DECISION OF APPEAL TRIBUNAL

#489-62
Interstate

The redetermination of June 5, 1962 found that the claimant lacked sufficient base period wage credits in two quarters to entitle him to benefits. Benefits were denied and he appealed.

APPEARANCES: Claimant by memorandum; employer.

ISSUE: Lack of sufficient wage credits.

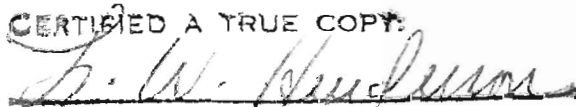

FINDINGS: The claimant was employed as an instructor at a college from which work he had become unemployed in December of 1961. He filed a claim during the benefit year beginning April 1, 1962 and though he had base period earnings of $884.00 in the calendar year 1961 he did not have earnings in excess of $100.00 in more than one quarter. It is required under the law that earnings of at least $100.00 in more than one quarter are necessary to qualify one so far as wage credits are concerned. The claimant had $64.00 in earnings during the third quarter and $820.00 in earnings during the fourth quarter of 1961. An audit of the employer's wage records showed these earnings as reported to be correct and the claimant, not having sufficient earnings in more than one quarter, does not meet the wage credit requirement of the Statute and is ineligible for benefits.

DECISION: Redetermination of June 5, 1962 affirmed. The claimant lacks sufficient wage credits in more than one quarter to qualify for benefits for the benefit year beginning April 1, 1962.

Unanimous decision of Appeal Tribunal: Ellis, Mgt.; Angus, Labor; Henderson, Chairman, DES.
