VENUS LEE—In a recent article written in response to the proposal made by Mr. Paul Krugman calling for a United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the English writer, Venetia Lee, has expressed her strong reservations about the idea. In her article, she argues that the creation of such an organization could lead to a loss of national sovereignty, as countries would be forced to cede control over their educational and cultural policies to an international body.

Lee points out that the idea of a single, multinational educational body is reminiscent of the League of Nations, which was established after World War I. She notes that the League was a failure, as it lacked the power to enforce its decisions and was unable to prevent the outbreak of World War II. Lee argues that a similar fate would await UNESCO, as it would be unable to enforce its decisions and would fail to prevent the spread of totalitarianism.

Lee also raises concerns about the potential for cultural homogenization under UNESCO. She argues that the organization would lead to a narrowing of cultural diversity, as countries would be forced to conform to a single global cultural standard.

In conclusion, Lee calls for the rejection of the proposal for UNESCO. She believes that national sovereignty is too precious to be surrendered to an international body, and that the free exchange of ideas and cultural diversity is essential to a healthy democracy.

VENUS LEE WOULD END THE WAR

ENGLISH Writer, in Strong Letter to Mme. Rosika Schwimmer, Sends Her Pen in Aid of Organized Protest of Women Against the Conflict and Attacks the Policy of the British Government for Its Part in the Great European Struggle

This is a strong endorsement of the views of all who have been moved to bring about a termination of the war, by the recognition of the humanitarian and moral claims of mankind. It was addressed to Mme. Rosika Schwimmer, who, as a woman, is entitled to express the sentiments of her sex, and to be heard. It received the support of women's organizations throughout the world, and was signed by the Women's Peace Party of the World Peace Federation, and the Women's Peace Congress of Norway.

This is a call to arms, a demand for action, a plea for peace. It is a call to everyone, to men and women, to put an end to the senseless and bloody war.

The letter is a clarion call to the world, a call to its conscience, a call to its reason. It is a call to unity, a call to brotherhood, a call to the promotion of the welfare of all nations. It is a call to the establishment of a world community, a community of peace, a community of justice.

This is a letter to the world, a letter to humanity, a letter to the future. It is a letter to the generations that will follow us, a letter to the world that we will leave behind. It is a letter to the world that we will fight for, a letter to the world that we will protect.
