next column. We look forward to hearing from and about you.

Fred Boyle ’51 has written eight books on genealogy, which he took up after retiring from a 30-year teaching career. He has many genealogy clients nationwide.

Simon’s Island, Ga. • I’m out of space, so I will have lots more to report in the next issues of Colby!

1950

Elisabeth Jennings Maley

classnews1950@colby.edu

Allie Jennings Castelli and her family recently attended the annual Castelli family reunion at Bill Castelli’s home on Cape Cod. They had a great time together on a beautiful weekend—good food and good company! • Bev Holt Wiegand sold her home of 55 years and moved to Cristwood Park, a Christian community. Her address is 350 North 190th St., #B403, Shoreline, WA 98133. Sadly, her husband died of a heart attack 20 years ago. They have two sons: Rick, a special education teacher in Fairfield, Calif., and Randy, who lives in Guam. Randy and Mizpah have two children, 14 and 16, so Bev “made it to Grandma.” • Charles Smith writes, “Since retiring as a Connecticut pastor in June 1991, I moved

1951

Chet Harrington
classnews1951@colby.edu

Cass Lightner writes that he has a unique form of arthritis in his left big toe. Has anyone ever heard of the malady? Otherwise, he’s in good health. Stay in the race, Cass—you were a great band leader. • Dan Hall from Duxbury, Mass., laments the loss of Nels Corey, a great former Colby football and hockey coach in the late ’40s and early ’50s. Nels moved on to several small colleges and ended up at Hotchkiss. He was always liked and respected. He was 98 and living in Gardiner, Maine, when he passed away. He was a close friend to Dan for 67 years. • Fred Boyle, after a 30-year teaching career, ended up in Lexington, Mass. He took up genealogy and has many clients nationwide. He’s written eight books on the subject and received many acclamations. Fred is past president of his local rotary club and of the Piscataqua Pioneers. He’s active in York County (Maine) Senior College as a teacher and coordinator. We congratulate Fred for his success and wish him well in his future endeavors.

Lucy and Richard Bowen celebrated their 62nd wedding anniversary Sept. 3. Lucy has shown great staying power—congrats to you both! Richard attended the last Colby reunion with four classmates present. Thanks for representing our famous class. • George Wales called me on my 86th birthday, and I was pleased to hear he has become an artist/painter. He’s always creative in everything he does in life. Just ask Lorrie (Arcese) ’54, his wife of more than 50 years. • Ted Sho and I met, as we always do, in Naples, Fla., in the winter. Ted is always just surviving an operation but continues to chase the girls on the tennis court and anywhere else. He spends a lot of the fall chasing his wonderful grandson Aaron Murray, an All-American quarterback for the University of Georgia.

We returned from our annual vacation in Orleans on Cape Cod, where we’ve gone for more than 50 years and still have a lot of fun with the beaches and great golf courses. I was very active in the U.S. Open, held this year at my club, Merion Golf Club, where I’ve played for 53 years. No pro even broke par, so Merion won again. Jane and I have been married for 57 years, with four sons and eight grandchildren to keep us busy. Here’s wishing the greatest class in Colby’s 200-year history more good health and good luck. All the best to the best.

1952

Jan “Sandy” Pearson Anderson
classnews1952@colby.edu

Hello, Class of ’52! Can you believe summer is over? Time flies, doesn’t it? Must have something to do with our age. Before going to the news, let me say how much I enjoyed the summer 2013 bicentennial issue of Colby, which we received in August. To me, it was the most interesting and enjoyable issue in recent memory. Congratulations to Gerry Boyle ’78 and the magazine staff!! Right after our request for news, Pat Erdkine Howlett wrote, “Thank you, Sandy, for keeping us all together. Colby is among my fondest memories.” Well, Pat, it is thanks to all of you who contribute your news that this column remains interesting. • Russ Wallace wrote about a trip to France that

Jean Sheppard Silva ’49 sings with her church choir in Camden, Maine, and with the Down East Singers. In 2009 she performed with the group in Serbia, Bulgaria, and Greece.

1953

Barbara Easterbrooks Maley
classnews1953@colby.edu

It has been about five months since reunion, but I still have a few notes from over the

43

COLBY / FALL 2013

Wanted: Class of ’52 members in the Paris area. Let me know! • Russ also reports, “We received a great letter from Sheila and Don Haller. I’m so glad that we’re still in touch!” • Barbara Scott wrote, “Next spring there will open in Calgary’s inner city a new park; to my astonishment and absolute delight, it will be called Barb Scott Park. I am ecstatic and wanted to let you know!” (Barbara, let us know what precipitated this. It certainly is a special one.) • Mel Lyon said, “I’m now really retired, after a long period of hesitating about when to do it. I’m working on a quasi-historical novel, and after a bout of ill health I am now back in good times again. Hope this finds all of you classmates living a happy life.” • Art White wrote, “I was saddened to hear of Nels Corey passing. Many of us knew him briefly during our early years at Colby, as Nels was on the coaching staff, but I had the great pleasure of working with him at Hotchkiss. Bill Bryan convinced Nels that he would be a good fit at Hotchkiss, so from 1965 to 1980 we worked closely together. Nels was extremely popular and very successful at Hotchkiss. He had a very positive influence on those he taught and coached. Nels was one of the great ones in the history of Hotchkiss, Bowdoin, and anywhere else he worked. Nels was 98!” • And that does it for this time around, my friends. Stay well, and we’ll catch up with you next time.
summer. John Lee said he regretted not seeing Rocky Applebaum and Ken Castonguay. The last time he saw Rocky was at Camp Kilmer, N.J., in 1953. Ken and John were in the same group from Maine. John had also run into Rick Tyler, Paul Ostrove, Frank Piacentini, and Dick Cole ’55. John said, “We could have been an all-Colby fighting squad.” In July John was drafted into the U.S. Army, ending up at Fort Devens, Fort Monmouth radar school, and Aberdeen basic training. All these moves proved lucky for him in the future. Next he went to Redstone, Ala., for the ICBM ballistic missile training and then on to White Sands, N.M., for missile repair training. In 1953 he received his military discharge and went on to Yale to major in physics.

Alan Whittaker ’53 writes that he attended Colby from 1949 to 1951, then left for four years to serve in the Air Force in the Korean War. He came back to Colby and lived with his wife in the veterans’ apartments.

He worked on and tested accelerators and was promoted to head technician. Next in view was the University of Bridgeport, where Bob earned an engineering degree summa cum laude. Now he and his brother manage a die casting company that was started by their father.

1954

Art Eddy
classnews1954@colby.edu

The days are indeed growing shorter, so I’m sending another reminder to each of you to save the weekend of June 5-8, 2014, for our 60th reunion. Hope to see you there. Merrillyn Healey Decker reports that husband Karl has turned from photojournalism to writing short stories. She is recovering from total knee replacement and hopes to return soon to the contemporary global issues group that she chairs. Bill and Penny Thresher Edson took an 11-day land tour and cruise in Alaska and highly recommend it to everyone. Excursions from the ship to visit glaciers, rainforests, and a training center that prepares huskies for the annual Iditarod race were some of the highlights. Peter Fishbin attended the “spectacular” opening of the new Alfond-Lunder Family Pavilion at the Colby Museum of Art. He caught up with old frat buddies Bob Fischer, Allan Landau ’55, Peter Lunder ’56, Sonny Slater ’56, Dick Abdoen ’56, and Donny Kupersmith ’56. He hopes that our reunion will be as much fun. For her 81st birthday, Judy Thompson Lowe rented a condo in St. Augustine, Fla., for a month to “spend some time with myself—and I threw out the scale.” Diane Chamberlin Starcher has a new address: 750 North Tamiami Trail, Unit 1611, Sarasota, FL 34236. They’re keeping their Chamberby, France, apartment and will spend several months each year there. They were in the States from May to July visiting with family and exploring the Maine coast from Acadia National Park to the Portland area, where they had a reunion with Diane’s sister, Susan Chamberlin Trauger ’60. Many thanks to those of you who have informed me of the passing of classmates. I have chosen to let that news appear in the obituary section of this magazine.

1955

Kathie Flynn Carrigan
classnews1955@colby.edu

Greetings, ’55ers! I hope everybody received their summer issue of Colby magazine, in which John Reisman’s photo appeared in the ’50s newsmakers box for having been elected to the Central Ohio Senior Citizens Hall of Fame as a 19-year volunteer as a counselor for seniors and a cook for the homeless. Congratulations, John! We’re all very proud of you. John and Jane (Daib) ’58 made their annual trip to Maine. Their whole family came to celebrate his 80th birthday and their 55th wedding anniversary. John reported that during their time in Maine, “we had lunch with Kathy McConaughy Zamollo ’56, visited with Mark ’54 and Larry Walker Powley ’54, and had a reunion with Bob Raymond ’56, Bill ’58 and Cindy Allerton Rocknak ’58, and Olin and Willie Mc Donald Sawyer ’58. We even managed a visit to the new Alfond-Lunder Family Pavilion, which was nothing short of amazing.” Jane Millett Dornish wrote that Anne Burbank Palmer hosted a lunch at her camp on Great Pond. Attendees included Germaine Michaud Orloff, Jean Van Curan Pugh, Ann “Dilly” Dillingham Ingalls, Marlene Hurd Jabar ’54, Arline Rosenthal Sachs ’54, and Janet Fraser Mitchell ’54. “What fun we had with lots of reminiscing and not too ‘way back when’! There are many 80-year celebrations going on.” Kathy McConaughy Zamollo ’56 said, “It has been great to be included in so many ’55 summer get-togethers. Had lunch in Augusta with Jane Millett Dornish, Ann Burnham Deering, Jean Van Curan Pugh, and Ellie Small Hudson, followed by another lunch in Waterville with Willie (Robertson) ’54 and Nate Miller, Sue Biven Staples, Dave Roberts, and Bob ‘Whitie’ Thurston ’54. And who was at the restaurant but Anne Burbank Palmer and Carol Maciver Murphy and her husband. All were on their way to the Lunder exhibition, but I headed back to Damariscotta Lake, where I try to spend most of the summer. Dick Bartlett and Harriet Sears Fraser visited me at the lake, and I had lunch with Jo Bailey Campbell. At the end of June, Harriet Sears Fraser and I traveled to New Hampshire to visit Don Moore and his wife, Addie. Nine years ago Lou and I moved to Maine. Lou’s ashes are buried in our local cemetery very near the lake cottage. I can walk there whenever I wish. I’m in good health and stay active so am thankful for my blessings. My very best to all.” Berry Wellersdieck Piper was so happy to hear news of Dianne Reynolds Wright, who was her freshman roommate. Berry wrote, “All is well in Corona Del Mar. We hike a lot along the beach and on the trails and see our four grandchildren who live nearby. Our daughter teaches fourth grade in Carlsbad. One son is in Hawaii and one is nearby. We are happy to say that in December, it will be five years since Eric’s heart transplant. We have all been blessed. I talk to Sistie Restall Home weekly. She is coming along very well and lives with one of her daughters in Aliso Viejo, not far from us.” Marilyn Faddis Butler ordered the Colby Eight CD, “which is terrific. It does take you back! Otherwise, all is still good in sunny (hot!) Florida.” Babs Burg King’s daughter wrote that Babs moved to Roanoke, Va., to be closer to her daughter due to health issues. Her new address is: Barbara B. King, 4428 Pheasant Ridge Rd., Unit #5, Roanoke, VA 24014. Sadly, word has come of the death of Joe Perham Aug. 28. (“Kathie Flynn Carrigan) had a great lunch with Jo Bailey Campbell and Sue Biven Staples in August when Sue was vacationing in Penobscot, Maine. My whole family came from Wyoming and northern New York and spent a glorious, sun-drenched week with me. What a joy! Happy fall to all ’55ers! Please stay in touch. Families and Colby classmates are the glue that holds us together!

1956
Charlene Roberts Riorian
classnews1956@colby.edu

In July Frank Huntress was a duty chaplain in Westminster Abbey. “What a privilege it was to rejoice in the celebration of the queen’s anniversary of her coronation.”

* I was saddened by the news of Danny Yarchin’s death. George Rudolph and Danny were roommates, and when George phoned with the news, we recalled how Danny had given us many moments of joie de vivre. George and I reminisced about Colby and our class family. George, now living in Palm City, Fla., will be in touch when he comes to Wenham to visit family.

* George hopes to get to Waterville to visit the old haunts and especially to see the art collection that Paula and Peter Lunder so generously bestowed upon the College.

* David “Sonny” Slater is a trustee of the DeCordova Sculpture Park (about 30 acres) in Lincoln, Mass. Paula and Peter Lunder have been David’s closest of friends since Colby (Peter, Dick Abedon, Alan Landau ’55, and David were roommates at TDPhi). David and wife Barbara share the Lunders’ love of art, although their collection is modest and mostly pop art. They have immensely enjoyed their experiences in the art world. David said, “But whether it is the Getty or the Louvre, no other feels better to me than the Colby Art Museum.”

* Tom ’54 and Sue Miller Hunt moved back to Sherborn into a remodeled house that is next door to where they lived for 10 years, until 2004. Their only granddaughter, Eva Hunt, was married in June at the Kent School, where their son, Tom Jr., teaches and coaches. They see the Dave and Rosemary Crouthamel Soror, Sheila Freckmann Dillon, who lives in Australia, and Ruth Simonds MacKinnon, who lives in Jefferson, Maine. Janet Nordgren Meryweather and Mary Ann Papalia Lacabue and her daughter came ashore from Holland America’s Maasdam Aug. 16. They toured Bar Harbor shops, drove to the top of Cadillac Mountain, and then went home for lunch with Janet’s husband, Steen (Mary Ann’s husband stayed aboard). “What a delightful day we had!”

* In June Lucy Blainey Groening and Katie Cooen Dunlop joined Bob and Dodi Alkman Adel for an Alaska Inside Passage cruise. The small ship allowed them to visit rivers, glaciers, and smaller ports inaccessible to larger ships. Sue and Bob Adams still live in Daytona Beach but spend most summers in a cottage in Owls Head, Maine. Their health is good, and Bob plays tennis three times a week as well as pickleball, a great new game for our age group. Bob says, “Hello to any old Zeta Psi friends as I have not really kept in touch.”

* Charlie Morrissey joined the board of visitors at the Drucker Graduate School of Management at Claremont Graduate University. Kathy McConaughy Zambello lunched with Ruthann Simonds MacKinnon as she also summers at Damariscotta Lake. In September Kathy joined her brother on a 19-day trip to Italy with five days in Venice and five days in Rome.

* Louise Allen Freedman (who attended Colby for only one year but has husband Howard ’49 and daughter Ellen ’81) attended the opening of the Alfond-Lunder Family Pavilion in June at Colby.

* David and Rosemary Crouthamel Soror, Tess and Jube Jubinsky, Peter and Hope Palmier Bramhall, Kathy McConaughy Zambello, and Chris Layer Larson also wrote about the wonderful events at the Alfond-Lunder Family Pavilion celebration: a champagne reception, tours of the new galleries, a fabulous lobster/clam bake, and the singing of happy birthday to Peter Lunder, who was presented with a huge whoopie pie shared by all attendees. All of this was followed by fireworks and a gift copy of the catalogue of the collection. They all spoke of the graciousness of the Lunders during the weekend. Other classmates in attendance included the Weys, Haggettts, Pugh’s, Barbara Nardozi Saxorn, and Bill Wyman.

1957
Guy and Eleanor Ewing Vigue
classnews1957@colby.edu

As I write, our fields here in Maine are lined with goldenrod, a sure sign fall is on the way. Most of you, I’m sure, had a busy summer, but in spite of visitors and hectic schedules we heard from quite a few classmates. Bev (Jackson) ’60 and Tony Glockler attended Reunion 2013 partly to help celebrate Colby’s 200th anniversary and partly to accompany their daughter, Margo ’88, to her 25th reunion. Tony reported that Peter Merrill led the Colby Eight and “they sounded young as ever!” That one compliment alone would be music to Peter and company’s ears (pardon the pun). The Glocklers returned to Maine to go camping in Acadia in July, and then they were off to Scandinavia in August.

* Toni Ciunci Hudson reported from Pasadena that she has been fully retired for six years but Patrick is still hard at work. Toni and I once again enjoyed lunch at the Royal Beach Museum of Contemporary Art to join in the celebration of the anniversary of the queen’s coronation.

Frank Huntress ’56 was a duty chaplain in Westminster Abbey in July and was there to join in the celebration of the anniversary of the queen’s coronation.

1958
Mary Ellen Chase Bridge
classnews1958@colby.edu

For three-quarters of the year Patrick and Jane Gibbons Wood are in Claremont, Calif., living at Pilgrim Place, a retirement center for professional faith-related progressives. They still return to Maine in the summer, “until our money runs out,” and are still biking and hiking, “but more moderately.”

* Barry Ginsburg has been troubled by the decline in middle-class and middle-management jobs available in America so has decided to create the for-profit Northwest Connecticut Opportunity Fund. The fund would invest between $250,000 and $1,500,000 in small and medium-sized businesses in northwest Connecticut with the goal of creating jobs, spurring economic activity, creating wealth, and making a profit for the investors. He would be pleased to hear from alumni in the region. Please send me an e-mail (classnews1958@colby.edu) if you’d like his mobile number. Best of luck with this venture!  ● Burt Angrist has been doing a little local hiking and canoeing and plans some more in the Adirondacks “after the bugs decrease.”  ● John ’55 and Jane Dalb Reisman spent three weeks in Maine this summer, one with their entire family to celebrate John’s 80th birthday and their 55th wedding anniversary and the other two at their Linkein Bay rental, which they share with Jack and Susan Bower Hendrickson. As usual they had visits with Olin and Willie Mc Donald Sawyer. Bill and Cindy Allerton Rocknak, Bob Raymond ’56, Mark ’54 and Larry Walker Powley ’54, and Kathy McGonaghy Zambello ’56. Jane planned to return to Maine in September for a Tri-Delt reunion.  ● Marcia Griggs Atsaves continues to spend weekends at the beach in Delaware and enjoys stopping by on the way at the fresh produce stands for corn, tomatoes, squash, peaches, and blueberries and at her favorite fish place for freshly caught seafood. She plays tennis, swims, bikes, and lies on the beach with a good book and friends—an idyllic life! In the fall she plans a cruise from Athens to Rhodes and Cyprus, then through the Suez Canal and on to Oman and Dubai. She is “excited about it, albeit worried about the current Middle Eastern situation. We’ll see how it all works out.”  ● Daniel Yett is a volunteer at the new education center at the Smithsonian’s National Museum of Natural History: Q?RUIUS. It’s a learning environment featuring hands-on, computer-linked access to 6,000 items selected from the collections, an approach considered unique among major museums. Dan has two more trips on his calendar: Argentina/Patagonia and a specialized tour of Burma, Laos, and Cambodia.  ● Bruce Blanchard and wife Coleen spent the month of February traveling to Australia, New Zealand, and Tasmania. “New Zealand had been on my bucket list for a long time.” He recently played golf with John Edes for a nonprofit charity and, last year, was honored to speak at Norman Lee’s memorial service. In July I spent eight days in Ireland with a small group connected with Champlain College, where I taught for many years. We were in Dublin for three days and then headed to Belfast and west and south again, returning to the east coast. Our Belfast visit came three days before the Protestants celebrate a battle fought and won in 1690, and they had bonfires ready to light. Unfortunately violence ensued again, though we were assured that in general the situation has greatly improved.  ● Hope you are all well and enjoying life, and please keep the news coming! Thanks.

1959

Joanne K. Woods
classnews1959@colby.edu

I was saddened to learn of the passing of Dick Morrison. He was one of my most faithful contributors to class news. He will be missed.  ● Elaine (Healey) ’62 and Paul Reichert enjoy life in Westbrook, N.H. Paul has found that in small towns you’re recognized as a newcomer and people are willing to offer their assistance. However, no one offered to repair the old barn roof, so he can cross roof repair off his bucket list. He can also take off his list digging a hole for a 1,000-gallon propane tank. Elaine said if he made another one twice as long (40 feet) and filled it with water, she would have a lap pool. Paul’s oldest granddaughter is now out of the Army (two tours to a war zone) and in college.

Bob Younes ’59 provides medical care for inmates in five county jails in Maryland. In the past he has served as a Peace Corps doctor in Tunisia and head of a pediatrics department.

Bob Younes ’59 provides medical care for inmates in five county jails in Maryland. In the past he has served as a Peace Corps doctor in Tunisia and head of a pediatrics department.

Number-four grandchild graduated in June and will go to college this fall. The latest wildlife count includes four fawns, five baby Canada geese, and 30 baby turkeys, and so far the garden has survived.  ● Bob Younes provides medical care for inmates detained in five county jails in Maryland. In the past he has served as a Peace Corps doctor in Tunisia, a pediatrician, head of the pediatrics department at a community hospital in Dorchester, Mass., an HMO medical director in Washington, D.C., and a community college medical director in Springfield, Va. Bob and his wife, Anne, are in the process of launching their two children into the world of work and independence. Bob is also busy organizing all the items that he failed to organize during his lifetime—pictures, family history, genealogy, documents, and times contributes articles on stocks in Forbes and, in the past, Business Week.  ● Condolences to Jack Pallotta and family on the death of his wife and our classmate Barbara Hunter Pallotta, who passed away October 5. Look for more about her in the obituaries.  ● Next June is our 55th reunion. Planning has already begun. Let’s make the news column leading up to it a good one, and I look forward to seeing you at Colby June 5-8, 2014.

1960

Jane Holden Huerta
classnews1960@colby.edu

David Fowler spends his time between New Mexico and Montana. He has 12 grandchildren—four in New Mexico, three in China, two in Seattle, and three in New Hampshire. His first job after graduating from Colby was teaching at the Hawai‘i Preparatory School on the Big Island. The shocking thing is that the kids he taught are now in their retirement years. This fall Dave will have completed his second mystery novel. The first, Cloud Swallow, takes place in New Mexico and has a protagonist who is a local Pueblo Indian and a graduate of Dartmouth. The second novel, Descent, features the same location and hero. As a true history major he has had fun researching the stories.  ● Ann Kimball Chase writes that her life has been rather dull compared to 20 years ago when she was constantly on the go. She has her beautiful island home on the market; it needs a family with kids to really enjoy the rather large home and huge yard. She has given up volleyball since it is dangerous for 76-year-old bones, and she will become one of those seniors in Florida swimming and walking, as she has been told they are safer. And no biking—the last time out she fell and broke her shoulder. Anyone want to buy a nice, relatively new bike?  ● Dick Peterson works with a start-up company writing cyber-theft insurance. Now he’s learning convoluted new things with the computer and Internet, distributing products online, marketing with Google ad words, and measuring with analytics and algorithms. He wonders if he missed these subjects at Colby all those years ago.  ● Karen Kennedy Yearsley lives on Bainbridge Island near the ferry to Seattle. She loves renting her condo, which is close to everything so she can walk to many places. She enjoys line dancing, pingpong, tennis, Shakespeare classes, bridge, and volunteer work. Now that life has become much more stress-free, Karen is thinking about doing some traveling.  ● Mike Silverberg attended Colby Day at the Red Auerbach basketball camp, which Steve Curley has run for more than 50 years. Ed Marchetti, Phil Shea, Ray Berberian, and Peter Caviar were also there to watch the kids practice and enjoy lunch with much conversation. It’s a wonderful program that Steve has kept in existence to help a substantial number of young men find their way in life through sports. Mike also is in touch Ron Weber, Dick Fields ’61, and Hank Silverman.  ● Judy Allen Ferretti and her husband had a wonderful trip to Croatia in May. They lived on a beautiful, spacious yacht with 24 others, visiting different scenic islands every day. They traveled with Road Scholar, where Judy serves on the board of directors.  ● Pat Sturges Aufenberg had a fantastic trip to England, enjoying history, architecture, scenery, etc. She took a three-day tour in Durham, where she studied the Anglo-Saxon manuscripts written by the Venerable Bede and others, and she visited places where the monks lived in the 700s. In York she saw Yorkminster and the shambles, learning that Richard was not a hunchback but had one shoulder higher than the other. Pat spent another two weeks in London going on in-depth two-person tours. She also saw Swan Lake by the Bolshoi Ballet at the Royal Opera House. ● Eunice Bucholz Spooner has a German exchange student, Joscha, who is registered as a senior at the local high school. She never dreamed she would be the mother of a high school senior again. ● We will miss Ted Lockhart ’61, our dear friend and honorary member of the Class of ’60.

1961

Diane Sraffon Cohen Ferreira
classnews1961@colby.edu

Here is a continuation of our last column’s Colby summer memories: Tom Kirkendall asked, “Would you like to hear about the summer I spent designing manhole covers for the state of Ohio? I told this story to the conversational French class and they all bought it hook, line, and sinker, including Professor Byron. Got an A.” Send us the story, Tom! ● Summers during her Colby years, Wendy Ihstrom Nielsen worked for West Hartford (Connecticut) Parks and Recreation and at A.C. Peterson Dairy scooping ice cream. ● Dave and Judy Neumann Seddon wrote, “David lived his dream with the Yankee Rookies, the Halifax Red Sox, and the Mitchell South Dakota Kernels. ‘Bring on the bus trips!’ Judy worked at the Madison Beach Hotel in Connecticut and the New Ocean House in Massachusetts.” ● Margaret “Margie” Chamberlain Davis reported, “Colby summer memories: summer ’60 in East Chop, Martha’s Vineyard—my sister, Liz Chamberlain ’60, married Bob Huss ’60 in the Edgartown Episcopal Church. I was maid of honor, and Courtney Davis ’60 was best man.” Margie added recent news: “Earlier this year, drove to Wild Dunes/Isle of Palms, S.C., with friends and a young boy. Nine hours a day in a car with a 6-year-old was an adventure in itself, followed by a wonderful 10 days in a beach condo. Charleston is a beautiful city, especially when toured in a horse-drawn carriage.” ● Carole Ann Pope claimed recent Colby sightings: “Ann Burnham Deering ’55 and Karl ’54 and Jane Millett Dornish ’55 at the Royal River Grillhouse in Yarmouth—they looked great! Also ran into John Kelly

“Colby helped shape the person I am.”

“At Colby I found strong faculty, excellent resources, and a close community of students who became lifelong friends. My wish is to help other young people from rural Maine access a life-changing Colby experience. So I recently established a donor advised fund through which I direct my charitable commitments, designating Colby as both an ongoing and ultimate beneficiary.”

— John C. Chapman ’62

You, too, can leave a lasting legacy. Call Colby’s Gift Planning Office today at 1-800-809-0103 for a personal consultation and proposal, or e-mail Elizabeth.Armstrong@colby.edu.
at the KinderKonertz, performed by the Portland Symphony Orchestra. I’ve been ushering for the PSO and often see Sandy Nolet Quinlan, Jill Williams Hooper, and Sandy Goodwin Nelson there. Around Brunswick I see Debbie Price ’62, Nancy MacKenzie Keating ’62, and Mike McCabe ’62. Betsy Perry Burke and I plan to see the Michelangelo exhibit at the MFA in Boston. Really looking forward to the Alfond-Lunder Pavilion grand opening. From all reports it’s not to be believed. Go, Colby!

Peter Denman is “in Bishop, Calif., where we and other family members are renovating an old shopping center in the eastern Sierras.” Bob Burke and Donna, along with another couple from Naples, Fla., enjoyed a May “flying safari” to Africa. They flew Cessna 182s (four-seat, single-engine planes) to six safari sites in South Africa, Botswana, and Zimbabwe, where they saw many animals close to their safari vehicle in the bush. They flew about 1,800 miles over two weeks on safari and also spent five days in Cape Town, South Africa, touring the wine region. Bill Wooldridge at the Hudson, Ohio, Chautauqua Institution said, “Heard great speakers who are quite optimistic or pessimistic about healthcare’s future. Everyone agrees we’re in for a very interesting ride! Jo and I still live on College Street in Hudson, where I serve on the city council and spend a lot of time with local charities. Really enjoyed our 50th we were not there nearly long enough to take it all in!”

1962
Pat Farnham Russell
Nancy Keating McKenzie
classnews1962@colby.edu

Mary “Muff” Symonds Leavitt sent a copy of a poster displayed in Salzburg advertising an Alex Katz exhibition from the Colby Museum of Art. Muff was pleased that Colby was sharing part of this wonderful collection with the people of Austria. Bruce Brown opened an art gallery in Portland and was recognized in the July edition of Maine magazine as one of “50 people who have made a difference in Maine” (along with the Lunders). Congrats, Bruce! Bruce also enjoys traveling: He spent three weeks in Turkey in May and is planning on Vienna and Budapest in November. Graham Barkham, with tongue in cheek, says he leads an especially boring life, but he did buy a new car. Richard Mittleman finds it hard to believe it was 55 years ago that we started our college career on Mayflower Hill. Richard still practices business law and goes to his office at least three days a week. A mobile phone and iPad have made a significant impact on how he communicates with clients—face-to-face meetings are becoming a thing of the past. He enjoys golf and rides his bicycle eight miles several times a week. Winters are spent in Ft. Lauderdale. Brenda Phillips Gibbons spent her summer visiting and/or hosting family. Granddaughter Liddy attended sailing school nearby, and graddaughter Devon is off to Syracuse. The Gibbonses were en route to Pennsylvania to celebrate Mother Gibbons’s 98th birthday. Brenda hopes to make it back for our 55th. Richard Simkins enjoys a busy retirement managing the Grog restaurant in Newburyport, Mass. After 44 years he’s turned the reins over to his daughter and son-in-law. Rich opened a new store next to the Grog, Traders’, that features rocks, fossils, minerals, Southwest and Native American folk art, and jewelry. Winters are now spent in Tucson. Sonny Bryant and his wife and Mary and Peter Duggan stopped by for a visit. Brenda Lewison and Bill Blunden celebrated their 20th anniversary and great happiness by spending three weeks in Florence, Italy. Brenda is retired from her editorial work, but Bill still works as the architect for the Cleveland Clinic. Their combined seven grandchildren are a great joy, and both Brenda and Bill are in excellent health. Peter and Brenda Wroblebski Gotschall spent Labor Day weekend taking a train ride in the underground salt museum in Hutchinson, Kan., and, of course, enjoying KC BBQ. They planned to hike Big Sur and Yosemite in October. Sandra Keef Hunter spent June in Nashville, where she learned the costume of the day is cowboy boots and very short skirts; July in Maine, where she hired a guide and finally saw a spruce grouse; and August in Monterrey, where she saw California condors and blue whales. Pete Thompson responded for the first time. Wish I could reproduce his response in its totality—he is so funny. His biggest achievement was laying off partying long enough to earn his law degree; he’s spent the past 48 years practicing law in Lewiston. His ex-wife, Noemi Sanchez, died about a year ago. Pete and Noemi had a daughter, Ilse, and a grandson, Arlo, who live in Portland, Ore. Pete reports: “I’m joyfully single; live on a lake in the woods; work out at the Y every morning and get to the office by seven; arrive at the watering hole with friends at five; pound ‘em ‘til eight; then come home and ply my passion for cooking great-tasting but awful-for-you food.” He has contact with Hope Hutchins Benton, Bruce Marshall, and Jimmy Johnson. As for yours truly, Pat Farnham Russell, I spent my summer at our cottage on the lake near Millinocket with loads of family and friends in and out. This was my 46th summer in this beautiful spot. In September I took a wonderful river cruise/tour of Russia. Next on the agenda: a month in Germany, Prague, and Spain, where my daughter is conducting Wake Forest’s abroad program in Salamanca. Except for Prague, this will be a visiting family/friends-paced trek. No cathedrals or churches!

Mary “Muff” Symonds Leavitt ’62 sent a copy of a poster displayed in Salzburg advertising an Alex Katz exhibition there from the Colby College Museum of Art.

and hope to return for our 55th.” Bebe Clark Mutz wrote, “Drove cross-country this summer with an 85-year-old friend. We explored Maryland to Washington and California, and on the return we saw where Lewis and Clark camped in South Dakota, the Donner Pass, Custer’s Montana, Utah’s salt flats, the Truman Library in St. Louis, and more! If anyone else wants to do it, I’d go.” Mary Sawyer Bartlett went to the Bar Harbor Inn Terrace to meet Jock ’62 and Debbie Lucas Williams ’62 and Bob Di Napoli. “Caught up with him at last. It was a most delightful visit. Everyone looks good and feels good. It was Bob's birthday the next day. Earlier, I drove to Colby with two friends and toured the art museum. Colby has a very impressive collection; annual week’s sail along the Maine coast from Boothbay Harbor to Frenchboro with Rod Pierce. They had a couple of beautiful days but mostly rain and fog, which improved their navigation and cribbage skills. Al served as emcee at his mother-in-law’s 68th high school reunion. He enjoyed it, but he isn’t going on the reunion circuit. Bill ’62 and Barb Haines Chase spent two weeks in a cottage in Friendship, Maine. They’ll have news for the next issue after their hike with the Sierra Club in Tuscany in September. We look forward to hearing all about it. Sue (Sawyer) ’64 and Brian McLary spent a wonderful week in the Galapagos with family. “A biology major’s paradise”—finches, marine iguanas who swooze out the salt from the water, sea lions, and even penguins! They’re currently planning their retirement home in Virginia. While enjoying adventures with family and friends in Maine, Connie Miller Manter has been “collaborating with the Geoth Institute, Washington, D.C., Transatlantic Outreach Program for K-University Educators.” Recently, Connie and I had a lovely lunch in Yarmouth. She’s looking forward to reconnecting with many of us in various places! An automatic reply from Dan Politica’s e-mail was a thank you for supporting the United Way. I guess we can assume Dan’s busy doing good work for the United Way! David Hunt’s interest in the lakes and rivers of Aroostook County took him to Portage Lake, a pristine, remote, beautiful area. He spent hours going against the current on the Fish River and saw six moose in three sightings—five cow moose and a bull with a large rack as well as otters frolicking in a quiet part of the river. “A wonderful break!” This summer Ed Buyniski completed a 440-mile pilgrimage across northern Spain, el Camino de Santiago de Compostela. He says the five-week walk “does wonders for one’s mental and physical health.” • Herb Gottfried and wife Jan Jennings moved from Ithaca, N.Y., to Tulsa, Okla., for retirement. In 2012 Herb published Landscape in American Guides and View Books: Visual History of Touring and Travel. • After three weeks at her beach house with family and friends, Jeannette Fannin Regetz planned to go to Asheville in September and do her first Road Scholar trip in October to Sedona.

• Marsha Palmer Reynolds revisited the Colby Museum of Art. “What a fabulous experience … lots of visitors … everyone just raved and raved. We have to return again, as it’s difficult to see everything in one visit. I encourage everyone to see this terrific museum.” • Chris and Midge Walton Holmes celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. • Nancy (Judd) ‘61 and Peter Coughlan celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary at the Homestead Resort in Hot Springs, Va. Their three sons and their families enjoyed the myriad activities, including falconry, horseback riding, golf, and spa treatments. • Both avid sailors, Steve Eittreim and wife Carole have been following the AC competition on SF Bay. He invites anyone in the area to give them a call. • Whit Bond and wife Faith spent two weeks in Scotland playing golf, including at Muirfield just two weeks before the British Open. • Apologies to Rosemary Blankenhub and to Anita Nourse Largent for errors in the summer column. Please substitute Rosemary’s name for Anita’s.

1964
Marcia Phillips Shelton
classnews1964@colby.edu

Many classmates are writing in to say they are looking forward to our 50th reunion next June. • Barney Hallowell writes from North Haven Island, Maine, where he and his wife, Christie, have raised six children. After 40 years as a teacher and principal of North Haven Community School, Barney is now executive director of the Hurricane Island Foundation and its Center for Science and Leadership, providing “experiential education with leadership training for high school students, particularly from Maine’s public schools.” Barney is also busy with five grandchildren, 20 chickens, two cats, a dog, bicycles, boats, lobster traps, and a motorcycle—a 70th birthday present! • Peggy Chandler Davey raised her family and worked and is now retired in Madison, Wis. She spent her career in state government and then as a student services administrator at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. In retirement Peggy visits with her family and has trekked to the Mount Everest Base Camp. She and her husband, Tom, spent five weeks in Italy last year. • Barbara Kreps DeLSio has made her home in Italy for many years. After earning a Ph.D. at the University of Wisconsin, she taught at the University of Pisa, a position from which she recently retired. Remaining in Italy after the death of her husband, in 1984, Barbara also sang opera for 15 years in Florence in addition to her work at the university. She remembers Peter Ré and the wonderful musical opportunities he provided her at Colby. • Dick Zipser retires this fall after 27 years as chair of the department of foreign languages and literatures at the University of Delaware. He has overseen more than 40 foreign-language-based study-abroad programs during that time. In a recent article in Global Magazine, published by the University of Delaware’s Institute for Global Studies, Dick remembers his own life-changing study-abroad experience in Germany as a Colby student. • Marty Schott Abbott-Shim went on two hiking trips last summer: to the Sbrinz Trail in the Swiss Alps and to the Inka Trail and Mollepata Trail in Peru. Marty also traveled to Boston and Rochester, N.Y., recently to see her daughter, who plays for the Portland Thorns NWSL professional women’s soccer team. • Jerry Shapiro is retiring from his position as department chair at Santa Clara University but will keep teaching full time. He was recently named “one of the top 99 professors in counseling psychology in North America.” • Al Graceffa and his wife, Natalie, enjoy living in South Carolina, where he plays a great deal of golf and enjoys their eight grandchildren. Al recently had a knee replaced, the result of a football injury during sophomore year at Colby. • Marg Mattraw Dodge has returned to Maine to live near her two daughters. She is now at home, with extra bedrooms for visitors, in Yarmouth. • Jim Harris and his wife, Madie, who live in Washington State, represented Colby at the installation of the new president of Seattle Pacific University. They also recently traveled to Montana to visit family and friends. Jim reports that Dick York is recovering from his recent medical problems and is back at home. • Brian ’63 and Sue Sawyer McAlary enjoyed attending Brian’s 50th Colby reunion last June. They then traveled to the Galapagos Islands on a National Geographic cruise. Sue recommends this trip as “well worth the time.” • Also cruising was Gloria Shepherd, who went to Crete, Cyprus, and the coast of Turkey, with a separate visit to Istanbul. The focus of the cruise was antiquities, and Gloria says she “learned a lot.” More recently she traveled to Portugal and Spain. In Madrid Gloria celebrated a 50-year reunion with friends she had during her junior year in Spain at the University of Madrid. • Off in another direction, PJ Downing Curtis and her fiancé spent most of this past July in Alaska. They cruised up the Inland Passage and then camped around the state for 10 days in a motor home.

1965
Dick Bankart
classnews1965@colby.edu

HAVING FUN NOW … Boy, have we slowed down! We’re all 70ish now and, for the most part, retired from paid employment. Hobbies and travel are taking a lead in our lives. • Jane Patterson Paxton has been busy weeding and feeding her garden this summer. She had some help in the “advice and supervision” area from visitors Bryan Harrison Curd and Pam Harris Holden, who visited her for a few days in Hallowell, Maine. • Newlyweds Dave and Dale Rottner Perkins Haas Hatch ride their bikes up to 10 miles every day in Venice, Fla. Both have retired, and they “eat healthily and socialize” often. They will fill us all in at our 50th reunion in 2015. Yes, 50th! Fogeyland, here we come. The dinosaurs we fed down by Johnson Pond have left for quieter retirement areas near Onie’s. • Jim Fortiante has been reviewing art exhibitions and interviewing artists for the Boston-based magazine Artscope. You can read his latest piece in the Sept./Oct ‘13 issue (artscopemagazine.com) under Harbor Arts. He has also been leading tours of Beacon Hill as a newly trained member of Boston by Foot. He invites classmates to contact him at jimfortiante@gmail.com to set up a group tour. Jim reads poetry now and go on birthday and vacation/holiday adventures with them almost every week. Neil’s big project is a new model railroad layout in the design stage. They are also avid vegetable gardeners. Neil had eye surgery last summer, which curtailed activities for six weeks or so, but he is on the mend. • Your correspondent checked another destination off the travel bucket list by visiting Peru in August. Machu Picchu is truly a wonder of the world built by people without a written language or knowledge of the wheel. I also flew over the Nazca lines, the purpose of which is not known—perhaps communication with the gods—and visited the birds and sea lions on Islas Ballesteras. • Class prez Harold Kowal and Ruth visited Turks and Caicos last April to celebrate his 70th. It was a family affair with “both Colby daughters, a son-in-law, and granddaughter.” Ruth continues doing library management consulting. They spend as much time as possible in their Maine getaway cabin in the woods on a lake. Harold would like to thank all classmates who contributed to the Colby Fund drive. There were many class volunteers working under his direction, and we “achieved all of our goals and then some,” he reports.

HAIL, COLBY, HAIL!

1966
Meg Fallon Wheeler
classnews1966@colby.edu

Vasco and Susan Mahoney Michael will split their time between a new home in Portugal and one in Brunswick, Maine, when they work through the details of immigration, taxes, etc. This was a long-term goal, and Sue is excited about living in Maine again. • Realtor Gary McKinstry had time to visit friends in the Netherlands and take a cruise from Istanbul to Rome
Connecticut, and Massachusetts. His three daughters—43, 39, and 23—have produced five granddaughters. Youngest daughter Nora graduated from Colby in 2011. His 27-year-old son has joined John in the construction business. John has no plans for retirement—just yearnings. ● Karen Riendeau Pacheco and Fran Finizio studied the Spanish Civil War at Colby’s Alumni College this summer and encourage others to sign up next year. ● Janice Holt Arsan was touched by support she received from old friends, husband Noyan’s family, and some of his former M.B.A. students when she returned to Istanbul this summer with some of his former M.B.A. students when she returned to Istanbul this summer without him due to his early-onset Alzheimer’s. Jan continues to count her blessings; her children and grandchildren, live near her in the Atlanta area. ● Lynn (Longfellow) ’65 and Gary Knight visited their son Eric in Dubai last April. Eric is the senior U.S. Air Force official training the U.A.E. on the C-17 that he pilots. Thanks, Gary, for agreeing to serve again as class agent leading up to our 2016 50th reunion. ● Despite full-time employment as the Maine state librarian, Linda Hall Lord travels extensively. She’s visited many European countries, Morocco, Egypt, Turkey, Ecuador, China, and, most recently, Russia via a river cruise, Jordan, and Jerusalem. Linda recently testified before the U.S Senate Commerce Committee about the federal E-rate program, which offers affordable telecommunications and Internet to schools and libraries. ● Brian Shacter tells of his return to Colby this summer as a soccer camp coach: “It’s always a wonderful experience on its own, and it also coincided with the official opening of the new art museum. I, along with everyone else, was very impressed. I also roamed around the old Bixler music building and had a flashback to the listening rooms where I learned everything I needed to know about Gregorian Chant.” ● Janna Vaughan Kasarjian still teaches ESL and thrives on it, while in her free time doting on young grandchildren Ava and Ryan. Janna writes of Ed Mowry’s book, So Close to Dying, “I thought it an amazing account of those times, in particular as they related to him, but also in a broader sense as they related to us, his classmates. In some ways, it was our story, too.” ● Vermonters Gayle Jobson Poinsette and Garfield Barnes plan a winter trip to Thailand and Australia. They visited Chris (Austin) ’68 and Wes Barbour in Maine in June. ● Ted Houghton’s RV trip will be an eight-month trip out West along old U.S. Route 66 and will include the Albuquerque Balloon Fiesta. ● Sue Turner had a healthy, busy summer. She visited Anne Ladd Carlson and her new husband in June, had lunch with Gayle Pollard Talbot, Jane Hunter Bates, Kay Tower Carter, and Linda Hall Lord in July, and she and Karl traveled to Wisconsin for daughter Alissa’s wedding in August. ● Frank Neal, Jim Blither, and Pete Redmond enjoyed the 46th annual golf tournament in North Haven, Maine, in June. The golfing buddies send out love to their pal Ed Stratton ’67, who is dealing with some serious health issues. Frank and Stacey’s daughter AnFei is at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy. Daughter MeiRose is a sophomore in high school and keeps them on their toes. Stacey does medical policy research at the Lahey Clinic, and Frank is involved in property management part time.

1967

Bob Gracia
Judy Gerrie Heine
classnews1967@colby.edu

Robert Hauck settled on Martha’s Vineyard after retiring as deputy director of the American Political Science Association. Though retired, he is not without direction, splits his time between Massachusetts and Florida. ● Brian Kopke retired five years ago after 35 years as a Unitarian minister in Southfield, Long Island (5), Philadelphia (7), and Ottawa, Ontario (23). He can get back to first loves: family, drawing, painting, and woodworking (mostly wooden toys). Triple bypass surgery this spring set tight parameters for him during the healing process, but he planned to hike in Washington State with his daughter in September. ● There’s another empty pupil as Led Baxter retired in June 2012 from 40-plus years of ministry in the United Church of Christ in Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, and New York. Led went back to the house where he grew up, in Newington, Conn. In addition to working on home fix-up projects and catching up with family and friends, he planned to teach adult Bible study. In the spirit of our liberal arts education, he would love to be in touch with anyone about “faith and science.” ● As part of a trip to Cape Breton, N.S., and to the East Coast, Larry Sears caught up with Dick Hunnewell, his wife, and their two sons. He was pleased to leave the heat of El Paso in June and to spend time in the lake country of New Hampshire with the Hunnewells. ● Bud Graff is working on a third act. He and Jim Wilson volunteered to work with archaeologists to excavate a colonial-era farm. After several weeks of careful excavation, the team located a building and artifacts from the period. Bud enjoyed the work so much that he’s considering giving up golf to dig in the dirt. Or he might just call divots his latest archaeological excavations. ● Leanne Davidson Kaslow has been back in D.C. for a year after 18 years in Birmingham. Her husband, Richard, was contemplating retirement when he went to work for the VA in D.C., where he finds his work on behalf of returning soldiers very positive. Leanne’s daughter, Jessica, and husband Sean live in the New Haven area. Leanne and Richard traveled to Vietnam in October. ● Joanna Snyder Richardson was appointed library strategy advisor within the Division of Information Services. The position supplies planning and advice to the university librarian. ● Chris and JJ Mueller Sinton enjoyed seeing Elaine and Kurt Swenson last March in Boca Grande for golf. They enjoy trips to Bermuda and entertaining grandchildren. ● Fred Beyer moved from Wisconsin to Ellsworth, Maine, to be near twin grandsons, Joey and Billy, 4. ● Nick Hadas continues as dean of the School of Hospitality Management at Widener University. Nick and his wife, Anna, enjoyed vacation time in Maine and New Hampshire. In November they plan to travel to Hong Kong for the wedding of one of Nick’s graduates. ● Sadly, I report the death of Fred Hopengarten’s mother, Doris Rose Hopengarten, Class of 1940. We send our condolences and best wishes to Fred and his family.

1968

Lynne Oakes Camp
classnews1968@colby.edu

Arthur Brennan reports that he and his wife are grandparents for the second time. Samuel Brennan Rogers was born to their daughter, Mary Kathryn Brennan ’02, and Smilie Rogers. Art still does some judging on an-as-needed basis and teaches some law-related subjects at the local community college. ● Mary Lee (Merrill) ’70 and Mike Metcalf climbed Mount Katahdin this summer—twice. In July they camped at Chimney Pond, went up Cathedral Trail, and came down the Saddle Trail after it started to rain (preventing them from crossing Knife Edge). In August they went up Abol Slide and down the Hunt Trail. They have just 70 miles in Maine left to finish the Appalachian Trail in New England. ● Glenna White Crawford says, “Life is good; retirement is awesome. I have the best of everything—good health; great husband; successful, happy kids; a new grandson; terrific friends; and three different residences so I can follow the weather.” Her latest passion is Zumba. ● Don and Pat Davis Murphy moved back to Maine in 2011. After living elsewhere (Michigan, California, Connecticut, and upstate New York) for 40 years, they knew their hearts were in Maine. They visited with Charlie and Penny Post Crockett ’69, who are retired teachers living in Hope, Maine. They hosted the Crocketts in their Bar Harbor, Maine, home and later traveled to visit them. ● John Morgan is retired and thoroughly enjoying it. He visited his daughter, Sara Morgan ’07, in San Jose, Calif., and did some fatherly handyman stuff. Sara works full time and attends San Jose State University in pursuit of an M.S.W. degree. John planned to drive home to Colorado accompanied by Lily, his black Labrador retriever, and said, “We will meander up the coast and head back to Colorado by way of the Grand Tetons and Yellowstone, getting home sometime.” • Bill McKinney retired three years ago after 14 years as president of Pacific School of Religion in Berkeley, Calif. He and his wife, Linda, moved into their summer home on Cape Cod for a year as an experiment and decided to stay. They travel a lot and he has a small consulting practice with churches and theological schools. He also does some online teaching at Hartford Seminary and gets to preach about once a month at various churches.

• In July David and Nancy Dodge Bryan hosted a weekend mini-reunion for Class of ’68 friends at their home in Hingham, Mass. In attendance were Greg and Nancy Thomas Fritz, Mary Jo Calabrese Bau, Steve Campbell, Don and Betsy Clark Gemmecke, Judy Freedman ’70, and Phil and Hethie Shores Parmesano. They were joined one evening by Brad Merritt and his wife, Deirdre. Activities included taking turns making wonderful meals, a whale-watching expedition, listening to vintage music, and, of course, lots of storytelling. • Frank Dunton loves retirement. He is still playing and traveling, and he is an on-call fireman. He recently got together with Liz (O’Gorman) ’69 and John DeSimone, Ted Swartz and his wife, Vickie, and Sari Abul-Jubein ’69 in Boston’s North End. He hadn’t seen his old roomie in 35 years, but he said luckily they didn’t need “Hello, my name is” tags!

1969

Ray Gerbi
classnews1969@colby.edu

Hi everyone! Another summer is history, and we’re looking at our 45th reunion in a few months. Cherrie Dubois and Rae Jean Goodman are heading up reunion planning and fundraising, so watch for news, and mark your calendar for June 5-8, 2014. • Donna Massey is doing well and working full time. She hopes to transition to three days a week this fall and to have summers off “henceforth and forevermore!” She gardens, hikes, and plays tennis in her limited spare time. Son Chris moved to Madison, in 2007, married a man she knew through business 35 years ago. “We’re living in the Cedar City, Utah, area for the warm months and plan to stay in Glendale, Ariz., in the winter.” Her husband is active in the purebred dog scene, and she works part time in a freelance graphic arts business. They help each other with their work and enjoy a variety of volunteer activities. • Chris Christensen and wife Lynn attended a Tau Delta Phi reunion for the classes of 1965-70 last June at the Samoset Resort in Maine and reconnected with friends they don’t see at reunions held by class year. They spend time on Lake Winnipesaukee, joined by grandchildren Clara and Caden (5 and 3), and they recently made an offer on a new boat, an Apreamare. Their son, Jeffing at age 64, Lori decided to give back to the community and is now working as a geriatric care support coordinator. This has been rewarding and eye-opening as she helps seniors receive services and medical care they otherwise would not receive. She remains close friends with Colby roommates Susan Doten Greenberg and Carol Lewis Jennings. • Earle Shettleworth spoke in June at Reunion

Doug Joseph ’69 is hoping to form a barbershop quartet with talent from his class to perform during Reunion Weekend. The quartet will sing “polecats,” familiar barbershop songs.

Sandra Reed Clougher ’69 retired after 40 years with the Vermont Department for Children and Families as a district director for child protection and juvenile justice.

1970

Libby Brown Strough
classnews1970@colby.edu

Greetings! I hope everyone had a great fall. • I heard from Christine Celata. She has been retired since 2011, after a couple of years of doing physics for Cornell University part time. She has been pursuing watercolor painting—her first venture into art since her second grade teacher told her she had no talent for it. She has also been tutoring pre-calculus at the local high school, knitting for charity, taking strength-training classes, reading, and having fun. She now lives in Pasadena, Calif. • After a great career in the private service sector, Lori Gill Pazaris decided to make a change. Instead of retir-the Upper East Side of Manhattan with their son and golden retriever. Rich hasn’t seen anyone from Colby in many years except for Chris Palmer ’72. Rich looks forward to being a meddling grandparent of his first grandchild. Now living in Portland, Maine, Val Thibeau Yates works at the United Way of Greater Portland and loves it. One son lives in Boston and another in Virginia Beach; she tries to see them every few months. Val recently attended a wedding shower for the son of Jack ’76 and Susan Reed Parker ’76 in Hanover, N.H., where she enjoyed visiting with a lot of Colby friends. Kathy Stoddard Pope and Val get together frequently. Chip Altholz just had his 50th eighth grade reunion with 25 percent of his class attending, and he was reminded of the power of friendship. So many indelible memories of his time at Colby are as August, she will have married her partner of 22 years, Calien Lewis, due to the recent DOMA ruling and the state of Maine’s marriage equality law. She will be keeping her name. Martha is still gainfully employed, healthy, and looking forward to a trip to Ireland next April. Congratulations are in order for Leslie Anderson, whose book of paintings from her Summer Stories series will be published in November 2013 by Shanti Arts Publishing in Brunswick, Maine. The painting on the cover of the book is of her Colby “gang” on Debbie Messer Zlatin’s dock. Fred Copithorn has just returned from a road trip across the country to deposit his niece’s car in Denver. Bill Hladky continues to be proud of his son’s accomplishments. Having been to the Baltic region this summer, and then to New Brunswick, Canada, I am happy to be more or less back to my native land in Massachusetts and New Hampshire. (I did not run into Jon Stone in the Baltics.)

Ed Morin ’72 joined Exxon’s “foreign legion,” working on construction projects in Venezuela and Saudi Arabia, as well as Houston. He’s now working at Portsmouth Naval Shipyard.

1972

Nancy Round Haley
classnews1972@colby.edu

Sandy Manoogian Pearce recently retired after 25 years at Minnesota State, where companies. Their two German shepherds, Midnight and Oasis, keep them on their toes and love to body surf at the family cottage at Indian Point whenever they can get there.

Erl and Janet Veasey McLetchie have some retirement news. Erl finally retired from his law practice in Ossipee, N.H. Jan retired a few years ago from teaching. They’ve sold their home and his law office and bought a home in Venice, Fla. This is a dramatic retirement move from the cold New Hampshire winters to sunny Florida. My husband and I hope to visit them in Florida this winter. To everyone in the Class of 1972: Enjoy life, and I hope to see or hear from you soon!

1973

Carol Chalker
classnews1973@colby.edu

As I slowly transitioned back to work after my long summer break, I enjoyed hearing from a few classmates who were unable to make it to reunion. I want to thank each of you for sharing so much about your lives; I really enjoyed getting to know you all better. That is the best thing about this role—the connections I make with classmates. Bruce Smith was heading back to school as a teacher in Texas. He has three more years until retirement, which will mark 40 years in the profession. He is currently at the University of Texas doing adjunct work that may develop into more overtime. Bruce’s life is full with his six beautiful grandchildren, who range in age from 4 to 17. He sends his best wishes to all Colby classmates.

Betty Robinson wrote from her summer/fall home on Little Sebago Lake in Windham, Maine (brings back memories of Colby’s Outing Club on the Belgrade Lakes); she and her partner, Victoria Larson, live in Auburn in the wintertime. Betty is nearing retirement from Lewiston-Auburn College at the University of Southern Maine, where she has taught for the past 25 years and served as dean for seven. She expressed gratitude and pride when describing her work in the bachelor’s and master’s leadership and organizational studies degree programs and the opportunity she had to found and develop a new interdisciplinary college serving nontraditional students in central Maine. Betty has traveled extensively over the years—in South Africa, Botswana, and Kenya—and she has an “adopted adult daughter,” Carmen, a woman from Kenya who lived with her and Victoria for three years. Susan Schink was sorry to miss reunion but did enjoy her hiking trip in northern Spain. She described walking part of El Camino and reported that a highlight of her trip was visiting the Guggenheim in Bilbao. Equally exciting (from my perspective) is the work her therapy dog, Rosie, is doing. They go together to the local library, where children sign up for 15-minute segments to read to Rosie. The children love reading to her and showing her the pictures as they read. Sue had a chance to visit with Christi Pope in Vermont recently. Dave DeLong was delighted to be at reunion this June and really enjoyed talking to classmates as well as other alums about his new book, Graduate to a Great Job: Make Your College Degree Pay Off in Today’s Market. Stay tuned for the next magazine as our new class president, Norm Olsen, is heading off soon for an unguided rafting and fly-fishing trip to Alaska. I did question him about the order of succession for president and suggested he be careful!

Thank you to Anne Badmington Cass for being the first to send me a recent picture of herself and her forever friends (Roberta Rollins and Sue Colucci Neumyer); she met them both for a very long luncheon recently and had not seen them together for 25 years. Please, everyone, send pictures of yourselves with Colby friends; I have a special folder reserved for a project for our next reunion.

1974

Vicki Parker Kozak
Jill Gilpatrick Richard
classnews1974@colby.edu

Happy fall! This column is the next to last one before our 40th reunion, so we want to get everyone psyched up for coming back to campus next June. Mark your calendars for Colby geology professor living in Waterville. Mark began his 24th year of teaching in the philosophy department at Grand Valley State University in Allendale, just outside Grand Rapids. In July Mike McNamara and his wife, Joyce, attended Colby’s Alumni College, a program that was put together a number of years ago by Charlie Bassett. This summer’s topic was the Spanish Civil War, with four days of lectures, discussions, and films. Approximately 40 alumni and guests attended. Mike said, “Colby did a great job! It was still great wandering those paths on Mayflower Hill. The Colby I knew in 1974 is a fond, distant memory, but this summer’s experience helped to refresh my recollection. It was great to go back.” Howie Lazar wrote from Alaska that his daughter, Jessica, started medical school at the University of Washington this fall. In March Howie was awarded the 2013 Dung Beetles of the Year Award by one of his largest clients, Medical Insurance Exchange of California. He encouraged us to use our imaginations as to what it was for. In October he plans to get together with Bob Tommasino, Artie Bell, Remi Browne, Fred Traversi, and John Robbins for some golf and R and R when he’s in Boston for several depositions. Robin Hamilit-Ruth finally sold her house and downsized. Her youngest (numbersix) graduated from high school a year early and is attending UCAL Berkeley. Robin looks forward to visiting her and having an excuse to hang out in Napa Valley and sip wine on a regular basis. Sounds good to us! Howie’s reunion committee has met through the fall to set plans in motion. Please let us know if you have any ideas for activities, music, or special events.

1975

Susie Gearhart Wuest
classnews1975@colby.edu

Mike ’76 and Mary Bastron Harper celebrated Mary’s 60th birthday with a wonderful weekend trip to Paris. Two months later Mary was recuperating at home in Minnesota from arthroscopic surgery on her right knee to repair a meniscus tear, which was the result of falling on ice last winter while walking their golden retriever, Frances. Mike works long hours at the Mayo Clinic in his dean of practice position. He still sees some patients, but mostly has administrative duties and travels now.

Youngest daughter Caitlin is a second-year medical student at the nearby Mayo Medical School. Son Nick is living in Chicago, working in a commercial real estate investment firm and taking night classes at the University of Chicago for his M.B.A. Daughter Sarah is in Austin, Texas, teaching Spanish at a private prep school and coaching the women’s golf team. For John Oreifice it seems like only yesterday that he was listening to President Strider talk about serendipity. While driving his daughter to Elon, N.C., for her senior year, the memories kept flooding back: Johnson Hall, Pizza by Norm, and Sandy Maisel’s bow ties! John retired two years ago from teaching and directing high school students in Pelham, N.Y. He and his wife sold their Pelham home of many years and moved to Atlantic Highlands, N.J., where they enjoy a majestic view of Sandy Hook Bay and, on a clear day, Manhattan. While moving he discovered how much Colby memorabilia he had saved, including boxes of Powder and Wig photos and posters. After posting pictures on Facebook from Man of La Mancha (fall of 1974), he reconnected with fellow Powder and Wig alums Larry Cappiello ’74, Claudia Schneider ’77, and John Mulcahy ’76. Katy Seabrook Brunault finds it hard to believe that she has run her own dance studio, Hamilton-Wenham School of Dance, for 20 years. It is such a joy for her to spend each day doing what she loves. Daughter Fiona has her master’s in teaching and teaches English at Pioneer Valley School for the Performing Arts. Fiona and her husband, a Ph.D. student, live in Easthampton, Mass. Katy’s husband, Charlie, works for Sylvania. One highlight in her life was when Charlie bought her a cello for her birthday a few years ago. Katy played in high school and has found it so rewarding to start playing again. Last July Katy enjoyed seeing Andy and Susan Story Gait and Jim Peale ’77 and Carol McIntyre-Peale at their annual gathering at the Galts’ 100-year-old camp on New Hampshire’s Lake Lovell. Deborah Seel Palman, a retired game warden in Maine, is president of the Maine Association for Search and Rescue. In September she and her dog, Quinn, put their skills to work and found an 86-year-old Maine man who had been missing from his Benton home for two nights. “Anytime anybody is found, it’s a success,” Deborah told the Waterville Morning Sentinel.

1976

Robert Weinstein
classnews1976@colby.edu

No time to waste, so let’s jump right in. Doug McMurrey is in his seventh year at Kinder Morgan, a large energy company based in Houston. “The oil patch has been a great place to be.” He noted that Houston had its coolest spring in memory. Doug considers himself lucky in so many ways, including going to Colby. He hopes we all see our years in Maine as one of our great life experiences. Doug is in Maine at least every other year for a couple of weeks—best sailing in the world! Betsy Bowen continues to teach English at Fairfield University in Connecticut, where she is happy to have been joined by another Colby grad, Michelle Farrell ’01. This summer Betsy traveled to Kyrgyzstan to work with Central Asian business faculty on writing in the business curriculum. Jay Sarson is enjoying his new role in life: “Five grandchildren all under three. Three boys, two girls. More fun than your own children.”

Joy Sawyer-Mulligan ’76 was honored with the Excellence in Teaching Chair at the Thacher School, where she has taught for 29 years.

June 5-8, 2014, and “be there or be square.” Mark O’Connell reported from Houston that his son, Luke, joined the Colby Class of 2017 as a Presidential Scholar. They traveled to Maine last April to check out some old haunts: the facilities on Messalonskee Lake (since Luke is a rower), Camden, Belgrade Lakes, and the Chez (“Good to see that the iconic dive is still standing!”). Mark introduced his family to fried and steamed clams. Mark’s oldest daughter, Lillian, is a junior at LSU and enjoys the Cajun lifestyle. Youngest daughter Elise is also a rower and a pretty good artist, and she is a sophomore at the Woodlands High School. Mark and wife Cyndi get to their cabin on Lake Limestone in Texas for R and R whenever they get the chance. Ed Hatch’s older son, Kevin, graduated from Rosemary Choaate Hall School with a 3.87 GPA and entered Duke University this fall. Kevin created his own company called Inspire Green and sells accessories for cell phones, tablets, etc. Ed’s younger son, Connor, is in his junior year and excels at Salisbury School in Connecticut, where he also plays varsity hockey. Ed lives quietly in Westchester, N.Y., doing some angel investing and charity work. We were pleased to hear from Mark Pestana, who is still alive in Grand Rapids, Mich., and still married to wife Mary Beth. His daughter, Stephanie, just started music school at the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign, and Mary Beth continues to homeschool their son, Simon, a high school junior. This summer Mark visited his dad, a retired

This column is the next to last one before our 40th reunion, so we want to get everyone psyched up for coming back to campus next June. Mark your calendars for COLBY / FALL 2013 53
Jan Gorman retired from the insurance business this summer. She noted that it was an interesting career but she needs time for her bucket list. She planned to start a small business providing "long-arm quilting services" to quilters at quityf.com, essentially to fund her fabric addiction! Her daughter and son-in-law are returning to the United States, so Jan can now travel to places other than France and England. Her conclusion is: “Most important, we are all healthy and happy.”

John Lombard writes that his daughter “are successfully launched.” Youngest daughter Laura is in a management training program at PepsiCo; eldest daughter KC decided, on completion of a master’s program in counseling, to become a rowing coach. John recently sang in a Nashua Symphony chorus with our classmates Peter Labombarde. He sees PeterCoz ’75 on business trips to California, which always includes soccer with a Mission Bay pickup group and surfing lessons in Encinitas. For years John has longed for a client pickup group and surfing lessons in Venice and Santa Monica, Calif.

Kevin Farnham

ALUMNI AT LARGE

Colby ’76, Ina-Lee Toll Block, and Joanne Kucharuk Giudicelli. Colby can probably look forward to applications from Alan MacEwan’s children. His sophomore daughter, Louisa, who attended her third Maine Rowing Camp at Colby, insists that Colby will be her first choice. His senior son, Graham, is also a fan and likely to apply this fall. Alan notes, “The campus, including the new Alford-Lunder Family Pavilion at the art museum, is utterly spectacular.”

Jane Hoffman continues to find rewards in helping college applicants make sense of the process via her business, College Advice 101. Susan is a performing songwriter. Her band is the Strands, and she invites Colbyites to check out her gigs, which happen mostly in Maine. She is very pleased with PeterCoz ’75 on business trips to California, which always includes soccer with a Mission Bay pickup group and surfing lessons in Venice and Santa Monica, Calif.

Kevin Farnham
classnews1977@colby.edu

Alan Taylor will continue to teach at the University of California at Davis this year. Beginning in August 2014, he’ll hold the Thomas Jefferson Chair in American History at the University of Virginia. Alan’s new book, The Internal Enemy: Slavery and War in Virginia, 1772-1832, is now available.

Amy Schenk Frankel has lived in New York City for 35 years. She runs a graphic design and branding agency, IF Studio, focusing mainly on residential real estate. Family life revolves around her husband, Martin, her son, Drew, and her stepchildren, Laura and Andrew (all of the children are now adults). Amy’s been in contact with Claudia Schneider, Janet de Compostela (the Way). While skiing over the winter, he happened to ride up a chairlift at Sugarbush with a stranger who turned out to be Jenny Frutchy Ford ’76. Dick says, “You never know where you’ll turn into a Colbyite!”

Steve Ford and his wife are still farming in Alabama, and Steve teaches economics at the Sewanee—The University of the South in Tennessee. Their daughter is a sophomore at Smith. Their son, a high school junior, is starting to look at colleges. In August Steve attended a small Phi Delta Theta reunion hosted by Mike Harris ’76 in Biddeford, Maine. Also in attendance were Al Shapiro ’76, Dan Sexton ’75, Marty Womer ’75, Diane McCoy (honorary Phi), Dean Eaton ’73, Bob Walsh ’75, Howie Tutman ’76, Mike Sherrill ’74, and Charlie LeRoyer ’75. The plan is to hold this event again in the future.

Ken Colton wonders, “What lawyer can resist the Blamey Stone?” He and his wife had a “grand time” in Cork, Dublin, and points in between before settling out for a friend’s wedding in Norway in the Nor Fjord region. After seeing awesome scenery, they had a short stay in Oslo, then flew back to the U.S. His wife, Dale, and I were also at Blarney Castle this summer but decided that kissing a spot on a rock that thousands of others had kissed in the preceding hours (“or possibly licked,” Dale noted) was unappealing. Call us prudes, I guess!

Kevin Farnham
classnews1977@colby.edu

Greetings, classmates! My plea for fabulous vacation news was answered in spades. I guess!”

Jane Hoffman ’77 continues to find rewards in helping college applicants make sense of the process via her business, College Advice 101.

Steve Ford ’77 and his wife are still farming in Alabama, and Steve teaches economics at the Sewanee—The University of the South in Tennessee.

Jane Hoffman ’77 continues to find rewards in helping college applicants make sense of the process via her business, College Advice 101.

Our 35th reunion in June. Ian and Fritz rode some of the Central Maine NEMBA trails through Colby and around Waterville. Fritz was having so much fun he bought a new (to him) bike before heading back to Vermont. Since then Ian has been four times to the Kingdom Trails in East Burke, Vt., where more than 100 miles of single track weave through the town, offering what Ian describes as an amazing experience. Ian also took part in the Carrabassett Backcountry Cycle Challenge and rode 100 kilometers in Carrabassett Valley, Maine.

Ian recently visited with Bill Middleton at his place on Diamond Cove just off Portland, Maine. Bill and his wife, Gloria, are between moving from Almaty, Kazakhstan, to New Delhi for a warm-weather experience. Greg Jordan lives in Carlsbad, Calif., and his family took an Alaskan cruise this summer. During the trip they visited the Tracy Arm Fjord and picked up a book about it, which happened to be written by Nick Jans ’77.

Steve Jacobs pronounced his summer “superb” as he took his daughter Emily camping in Wyoming and Montana for two weeks. Steve summited two 10,000+ footers on that trip and reported that he also achieved personal records in 5K, 10K, and half marathons over the summer. He also doffed a hat to the Bar Harbor Blueberry Ale produced by Doug Maffucci’s Atlantic Brewing Company—Steve tried the ale during a camping trip to Mount Desert Island.

In August I had a great weekend with Anne Marie Hobson Pesarik at her family’s beach accommodations in Rye, N.H. Anne Marie and I reminisced about our senior-year adventures with the late Steve Sparkes, and she entertained my daughter with stories about how I was always losing my shoes back in 1978. Thanks a lot, Hobson. After that I spent a great weekend in Gloucester, Mass., with a crew that included Lindy Williams ’79, Bill Muller ’79, Howie Ingraham ’79, Jim Coull ’80, John Longley ’80, Jack McBride ’80, and Kevin ’80 and Robin Hathaway Shea
While at Colby after graduation, she designed a couple of brochures for the Admissions Office. While raising her kids, she earned a degree in commercial art and did freelance graphic work. Now an empty nester, she has found her way back to art as a glass artist assisting Craig Mitchell Smith, a rising kiln-formed glass artist. Jane enjoys going to work. Both kids are in North Carolina working after college. Wes, 25, is pursuing a master’s in statistical analytics, and Rachel, 23, runs a restaurant in Burlington and teaches high school math. As for me, Cheri Bailey Powers, Tom and I are no longer empty nesters. Our youngest, Meredith, moved home to attend UCSC (University of California at Santa Cruz) here in town. We’re happy to have her home, and she’s very happy with her decision to transfer since the teaching program is more hands-on and provides the opportunity to tutor in local schools. My oldest, Keleigh, is also attending UCSC as a graduate student, earning her master’s in special education. I’m happy to start singing after the summer off, singing with Soli Deo Gloria and acting as treasurer. Betsy Bucklin Reddy planned a late-September trip to California and Utah to tour several national parks and visit her daughter Maggie, who lives in Salt Lake City and works at American Apparel. Daughter Emily recently moved from Colorado Springs to the Boston area at the Wellesley College Child Study Center under the direction of her Colby roommate Sue Horwitz Kerr Miller. Liz’s husband, Barry ’79, keeps busy with his consulting work and teaching part time at the school of management at BU. The Horwitzes recently met up with Lisa Pacun ’79, who was visiting from England. Liz’s daughter, Ali, is back after 14 months studying Chinese in Taiwan and is working as an office manager at an accounting firm. Her son, Michael, manages a Legal Seafood and is engaged to be married next fall. Friends since freshman year on first-floor Dana, Amy Wight Chapman, Elizabeth Stuart Bailey, Elisabeth Eustis Paine, and Cate Talbot Ashton all got together for a weekend at Amy’s family’s camp in Woodstock, Maine. Thirty-seven years and they never run out of things to talk and laugh about! Mimi Brodsky Kress’s company has been building 20-plus custom homes a year in the strong D.C. luxury housing market. Mimi’s learning to be an empty nester, as her youngest just started at the University of Georgia’s School of Social Work. Mimi had an AWESOME time with Mike and Gretchen Huebsch Daly at the Sun Valley wedding of Debbie Pugh Kelton’s son Tucker ‘07 to Elizabeth Morbeck ‘07. Sonia Turcotte Feis’s oldest, Andrew, started this fall as a music composition major at NYU. Greg Mills’s oldest son, Sam, planned to start at Clemson University. Sam was captain of his high school robotics team that placed 21st out of 2,600 teams at the world championships in St. Louis. Greg was a victim of the massive layoffs in the financial industry, but he has kept busy riding his bike (just did a 50-mile and is training for a century) and adding to his arsenal of professional skills in the hope of working for a progressive company in the NYC metro area, Georgia, or the Carolinas. Maureen Flint DiStasio’s oldest son, Mick, just graduated from Trinity and is heading to Northumbria University in Newcastle, England, for his master’s and to continue playing basketball. Her son Lou attends URI on a basketball scholarship and will be a sophomore this year. When Mo’s not watching her kids’ sporting events, she works part time at North Face in Freeport.

Our classmate on the Hill, Cate Talbot Ashton, reported that graduation was more fun than ever with six of our classmates watching their kids graduate: Paul and Kathy McCullough Wade (Collie), Glenn Davis (Caitlin), Joanne Shannon O’Donnell (Colleen), Joel Solomon (Rose), and Sue Horwitz Kerr Miller (Malcolm). Congratulations to all!

Two-year breast cancer survivor Eleanor Campbell and her fiancé are moving to Ambler, Pa., and will wed in April. Saranna Robinson Thornton ran into Professor Tom Morrione ’85 at a philanthropy educators conference in Palo Alto, where she and Katy Young dined on Maine lobster. After being diagnosed with Hodgkin’s lymphoma last year, Tom Schofield’s daughter Colby organized a team for the Pan-Mass Challenge charity bike ride. The team, including David Ryley and Jeff McLaughlin, and raised over $100,000. Joel Cutter provided dinner and lodging for David and Jeff. “The experience of riding across the finish line with my daughter is one of our greatest moments ever.”

Now in her 20th year at Kennebec Valley Community Action Program in Waterville, Program Director Michele Adams Prince attended Poverty Institute 2013 in Machias, Maine, and hosted a summit visit with Karen Baumstark Porter, Karen Pfeiffer Jones, and Susan Robertson Kuza ’82. In addition to celebrating their 26th anniversary, Connecticut attorney and western Massachusetts resident Linda Clifford Hadley and her husband have a son starting college in Chicago, another son already in college, and a daughter who graduated and is a nurse at Hartford Hospital. Linda frequently sees Jay Kruzel, Chris Morrill, Brian Picard, and Peter Greenberg ’79, and she stays in touch with Bob Ruzzo and Alison Jones Webb. Mark Bloom posts monthly travel stories as a guest blogger for The Gypsy Girl Travel Blog (rielyanks.net/gypsy-girl-travel-blog.html). Check out his bio! Jodie Hewey Murphy’s younger son is at the University of New England, and her oldest graduated from Clarkson University. Dani Nemec Micsan’s son is a Wake Forest freshman. Pam Heleen’s son, Alex, performed in upstate New York’s Skaneateles Summer Theatre production of Les Misérables, which Pam costumed. She then drove daughter Kaitlin back to Nashville for her sophomore year at Vanderbilt. Christian Melby enjoyed a family
Rich Schwermer ’83 is the chair of the Utah State Drug Court programs, a system designed to achieve recovery in place of incarceration. He finds the work very fulfilling.

1982
Sarah LickDyke Morissette
classnews1982@colby.edu
Roger Valliere’s son, Jeff, started dental school at Indiana University in July. Jeff plans to join Roger, his wife, Brenda, and his father-in-law, Ralph, in their Fort Wayne, Ind., dental practice when he graduates in four years. Roger notes that his father was a dentist too, so Jeff will be the third generation on both sides! After 18 months in Maine restoring their 1937 ketch, Arabella, Jen Maire Hagemann and her family have moved aboard and launched. They plan to live on the boat and cruise for a year or so, and Jen would love to connect with any Colby classmates along the East Coast and ICW. Jen has been rated the best beer bar in America and a more upbeat and nurturing environment. Jen and her job allows her to travel. She recently visited with Mimi Brodsky Kress ’80 in Positano.

1983
Jennifer Thayer Naylor
classnews1983@colby.edu
Hey, gang, here’s my first column without training wheels. I just dropped my son off at Kimball Union Academy, now in its 11th year under Mike Schafer’s capable leadership. It was great to see him and hear about his globetrotting in service to KUA’s message of curriculum, community, and commitment. Mike lives on campus with his wife, Gayle, and two school-age daughters. His son is thrilled to leave reform school behind for a more upbeat and nurturing environment with chocolate-chip cookies on Wednesdays. In Irvine, Calif., Mike Collins’ four sons and his small businesses keep him and his wife, Lyann, very busy. Despite Mike’s fervent hope that one of his sons will land on Mayflower Hill, Mike’s second son, Paul, headed to Tufts this fall. Mike’s businesses include selling water-filtration equipment to the leisure water industry and electric motors to commercial end users through electricmotor.com. The economic downturn hit the businesses pretty hard. Lyann writes that their response has been to work harder and smarter. As a coach in the community leagues, Mike has kept up with his love of baseball, bringing kids to the game that has given so much joy to him and his boys. Please, old friends, get back in touch: mike@electricmotors.com. Tyger Nicholas has one son on Mayflower Hill; Harry ’16 completed his freshman year making dean’s list and playing football and lacrosse for the Mules. Tyger lives in Stonington with his wife and his daughter, Sarah, 19. After 20 years in corporate America, he went the startup route and seems to have had a successful exit. I also learned that he’s hung up the trademark red All-Stars for Stan Smith Adidas (Hello, Adidas, we’ll take the product placement payola for the alumni fund!). Great to hear from Billy Lloyd, who lives in a beautiful farming community, Genesee, N.Y., where he moved right out of college. Because his mother’s family had settled the area in days of yore, there’s a lot of extended family, which sews up the social life nicely. In addition to his work for Merrill Lynch Rochester, Billy rents out land to a mix of dairy, crop, and sheep operations as well as some timbering. He has all the benefits of living on a farm without the need for a new wardrobe—or, as Billy says, “Life in small-town western New York is balanced between office and farm work, family, and friends.” Bill and wife Meg have two sons out of college (including Coyne ’11) and two daughters in college. This is their second year of an empty nest with a chance to travel. Maybe ColbyBnB can send Bill and Meg some invites, hmmm? Sue Sheehan and Rich Schwermer had dinner with Chip Rooney and his lovely wife, Jan, when they were in the Salt Lake City area. “We hadn’t seen Chip in 20 years. He is still brilliant, acerbic, and warm-hearted. It was great to catch up and swap stories about the kids.” Rich is the chair of the Utah State Drug Court programs, a system designed to achieve recovery in place of incarceration. He finds the work very rewarding and loves to see lives transformed. Sue is the executive director of the Huntsman Cancer Foundation. Their son, Josh, completed his degree in biomedical/computer engineering and has his own IT company; their daughter is a communications major at the University of Utah, where she hosts a radio show called The Gigs on WBAR.

1984
Mary Kate Whalen
classnews1984@colby.edu
Tammy Jones Howe lives in Ipswich, Mass., with her husband, Scott, and daughters Phoebe and Charlotte. She and Phoebe recently visited Colby for a tour and interview, and Tammy took the opportunity to catch up with Professor Ed Veteran over lunch. Phoebe looked forward to applying to Colby later this fall. Tammy is a forensic psychologist in Massachusetts. David “Rosie” Rosenberg, John Ayer, Bill Sheehan, and Warren Burroughs played in the...
Agassiz Village Annual Golf Tournament in August. Thanks to Warren's stellar play, they pulled off a first-place finish. Agassiz is a nonprofit camp for underprivileged kids in Maine. Rosie also reports that Bill has embraced PX90 training, and Bill says, "I feel like I'm 21 again!" • Nils Gjestebly still has his Ships Chandlery business, but he has ventured into liquor distribution and is importing a proprietary vodka blend from Norway under the name Simple Vodka.

Earlier this summer, David Rosenberg attended the first-ever Colby rugby reunion with Warren Burroughs, Kate Shaw, Joy Valvano, Lori Sturgeon Davis, and Ann Poole Bailey. Bob Ruzzo ’81 and Bob Benjamin ’82 were also in attendance.

Kimberly Fitch and Bob Zegg were married in May at the Old North Bridge in Concord, Mass. Kimberley works for a sustainable-food-systems nonprofit, and Bob works for an energy efficiency consulting firm. Kimberley enjoys yoga, and both Bob and Kimberley enjoy cross-country skiing, canoeing, and yard work at their Carlisle, Mass., home. Kimberley would love to connect with any alumni in the area. E-mail her at peerprint@yahoo.com. • Marian Leerbuerger wrote as she was sending her son, Alec, off to his sophomore year at Elmira College in western New York, where he is majoring in psychology and is a goalie for the hockey team. Her daughter, Katie, is a junior in high school and is starting the dreaded interview process at colleges. Katie is a Junior Olympic acrobatic gymnast who placed seventh in the country at nationals in July. She has been invited to join famed Olympic gymnastics coach Bela Karolyi’s Age Group Development Team and will go to Karolyi’s Camp in Texas in November for a week of training. Katie plans to interview at Colby during reunion next June. • Which leads me to this closing note. Please save the date—June 5-8, 2014—for the 30th reunion of the Class of 1984. The highlight of the weekend will be my turning over the pen for this column to a worthy, eager successor (or to David Rosenberg). In the meantime, keep those e-mails coming.

1985
Katie Hollander Adams
classnews1985@colby.edu

Thanks to all who caught the desperation in my e-mail request for news—I was inundated! • Dave Heller graduated from the Graduate School of Retail Bank Management held at Furman University this summer. He’s not sure he wants to run a bank, but it was an interesting experience, especially dorm life and college food. Dave has a 7-year-old in third grade. • sean Padgett and wife Ann-Meg White dropped daughter Cat off at Colby for freshman year. They stopped in York to visit Catherine Stehman-Breen and meet her daughter, Erin, also a freshman. Catherine has a son at Bowdoin; she’s looking forward to the Colby/Bowdoin rivalry! • Kevin Bruen also has a freshman at Colby this year. He recently took a family trip to Tokyo. • Terry Martin was elected to the Maine Education Association board of directors. • John Schleich lives in the Seattle area with his wife, Beth, and two boys, Erich and Brody. John and family visited the U.K., where his father lived for many years. Brody discovered the Big Nate series by Linc Peirce and carried one of the books everywhere he went in London. John would love to hear from anyone visiting the Northwest. • Rob Hazard attended a 50th birthday party for Andy Sheehan on Lake Winnisquam in Meredith, N.H. The party was planned by Andy’s wife, Barbara Wilkes Sheehan. Bill Donahue ’86 was there. “As Andy is a grad school alum of the University of Texas, the party had a distinctly Longhorn theme with great barbecue and Texas microbrews.” • Buster Clegg got married Aug. 25 and moved across town to a new home in Newburyport, Mass. Buster’s two kids join his wife’s kids, and they range from 8 to 21. Buster’s son, the oldest, is a senior at Washington College in Maryland. • Mike Muir begins his term as president of the Association for Middle Level Education, which advances the education of students ages 10 to 15, helping them succeed as learners and supporting educators who work with them. • Mickie Linder Simpson juggles working as an associate broker with Sotheby’s International Realty and life with two teenagers. She resettled in the D.C. area and would love to get together with anyone there for “drinks and adult conversation.” • Julie Sands Causey still runs a community bank in Minnesota and is finishing a term on the board of directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis. She and her husband are empty nesters—all three boys in college—and enjoyed two weeks at their solar-powered cabin on an island on Rainy Lake in Canada. She had dinner in Boston last winter with Kate Lucier O’Neil, Gretchen Bean Bergill, and John O’Connor in honor of the 25th anniversary of their year abroad in France. • Gretchen Bean Bergill and husband Stefan were on the college circuit with son Nik. They toured the Pacific Northwest and visited Lynn Brunelle and family on Bainbridge Island, where they toured, kayaked, and enjoyed a fabulous salmon barbecue on Eliot Bay. • Barbara Knox lives in Oakland, Calif. After 11 years teaching ESL to adult immigrants, she’s teaching academic English in an English-intensive setting for City College in San Francisco. She picked up an extra class for San Francisco State training the IT department in ESL. Barbara’s son is a sophomore at Santa Clara University, where he was recruited to play Division I soccer. Barb’s daughter, a high school sophomore, took a trip to Costa Rica and participated in a service learning project. Barbara had a mini-reunion with Barbara Wilkes Sheehan, Valerie Madden ’86, and Valerie’s husband, Rob O’Hara. Valerie and Rob own a coffeehouse, Natterjacks, in England. • Dave and Cory Humphreys Serrano live in Needham with daughters Marisa ’15, who’s in Barcelona for her semester abroad, and Erica, who’s at Berklee College of Music in Boston. Cory has mixed feelings about this empty-nest phase “but won’t miss waiting up for kids to blow through their curfew!” • Thanks for the news, everyone.

1986
Henrietta “Hank” Yelle
classnews1986@colby.edu

Hi, friends. Lots of updates on the work people do. The diversity of employment choices is fascinating, yet many touch on common threads: living in or making regular visits to Maine—and family. • Ann Sanborn Ciulla writes from Orange County, Calif., that she is a private investigator with her own business, ARC Investigations, in Orange County, Calif. She primarily works on criminal defense cases.

Ann Sanborn Ciulla ’86 is a private investigator with her own business, ARC Investigations, in Orange County, Calif. She primarily works on criminal defense cases.
This column will celebrate the life of a fellow classmate, television sports producer Margaret MacGillivray Schafer Gallin ’88, who passed away July 3 after a long illness.

1987
Scott Lainer
classnews1987@colby.edu

I didn’t get a lot of news for this issue, which is a classic hallmark of summertime. Most people were out having fun in the sun while I sat in a dark room and wondered where the time went. But two people did submit their updates, which means I get to offer more details into the exciting lives of some rather extraordinary people. Please note that there may be some embellishment.

Let’s start with Jeff Russell. Common nicknames include “J.R.,” “The Big J,” and “Lord Jeffington.” Aside from being a licensed pilot and the former president of Spain, J.R. got married! Is that exciting or what? Plenty of famous people keep stringing us along with their endless “engagements”—like that Jennifer Aniston character, who seems like someone who would fall hopelessly in love with me so I try to avoid her. And good gravy, will Brad ever marry Angelina? Ha! Fate chance. But Lord Jeffington took the plunge. Now he can appear on The Newlywed Game and maybe win a beautiful new bedroom set from Broyhill. He can file a joint tax return. He can check “married” on job applications. Oh, the perks of marriage! And then there’s Tim Hennessy. Here is a man so refined they named a brand of cognac into the surf. Soon they became friends and were getting into deep philosophical conversations about the nature of humanity and the best time to catch a seal. As they became better acquainted, Tim would ride that whale each morning, waging to his pals the seagulls and the ospreys. Eventually Tim developed gills and was able to swim with the many fishes he now calls family. Except for the ones he occasionally eats. But don’t take my word for it. You can read all about Tim’s unlikely childhood adventures in his new book: The Killer Whale I Rode When I Was Growing Up on the Beaches of Chatham until I Developed Gills, After Which I Became Kindred with the Fishes Except for the Ones I Ate. He should probably work on that title. Tim had a beer recently with Brian Low in Frisco (which is short for San Francisco if you’re really cool). He has been toiling away diligently for Prudential Real Estate Investors over the past nine years. On a side note, although Tim is not allowed to dispense investment advice, I will take the liberty of offering this one little nugget: Buy Hawaii. If you can afford it, Hawaii has a lot of upside, including the trade winds, fresh pineapple, and the ukulele, and very little downside, except for poi, which tastes even worse than it sounds. Finally, tempting as it is, please remember that befriending a killer whale is a rare feat, so do not go somewhere like Sea World and think you can “pull a Tim,” as the saying goes. Riding whales is only meant for trained professionals who have spent years studying oceanography. And Tim. Stay well.

1988
Nancy Donahue Cyker
classnews1988@colby.edu

I would like to thank all of you who continue to write and help keep the class connected as we navigate our quarter-century-plus post-Colby lives. It is typical in this column that we share our good news and triumphs both big and small. This column will celebrate the life well lived of a fellow classmate and is dedicated to her memory. I thank Laurie Meehan Reed and Nina Colhoun Wilson, who responded so graciously to my request for some words about their close friend and a friend of so many from our class. Their incredible tribute: We are profoundly saddened to report that our dear friend and classmate Margaret MacGillivray Schafer Gallin, 46, passed away peacefully in her home July 3 after a long illness. Margaret is survived by her loving husband, Joe, two beautiful children, Alexandria “Lexie,” 8, and Matthew “Mattie,” 5; her parents, Bob and Dee Schafer of Mentor, Ohio, and Kiawah Island, S.C.; and her sister, Elizabeth, of Chevy Chase, Md. After graduating from Colby, Margaret began her professional career as an intern at ABC Sports. Over the next 20 years, she rose through the ranks until she became a director. She traveled the globe covering such events as the Tour de France, downhill skiing, speed skating, world gymnastics championships, men’s and women’s golf tours, Monday Night Football, and two Super Bowls. She also spent a large part of her career covering college football, including several Rose Bowls and BCS national championship games. She went on to work with the Golf Channel covering the Champions Tour for many years. Those of you who knew Margaret may recall that she was a sports fanatic with a lifelong love of all things Cleveland. She rarely missed a Colby football or hockey game. She was able to transition her passion into a career that was both fun and exciting. Despite her fulfilling career, Margaret’s real passion was her family and friends. Her family recently relocated back to the Cleveland area, where she was able to reconnect with former high school classmates and friends. She and her family spent time enjoying the community she loved—going to dance recitals, school plays, metroparks, the arboretum, KCC, skiing, speed skating, the nature of humanity and the best time to catch a seal. As they became better acquainted, Tim would ride that whale each morning, waging to his pals the seagulls and the ospreys. Eventually Tim developed gills and was able to swim with the many fishes he now calls family. Except for the ones he occasionally eats. But don’t take my word for it. You can read all about Tim’s unlikely childhood adventures in his new book: The Killer Whale I Rode When I Was Growing Up on the Beaches of Chatham until I Developed Gills, After Which I Became Kindred with the Fishes Except for the Ones I Ate. He should probably work on that title. Tim had a beer recently with Brian Low in Frisco (which is short for San Francisco if you’re really cool). He has been toiling away diligently for Prudential Real Estate Investors over the past nine years. On a side note, although Tim is not allowed to dispense investment advice, I will take the liberty of offering this one little nugget: Buy Hawaii. If you can afford it, Hawaii has a lot of upside, including the trade winds, fresh pineapple, and the ukulele, and very little downside, except for poi, which tastes even worse than it sounds. Finally, tempting as it is, please remember that befriending a killer whale is a rare feat, so do not go somewhere like Sea World and think you can “pull a Tim,” as the saying goes. Riding whales is only meant for trained professionals who have spent years studying oceanography. And Tim. Stay well.

I thank Laurie Meehan Reed and Nina Colhoun Wilson, who responded so graciously to my request for some words about their close friend and a friend of so many from our class. Their incredible tribute: We are profoundly saddened to report that our dear friend and classmate Margaret MacGillivray Schafer Gallin, 46, passed away peacefully in her home July 3 after a long illness. Margaret is survived by her loving husband, Joe, two beautiful children, Alexandria “Lexie,” 8, and Matthew “Mattie,” 5; her parents, Bob and Dee Schafer of Mentor, Ohio, and Kiawah Island, S.C.; and her sister, Elizabeth, of Chevy Chase, Md. After graduating from Colby, Margaret began her professional career as an intern at ABC Sports. Over the next 20 years, she rose through the ranks until she became a director. She traveled the globe covering such events as the Tour de France, downhill skiing, speed skating, world gymnastics championships, men’s and women’s golf tours, Monday Night Football, and two Super Bowls. She also spent a large part of her career covering college football, including several Rose Bowls and BCS national championship games. She went on to work with the Golf Channel covering the Champions Tour for many years. Those of you who knew Margaret may recall that she was a sports fanatic with a lifelong love of all things Cleveland. She rarely missed a Colby football or hockey game. She was able to transition her passion into a career that was both fun and exciting. Despite her fulfilling career, Margaret’s real passion was her family and friends. Her family recently relocated back to the Cleveland area, where she was able to reconnect with former high school classmates and friends. She and her family spent time enjoying the community she loved—going to dance recitals, school plays, metroparks, the arboretum, KCC, parades, and local high school football games. We had the pleasure of spending a few days with Margaret, Joe, Lexie, and Mattie in May. Lexie showed us her school, and Mattie pointed out where he would be going to kindergarten. We visited their beautiful home and walked around their village center, enjoying ice cream and conversation. Our Class of 1988 reunion book had just been published, and it was fun to read about our classmates’ lives. We also spent hours with Margaret reminiscing about Colby and deemed our visit our “mini 25th.” Our most favorite memories of Margaret include M&Ms, 24/7 sports on television, perfectly matched and accessorized outfits, Talbots (“the mother ship”), ski trips to Sugarloaf, shopping sprees, baked potatoes, chocolate, and sports “discussions.” She had an infectious smile and an easy-going nature. Margaret’s positive attitude toward life will live on in her children. She was a wonderful friend, and we miss her dearly. ~ Laurie Meehan Reed and Nina Colhoun Wilson

1989
Anita Terry
classnews1989@colby.edu

By the time you read this there will be only a few months until our 25th reunion, or what I’m calling our “silver” reunion. (Silver as in anniversary, not as a polite term for the color of my hair.) I hope you will be there, because I don’t want to be eating lobster all by myself. ● Carolyn Lockwood can’t believe we have been gone from Mayflower Hill for 25 years. Her response to my e-mail: “Ugh! Ugh is all I can say!” I agree wholeheartedly. Other folks who plan to be there include Greg Gatlin, who works at Suffolk University in Boston and lives in Canton, Mass., with his wife, Erica, stepdaughters Emilee and Kaia, and baby daughter Eli. ● Shaun Dakin created Dakin Associates, a digital marketing firm “working on changing the world.” Shaun writes that he keeps in touch with Camilla Oberg in Dubai via Facebook. ● Congratulations to Robin Trend Baughn, who married Jonathan Mayhew in August. Their combined six children participated, and judging from the picture she sent, it was a beautiful event. ● Jon Nash paid a pre-reunion visit to Colby’s new art museum and “found the entire campus to be practically unrecognized.” Maybe one of our reunion activities should be figuring out our way around campus? ● Andrew Ian Dodge continues to write as the U.S. editor for a new website called Trending Central. ● Kristen Palmer McNaney and her husband, Killian, bought a house in Merrimac, Mass., last year and are happy to be near both the coast and southern Maine. Kristen is in her 20th year teaching history at Westford Academy. ● Jim Klinek is in Indiana, trying to get members of Colby’s Board of Trustees to pay attention to the cost of higher education and the implications of Colby’s lockstep tuition increases. So far, no luck, but maybe you can buttonhole them at reunion, Jim. ● Chris Tompkins was elected to the board of trustees of the Montgomery School in Chester, Pa., and is the president of the Association of Delaware Valley Independent Schools. ● In this column’s episode of “Anita Never Gets Invited,” Marc Rando and Andy Schmidt had breakfast in Madrid (yes, the one in Spain) while Marc was leading a Thayer student trip and Andy was there on business. I would have come, too, if you’d asked (and paid for the airfare). Marc is full of Colby news, having caught up with Jon Nash and his daughters, Matt, Sophia, Dave Fernandez, Rob Hoopes, Eric Stram, and Bret Dixon this summer. This doesn’t mean you don’t have to come to reunion, Marc! ● Bill and Anne Webster Stauffer had dinner with Kelly Doyle, who was on her way to Colby for reunion planning. The highlight of Billy’s summer was teaching his two daughters to water ski on Casco Bay. The Stauffers keep busy raising funds for the Soldot Project, an NGO that keeps at-risk children in school in northern Thailand. ● Mark Cosdon claims that he is going to reunion, but he might be too busy with his biannual course in Italy (that I follow jealously on Facebook). Mark is a happily tenured associate professor at Allegheny College, and in his spare time he is president of the American Theatre and Drama Society. ● Jim Connolly continues to enjoy a career switch from running a nonprofit to being a realtor. Jim and his family had a good summer traveling to California and Puerto Rico. Jim saw Kim Murphy Brewer and Stacey Mitchell at Courtney Ingrav's tships with consumer products companies. ● Melissa Ray Nelson and family live in Stoughton, Mass., where she is the custom account management director for healthcare marketing firm Krames StayWell. When not sailing with her husband or working, she is raising two future hockey stars. ● Holly Peirce and Sean Pratt have landed in Mexico City for her new State Department posting. This summer she enjoyed catching up via Skype with Roman Azanza, who lives in the Philippines. ● Anne Pollock Waldron and her husband and three kids moved to New Canaan, Conn. She loves coaching her fifth grade daughter’s lacrosse team and manages to get up to Colby a few times a year to see her niece’s lacrosse games. She’s pretty sure her kids are future White Mules, as they love going up to visit. ● Last spring Steve Nahley may have been having a midlife crisis when he decided to participate in the GORUCK Challenge, a special ops leadership training event. For 13 hours in the pouring rain, he and his teammates carried backpacks filled with 50 pounds of bricks, empty kegs, American fia Barton’s Mardi Gras party. Jim reports that Jan Gisholt and his wife, Hara, had a baby boy this summer. The baby has left Jan sleep-deprived but very happy. ● Christina and Brendan Cahill love living in Pelham, N.Y., with their four kids. They send their congratulations to Jan and Hara and to Sandy Thayer and Greg Tinder on their marriage. ● See you in June!

Tracy Roy Hankin ’90 runs the national strategic sales team at WebMD that focuses on forming partnerships with consumer products companies.

1990
Kristin Hock Davie
classnews1990@colby.edu

After six years at home with her four kids (ages 6 to 17), Merrie Post Gramlich started a new position in her local school system in Bethesda, Md. She works in the secondary alternative programs as a career and community liaison promoting work-based learning and community connections for struggling teens. ● Tracy Roy Hankin lives in Atlanta with her husband, three kids, and two rescue dogs. In addition to keeping up with all her kids’ activities, she runs the national strategic sales team at WebMD that focuses on forming partner-

1991
Dave Shumway
classnews1991@colby.edu

Greetings! Quite a bit to report, so here we go. Dave Vincent left active-duty Army service last December and began full-time studies at Georgetown’s McDonough School of Business’s M.B.A. program. He says it’s fun being a student again, especially in Washington. ● After eight years in Georgetown, Mass., Paige Brown Waters and her family moved back to Newport, Mass., where daughters Gabrielle and Alexandra entered sixth and fifth grade respectively and are heavily involved in soccer and dance. The family enjoys the wonderful parks, restaurants, school/ town events, and nearby Plum Island. Paige’s husband, Charles, is a partner at Sheehan Phinney Bass & Green in Boston. Paige works part time for monster.ca in addition to her school PTO/NEF volunteer work. Water’s Edge Seaglass is a hobby. They cherish time in Maine for skiing at Saddleback, Fourth of July fireworks and lobster in Portland, and fall excursions in Acadia. ● Del Lloyd and her husband quit corporate America jobs in technology and will travel around the world for the next year or so. They started in Portugal Sept. 1 and have a blog at popgoestheworldblog.com. ● Audrey Wittemen Wenning has lived in Chicago for 16 years and has worked as a transportation planner at Cambridge Systematics for eight years. Current projects include transportation safety plans in Montana, freight rail operations improvements in Chicago, and transit prioritization in Chicago suburbs. This summer, after picking up her daughter, Claire, 9, at summer camp in Wisconsin, her family drove to the East Coast via Canada. After visiting Quebec they drove through Waterville and stopped at Colby (first time since the 10th reunion) on the way to their annual summer vacation in Rockport, Mass. ● Dan “Jazzy” D’Raymon lives in Nyack with his wife and daughter, Lulu, 5. He says it’s a refreshing relief from the frenetic concrete jungle of Manhattan (and even Brooklyn at this point). Dan had a busy year in films. He headed to L.A. for the premiere of Instructions Not Included, filmed in Mexico last summer. It was his first bilingual role. Other projects include Angriest Man in Brooklyn with Robin Williams (“experience of a lifetime”) and The Amazing Spiderman 2. He’s also been shooting a series of spots for Tidy Cats. ● Kay Cowperthwait and her partner, Ann, were married Aug. 12 after 19 years together. They had a wedding 17 years ago, but it was nice to make it official in Massachusetts after the Supreme Court ruling in June. Their daughter, Sophie, 12, and son Tate, 6, were thrilled to participate in the small family ceremony on the beach in Nantucket. Kay hopes to catch a women’s hockey game this winter. Go Mules! ● Brian Quinn is a financial advisor in Needham, Mass., and lives in Foxboro with children Lexi, 12, Dylan, 10, and Macy, 7, who keep him busy with soccer, baseball, basketball, lacrosse, and gymnastics. He writes, "I still find time to play golf and hockey, though I haven’t found the need to revisit the Mohawk. Matt Gibbons lives up the street from me, and we revisit the iPlay days by playing in an over-35 softball league. I also see or talk frequently to Jeff Hartwell, who lives in Cohasset and has two young boys, and Blake Liebert, who has two kids and is up in Salisbury, Mass., and is also a vet. Jeff and Blake recently bought their first boats. Dave Ford has a young son and works in development at Harvard and lives in Newton, Mass. Mike Ferret is a real estate mogul living in Phoenix with four boys who can be as charming and surly as Mike, and Matt Greenlaw is in Portland, Ore., and runs hockey camps and programs.

Toby Cox is a pediatrician near Salt Lake and has ample time to abuse himself on the mountain bike and the ski slopes, and Dave Mumford, another financial advisor, lives on the West Coast but makes biannual trips to the East Coast." ❀ Keep the news coming!

1992

Molly Beale Constable
classnews1992@colby.edu

Elaine Bueschen O’Grady broke 20 years of class notes silence with this report: "In July my husband, Michael, our kids, Nora, I had a mini-reunion in Boston with Jen Greenleaf, Jen Pelson Hopkins, and Jen Kosek Walker. All are doing great." ❀ Norm Stillman is a small-animal veterinarian and owner of the Court Street Animal Hospital in his hometown of Plymouth, Mass. “My wife, Diane Osgood ’91, and I have two lovely daughters. The eldest started high school this fall. I feel as though I was in high school not that long ago! I’ve been back to Colby once since graduation. Things had changed quite a bit (not to mention Big G’s relocation!), but the campus looked great.” ❀ Meredith Johnson wrote from her home in Beverly, Mass. “Our hands are full with a 10-month-old puppy named Freckles who is a sweet rescue dog from North Carolina. Her name was ‘Lady,’ but could you imagine my husband, Al, yelling down the street, ‘Hey, Lady, come back?’ It would have been a little too much like a Seinfeld episode. I’m still working in sports medicine as a physician’s assistant at Lahey Clinic, and Al works for MetLife securities compliance. We love being by the water—and just wish we had more time to be on it! My cousin Kate Connolly is a senior at Colby. She runs cross country for coach Deb Atken, who has been at Colby for 27 years (!). I’m planning a road trip to Colby with several friends who have watched Kate grow up to see her compete at a meet in October. It should be beautiful.” ❀ Kim Erminias Reeve heads up the New York office and nonprofit practice of Cathedral Consulting Group. I am finally putting my French degree to use by expanding the firm’s international presence, including traveling to Sierra Leone and Guinea last spring to present three conferences on entrepreneurship. I am also finishing up coursework for a Ph.D. and am busily writing my dissertation, which focuses on effective evaluation methods of social enterprises. In June I had a mini-reunion with Stephanie Clement, Jeanine Caunt, and Joy Marean Hickey in NYC. (We missed seeing Tara McDonough!) We had a wonderful time laughing and sharing our favorite Colby memories. Stephanie is the conservation director at Friends of Acadia and is enjoying life in Maine. Jeanine works in editing, communications, marketing, and design and is in the process of launching her own company in the NYC metro area. And Joy is finishing her Ph.D. at Columbia in education. She and her husband, John, live in New Jersey and have an absolutely adorable daughter named Elizabeth. We are all hoping to make it to the 25th reunion—even though we are still trying figure out exactly where the last 20 years have gone!” ❀ Aren’t we all? Have fun, everyone. See you next time.

1993

Jill Moran Baxter
classnews1993@colby.edu

Greetings, Colby folk! If your summer involved some vacation time, you were in good company—Katy Donovan O’Neill, Christopher Iannini, Ginny Fowles Ward, and Karyn Patry all caught some time away from work, if their out-of-office emails are any indication. ❀ Crawford Strunk and family traveled to Maine for a vacation and were lucky to see Maylene Cummings Mitchell ’96. Crawford and wife Shelly and their three kids, Asa, Everett, and Emma, hail from Toledo, Ohio. Crawford still works at Toledo Children’s Hospital as the director of the sickle cell disease and hemoglobinopathy clinic. The Strunks recently added a new member to the family, a sweet Havanese puppy named Colby. ❀ Anna Marie Winrim Yombo works in HR at the Latin American Montessori Bilingual Public Charter School in D.C., where her son, Leo, is in third grade; daughter Rachelle graduated last year. Anna Marie’s husband, Ernest, also works at the school as an assistant principal. Anna Marie says, “I haven’t been back to Maine since graduating from Colby, but I keep promising my family a road trip so we’ll make it there someday—it can’t wait!” ❀ Mike Murphy imagines our 20th reunion was a treat in many ways. He is “glad to know ‘the friends I made on Mayflower Hill remain loyal’ goes a long way.” Murph spends half the year in Wrangell-St. Elias National Park and winters in Taos, N.M. His family includes a 2-year-old boy, a wife of nine years, and two dogs; he writes that he feels young and thankful. Murph is advocating for a 21st Colby reunion (B.O.O.T.) at his place in McCarthy, Alaska, during the last week of July 2014. ❀ Meredith Bradt ’93 lives in Maastricht, the Netherlands, and works as head of marketing and communications at the Maastricht University School of Business and Economics. Meredith says, "It is great to see how internationalization has grown at Colby! I would (probably) never have ended up in Europe for the last 20 years if I hadn’t been able to go to Germany for my junior year abroad." Meredith enjoys catching up with former dean Parker Beverage and some of Colby’s current admissions staff (Steve Thomas and Hung Bui ’94) at the OACAC conference each summer. ❀ Suzie Girard and husband Dave welcomed Zachary Jacob Klein, who weighed in at 9 pounds, 6 ounces, on May 16. Suzie writes, “He is, I believe, the cutest baby ever.;) And he is keeping me and Dave on our toes.” ❀ Tobin Slavin also welcomed a baby in May. Daughter Divya Ellis makes child number five in Tobin and wife Martina’s blended family. Martina and Tobin recently launched a startup called Mustify.com, a platform to promote local businesses that are a “must-try.” ❀ “I currently have the pleasure of having my writing on nearly every street corner of New York City,” writes Mark Radcliffe, who is the author of the ad campaign for Citi Bike, NYC’s bike-share program sponsored by Citibank. Mark recently met up with Chris Bither and George Moore ’91 in the city. ❀ Lela Hinman Stanczak, who lives in Singapore, spent 10 weeks in the U.S. this summer. She supervised construction on her new apartment and attended a wedding. Lela loved seeing everyone at our 20th reunion, especially Sarah Burditt McDougall, Stephanie Doyon Gross, Dave O’Shea, and the After 8 guys. She is already looking forward to our 25th reunion. ❀ Write in and share your news. Hope to see you in the next column!

1994

Kimberly Valentine Walsh
classnews1994@colby.edu

I just received my save-the-date postcard for our 20th reunion—so put June 6-8, 2014, on your calendar so we can catch up in person! ❀ Cole Conlin has moved to Minneapolis with his family. I’m looking 90s NewsMakers

Alliant Insurance Services appointed Peter Carpenter '91 its chief operating officer Sept. 1. Previously Alliant's managing director of employee benefits—North-east, Carpenter joined the company in 2008 when it acquired ClearPoint, the Seattle-based benefits consulting firm of which he was co founder and CEO.

Jennifer Ancker Whelen '95 was named one of 50 Leading Women in Hedge Funds 2013 by the Hedge Fund Journal. Since 2007 Whelen has been managing director of Graham Capital Management, a Connecticut-based alternative investment firm. She cofounded the East Coast Committee of Hope for the nonprofit Help for Children/Hedge Funds Care, which works to prevent and treat child abuse. Laura Olsen '97 was named assistant principal of Reading (Mass.) Memorial High School. She previously taught at several Massachusetts schools and served as an assistant principal in Pawtucket, R.I. In addition to being featured in the September issue of People StyleWatch, Lauren Rothman ’99 had a book, Style Bible: What to Wear to Work, published by Bibliomotion in October. Rothman is the founder of fashion consulting firm Styleauteur (styleauteur.com) and writes about political style in her Huffington Post column, Fashion Whip.

forward to seeing him and hope it will be at a book signing for his new book, Zachary Zamboni, a perfect gift for your little hockey and skating fans, available on Amazon. When he’s not entertaining children with his stories, Cole teaches Spanish at Nova Classical Academy in St. Paul. Matthew Gaines and his wife have a daughter and are expecting a second daughter in October. He’s currently working as a senior physical therapist at New York Presbyterian Hospital/Cornell in Manhattan. Matthew also got to catch up with Eric Johnson ’93 at Shake Shack while he was visiting from California.

Carie King reports that after a year and a half on Maui and two months in Brooklyn, she returned to Santa Fe last summer and then moved to Denver, where she is growing her private practice as a life coach.

Erik Belenky wrote a quick note to say that he and his wife, Sally, live in Atlanta with "Greetings, Class of ’94! Preparations are underway for our 20th reunion, June 6-8, 2014. It’s a wonderful weekend—nostalgic, celebratory, inspiring, and entertaining, for sure. From planning to logistics to giving and beyond, we need YOU to make it all happen successfully. Please e-mail me at 1994Colby20th@colby.edu if you would like to join the reunion committee or for more information. Speaking of giving, we have set a big goal for ourselves this year: at least 50 percent of the class participating in the Colby Fund. The money we give back goes directly toward financial aid, faculty and academic programs, athletics, and student life—all the things that make Colby a leader among colleges and the place we’re proud to call our own. Please consider an early gift to the Colby Fund this year at colby.edu/give. Finally, we’ve started a reunion Facebook group, where we’ve seen lots of friends and enjoying her golf league and the beach. She was looking forward to some time off for good behavior when the kids went back to school in the fall. And sad news: RIP to classmate Michael Vosburg-Casey, who passed away in July of colon cancer. He is survived by his wife, Amy, and their daughter, Elena, 3. I learned that Michael spent several years working for the San Mateo County Park System before moving to Atlanta as part of the Jesuit Volunteer Corps. After his service in JVC, Michael dedicated his life to the pursuit of peace and justice and to helping the poor and the marginalized. My heart goes out to his wife and family, especially Elena, who lost her daddy way too early in her life.

Maylene Cummings Mitchell wrote on Aug. 20, "Lydia Mae Mitchell arrived at 8:22 a.m. in Brunswick, Maine. She’s 20 inches long and weighs 8 pounds, 12 ounces." Maylene’s husband, Erik ’97, is reportedly a diaper-changing champion.

Whitney Giockner welcomed her second son, Jasper Parry Giockner Black, May 13 and enjoyed the summer spending time with the new baby. In lighter news, Alex Chin and a bunch of other Mules were part of a fantasy football draft at Champions (Waterville? No, in the Marriott Copley). In attendance were Brett Nardini (who was arrested for eating too many wings), Ben Lester (on speed dial to make picks), Jon Huerta and a bunch of other Mules were part of the new baby. In lighter news, Alex Chin and a bunch of other Mules were part of a fantasy football draft at Champions (Waterville? No, in the Marriott Copley). In attendance were Brett Nardini (who was arrested for eating too many wings), Brian Cronin (who had his 8-year-old son on speed dial to make picks), Ben Lester ’99, Glenn Forger ’97, Jamie Harris ’97, Doug Ellinger ’97, Todd Guilfoyle, Dennis Collum ’98, and Dave Stephens (who used to work with my brother at Gillette).

1995

Yuhgo Yamaguchi
classnews1995@colby.edu

Kate Bolick lives alone in Brooklyn and is working on her first book, due out from Crown/Random House in 2015. Michael Cobb, now an English professor at the University of Toronto, author of several books, and maddeningly fit, visits her often. She sees Mike Daisey ’96 in her neighborhood when his insanely demanding performance schedule allows. She also keeps in close touch with Marcos ’93 and Erika Troseth Martinez. Erika teaches at St. John’s College in Santa Fe, N.M., “and has perhaps the world’s most adorable and sanguine 2-year-old daughter.” Erika spent a day at the beach in her Massachusetts hometown with Stephen White McKenna, her amazing wife, and their two sweet, hilarious children. Finally, last spring, she got together with her Colby roommate, Hannah Swenson Vaughan. Hannah lives in Austin, Texas, and is married with two children.

Abe Rogers is earning his master’s in elementary education at Boston College. He is also training with a special forces unit in the National Guard and still coaching the Cambridge Masters Swim Club at Harvard University.

Jon Huerta has been living in NYC since graduation. He is a managing director in investment banking at RBC Capital Markets. He got married two years ago; no kids yet. He keeps in touch with Robin Ottaway, Foster Klug, and Mike Keller.

Darrell Sosfield has been living in Bellingham, Wash., since 2003. Emma Spennon Norman visited Darrell this summer with her two sons. Darrell recently left a career as a geospatial consultant to work for a local native tribe that restores degraded salmon habitat near Bellingham. “It is pretty satisfying to work where I live, after so many years on the road.” Darrell and his wife, Ruth, recently celebrated their fifth wedding anniversary.

Rick Catino started a sales intelligence company called LeadBridge in 2006, and Inc. magazine named it one of the fastest growing companies in the U.S. Rick is also coaching high school football in North Andover, Mass., and really enjoying it. This summer he got to see classmates Mike Manning, Chris Bossella, Matt Morrissey, Mark Jackson, and Kevin Pirani ’96. “Everyone is really bad at golf, but doing well overall.”

Tachou Dubuisson Brown and her husband welcomed their second son, Logan, in August. He joins big brother Parker. Tachou and her family live in Beverly Hills, Calif. She cofounded a company called WearOnWheels, which is launching next spring.

1996

Brad Smith
classnews1996@colby.edu

Good news, sad news, red news, blue news. Let’s get to it. Jen Pope writes that in June Abby Smith Derrig, Tammy Smith Wilkerson, Alex Kean Strong, Amie Sicchiano Taylor, and Courtney Sullivan Homer met in Florida for Jen’s bachelorette party (personal aside: I think that two thirds of these people were in my freshman English class with Charlie Bassett). Jen’s fiancé, Bill, proposed to her on a glacier on Denali in Alaska, and they’re getting married in New Hampshire Oct. 5, where henceforth they plan to live free or die. Jen is based in Washington, D.C., doing international public health work and reports that Patty Benson Bechard just moved to Germany with her husband and two boys. Das macht mir brech specht schreiber! Our friend Gretchen Rice King has been ably coping with the sudden loss of her husband two years ago. She’s raising her two kids with lots of help and support from family and friends and enjoying her golf league and the beach. She was looking forward to some time off for good behavior when the kids went back to school in the fall. And sad news: RIP to classmate Michael Vosburg-Casey, who passed away in July of colon cancer. He is survived by his wife, Amy, and their daughter, Elena, 3. I learned that Michael spent several years working for the San Mateo County Park System before moving to Atlanta as part of the Jesuit Volunteer Corps. After his service in JVC, Michael dedicated his life to the pursuit of peace and justice and to helping the poor and the marginalized. My heart goes out to his wife and family, especially Elena, who lost her daddy way too early in her life.

Maylene Cummings Mitchell wrote on Aug. 20, “Lydia Mae Mitchell arrived at 8:22 a.m. in Brunswick, Maine. She’s 20 inches long and weighs 8 pounds, 12 ounces.” Maylene’s husband, Erik ’97, is reportedly a diaper-changing champion.

Whitney Giockner welcomed her second son, Jasper Parry Giockner Black, May 13 and enjoyed the summer spending time with the new baby. In lighter news, Alex Chin and a bunch of other Mules were part of a fantasy football draft at Champions (Waterville? No, in the Marriott Copley). In attendance were Brett Nardini (who was arrested for eating too many wings), Brian Cronin (who had his 8-year-old son on speed dial to make picks), Ben Lester ’99, Glenn Forger ’97, Jamie Harris ’97, Doug Ellinger ’97, Todd Guilfoyle, Dennis Collum ’98, and Dave Stephens (who used to work with my brother at Gillette).

COLBY / FALL 2013 61

Darrell Sosfield ’95 recently left his job as a geospatial consultant to work for a local native tribe that restores degraded salmon habitat near Bellingham, Wash.
Eben Peck ’98 is vice president of government affairs for the American Society of Travel Agents, responsible for ASTA’s federal and state lobbying efforts.

Jesse Carlson. Eben recently started a new job as vice president of government affairs for the American Society of Travel Agents (ASTA), where he’s responsible for all of ASTA’s federal and state lobbying efforts as well as its political action committee, ASTAPAC. • Brian and Kristelle Ahern Gill, Peter and Sarah Eno Felmy, and Raja and Liz Hooper Bala met up for a family camping weekend in Freeport, Maine. Raja impressed all with his ability to catch fish freehand in the local rivers. • Samantha Spielman and her husband recently celebrated their six-year anniversary and the first birthday of their amazing daughter, Livia. They live in Wilton, Conn., only about a mile from Betsy Kies Rafferty. Samantha works as an elementary school teacher. • Emily Larsen’s daughter turned 1 in September. Emily and her husband are expecting another child in April 2014! Emily continues to teach high school biology in Phoenix and is preparing to apply for a physician assistant program next year. • Congratulations to Kevin Zimmerman Thurston, who married Brooke McNally ’03 June 29 on Mayfield Hill. Forty-five Colby grads were in attendance. • Cindy Lohmann Million welcomed a daughter, Hazel, to her family June 24. Last March Cindy and her family traveled to Maine to visit Rachel Gitelson ’00 and her family and to ski at Sunday River. Cindy said, “It was great to be in Maine and introduce our son to skiing.” • Chris and Kristina Smith Gates were part of a small Colby gathering this summer at Hammonasset State Park in Connecticut. They had a fun, short family camping trip with Taylor Smith, Geoff Kelsey, and Harris Eisenstadt.

1998
Brian M. Gill
classnews1998@colby.edu
Our thoughts and prayers are with the family and friends of David Brennenman after his passing in September 2013. • Congratulations to David Spiro, Nathan Curtis, and Dawn Seckler, who all welcomed babies this year. David and his wife Alie celebrated the arrival of Madeleine Adele on March 15. On June 6 two little babies named Charlie were born: Nathan and his wife, Kimberly, had a little girl, Charlotte “Charlie,” and Dawn and husband Greg Baltus had a little boy, Charles Buzz. • Congratulations to Eben Peck as well. In June he and his wife, Collette, welcomed Stuart Alexander Peck, who joins sister Lucy and dog Landry. Stuart has already spent time with members of the growing Washington-area Colby ’98 baby boom, including the kids of Chris Coakley, Todd Poling, and visit Rachel Gitelson ’00 and her family and to ski at Sunday River. Cindy said, “It was great to be in Maine and introduce our son to skiing.” • Chris and Kristina Smith Gates were part of a small Colby gathering this summer at Hammonasset State Park in Connecticut. They had a fun, short family camping trip with Taylor Smith, Geoff Kelsey, and Harris Eisenstadt.

1999
Lindsay Hayes Hurty
classnews1999@colby.edu
Laura Neale returned to Maine from California six years ago. She owns Black Kettle Farm, an organic vegetable farm in Lyman, south of Portland, and runs a CSA there. Abby Manock created the farm’s logo. Black Kettle has seen visits by Chasey Hewes Allen, Ben Armiger, Kate Tynan O’Dwyer, Anne Hutchinson Parent, Brendan Bloom, and Christina Holmes. Many of them, as Former middle school principal Melissa Kim ’97 has joined NewSchools Venture Fund in Washington, D.C., where she continues to work to close the achievement gap.

Jason Jabar joined online (and I’m hoping that afterward he hit dollar drafts at the Waterville Champions). • As for me, Kevin Thurston ’98, Tom Beedy ’97, and I were three fourths of a hellacious foursome at the annual Gaudet Invitational in August. The rain did not deter us; in fact, we played 18 times more golf holes than Chad Higgins ’97. In August we sold our Portland home, and at press time we were contemplating a move to the Portland ‘burbs. • Send more notes, bitte Sie verrückte Leute.

1997
Leah Tortola Walton
classnews1997@colby.edu
After nine years at Los Alamos National Lab in New Mexico, Rico DelSesto started in a faculty position at Dixie State University in southern Utah, teaching chemistry and doing research with undergrads. He shared, “There are lots of places nearby for us to enjoy the outdoors, and Zion National Park is just down the road. When we moved here, we left our snow shovels behind, and now we enjoy the mild, sunny, snow-free winters. Apparently the cold finally got to me, and the dry desert heat is a welcome change.” • Yawa Duse-Anthony has been working at American Towers since the fall. She keeps in touch with Vanessa Newell Coutu and Anne Miller Cumlish ’98. She also has a Colby mentee named Gift Ntuli ’14, who was just featured in the Out of the Blue newsletter for doing some great nonprofit work in Zimbabwe. • After seven years Melissa Kim left her position as principal of Alice Deal Middle School in Washington, D.C. She now works with the NewSchools Venture Fund in the D.C. office, where she continues working to close the achievement gap. She would love to connect with others in education reform. Melissa lives in D.C. with husband Clint and son Axel, 3. • Also from D.C., Susanna Montezemolo is working at the Center of Responsible Lending, where she focuses on research. She, husband Mark, and their 2-year-old, Regina, took a spring trip to Florence and Rome, Italy, to visit family. Sus also sees San Francisco Bay area, gave birth July 18. Daughter Violet was happy to welcome her new little sister, Scarlett, to the family. • Katy and Andrew Weber announced the birth of their second daughter, Lucinda Mirabel, born in London on the Fourth of July. Andrew and Katy planned to host Colby’s London bicentennial celebration in September. • Denise Mailloux Bowden e-mailed that “on his due date, Cary Fields Bowden, our second son, was born at our home like his big brother had been just over four years before.”

Cary Gibson regularly. Cary works on health-care issues for a lobbying firm and recently completed a certification program to become a holistic health coach. • Liz Baker Meehan’s niece, Caitlyn Nolan, joined the Colby Class of 2017 and will play women’s basketball. Liz is excited to head up to Mayflower Hill a few times this year to visit and watch Caitlyn play. • Kara Marchant Hooper had a busy summer. During her travels she managed to visit with Ellie Peters Bergquist and Ashley Malcom Laasko ’98 and their families, with Austen Briggs Crossley and family in Austin, Texas, and with Shannon Tracy Bergquist and family at Winding Trails in Connecticut. Kara was very happy to see news of Erin Duggan’s nuptials in the New York Times this summer. • Grace Perry shared that she’s now working as director of sales at Gizmox in Cambridge, Mass. She would love to hear from any Boston-area alums involved with startups/venture capital. • Amalie Gosine Howard has exciting book news. Look for Waterfall, the first installment of teen series The Aquarathi, Oct. 29; The Almost Girl Jan. 7; and Alpha Goddess in March. She is also working on the second book of The Aquarathi, Oceanborn, which will be out next August. She wrote, “It’s going to be a whirlwind next few months career-wise, but I’m very excited! On the homefront, my kids, Connor, 9, Noah, 7, and Olivia, 4, keep me busy when I’m not writing.” • In baby news we heard from Jason Klein. He and his wife, Judy, welcomed a second child, son Elliot James, July 22. • Wendy Ridder Bergh, who lives in the...

On April 13, 2012, Sarah Hewins eloped with Darren Bischoff and became a stepmother to Darren’s three kids. On June 25, 2012, they welcomed a baby girl, Mia Grace. This summer they got (re)married surrounded by family and friends including Bob ’97 and Alison Rainey Doak, Rachel Reider Harper, Kelly Williams Ramot, and Crystal Brakke Sieber, who officiated. Michelle Foster Costa and Katie Kinsella Baade were unable to attend due to pregnancies and new babies. Mark Melander lives in Wayland, Mass., with wife Amanda (Colgate) ’98, three little ones, John, 2, Annie, 5, Maggie, 7, and their German shorthair pointer, Poppy. Mark is an account executive for MarketOne International in Waltham. Mark, Ross McEwen, Matt Williams, Pete Kugler and others attended the sixth annual Mayflower Open golf tournament, organized by Andy Young ’98.

Ryan Aldrich and his wife welcomed their second child Aug. 8: son Colden Lee Aldrich. Sister Avery is excited.

Lauren Rothman published Style Bible: What to Wear to Work. Featured in the September People StyleWatch magazine, Lauren also dished style and politics on ET, CNN Español, AP news, and Reuters. She regularly writes about political style in her Huffington Post column, Fashion Whip. Lauren, Jason Gerbsman, and their son, Judah, recently moved to McLean, Va.

Dave Fasteson is running for state senate in Rhode Island.

Steve Murphy lives in D.C., and is a policy advisor in the State Department’s new Office of Global Health Diplomacy. Braxton Williams and his wife, Shannon Woods, had a son, Harrison Patrick, June 29.

Aaron Whitmore lives in San Francisco with his wife, Carrie, and son Rex, 1.

In August Kelly Bregou, Larry Spollen, Christina Schleicher, Peter Bowden ’98, Michelle Cook ’01, and eight others ran the 200-mile Hood to Coast Relay in Oregon in 24 hours. They finished in the top 12.6 percent.

Will Barndt and his wife, Susan McWilliams (Amherst ’98 and a professor at Pomona), had a second child, Carey McWilliams, in June. He and sister Marjorie, 3, get along fine.

2000

Ben Mackay
classnews2000@colby.edu

Thank you all for writing. On to the news.

Dave Famiglietti accepted a job as a treasury solutions analyst with Bank of America in Toronto and looks forward to the move north of the border. Greg ’98 and Vanessa Wade Wehmeyer and daughter Ella camped with friends at Ferry Beach in Saco, Maine, visited Sesame Place in Philadelphia (Elmo says hi), and spent nine days on Pequawket Pond in Brownfield, Maine, with some of Greg’s family. They were gearing up for Ella’s first day of kindergarten.

Stephanie D. Baron and her husband, Naren Vasudevan ’99, have two sons, Isaac, 8, and Kenji, 6, and live in Southern California. Stephanie has been the director of clinical education and an instructor for the physician assistant program at Western University of Health Sciences in Pomona for three years. Naren is a physician assistant in occupational medicine. They took their first real family vacation in Oahu and are already planning the next big thing.

This summer Caroline Calhoun relocated to Monroe, Conn., where she and her fiancé, Declan Curtin (Fairfield University ’00 and also a teacher) bought and renovated a house. After eight years she left her original school district and got a new job teaching fifth grade humanities in Easton, very close to her new home. Jared and Megan Davis Poor spent the summer with their fabulous kids, 2, 4, and 6. A highlight was Storyland with Rachel Gitelson, Doug Nilson, and their three kids. Megan started a new job as clinical coordinator for the high school alternative program in Colchester, Vt. Jared just started his own business, JW Poor Carpentry, doing carpentry and finish work.

Phoebe (Lehmann) ’01 and Jay Zarnetske finished their positions at Yale and started faculty positions at Michigan State. They’re still getting used to being called faculty after all those years preparing for it. Mike Siegel, Morgan McDevitt, and Jay were groomsmen in Ross Frankenfield’s wedding in September and saw many Colby alumni there.

Lindsay Pinchbeck opened an art center, Sweet Tree Arts in Hope, Maine, celebrating art and community. She works with schools to bring local and international artists to her community. They’re always eager to collaborate and connect with other schools and organizations globally. Trish Akins Elliott and her husband, Michael, welcomed Frances Charlotte Wirtz on May 22. She joins big brother Charlie, 2. Trish works in advancement at Concord Academy alongside a number of fellow White Mules. She finished her doctorate in public health and accepted a faculty position at the Boston University School of Public Health. Brenda Yun lives in Honolulu with her two dogs, Iris and Roo. She works part time as a college writing teacher but plans to dedicate most of her time to completing her last year of a low-residency creative writing Ph.D. program at Bath Spa University in the U.K. Brenda is writing a book of travel fiction that takes place in the Honolulu airport. She also surfs when/if she has time.

Tim ’99 and Amanda Carucci Boggs live in Hoboken, expected their third child while the news was being collected, and their beautiful daughter, Linley Fowler Charette, was born Sept. 5. Congratulations! That was just the start of our class’s baby news. Dave and Lindsay Scott McGeehan welcomed their second child, Nolan, July 31. He joins big sister Clare, 3. Brooke (Congdon) ’02 and Mike Wilmot welcomed a daughter, Roosevelt “Rosie,” April 26. Mike still loves life as a teacher and coach at Pingree School in South Hamilton, Mass.

Erik Balsbaugh and his wife, Carolyn, welcomed their first child, Sawyer Michael, April 2.

Todd Minor ’01 is director of Friends of Rockaway, which helps low-income residents of Rockaway, N.Y., rebuild their homes after the destruction of Hurricane Sandy.

2001

Emily Mahlman
classnews2001@colby.edu

Hi, all! I’m taking over class correspondent duties for Dana Fowler Charette this time around. Dana and her husband, Jon, Eric reports that he is finding Ally Giard Downey’s website, weespring, incredibly helpful in wading through the morass that is baby toys, seats, Jumperoos, and Exersaucers.

Liz Hubbard Weinifter still enjoys life as a Minnesotan and recently celebrated 12 years in the biomedical library at the University of Minnesota. Liz is a liaison librarian working extensively with the school of nursing, and she is president of the midwest chapter of the Medical Library Association. She and her husband, Mark, expected a baby girl Sept. 4.

Hannah Smith Harrison’s first picture book, Extraordinary Jane, which she both wrote and illustrated, will be released in March 2014. It looks super cute and can be preordered now on Amazon. Also available on Amazon is The Little Rippers (Volume 1: Here Come the Little Rippers) by Becky Munster. Get shopping; people, all the babies mentioned above should own these books.

Following Hurricane Sandy, Todd Minor became the director of Friends of Rockaway, which helps low-income residents of Rockaway, NYC, rebuild their homes. He is very busy but enjoys his work immensely. Todd should look up Michelle Farrell, as she just moved to the city. Michelle continues to work as an assistant professor of Spanish and Portuguese at Fairfield University.

Liz Richards Rivembark had a very busy summer, earning tenure and promotion to associate professor of art history at the University of South Alabama in June and marrying John Robert Rivembark in July. To top it all off they celebrated with Jen Jost and Colleen Dugan in Maine in August.
ALUMNI AT LARGE

Julie Drew Williams has been named the executive director of the American Independence Museum in Exeter, N.H. The museum closed last fall due to financial difficulty, so there is quite a lot of work to be done, but I know she will do a great job. She’s currently working on a strategic plan and hopes to announce some exciting changes in the coming months. Rob Henzi just celebrated his second wedding anniversary with his wife, Pamela. They live on Vinegar Hill in Brooklyn. Rob started a new job as strategy director at VICE Media. He looks forward to heading to New Orleans in October for the wedding of Dana Dupre and Justin Ehrenreich (congratulations!). While there he also plans to see Rob Tarlock and Tim Grayson. Pam Foxley Ariffin lives in Sharon, Conn., with her husband and daughter Lena, 3. She is the sustainability director at Silver Lake Conference Center, a summer camp and retreat center operated by the Connecticut Conference of the United Church of Christ. That’s all for now!

Erin Clark ’02 will split time between Montana and Belize for a year, running environmental education programs for Ecology Project International.

2002
Sally Hall Bell
classnews2002@colby.edu

Matt Albaugh defended his dissertation and received a doctorate in clinical psychology from UVM. In August he started as a postdoctoral associate and clinician in the department of psychiatry at UVM College of Medicine. Tadeusz and Stephanie Looney Smykal welcomed their first child, Jan “Jack,” in January. Stephanie is in the pediatric nurse practitioner program at Boston College. Ellie Bliron Stover lives in NYC and works at Tony Burch. She married Jamie Stover in June. Rob Wykowski, Jack Phillips, Jane Phillips, Eliza Gairard, Camilla Hall, Eliza Browning, and her new brother-in-law, Evan Reece ’00, attended. James and Jamie Hinson Scrubner welcomed a boy, Reid Truman, in August. Everyone had a blast.

2003

Lauren Tiberio Puglisi
classnews2003@colby.edu

News is light this quarter—hopefully the fall/winter weather will remind everyone of our times at Colby and I’ll have more to report next column. Brock and Stacy Thurston Barton welcomed their second son, Clark Langford Barton, in March. Clark joins brother Benjamin in the new house that Stacy and Brock built in Vermont. Brock works at King Arthur Flour and Stacy teaches at her alma mater, Thetford Academy. Life is good in Vermont. Justin Stempeck and his wife, Maureen Villadelgado, had their first baby, Fiona Rebecca Stempeck, April 13. Ten days later Lesley Lepak, Jordan and Devon honeymooned in Costa Rica. After the Supreme Court struck down Prop 8, they had a legal ceremony in West Hollywood in July. Sr. Madeleine (Sarah Miller ’02) works in campus ministry at Norfolk Catholic High School in Norfolk, Neb. She’ll soon be endorsed to teach political science and theology.

2004

Christina Dotchin was named interim director of admissions and director of financial aid for this year at Proctor Academy. Pete and Katie Sweeney Lepak welcomed a baby boy, Tyler Patrick, to their family July 25. He was born five weeks early, weighed 5 pounds 6 ounces, and measured 18 inches. He did great and was able to come home after just four days despite being premature. Kristan Jiggetts married Benjamin Kenney in Chicago June 29. Colby alums attending included Kristin Carlson, Alexis Caselle Bancroft, Kirsten Helmcke, Desiree Davis, and bridesmaids Shannon Hopkins and Holly Brown. Morgan Pratt married Walter “Cooper” Arvisais June 15 in Millbrook, N.Y. Colby alums attending were Michael Schnurr, Stephen Migausky, Ben Ricciardi, Allison Turner Osgood, Christian Allen ’05, and Julia Benedict ’05. Rick and Cindy McWilliams, parents of Trevor McWilliams, were also there. Nick Markham and his wife, Laura, welcomed Owen David Markham to the family. Andrew and Cassie Cote Grantham welcomed Michael Walker Grantham to the family May 29. Big sister Charlotte was less than impressed, Jessica Porter Stauth ’06 was hired as vice president of quant strategy at Quantopian, the first browser-based algorithmic trading platform. She joined Quantopian from Thomson Reuters, where she served as director of quant product strategy. In May Erin Parry ’06 earned two degrees from Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine: a Ph.D. in human genetics and molecular biology and an M.D. Parry received the Warfield T. Longscope Prize in Clinical Medicine and was inducted into the Alpha Omega Alpha Honor Medical Society. She is in her first year of the Osler Medical Residency Training Program at the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. Meaghan Fitzgerald ’08 was named one of Britain’s 30 Under 30 Women in Digital 2013 by The Drum, the country’s top trade publication for the industry. A founding member of 23snaps, Fitzgerald is head of market for the company, which lets parents save and privately share photos and videos of their children. Byron Meinirth ’09 received a Boren Fellowship to study Mandarin Chinese at Nanjing University in China during the 2013-14 academic year. Meinirth is a graduate student in international economics at Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies. N.H., where she is pursuing her M.B.A. at the Tuck School of Business. I look forward to some Tuck alumni trips to Hanover to visit while she’s there carrying the Colby torch. Jamie Falk, who lives in Denver, recently got engaged to Gretchen Hultman. He proposed just a day after finishing his first ultramarathon (50K). Michelle Cole works in communications for the Multiple Myeloma Research Foundation. She was recently given the 2013 American Cancer Society New England Volunteer Values Award and was selected for the Fairfield County Business Journal 40 Under 40 for her leadership in the nonprofit field. Pawel Brodak and his wife, Archana Prasad ’07, spent two weeks in August touring Poland, visiting Kolobrzeg, Gdansk, Warsaw, and Krakow. Next up in their travels: London, Montreal, Madrid, Barcelona, and Lisbon. Kristi Eck accepted the position of interim chief of staff at the State University of New York (SUNY) at Oswego, where she began work in late August. John and Wendy Sicard Cole officially relocated to Butte, Mont., where John is a pediatrician at Rocky Mountain Clinic. They enjoyed their 20-day hiking adventure out west and look forward to more exploring in their new neck of the woods. Paul and Jillian Parker Blakeslee welcomed their first child, Parker Edward Blakeslee, Aug. 7. Jillian and Paul live in Cape Elizabeth, Maine. They’ve enjoyed some Colby visitors since Parker’s arrival, including Rachel Damon, Jeanne Dibbella, and Amy Squires. Melissa Hinkle still works as the content manager for the U.S. and Canada at Cheapflights. She’s learned a lot since starting in January and has even been quoted as a travel expert in some well-known travel publications, including Condé Nast Traveler and the National Post in Canada. Melissa has enjoyed some of her own travel adventures including trips to London and Hong Kong, where she and Jenny Abramson visited Gillian Nadel. She also adopted a rescue pup, Coco, in May and really enjoys being a dog owner. Kat Perez and Justin Fahey were married this summer just outside Rocky Mountain National Park in Colorado. Their wedding party included Colby friends Nick Larsen, Eliza Huleatt, and Laura Normand, and there were 13 other Class of 2005 attendees. Justis is getting his master’s and teaching high school social studies as part of Teach for America while Kat is a museum exhibition designer in Denver. Mallory Young is engaged to Jonathan Michaels, who is the head football coach at Colby and a graduate of Bates. Mallory was appointed interim head coach of women’s hockey at Colby. Ken and Meghan Barringer Pitter welcomed their first child in May, a baby boy named Logan Charles. Neha Sud currently lives in Nairobi, Kenya, where she works for the World Bank. Prior to Kenya, she worked in Mali, where she reconnected with Bill Ford, who was passing through on an assignment abroad during his M.B.A. program. Best wishes for the holidays, and please continue to share these great updates with us!

2006 Jen Coliflores classnews2006@colby.edu Dan Giuliani runs a company in Seattle called Volt Athletics (voltathletics.com), which provides affordable, sport-specific strength-training programs to high school and college athletes around the world. Katie Roberts married Brian Dinneen July 6. The wedding took place in Beaver Creek, Colo., and Colby grad Kit Hickey and Jackie Dao ’05 were in the wedding party. Katie and Brian met while attending business school at the University of Virginia, and they now live in Connecticut. Meghan Race and her husband, Jeff Petrello, moved to Denver last September and bought their first house in the West Wash Park neighborhood. They’ve been working for the past year at Exclusive Resorts in member services. Lambie Bickford ’01 also works at the resort, and Meghan credits her for helping a fellow Mule get her foot in the door. Colleen McGee got married this summer in Teton Valley, Idaho, to Mathew Thompson. Taylor ’08 and Rebecca Amanda Killian and Dana Eisenberg were in attendance.

Neha Sud ’05 lives in Nairobi, Kenya, where she works for the World Bank. Prior to Kenya, she worked in Mali.

Research psychologist and currently works as a consultant in medical and health psychology. Kirsten Helmcke married Joe Dudeck in Chicago July 12. Chris Blomberg recently completed his internal medicine residency and has accepted a one-year position as chief medical resident at St. Elizabeth’s Medical Center in Boston. He and Erica Joseffy Blomberg continue to live in the Boston area with their newly adopted dog, Bailey. I hope you’re making plans to attend our 10th reunion. Mark June 5-8 on your calendar and join us back at Colby for a great weekend together.
new job as the development director for the Sustany Foundation, a nonprofit dedicated to promoting sustainable community development in Tampa Bay. They are the proud new owners of a large beach umbrella.
- Noah Balazs is teaching first grade at the Cooper School, a small progressive elementary school in Charleston, S.C.
- Dana Maglaris married Brian Barnett on Labor Day at a beautiful outdoor ceremony on Great Diamond Island in Portland, Maine. Dana and Brian met while attending medical school at the University of New England. Many Colby friends and family helped celebrate Dana and Brian on their big day.

2007

Annie Mears
classnews2007@colby.edu

Katie Maland and Dan Schupack were married June 29 in Stillwater, Minn., surrounded by family, friends, and Colby partygoers.
- Karl Gasteazoro married Mark McGill (Lehig '07) on Cape Cod Aug. 17, and it was freaking awesome! She loved having such wonderful Colby guests there including Katie Maland, Dan Schupack, Liz Stovall, Natalie Ginsburg, Tammy Lewin, Mary Warlaumont, Annie Mears, Alisa Perry, Elsa Chinliara, Ali Fulravid, Meg Davis, Brandon Smallwood '06, and Dave Havelick '11. Karl now lives in Maine with her husband and their golden retriever puppy, Tangawizi, a gift from the Colby wedding partygoers.
- Tucker Kelton and Liz Morbeck were married July 20 in Sun Valley, Idaho. Tucker reports, "It was an incredible weekend that included a Western-themed barn party Friday night and plenty of Sun Valley activities: hiking, fishing, golf, etc." They had a strong showing of 44 Colby alumni at the wedding. Wedding photos can be seen on the Stay Connected tab under the alumni photos at alumni.colby.edu.
- Jen McAleeer married Toni Vadalà Oct. 5 in Waterville Valley, N.H.
- Ian London had a blast at the wedding of his sister, Ellen London '09, to Ben Crane '06. Ian reports he's converted his Colby track and field successes into road cycling. "I've been riding and winning amateur races in Colorado and Wyoming for the Primal Wear/Audi race team. I'm about to upgrade out of the amateur categories, and I look forward to racing with the pros next season. And yes, I still enjoy my day job working for David Jones '99."
- Andrea Ofosu and Codjo Ahouadjindou got married at St. Edmund's Church, London, in July. Colby classmates included Aljma Olagher, Margaret Martel, Kip Kiprop, Tunde Bamigboye, and Jui Shrestha. Also married Elliott Flah, who went to Brandeis, in July. Her sister, Claire Deeleey, her wife Jamie Singelais, and friends Alex Shafer, Caroline Donehue, and Jen McAleeer all attended. She was also sworn into the Massachusetts bar in the fall and began practicing law with the Children and Family Law Division of the Committee for Public Counsel Services (public defender's office).
and student affairs administration from the SUNY Buffalo. • Alea Thompson and Jason Stigliano were married in July at the Codman Estate in Lincoln, Mass., and celebrated with friends Elaye Apantaku, Benjamin Hauptman, Ashlee Holm, Maria Ryden, Clifford Vickery ’10, and Lindsay Tolle ’08. Alea then moved to join Jason in Chicago, where she began her Ph.D. in policy studies in urban education at the University of Illinois. Jason is in his third year of a doctoral program in philosophy at Loyola. • Scott Zeller visited New York and played Spikeball in Central Park with Dan Heinrich, Alex Richards, and Josh Sadownick. Ishan Bir Singh ’08, Alex Pietroforte ’08, and Sarah Swithenben ’08 joined in the games. They met up with Lissa Martin later that night. • Jeff Ruhi graduated this spring from the CU-Boulder M.B.A. program and started a distilling equipment and supply company, moonshinedistiller.com. • Kat Brozowski and Wes Miller ’08 are getting married next May. • Tom Milaschewski and his wife had a baby daughter, Makenna, July 20. He’s earning his high school principal license through the University of Washington for Environmental Human Rights Advocacy and Policy.

2010

Sameera Anwar
classnews2010@colby.edu

Congratulations to Laure-Hélène Oakes-Caseau and Andy Oakes-Caseau on their beautiful wedding in France. Darshini Mahadev, Sarena Maron-Kolitch, Sameera Anwar, Nick Friedman, Ross Connor, Karthik Sonty, Dan Reeves, Adam Lowenstein ’09, Delia Langan, Lokesh Todi ’09, Scott Zeller ’09, and Leah Turino ’11 all came together to celebrate the wonderful occasion. • Jess Cosgrove moved to D.C. with her boyfriend and is looking for a job in human rights advocacy and policy. • Jess Levasseur started graduate school at the University of Washington for Environmental Public Health Sciences. • Still in Boston, Leigh Bullion started a stationery company called From Leigh to You—check it out on Facebook and Instagram! • Emily Barlow started her fourth year teaching in New Orleans. This is her second year at KIPP McDonogh 15 Middle School. • Doug Sibor, James Westhafer, Matt Viveno ’11, and new father Tom Milaschewski ’09 all gathered later that night. • Brittany Thomas and John B. Goods had a wonderful engagement party in Guilford, Conn. In attendance were Coyne Lloyd ’10, Taylor Tully, Will Price, Sarajane Blair, Leigh Bullion, Ross Necht, and Jack D’Isidoro. • Delia Langan was on the East Coast all summer with 11 shows highlighting her beautiful jewelry. • Katie Todd and Matt Reilly were married Labor Day weekend in Connecticut. They were joined by John Abbott, Brock Bosacker, Kyle Brewer, Tommy Gianakos, Tim Jeon, Charlie Klassen, Devon Neary, Toffer Noering, Meghan Sacco, Ashley Wagner, and Mike Reilly ’12. Congratulations, Katie and Matt! • Nicholas Ruocco ran his first Tough Mudder at Mount Snow, VT., with his brother, Alex, and his rugby team. He will begin vet school at Ross University in St. Kitts in January. • Jess Balasubramaniam came together to celebrate the wonderful occasion. • Abigail is an assistant dean of admission at Colby. They enjoy representing Colby and supply company, moonshinedistiller.com. • Kat Brozowski and Wes Miller ’08 are getting married next May. • Tom Milaschewski and his wife had a baby daughter, Makenna, July 20. He’s earning his high school principal license through the University of Washington for Environmental Human Rights Advocacy and Policy.

Victoria Gonzalez ’10 was a research fellow at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York. She is a second-year medical student at Rush University in Chicago.

2011

Nick Gunkelman
classnews2011@colby.edu

Elissa Kurtz, Stephanie Scarpato, Meryl Poulin, Alex Essman, and Liz Osgood all rendezvoused on the Cape this summer for some quality R and that brought the CWIH (Colby women’s ice hockey team) Class of 2011 together for the first time since graduation two Junes ago. Kurtz and Scarpato then traveled to Prague to play in the Czech National Challenge Cup, where they helped the North American Stars to a silver medal in a tournament that featured teams from North America, Czech Republic, and Russia. • Nate Bangura moved to Cambridge with Jack Vernamonti and Craig Bunker. He has been working at EMC in Hopkinton since shortly after graduation. Jack just began his first year of medical school at Tufts, and Craig recently wrapped up the major league lacrosse season with the Boston Cannons. • Barbara Santos has begun her third year of teaching in Hartford, Conn., right down the street from Trinity. She teaches high school history, and her classroom is Colby themed! • Adam Husain has begun his higher education and student affairs master’s program at Ohio State. He’s settled into his assistantship at the vibrant multicultural center, where he works to train students, faculty, and staff on methods to intervene in bias on campus. Though his cohort is small, the school itself is one of the largest in the nation (approximately 60,000 students)—a big change from Colby. • Rebecca Falenizer has started her second year at Tufts Veterinary School, in a class with Michael Verschoor-Kirsch ’12. She spent the summer doing research on the incidence of reflux with methadone versus hydromorphone in dogs undergoing anesthesia for cruciate repair surgery. Michael spent the summer working as a veterinary technician and in the intensive care unit at the hospital on campus. • Morganne Kraines moved to Oklahoma and began her Ph.D. in clinical psychology at Oklahoma State. • In June, Kylie Jacobs, Katie Quinn, Emma Harrington, and All Schmidt-Fellner traveled west to go hiking and “moose hunting” in Jackson Hole, Wyo., and fishing in Montana. Along the way they went to Yellowstone and saw a blond brown bear. • Sonia Mahabir started a new position at Texas A&M as an assistant coordinator with the women’s resource center. • In July, Drew Clark started a new job as an underwriter at UnitedHealthcare in Trumbull, Conn. • Solomon Gisemba is about halfway through graduate school at the School of Pharmacy in Lawrence, Kan.—and if you think Kansas is all flat, you haven’t been to Lawrence! He also participated in a 5K and surprised himself by winning a medal. He would guess it’s a Kenyan thing but thinks practice has more to do with winning than being Kenyan! • Austin Sutherland continues to live in London and will work there for the remainder of the year. He works for Unum—primarily a disability insurance company—and is in its professional development program, which means he does a series of 12- to 18-month rotations in different business areas. At the start of 2014, he’ll return to Portland, Ore., to work for FoodCorps, a national service nonprofit that connects kids to real, healthy food. She’s had a great time catching up with Cali Livingstone, Sophie Sarkar, and John Perkins on the West Coast.

2012
Sarah Janes
classnews2012@colby.edu
Happy fall 2012ers! I’m excited to report that I recently started at Concierge Services for Students, where I work with international students in the Boston area. • Arya Moallem spent the summer in Shanghai interning at SOHO China, China’s largest prime-office real estate developer. He’s since returned to rural Yunnan province to complete the second year of his Teach for China fellowship. • Julia Kafka is in Boston and has just started a new position at the Education Development Center working with the Center for the Application of Prevention Technologies. She completed her first triathlon and is still an avid Frisbee player. Julia recently moved and is living with fellow Muie Jen Beatty. • Living in Brooklyn, Andrea Birnbaum is a member of Avodah, the Jewish Service Corps, a one-year program combining social justice work, leadership development, Jewish learning, and community building. • After three cross-country road trips since graduation, spending summers on the East Coast and winters in L.A., Chelsea Sonksen and Petey Randall have settled in Santa Monica for the moment. Chelsea enjoys spending time with Jenna Gundersen, who is living her own L.A. story. • Rebecca Gonzalez-Kreisberg lives in New York City and works as a marketing assistant at an architecture project management firm. • Thanks to those who took the time to write—please continue to do so! It’s great to see our classmates starting to set down roots in new places.

Marion Daye O’Donnell McKinney ’28, Aug. 15, 2013, in Simsbury, Conn., at 106. She earned a master’s in education at Columbia and taught English and physical education in Simsbury from 1929 to 1972. Predeceased by her first and second husbands, she is survived by a daughter, a son, a stepdaughter, five grandchildren, four step-grandchildren, and eight step-great-grandchildren.

Ruth Brown Peabody ’32, Aug. 19, 2013, in Houlton, Maine, at 101. While working as a teacher at Lawrence High School in Fairfield, Maine, she met her husband, who was the Colby football coach. After raising her family in Houlton, she returned to teaching in the mid-1960s, retiring in 1973. She enjoyed cooking and playing cards, and her favorite place was East Grand Lake, where she and her husband built a cottage. Predeceased by her husband, Woody, she is survived by three sons, five grandchildren, and nine great-grandchildren.

Evelyn M. Kelley ’34, July 8, 2013, in Haverhill, Mass., at 101. She worked in accounting for H.P. Hood in Lawrence and Raytheon in Andover. A member of the Glee Club at Colby, she loved music throughout her life and was a member of her church choir. She is survived by her niece and nephew-in-law.

Doris Rose Hopengarten ’40, Aug. 19, 2013, in Newton, Mass., at 94. A longtime resident of Newton, she served as a psychologist in the Needham school system for 11 years. Predeceased by her husband, Sol, and her sister, Phyllis Rose Baskin ’39, she is survived by son Fred Hopengarten ’67, daughter Emerita Diamond Professor of Women’s Studies and Professor of French Jane Hopengarten Moss, and three grandchildren including Anne Hopengarten ’06.

Lydia Abbott Mailhot ’40, Aug. 26, 2013, in Boxford, Mass., at 95. She resided in Sudbury, Mass., for 50 years and taught Latin and English at Lincoln-Sudbury High School for 20 years. She enjoyed reading and singing and was described as a “higher authority” on grammar. Predeceased by her husband, Otis, and a daughter, she is survived by two daughters and four grandchildren.

Carl W. McGraw ’40, Sept. 24, 2013, in Webster, N.Y., at 95. He taught in Maine, then worked at Eastman Kodak before serving in the U.S. Navy in the South Pacific in World War II. He was fired upon while dropping surrender instructions a week after Hirohito’s surrender. He returned to Rochester, N.Y., and retired from Kodak in 1980 to enjoy skiing, golf, family, and friends. Predeceased by his wife, Ruth, in 1981, he is survived by five children and four grandchildren.

John E. Stevens ’42, Aug. 3, 2013, in San Diego, Calif., at 93. During World War II he was a pilot in the U.S. Army Air Forces. Flying 51 combat missions, he won the Distinguished Flying Cross, an Air Medal with three oak clusters, and battle and campaign medals. He earned an M.B.A. from National University in San Diego, where he settled and worked for Convair and other aerospace and engineering companies. Predeceased by his wife of 63 years, Lucile, he is survived by four daughters and a granddaughter.

Rita A. McCabe ’45, July 28, 2013, in West Hartford, Conn., at 90. She worked for IBM for 33 years, many of them in leadership positions, and was cited as a leader in coordinating IBM’s commitment to equal opportunity and the advancement of women. In 1979 she went into real estate. She was a Colby trustee for 16 years, beginning in 1966. She was also a trustee at Iona College in New Rochelle, N.Y. She is survived by a brother, nieces, and nephews.

Carl E. Chellquist ’48, July 3, 2013, in Reading, Pa., at 93. Raised in Boston by Swedish immigrant parents, he went to work following high school and attended Colby with his savings and scholarships. He taught in rural Maine, earned a master's degree from Columbia, and then taught in Massachusetts public schools. In retirement he volunteered, traveled, and took up amateur radio. A lifelong Republican, he enjoyed discussing politics. Predeceased by his wife of 55 years, Shirley Smith Chellquist ’48, and a daughter, he is survived by daughter Karen Chellquist ’72, two sons, and three grandsons.

Sherwood L. Jones ’48, Sept. 29, 2013, in Hartford, Conn., at 88. Know as “Woody,” he served in the U.S. Army in Europe in World War II, was a prisoner of war in 1945, and won the Combat Infantry badge. He was an underwriter for Travelers Insurance Co. in Hartford for 37 years and also worked at Johnson & Higgins and part time at Pension Consultants. He was a ski racer into his 80s. Predeceased by a son, he is survived by his wife of 59 years, Martha, two sons, two daughters, and seven grandchildren.

Hazel Huckins Merrill ’48, July 8, 2004, in Franklin, N.H., at 78. She owned and managed Merrill’s Cottages on Newfoundland Lake in Hebron and was a member of the Laconia chapter of Altrusa International. She had a son, a daughter, and three grandsons and was predeceased by her husband, John.

Donna Barter Billings ’49, Aug. 15, 2013, in Deer Isle, Maine, at 86. She and her husband, Jack, took over from her father the M.D. Joyce Company and Barter Lumber Company in Deer Isle and managed both. She is survived by a daughter, two sons, four grandchildren, and one great-grandson.

Jean Hillsen Grout ’49, Sept. 24, 2013, in Bradenton, Fla., at 85. She worked in alumni affairs at Boston University before her marriage in 1972. She and her husband spent 15 years in Morristown, N.J., where she worked at the Seeing Eye, a school for guide dogs. An active alumna, she served as chair of the Colby Alumni Council, 1974-76. Predeceased by her husband, Stuart, she is survived by a son and a granddaughter.

Ruth Clements McGill ’49, Sept. 8, 2013, in Chatsworth, Ga., at 90. She worked in a bank in California and married Vestel McGill in Georgia in 1951. She was predeceased by her husband.

A. Raymond Rogers ’49, Aug. 27, 2013, in Trenton, Maine, at 87. Prior to Colby he served as a naval airman in the Pacific at the end of World War II. His career in education included teaching, coaching, and working in administration in New England, including 14 years as superintendent at Regional School No. 7 in Winsted, Conn. He retired in 1984 and spent winters in Waterville and summers in Trenton. He enjoyed antiques and reading, and he was active in the Universalist Unitarian Church in Waterville and in the Maine Reads program. Predeceased by his parents, A. Raymond ’17 and Harriet Eaton Rogers ’19, and grandfather Harvey D. Eaton 1887, he is survived by his wife of 63 years, Joan “Jay” Smith Rogers ’49, sisters Estelle Rogers MacDonald ’39 and Martha Rogers Beach ’42, two sons, three daughters, and eight grandchildren.

Edward C. Schlick ’49, Sept. 10, 2013, in Dresden, Maine, at 85. He enlisted in the Army and served in occupied Japan before earning his bachelor’s degree at San Francisco State. He was executive secretary of the Maine Democratic Party from 1961 to 1966, founded a consulting firm, and was an assistant to Maine governors Curtis and Longley. An environmental activist, he helped run the campaign that closed Maine Yankee nuclear power plant, and he remained active in causes into his 80s. Predeceased by two wives, he is survived by a son, three daughters, eight grandchildren, and 11 great-grandchildren.

Richard H. King ’50, July 5, 2013, in Albuquerque, N.M., at 84. He played basketball and football and was a member of Delta Upsilon. Upon graduating, he served in the U.S. Army in Korea from 1950 to 1953 and then worked for the CIA for 25 years. He enjoyed singing in a barbershop chorus and searching for artifacts with his metal detector. He is survived by his wife of 41 years, Julianne.

William A. Gelotte ’51, Sept. 11, 2013, in Gilford, N.H., at 86. He served in the Navy during World War II and was president and CEO of Claus Gelotte Camera Stores. He also was a founding partner for the Bank of New Hampshire Pavilion at Meadowbrook Farm. He was a fly-fisherman and a sports enthusiast. Predeceased by a son, he is survived by his wife of 61 years, Ellen Kenerson Gelotte ’50, one son, two daughters, and seven grandchildren.

John “Jack” Keough ’51, July 28, 2013, in Bothell, Wash., at 85. He graduated from Columbia Law School in 1953, moved to Washington State, and worked with several law firms in Seattle and Kirkland, Wash., before founding Keough and Mallett in the late 1970s. In his retirement he enjoyed cruises, the theater, and writing science fiction. Predeceased by his wife of 30 years, Bess, and his former spouse, Joy Delong ’51, he is survived by his daughter, two sons, six grandchildren, and a great-grandson.

James W. Reynolds ’51, M.D., July 25, 2013, in Long Beach, Calif., at 84. He earned his M.D. at Tufts Medical School and served six years in the Air Force Medical Corps before accepting a position in the pathology group at Memorial Hospital of Long Beach, where he spent 25 years as a surgical pathologist. He is survived by his wife of nearly 60 years, Mildred Thornhill Reynolds ’53, four daughters, a son, and 10 grandchildren.

Nancy Jane Webber Thompson ’51, Jan. 25, 2013, in Orlando, Fla., at 83. She taught elementary school in Massachusetts. Predeceased by her husband, L. Richard Thompson ’51, she is survived by daughter Laurice Thompson Lee ’74 and son Peter L. Thompson ’76.
Sherwin “Sonny” Welson ’51, Aug. 5, 2013, in West Hartford, Conn., at 84. An Army veteran of the Korean War, he was president of B. Welson and Co., a button and belt manufacturer started by his father. In the 1960s the company made liquid-cooled suits for astronauts. He is survived by his wife of 59 years, Elinor, two daughters, seven grandchildren, and one great-grandchild.

Paul A. Wescott ’53, Aug. 13, 2013, in Scarborough, Maine, at 81. A graduate of NYU Law School, where he was an editor of the law review, he practiced law in New York, Pittsburgh, and Portland, Maine. In a second career he was CEO of Howell Laboratories in Bridgton, Maine, from 1977 to 2011. He was a trustee at the University of New England, which awarded him an honorary doctor of laws degree. Predeceased by former spouse Eloise Larned Petrlik ’55 and a granddaughter, he is survived by his wife of 34 years, Peggy, three sons, a daughter, three stepdaughters, a stepson, and 14 grandchildren.

Dabney T. Martin III ’54, Dec. 19, 2012, in Jefferson County, Ky., at 81. He served in the Navy in the Korean War before attending college, and he earned his degree at Merrimack College. He led human resources departments at a hospital and a rehabilitation center in Pennsylvania and maintained an interest in theater, antique automobiles, and antiques. Predeceased by a daughter, he is survived by three daughters, a son, four grandchildren, and a great-grandson.

Albert J. Languet Jr. ’55, Oct. 5, 2013, in Belgrade, Maine, at 86. He enlisted in the merchant marine in 1945 and later the Marine Corps. He returned to Maine, graduated from Coburn Classical Institute, attended Colby, and established a successful masonry contracting firm in Belgrade. He was a member of the school board and was a Belgrade selectman. He is survived by his wife of 66 years, Joyce, six children including Albert Languet III ’88, and many grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

David Bruce McComb ’55, Aug. 23, 2013, in Salem, Mass., at 79. He earned an M.A. from Columbia and had a long career as a bond analyst and bond manager at Standard & Poor’s and at Boston Safe and Trust Co. He later retired from the EPA, where he had worked in hazardous waste services. He was physically active and an avid fan of Boston teams. He is survived by three sons and five grandchildren.

Joseph A. Perham ’55, Aug. 28, 2013, in West Paris, Maine, at 80. He earned advanced degrees in English and education from the University of Maine and never missed a day of teaching in his 26 years at Paris High School, Leavitt Institute, and Oxford Hills High School, where he served as head of the English department. A humorist and storyteller, he wrote, produced, and performed 17 albums of Maine humor and folklore and received the Broderson Award for his radio commercials for the Maine Office of Tourism. He was also a Universalist lay preacher and 50-year member of the Masonic Granite Lodge of West Paris. Predeceased by his brother Sidney D. Perham ’56, he is survived by his wife of 59 years, Peg, a daughter, three sons, seven grandchildren, and nine great-grandchildren.

John B. Philbrook ’55, Aug. 20, 2013, in Marblehead, Mass., at 80. He had an aviation career that spanned more than 40 years, including 10 years with the U.S. Air Force and 30 years with American Airlines. In retirement he served as director of operations at Beverly Airport and flew charters. He is survived by his wife of 40 years, Sylvia, three daughters including Patricia Philbrook Levine ’82, three sons, 13 grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren.

Robert S. Leavitt ’56, Sept. 16, 2012, in Massachusetts at 78. A 46-year resident of Reading, Mass., he started in a three-year business training program at General Electric after graduation and retired from GE in 1990. He was a model locomotive engineer and an accomplished pianist, preferring jazz. He is survived by his wife of 57 years, Nancy, five children, and nine grandchildren.

Barbara Hunter Pallotta ’59, Oct. 5, 2013, in Fort Myers, Fla., at 75. She earned a master of arts degree in liberal studies at Ramapo College at 64, a source of great pride for her and her family. She enjoyed golf and tennis, but reading was her real pleasure. She is survived by her husband of 53 years, Jack Pallotta ’59, two sons, a daughter, and six grandchildren.

Katherine Niles Roy ’59, Oct. 3, 2013, in West Bath, Maine, at 75. She worked in hospital laboratories in Washington, D.C., and Portland, Maine. She enjoyed gardening, rock hounding, skiing, and sailing with her family. She is survived by her husband of 56 years, Laurent “Larry” Roy ’57, three daughters, a son, and 11 grandchildren.

Theodore C. Lockhart ’61, July 24, 2013, in New London, N.H., at 75. He earned a master’s in international relations and was commissioned as a U.S. Navy officer in 1962. He retired as a rear admiral in 1993 after 32 years of service aboard ships and in Washington, D.C., Guantanamo Bay, Annapolis, Rhode Island, Italy, and Puerto Rico. He is survived by his wife of 51 years, Carolyn Webster Lockhart ’60, a son, a daughter, and four grandchildren. He died after two years of living with the challenges of ALS.

Craig B. Malsch ’62, Aug. 8, 2012, in Culver City, Calif., at 71. He worked in sales and the textile industry. He was predeceased by his father, Irving Malsch ’33.

Robert R. Spencer ’63, Aug. 3, 2013, in Jackson, Wyo., at 73. He attended Colby and graduated from the University of Hartford. He was a special agent for Lloyds of London in Liberia before settling in the West. He earned his pilot’s license at 19 and remained a lifelong aviator. An entrepreneur, he founded and/or owned a half dozen companies, several related to water resources. He is survived by his wife, Margy, two stepsons, and four grandsons.

Arthur W. Beveridge ’65, Aug. 7, 2013, in Falls Church, Va., at 70. A popular musician in Springfield, Va., he led bands, sang, performed on trumpet, bass guitar, and keyboards, and taught music in schools. He was a senior master and instructor at the U.S. Tae Kwon Do College. He is survived by his wife of 29 years, Vundee Vunlikul, and a son.

Rhoda Goldstein Freeman ’65, Sept. 12, 2013, in Scarborough, Maine, at 70. She earned a master’s degree at NYU and taught in New York City before marrying and living around the country. She and her husband operated a packing and shipping store in Brunswick for 15 years before moving to Florida, where she was area director for the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention. She transferred her directorship to Maine when they returned to the state seven years ago. Predeceased by a son, she is survived by her husband, Bob, a son, and a granddaughter.

David G. Erdmann ’66, Oct. 7, 2013, in Winter Park, Fla., at 69. He earned master’s degrees from Brown and SUNY-Albany and was dean of admissions and enrollment management at Rollins College in Florida, a position he had held for 29 years. Before that he served at Trinity Pawling School, Albany Academy, and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. He died while fly-fishing. He is survived by his wife of 48 years, Sue, and a daughter.

D. Wayne Winters ’66, Aug. 29, 2013, in New Haven, Conn., at 69. At Colby he was a member of Zeta Phi. He earned his J.D. at Boston College and owned Winters and Winters Law Firm in Cheshire, Conn. He was a member of the Farms Country Club and the Cheshire Jaycees, and he coached in the Cheshire Youth Baseball League. He is survived by his wife, Rose, two sons, and two grandchildren.

Cheryl A. Thomas ’71, July 23, 2013, in Canton, Mass., at 63. She worked for many years as a telephone service representative at Computershare. She is survived by her longtime companion Roger Osborn. She was aunt to 14 nieces and nephews and to 15 great-nieces and great-nephews.

William F. Kelleher ’72, Sept. 18, 2013, in Syracuse, N.Y., at 63. After attending Colby he earned his bachelor’s degree at UMass-Amherst. He earned a Ph.D. in cultural anthropology at Michigan and taught at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign and at Syracuse. He studied Northern Ireland, and in 2003 the University of Michigan Press published his book The Troubles in Ballybogain: Memory and Identity in Northern Ireland. He is survived by his wife of 27 years, Jo Thomas, two daughters, and his stepmother.

Kenneth Woodard Gorman ’73, July 3, 2013, in Chelmsford, Mass., at 62. He graduated from MIT’s Sloan School of Management and worked as a CPA and a consultant for most of his career. He is survived by his son, Nicholas, his sister, Janet Gorman ’76, and his brother and sister-in-law, Douglas ’73 and Cheryl Booker Gorman ’74.

Norman C. Skaggs ’77, Aug. 9, 2013, in Venice, Calif., at 58. After an injury ended his football career at Colby, he studied in Besançon, France, as a junior and returned “fluent in French and hopefully in love with the theatre,” his obituary said. He worked in film and television through the 1980s and ’90s and appeared in several movies, including Decoration Day (1990), where he played the James Gardner character’s nephew. He is survived by his wife, Mihal, and a daughter.

Glenn T. Connell ’79, July 18, 2013, in Sabattus, Maine, at 63. He built radios and telescopes in his teens and won a National Science Foundation grant at 16 to study space science. He earned a master’s at Brandeis and worked as a professor, a research scientist, a physicist, and an engineer, most recently in nuclear engineering at Portsmouth Naval Shipyard. He enjoyed playing the guitar, gardening, reading, and woodworking, and he was a master in the Masons. He is survived by his parents, a son, a daughter, and a granddaughter.

Maureen Young Kissack ’83, Aug. 14, 2013, in Dover, N.H., at 52. She taught French in Massachusetts, Maine, and New Hampshire and worked as a real estate agent. She enjoyed old movies and spending summers at the beach. She is survived by her husband of 30 years, Bruno, a daughter, a son, and her father.

Suzanna Seymour Gaeddert ’85, Sept. 17, 2013, in Surrey, England, at 50. She grew up in Saudi Arabia and earned a master of divinity degree from Fuller Theological Seminary in California. She and her husband, Barry, were pastors at the Bonhomme Presbyterian Church in St. Louis, Mo., for 16 years and lived in London for the past six years. She died after a three-and-a-half-year battle with brain cancer. She is survived by her husband, her parents, and two sons.

Michael E. Vosburg-Casey ’96, July 31, 2013, in Atlanta, Ga., at 39. He was an activist and volunteer who never worked for a salary and who protested the death penalty and the U.S. Army’s former School of the Americas at Fort Benning. After being arrested there and sentenced to 100 days in federal prison, he said he was proud to be “a prisoner of conscience.” He worked with the Jesuit Volunteer Corps, Central Presbyterian’s Central Outreach and Advocacy Center, and the Georgia Justice Project. He died of complications from colon cancer. He is survived by his wife, Amy, a daughter, and his parents.

Anthony J. Martin, Sept. 11, 2013, in Winslow, at 50. A plumber for Colby’s Physical Plant Department since 1991, he said he sought the position so he could marry Patricia O’Keefe in Lorimer Chapel, which he did in 1992. He developed friendships across a wide range of offices and departments on campus as well as with students and student athletes in particular. He is survived by his wife of 21 years, his mother, four brothers, four sisters, stepchildren, and grandchildren.

Dorothy L. Marson, Sept. 29, 2013, in Dedham, Mass., at 82. Longtime co-correspondent for the Class of ’48, she served Colby as an overseer, volunteer, and booster and received the Colby Brick Award in 1984. She is survived by her husband of 62 years, Trustee Emeritus David Marson ’48, by two daughters including Deborah Marson ’75, and by three grandchildren including Jessica McNulty ’07 and Mark McNulty ’11.