A CAREFUL comparison of this with preceding ORACLES will show that there has been in the past few years a consistent shortening of the book and crowding of the pages. Fewer full-page cuts are found, and the pictures of the Seniors are smaller and less clear. Lack of money is the cause of these economies. This year the ORACLE is handicapped by the fact that there are in college scarcely one hundred and fifty fraternity men, while in normal years the number exceeds two hundred. If the ORACLE is to be published and maintained even at its present standard, the number of fraternity men and women in Colby must increase as fast as the price of printing, engraving and binding. This proportionate increase has not been kept up in the past, and certainly cannot be looked for in the future, at least until the end of the War. The "vanishing point" is approaching. Try as we can not to be pessimistic, the outlook for an improvement in the ORACLE for the next few years is not bright. The plan now in practice is remarkably well adapted for Colby. The management can reckon almost to a book how many must be published and what the income will be.

This year we welcome to the ORACLE ASSOCIATION a new fraternity and a new sorority, Pi Delta Phi, and Phi Mu. The willing co-operation of these two new units in the publication of the ORACLE is a much needed help.

Should not the ORACLE lay more stress upon its Literary Department? During a year's work at Colby much fine work is done in the English department, and this should have recognition. Ten and more years ago the ORACLE was a literary production of no mean merit, while two years ago the sole literary contributions were two articles by the same author, supposedly humorous, but breathing a sneering contempt for Colby and Colby people.

Though it is impossible this year to publish all the articles presented, the ORACLE has tried to present a little of what Colby people are capable of producing. Diligent search fails to reveal anything written by George Watson, '17, other than a class room criticism of a recent book. Mr. Watson's literary tastes were of the highest and we present this little bit as the only example of his work to be found.

THIS YEAR we beheld what seemed to us the opening of a new era of social life at Colby. The new custom adopted by the college authorities of holding general college parties is a great success from the point of view of the student body. These good times afford the men and women an opportunity to make and enjoy the acquaintance of each other in an informal way impossible at formal social functions or smaller and more exclusive dances. The mingling of the students with the faculty is also a factor for better understanding and sympathy. Colby is almost unique in the naturalness of her democracy, and this is but another manifestation of it. The students appreciate the kindness of the college in giving these parties, and without fear of dispute the ORACLE ventures to thank President Roberts and his associates.

Colby has given her best to defend democracy against tyranny. When war was declared last spring the whole college was turned upside down. Every able-bodied man asked himself a question, not "Shall I enlist?" but "Shall I enlist or wait for the draft?" The question was quickly settled in the minds of many, and some of us have come to hate the "old ten o'clock" which has taken away from us so many, many of our dearest friends. We felt we could not bear to see them go, but we would have been ashamed to say a word in opposition. They are wearing the blue and the khaki now in every field of Uncle Sam's service, and in many a training camp, and some already are in France.

We who returned to college found ourselves depleted in numbers, but re-enforced by a fine group of Freshmen. We shall never forget that first chapel service of the year. What President Roberts said that morning was enough to stir the soul of the coldest to devotion to Colby and to our country.

Many have left us since last fall, and as this is written Colby can boast of but twenty-three Seniors in the men's division. Who knows how few it may be when these words are read?

Colby has shown herself to be in hearty co-operation with the fuel administration in saving coal. The Christmas vacation was lengthened at the expense of the Easter recess, and a new schedule has been introduced during the winter months to save coal in the early morning. The inconvenience is worth while when we realize that our saving is helping to beat the Kaiser.

A Colby graduate of last year writes, "Any man in college this year who does not improve every opportunity is a slacker."

PAUL EUGENE ALDEN, Π Δ Φ
"Deac," "Crab"

Westbrook High School, '14; Northfield Delegation, 1; Secretary Y. M. C. A., 4; Finance Committee, 3; Bible Study Committee, 2, 4; Chairman, 4; Hallowells, 3; Coach Goodwin Debate, 3; Debating Society, 2; Student Volunteer, 2, 3, 4; President, 2; Vice-President, 4; Student Council, 4.

Paul's great failing is pie and his one ambition is to get money enough to buy all the lemon pie he can eat. He came to college a misogynist with many preconceived ideas, but they soon went where such ideas usually go and he was so thoroughly converted that the long and short of it is the most frequent advertisement of Colby's matrimonial bureau. In fact he is the most consistent and thoroughgoing exponent of the art of fussing that Colby has ever seen, and his degree should be B.F. instead of B.A. Paul ought to stand a good chance of getting into heaven as he has crossed the Jordan so early in life. For the last three years he has been rooming with Tracy's miscellaneous belongings, thereby acquiring a patience, fortitude, and saintliness that will be of the utmost value when he goes to preach to the heathen. Best of luck, old boy!

CARLETON MOORE BAILEY, O Θ
"Bouke"

Livermore Falls High School, '13; Dramatics, 2, 3; President Dramatic Club, 4; Financial Committee Y. M. C. A., 3; Manager ORACLE, 3; Druids.

"Tempus" surely does "mutat" things and also people and it has spent a generous amount of energy on the lad from Livermore Falls. "Bouke's" idea of heaven used to be a place free from rats and mice and populated with fair damsels, but he has changed that idea and now associates heaven with Fords and something to eat. We venture to predict, "Bouke," that when you go back to the "ould counthry" you will gain fame as a revolutionist or a boss politician.

MERRILL ALBERT BIGELOW, Δ Y
"Colonel"

Cony High School, '14; Chess Club, 1, 2, 3, 4; Democratic Club, 2, 3; Executive Committee, 3; Tennis Squad, 3, 4; Senior Class Nominating Committee; Associate Editor of ORACLE, 3; Honor Roll, 1, 2, 3, 4.

This young man hails from the Capital City of Maine. As a student we have got to hand it to him; he is in a class all by himself. However, physically he is no Hercules, and some one remarked that there wasn't room enough on his arm for a vaccination scar. His outside interest has been in managing the R. R. Y. M. C. A.

Good Luck, Colonel, we will miss you in many ways.

HOWARD GILKEY BOARDMAN, Δ Y
"Boardy"

Islesboro High School, '14; Dramatic Club, 1, 2, 3, 4; Manager, 3; President, 4; Sophomore Declamation; Secretary, I. P. A., 2; Assistant Manager Baseball, 3; Class Secretary, 3; Finance Committee, Y. M. C. A., 3; Honor Roll, 3; Class Treasurer, 4; Press Club, 4; Mystics; Druids.

When Boardy was a Freshman he was what might be called a model boy, but he soon learned new habits and became real reckless. We thought the climax was reached when he learned to play pool, but such was not the case, as he was heard one night quoting some of Hoyle's rules. He is a good student and a beautiful actress, but as far as we know he is innocent of having any relations with the feminine sex.

Never mind, Boardy, some day as office boy to the Mayor of Dark Harbor we will expect to hear big things from you.

RUDOLPH EDWARD CASTELLI, Z Ψ
"General Cadorna," "Cass," "Schopenhauer"
Chester H. S., '14; Bellevue Hospital; Wrestling Team, 2; Democratic Club, 2.

PLUG PLUG. Plug, plug, always going like a Ford. Since Cass studied Schopenhauer's views, he is more pessimistic than ever. He's forgotten the farm and likes to sleep over mornings. He practices enough at bowling but what scores does he run up? Keep warmed up, Cass. If Italy needs help in the Alps, the general will be there to help them. We wonder if Cass will miss his ram pasture ravings about co-ords when he is doctoring some poor human derelict. We hope so. Hurray for the state of Connecticut!

JAMES HUGH DUNN, Δ Y
"Jimmie"

Scituate High School, '14; Democratic Club, 2, 3; Baseball Squad, 2; Druids.

Tunked again! Forget it, Jimmie, we can't all be Canfields. Jimmie can always be found where there is anything worth while going on. He is the cause of many a rough-house, in which his abilities as a prize-fighter are of great value to him. We do not know what career he will follow in the future, but if determination is of any value we know he will be successful. The best wishes of the Class of Nineteen Hundred and Eighteen go with you.

GEORGE EDWIN FERRELL, A T Ω

"Red"

Fitchburg High School, '12; Worcester Academy, '14; Student Council, 3; Vice-President Chemical Society, 4; Track, 1, 2, 3; Y B; Mystics.

"Red" dropped off the train here one day late in the fall while on his way to the U. of M. He met a couple of the boys here and fell in love with the place; so he is with us now. His pleasant smile and happy disposition have made him a friend with every student. "Red" not only fell in love with the place, but also something in the place and it is likely he will become a leading merchant of Waterville. We wish you luck, "Red," in whatever you do!

CLYDE MILBREY FLINT, Φ Δ Θ

"Skin"

Feller Institute, Grand Ligne, Quebec; Γ Γ Σ.

Here's to the only "Jack of all Trades." "Skin" has them all stopped a mile for vocational training. He's a plumber, electrician, painter, fireman, chemist, doctor, and when it comes to social parties he's a master of ceremonies. Fred Short says that he is the handiest man to have in College. When Short loses a door, wrench, hammer or anything less than a college dormitory, he looks up Flint at once, and sure enough there is Flint sitting on the floor with the lost articles around him manufacturing a patent clock or self-playing mandolin.

Besides a master of handicraft "Skin" is also a valuable source of information. His never-failing advice to Freshmen wins for him a place of respect in the eyes of every newcomer. Well, Clyde, beware of French-speaking people and you will surely succeed. We expect to hear from you later either as an alderman or as nursemaid for Friday Ladd's children.

ROY MITCHELL HAYES, A T Ω

North Berwick High School, '10; Colby Ex-'14; Captain Freshman Track Team; President Athletic Association, 4; Vice-President Senior Class; Vice-President Y. M. C. A., 3; Second Lieutenant, Colby Military Company, 4; Hallowell Prize Speaker, 4; Epicureans.

Roy began his course here as a "fusser supreme" but at last he met his fate and fell with a smash; when he gets up, he'll be handcuffed for life. These last two years, he has spent most of his hours in the book store, accepting with a gleeful smile all our cash. The long evenings he has spent in a neighboring town. His ambition is to enter the army and if marching were a qualification we are sure he would succeed, for his daily (and nightly) trips to Vassalboro (10 miles) would qualify him to out-last Uncle Sam's best trained soldier. You have made a success of business in college, Roy, and our best wishes go with you in the business of life.

ROSS STANLEY HOLT, Δ K E
 "Switchel"

Clinton High School, '14; Band, 1, 2, 3; Student Council, 4; Class Secretary, 4; Druids; Epicureans.

There was a man from Clinton town,
 And he was wondrous wise.
 He bought himself a corn-cob pipe,
 Which he deemed quite a prize.
 The pipe he found would fain go out.
 With all his might and main
 Did "Switchel" some Prince Albert buy
 And light 'er up again.

For nigh onto four years the boys at the Deke House have left calls with "Switchel" and he has never yet failed to get a man up in time for class. "Switchel," what will they do when you leave to run the Clinton General Store?

ROGER LAURENCE MARBLE, K Σ

Brockton High School, '12; Brown, ex-'16; Student Council, 4.

Marble is usually most conspicuous by his absence from classes. He has an alibi, however, for poor car service and an unreasonable weather man is a combination hard to beat.

EUGENE BLISS MARRINER, O Θ
 "Bliss," "Hank"

Camden High School, '13; Dramatic Club, 2; Mystics; Band, 2, 3, 4; Secretary Student Council, 4; Senior Commencement Committee, 4.

Behold the prodigy from Searsmont. His abilities are many and various and range all the way from being able to drive an automobile, whether or not it has an engine, to managing successfully a steam laundry, running furnaces between times, and fooling Dr. Little into giving him 100's on quizzes. At times he is inclined to be a bit sarcastic but that is offset by his good humor when he receives a letter from M—. We feel safe in saying, Bliss, that your success in whatever you choose is assured and we shall think of you often.

HARVARD EDGAR MOOR, Z Ψ
"Luce," "Ed."

Ellsworth H. S., '14; German Prize, 3; Student Council, 4; ΓΓΣ; Chess Club; Episcureans, 4.

Luce never misses a meal. He has two failings, cards and dancing. The Ellsworth Bank Trustees are trying to persuade "Ed" to run for Sheriff of Hancock County. Luce's big shoulders would ward off any bull. You are all right, Luce, anyway, and when you are in Tech, look us up. Mind your failings.

HERBERT LEE NEWMAN, O Θ
"Herbie," "Parson"

Danforth H. S.: Glee Club, 1, 2, 3, 4; First Prize, Hamlin Prize Speaking; Intercollegiate Debating Team, 2, 3; Murray Prize Debate; Sophomore Declamation; Hollowell Prize Speaking; Track Team, 2; Football, 3, 4; Oracle Board, 3; Religious Meetings Committee Y. M. C. A., 3; President Y. M. C. Genius is uncertain but the steadfast qualities possessed by "Herbie" surely are not prophetic of any great uncertainty. You will linger long in our memories and we expect to see your fame outshine even Billy Sunday's. "By jolly, boys" we will all come down to Rockport to visit you when you get settled.

So many nicknames have been given this witty and humorous species that we are at a loss just what to term him. He takes great delight in pestering us with his stale jokes and incurable humor. Learning cow-boy stunts is his specialty. As an athlete he excels in pole-vaulting. He is a superb actress, a good student, and a public speaker of no mean repute.

Skipper comes to us from the coast where he makes a business of catching lobsters and fish. Just to prove what a really good fisherman he is, Skipper went on a little fishing trip last Thanksgiving, and baited his line with his frat pin. He not only got a bite instantly but made a record catch. However, he says the wedding cigars will not be smoked until he helps Uncle Sam plant the Kaiser in Prexy's back yard. Skipper is a hard plugger and usually gets what he goes after, and we expect to see him Mayor of Matinicus before long. Best of luck, old boy!

John's course is an example of perseverance. It has been just seven years since he entered Colby for the first time. His course has been interspersed with teaching and various other work. His only fault is his moderation. He is continually reminding us of "how they ran things here seven years ago." Yet he is a "plugger" and if he doesn't make Phi Beta Kappa, it won't be his fault. He is a home-lover and his greatest wish is to become "Mayor of Oxford." Our best wishes to you, John, wherever you go.

Although he never claimed baseball as a profession, this little man has doubtless batted in more leagues than Charley Herzog or Joe Tinker.

Next to Foss Hall, music was foremost in his heart. How he could tickle those ivories. For four years the public of Waterville delighted in hearing this little pianist ramble over the keys. With a winning smile always accompanying him, applause never failed. We all regret that on his entering the army, Colby lost such a loyal son on the eve of his graduation, but wherever he goes we rest satisfied that he will make a name for himself and his college, and we hope that many branch chapters of C. P. C. L. will be placed to his credit.

"Robbie" is a very remarkable person. He has made his mark in various fields of activity. He is noted for his marvelous deep bass voice in singing and his lugubrious demeanor in the presence of the fairer ones; and now in his last year he spoils his blameless college career by cutting Prexy's classes—twice a week—and Robbie a monitor! Later we expect to hear from Dr. Hawkins much.

And still their wonder grew,
That one small head

As an example of perseverance and unbeatable determination this man outshines all others. He can take more courses than you can count on your fingers and be a winner in them all. There is so much to be written concerning this distinguished gentleman that we regret the limited space allotted us. His chief enjoyment in life is popping corn and fooling around the fireside. Early in his course he showed great possibilities as a society man, but now his pin has departed and he has a regular schedule.

Four years ago this silent taciturn Aroostocrat came to college. But in all that time college life has failed to give him anything worth while to talk about and he still goes around with the air of vainly seeking for something worthy of speech. He has specialized in Geology and has been especially interested in twinning and knows more about telling twins apart than even Dr. Little himself. Trace has made a very efficient Matron of Hedman Hall and we shall miss him, especially when the lights go out.

This quiet and unassuming lad does not aspire to wear a crown, but prefers to plug along in his own humble way. How he has managed to pass his courses and keep all of his pressing engagements is a mystery to us. Recently he developed a fascination for fishing and the poor "fish" bit. We do not know what he will do after graduation, but doubtless he will find his place in the universe in due time. Who knows? He may become Mayor of North Vassalboro sometime.

Warwick High School, ex-'14; Whitman High School, '14; Baseball Squad, 1, 2, 3; Mystics.

We all think a lot of Bob. He's never too pushed to refuse to help out in advice, consolation or hard work. He is a man of very steady habits, especially in the social world. Since Kolseth graduated he has been able to be boss in his room and thanks to him it's always clean or being cleaned. If Bob admired himself as much as we do he'd be a fat head, but on the contrary he's modest, that is, except towards Freshmen.

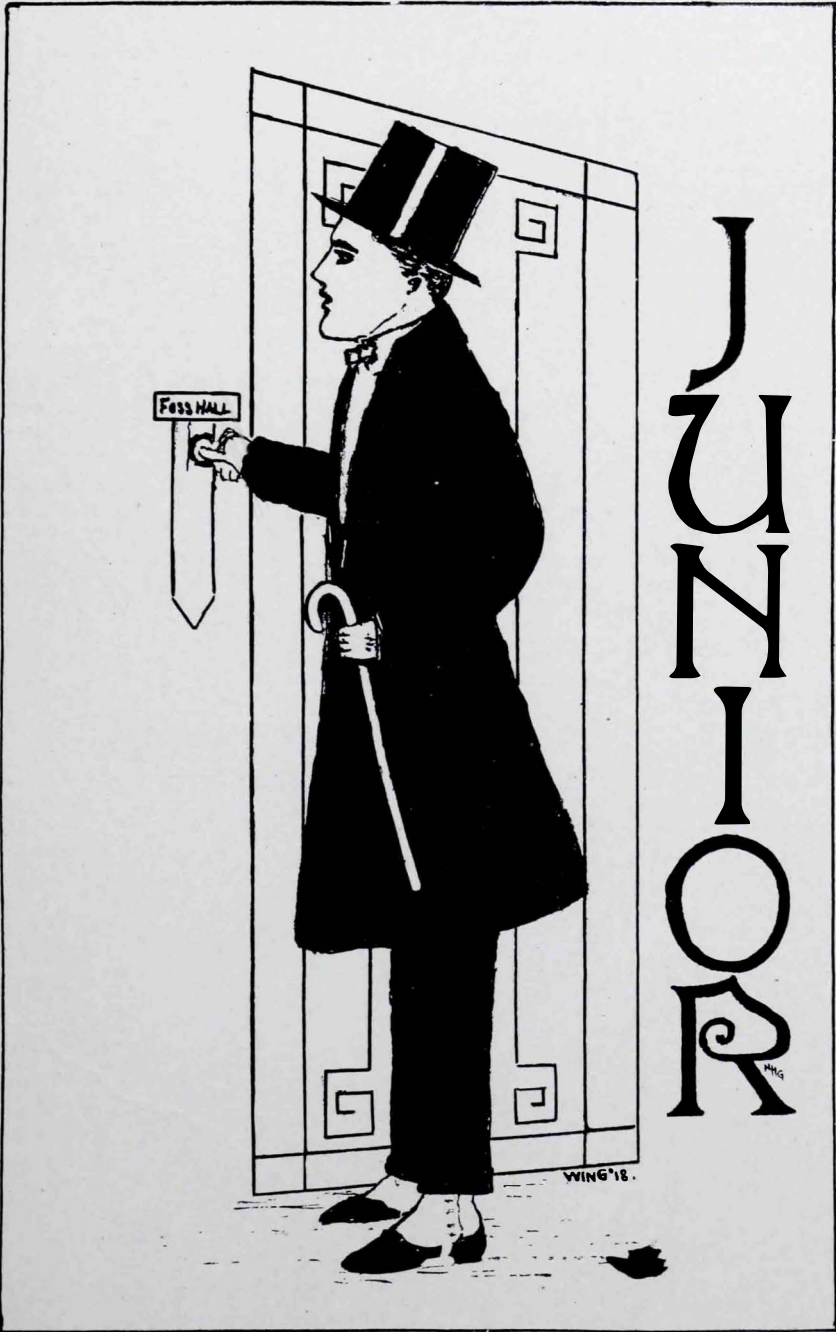

Senior Class History

Men

WE OF 1918 entered college over a hundred strong, strong enough to cause cold shivers to creep up and down the backs of the Sophomores. What little they dared to do to us was poorly done, and we succeeded in holding our Freshman banquet in peace, protected by the arm of the law. When we were Sophomores, however, what a pitiful sight the Freshmen made!

Men talented in every line entered with us, athletes, musicians, debaters, ministers, social lions, and scholars. We have contributed more than our share to the success of Colby every time she has been called upon. We have come to love Colby by working for her. We hope that our love may be of the kind that persists, and we intend to go forth from college imbued with the idea of helping old Colby.

In our Junior year our country called, and 1918 was quick to answer. More than half of that Junior Class is now with the colors. Our best has gone, and many of us are soon to follow. When we are to return no one can prophesy, but we know that every Colby man working for Uncle Sam carries Colby in his heart.

Junior History

WE OF THE Class of 1919, in looking back over our varied accomplishments, are satisfied that we have established a record that may indeed be looked upon with envious eyes. We have adhered to the traditions of our Alma Mater with a true spirit of love and patriotism and we have yelled ourselves hoarse at the football and baseball games.

During our stage of verdancy, we cheerfully accepted the mandates of Phi Chi, not, however, without some slight misgivings that we were being treated somewhat unjustly. This feeling soon passed, however, and the end of our Freshman year found us complacently viewing the numerals of 1919 on the gym and wondering why we were not allowed to run the college.

As Sophomores, with painstaking care and our ever-present hatred of innocuous desuetude, we at once proceeded to awaken the Freshmen from their torpid lethargy and to instil into their puerile minds a sense of propriety and duty. In this, as in all our other ventures, we were as successful as any highly trained organization could be when forced to labor with raw, crude material.

On the gridiron and the diamond we have proved ourselves worthy of the name of our Alma Mater and we rest content in the knowledge that as "tempus fugit et mutat," our true worth will be realized and appreciated.

We have lost quite a number of our members who have answered the call of Old Glory, but as we proceed along the last stretch of our collegiate journey with depleted ranks, may the banner of 1919 ever wave on high!

Sophomore History

Proud and determined
Here we stand;
In all others' troubles.

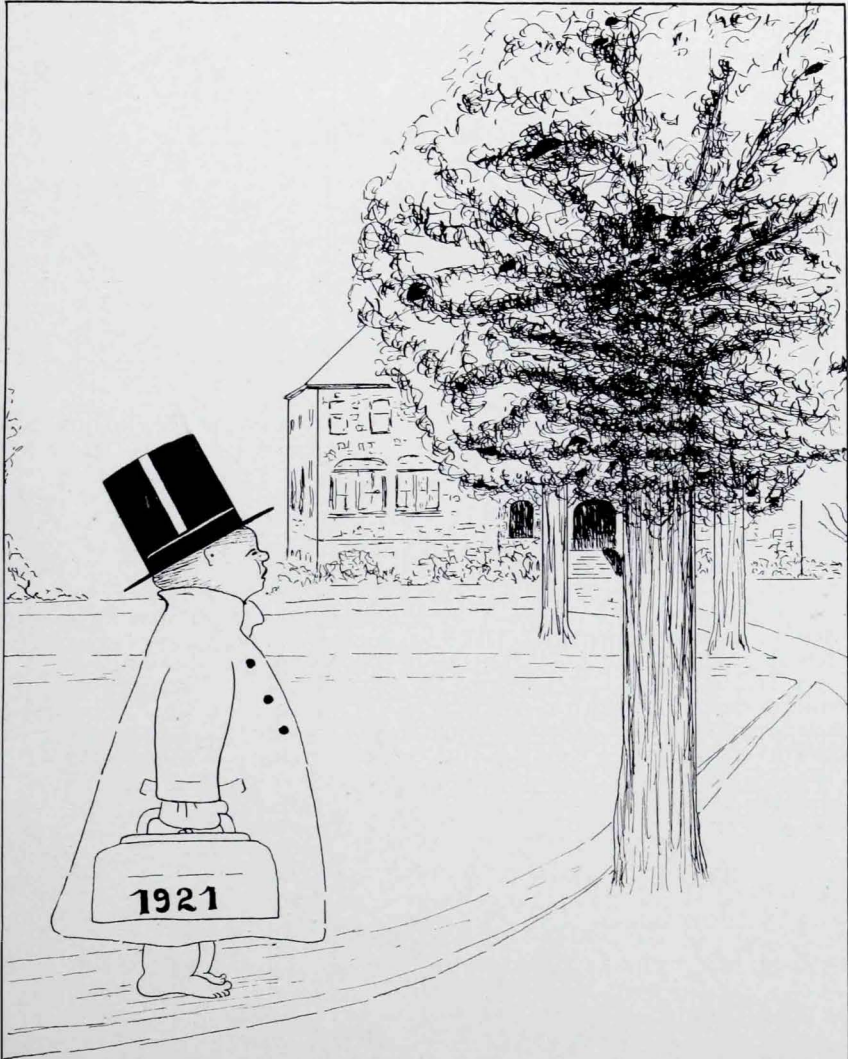

Can give a helping
Hand, to mortals great
In choosing their fate.

Conservative, as the times demand, we only came out of the fracas on Bloody Monday with crimson stains upon our hands, whereas they should have been gory with blackish maroon tints. The Class of 1919 when they finished hazing us, had the royal blue blood upon their tender fingers the year before.

War has claimed a large portion of our class, but those still present have assumed the motto "Live and let live," and we have attended strictly to our college work. (Sic, Editor.) Peace and tranquility are the two conditions for which we have striven, and we are determined they shall exist in this college if we have to fight through our whole course to bring them about. We are making our patriotic motto, "Do well what you are doing."

Short fears us, so why should we worry about the "Powers that be." Jim Pray at the Silver has learned not to bother us when we applaud or mock his maidens beautiful who often bedeck his well-worn stage. Why should he? Look who we are!! 1920!!! Even the traffic cops of Waterville know each and every one of us to speak to.

And now in the realm of sophomoric dignity our bright record shines resplendent, as a beacon light to future generations. Our social relations have been so acceptable during the past year that the Faculty, with the approval of Foss Hall, rise up and call us blessed.

Freshman History

WHEN COLBY'S children came back to their mother's apron-strings last fall, a new group was found, composed of the product of preparatory school civilization. After tolerating their selfish pride and pompous ways for a few days, we celebrated Bloody Monday. Then they became acquainted with Phi Chi and learned what was to be expected of them as real Colby men. Truly, it was a hard lesson, but the results were very satisfactory.

Their class history contains many failures to follow old Colby traditions which are held so highly. The reason for this is not known, except that they preferred to plug along in their own innocent ways. They did not hold the annual banquet or play the baseball game with the Sophomores, and likewise the grape rush was forgotten. They have been a quiet class and have yet to win their first laurel, but they are satisfied. They can boast of having been spanked less than any other class in the history of the college. This fact is due to two reasons: their modesty and our slowness.

However, as a Sophomore, the author hopes that they will present a strong and rugged front to all enemies. We wish them to be true and loyal Colby men. May Colby be benefited by their presence, and they by her nurture!

DORIS PERKINS ANDREWS, A A II

"Dottie"

Oxford High School '13; Y. W. C. A., 1, 2, 3, 4; Hamlin Prize Reading, 1; Class Vice-President, 3; Ivy Day, 3; Dramatics, 3; ORACLE Board, 3; Class Historian, 3; Alumnae Marshal, 3; Literary Society, 3, 4; Colbiana Board, 4; Echo Board, 4; Le Cercle Français, 4; K A.

Did you ever happen in when Dottie was writing a theme or composing "light verse"? And did she not say "Gosh!!!" at least once during the process? Her speed in writing up overdue poems and collecting news for the Echo is excelled only by the dexterity with which she makes connections at Danville Junction. She has dignity enough to impress the Freshmen and a glorious sense of humor. The best of good wishes go with you, Dottie, and may your life be one beautiful adventure.

ETHEL MILDRED ARMSTRONG, Σ K

"Armstrong"

Somerville English High School, Mass., '10; Y. W. C. A., 1, 2, 3, 4; Bible Study Committee, 3, 4; Glee Club, 1, 2, 3, 4; College Choir, Leader, 4; College Girls' Orchestra, Leader, 4; Basketball, 1, 2, 3, 4; Captain, 1; Literary Society, 3, 4.

Ethel has two hobbies—one, cats, the other, dogs. If you don't believe this just go to her room and consult her picture gallery. Once, she begged, borrowed or stole a cat and kept it in her room to cheer her in the dull hours. But the cat couldn't stand Foss Hall dainties, so he took his departure and Ethel has never been the same since. Ethel's musical ability has made her famous. She is a born leader and is in her element when conducting either an orchestra or choir and believe us, she can do both, with success. In fact, if we want anything well done, we go to Ethel. She is a good friend to everybody.

MARGUERITE TODD BRADBURY, Φ M

"Rita," "Peggy"

Newburyport High School, '14; Y. W. C. A., 1, 2, 3, 4; Glee Club, 1; Woman's League, 1, 2, 3, 4; Fressen Essen Freshmen; Literary Society, 3, 4; Mandolin Club, 3, 4; Leader Mandolin Club, 4; Pan-Hellenic Council, 4; House Chairman, 4; Le Cercle Français, 4.

"Rita" has had three distinct aims in life so far: To pull A's in all her courses, to discover her exact relationship to William the Conqueror, and to keep the inhabitants of Palmer House from disturbing the peace after ten o'clock. Meanwhile she finds time to go to the "movies;" punch meal tickets and play the mandolin. Here's good luck to you, "Peggy," and great success as a Math. prof.

HELENE BRADBURY BUKER, Σ K

A.; Bible Study Committee, 2; Secretary, 3; Treasurer, 4; Glee Club, 1, 2; Second German Prize, 1; Sophomore Declamation, Second Prize; Student Government Committee, 3; Chairman of Junior Play Committee; Colbiana Board, 4; Literary Society, 3, 4; Delegate to Silver Bay; Fressen Essen Freshmen; K A.

When you want anything done, send for Helene. She loves to "do things," to quote from her own lips, and whether the task be carpentering or cooking, she is equal to the occasion. For two years she has made desserts for Butty, a position which calls for genius. At basketball she is the terror of her opponent. Her executive ability is unexcelled.

EUNICE ELIZA CHASE, Δ Δ Δ

"Chase"

Skowhegan High School, '14; Y. W. C. "Chase" is a young lady of very decided opinions although many are qualified by what "Bab said." She possesses all the characteristics of a natural born leader and whenever she starts anything it is bound to go through. "Chase" has thought seriously of teaching in Hawaii. We expect that she will return with a ukelele, her hair done in the "latest," and with numerous little Hawaiian maids.

"Phil"

New Bedford High School, '14; Y. W. C. A., 1, 2, 3, 4; Glee Club, 1, 2; Ivy Day, 1, 3; Class President, 2; Association News Committee, 3; Delegate to Silver Bay, 3; Mandolin Club, 3, 4; Literary Club, 3, 4; Y. W. C. A. Cabinet, 4; President Pan-Hellenic, 4; K A.

"Did you say bitter-sweets?" piped a drawly little voice from the other end of the room. "Somebody did or else I dreamed it," drawled the same voice. Her dreams are perfect marvels of sugar creations and she has a habit of talking in her sleep, so her roommate suffered no shock from this sudden outburst in the middle of the night. Phil simply lives on bitter-sweets and gossip and thrives on them, too. Nevertheless, Phil, these tastes and tendencies may disappear sometime when you have finally realized your heart's desire, "to be old."

GLADYS VIOLA CRAFT, Σ K

"Glad"

Medford High School, '14; Basketball, 1, 2, 3, 4; Captain, 3; Y. W. C. A. Committee, 2, 3; Cabinet, 4; Glee Club, 1, 2, 3, 4; Dramatics, 3; Literary Society, 3, 4; College Choir, 2, 4; Orchestra, 4; Class Secretary, 4; Fresen Essen Freshmen.

"Glad" is rightly named—a jolly, clever, comfortable friend. Besides being "Butty's" confidante and assistant, she makes an ideal Santa Claus. Always ready for a good time, she can play tennis, skate, walk or do anything you say. Even the birds are silent when the clear notes of her cornet are heard. Surely, "Glad," even if your ambition is to grow tall, we know you are talented in more ways than one and may good luck follow you.

ALTA ESTELLE DAVIS, Δ Δ Δ

Maine Central Institute, '14; Y. W. C. A., 1, 2, 3, 4; Cabinet, 3, 4; Literary Society, 3, 4; K. A.

Here is the girl who pulls the A's! As a loyal member of the Y. W. C. A. Alta is ready to help in every good cause. Ever deliberate, weighing the pros and cons, she never fails to arrive at the best conclusions. Alta aspires to oratorical heights, never deigning to speak in monosyllables.

FLORENCE EATON, X Ω

"Happy"

Waterville High School, '13; Y. W. C. A.; Glee Club; Woman's League; X Γ Θ.

The "Lady of 55 Silver," who cures our chronic attacks of Foss Hallitis by luring us to her home where she comfortably plants us in cushioned chairs about the open fire, meanwhile feasting our souls with Red Seal records, and pampering our tortured palates with hot chocolate and cake, or some other fairy delicacy. A lady of many moods, she just mothers us all and then,—presto! From beneath a demure exterior she reveals a spirit that is most worthy of the name of "jolly good fellow."

ELIZABETH ROSE FERNALD, Δ Δ Δ

"Beth"

Lincoln Academy '13; Y. W. C. A., 1, 2, 3, 4; Dramatics, 3; Literary Society, 3, 4; K A.

"Huh, Huh." That little chuckle which comes like an echo when the rest of us are through, will always remind us of "Beth." She is never hurried, nor ruffled in temper, and has the disposition of a saint (usually). She is an enthusiastic member of the Anti-fat Club—but all in vain.

ANNIE VIOLET FRENCH, X Ω

"Vi'let"

Winthrop High School, '13; Y. W. C. A. Social Committee, 2; Social Service Committee, 3; Chairman Social Service Committee, 4; Manager, Glee Club, 3; Colbiana Board, 4; Class Dances, 1, 2, 3; Literary Society, 4; X Γ Θ.

Vi'let is the personification of encyclopedic knowledge, and so is invaluable to curious Foss Hall inmates, since her good-nature equals her fund of information. In fact, she will insist on telling you the entire history of anyone you may mention. So, whether it be the date of the seventh-from-the-last Faculty Tea, or the middle name of the President of China, "go ask Vi'let," and be informed. We have rather regretted her traitorous loyalty to Maine, but have forgiven her since this changed to an absorbing interest in aviation.

NORMA HOIT GOODHUE, Σ K

"Normie"

Fort Fairfield High School, '12; Y. W. C. A.; Association News and Poster Committee, 2; Social Service Committee, 3; Class Treasurer, 1; Class Dances, 1, 2; Glee Club, 1, 2, 3, 4; College Choir, 1, 2; House Committee, 3, 4; House Chairman, 3, 4; Art Editress of ORACLE, 4; President of Aroostook Club, 4; Literary Society, 4; K A.

Norma does not like her nickname, but it persists in Foss Hall just the same. We would not attempt to name all of her virtues, but she is true blue and we hate to lose her.

First of all, she is an artist as this book can prove. What we shall do for posters and favors after she graduates, none of us can tell. She was the first house chairman under Student Government and for a time was dignity personified. All of us were glad when the spell was broken and she could laugh as she used to. It seems strange that Norma's favorite color should be brown, for she is as full of fun as anyone. But just the same she has a brown hat, a brown coat,—and she used to have something else Brown, but we cannot quite remember about that.

WINIFRED BELLE GREELEY, A Δ II

"Winnie B."

Plymouth (N. H.) High School, '14; Glee Club, 1, 2, 4; Chairman Association News Committee, 2; Delegate to Silver Bay, 2; Chairman Eight Weeks Club, 3; Dramatics, 3; Class Ode, 3; House Chairman, 3, 4; Delegate to U. of M., 3; Secretary Students' League, 4.

A quieter, more unassuming girl than Winnie B. you will go far to find. Yet she is always ready for a good time. Latin is her specialty and many a despairing Freshman has been saved by her timely help. It is rumored that she writes poetry, but as to that we are not quite sure. But what about that Maine man's picture, Winnie?

LEAH MARION HORNE, A Δ II

"Mam"

Lawrence High School, '14; Hamlin Prize Reading, 1; Glee Club, 1, 2, 4; Mandolin Club, 1, 2, 3, 4; Y. W. C. A., 1, 2, 3, 4; Dramatics, 3; Literary Club, 4.

If you've just got 59 in an exam and you need cheering up, go to "Mam." Ten to one you will meet with this exclamation: "Oh! You're just the person I wanted to see. Say, I've got the funniest thing to tell you." She ranks A plus in jokes and good stories. Her extensive correspondence is a constant source of worry to her friends and although she looks innocent, she could tell of some very interesting experiences with adopted god-brothers, especially sailors. Another of her specialties is collecting her belongings which may be scattered anywhere between Fairfield and Waterville. She boasts of her cooking, but so far we have been able to discover just two things that she can make and those are "Elephant Ears" and "Puppy Dogs on toast." When you hear her saying, "Well! That gives me a pain," you want to get out of the way, for "Mam" is mad and her favorite way of dealing with offenders is "wringing their necks." Good luck, "Mam."

MARY ELIZABETH JORDAN, A Δ II

"Mary B."

Bar Harbor High School, '14; Y. W. C. A., 1, 2, 3, 4; Missionary Committee, 2; Religious Meetings Committee, 3; Delegate to Silver Bay, 3; Dramatics, 3; Student Volunteers, 1, 2, 3, 4; Vice-President, 1; Secretary and Treasurer, 3; House Committee, 4; Leader Freshman Bible Study Group, 4; Y. W. C. A. Cabinet, 4.

This little maid may well be called the class baby, even though she does wear two frat pins, and frequently refers to her more sophisticated friends as babies. Mary, you shouldn't squelch people so often, for really you have just the dearest smile. Do you keep it for those frequent walks with the frat pin man?

CORNELIA PULSIFER KELLY, X Ω
"Connie"

Coburn Classical Institute, '14; Freshman Reading Finals; Y. W. C. A.; Second Scholarship Prize. 1; Glee Club, 1, 2; Vice-President Coburn Club, 2; Entertainment Committee. Woman's League, 2; Ivy Day Pageant, 1, 2, 3; Assistant Editor of Colbiana, 3; Literary Society, 3; Junior Exhibition, 3; Dramatics, 3, 4.

This demure maiden hails from the wilds of Silver Street. We would give much for her power of efficiency—she makes every minute count. The precept of "Poor Richard" is ever in her mind: "Do not squander time, for that is the stuff life is made of." She holds a record for Red Cross knitting; is sure to get A's in all of her courses, reads every book as fast as it is published, is ever ready with a cheery smile and a full pantry for the visitors from Foss Hall, and still has time to write numerous letters to the man "who made the dollar famous."

HELEN MAY KIMBALL, Δ Δ Δ
"Kimie"

Lawrence High School, '14; Y. W. C. A., 1, 2, 3, 4; Glee Club, 1, 2; Mandolin Club, 1, 2, 3, 4; Finals in Freshman Reading, 1; ORACLE Board, 3; Dramatics, 1, 2, 3, 4; Literary Society, 3, 4; Pan-Hellenic, 3, 4; X Γ Θ.

Four years have wrought a great change in this once timid little Freshman. She has developed into a fine specimen of womanhood. She dances divinely, and has taught many of her less graceful sisters to trip the "light, fantastic toe." She did intend teaching in Hawaii with her running mate, but now her plans are changed. She has not only shown her patriotism in the numerous sweaters she has knit for the "Sammies," but has decided that her place is "Somewhere in France." Here's to you and the best of luck.

HORTENSE GOULD LAMBERT, Σ K
"Tense"

Kennebunk High School, 1914; Y. W. C. A.; Social Committee, 4; Glee Club, 1, 4; Music Committee, 1; Accompanist, 4; Class Vice-President, 1; ORACLE Board, 3; French Club, 4.

Blonde, brilliant, blasé—. "Tense" has such a strong will that she can will her room-mate to blush and achieve the required result, but that is not her only accomplishment. As for her playing, she can set all Foss Hall dancing by her captivating execution of "Watch Your Step" or accompany a soloist in a most complicated selection. If we feel blue or discouraged, we go to "Tense" for sympathy or even if we feel too self-satisfied, we go to "Tense" to be squelched. We can always count on her—she never disappoints us. You're a mighty good friend, "Tense," and well worth knowing.

MARIAN EATON LEWIS, Σ K

"Mary Ann"

Fryeburg Academy, '14; Y. W. C. A.; Class Dances, 1, 2; Glee Club, 1; Assistant Manager, 1; Basketball, 1, 2, 3, 4; Dramatics, 3; Class Treasurer, 3; Literary Society, 4; French Club, 4.

Hair of gold and eyes of blue,
Winsome, modest, shy and true—

Such a maid is Mary Ann. Her capabilities are so numerous and her ambitions so worth while that it is hard for us to do her justice in this little "write-up." Just now she's planning to be a Red Cross nurse and we almost envy the soldiers "for indeed an' they'll be happy," if Mary Ann waits on them. But wherever she is, Mary Ann will always be a true "friend to man," tho' we prophesy that her house will not be by the side of the road but on a "Hill" of its own, overlooking all the pleasant, happy times of life.

HAZEL EDITH LOANE, Σ K

"Spikie," "Loaney," "Hallie"

Fort Fairfield High School, '13; Y. W. C. A., 1, 2, 3, 4; Class Executive Committee, 1; Class Dances, 1, 2; Woman's League, 2, 3; Hamlin Prize Speaking, 1; Reading Room Association, 1, 2; Glee Club, 1, 2, 3; Aroostook Club, 4; Le Cercle Français; Dramatics 3.

"Spike" didn't seem a rule breaker when she entered college, did she? Just look up her record and you will find many weeks when she broke the three-nights-a-week rule. Hark! Listen to that joyous laugh ringing through the hall. Who is it? "Spike" of course. Where is she going all dressed up? There is a Ray of light in her eye which says she is going out for dinner. We have all loved "Hazie" ever since her first day in college. We all give you the heartiest good wishes for the future.

GERTRUDE ELIZABETH MEGQUIER, Φ M

"Rags," "Gert"

Danforth High School, '13; Y. W. C. A., 1, 2, 3, 4; Woman's League, 1, 2, 3, 4; Literary Society, 3, 4; Dramatics, 3; Fressen Essen Freshmen; Silver Bay Committee.

Who will ever forget "Gert" in Midsummer Night's Dream accompanied by her faithful follower, shouting in a guttural tone: "This thorn-bush is my thorn bush, this lantern my lantern, and this dawg my dawg." Her one passion is fortune telling and many of us have reaped great benefit and satisfaction from her timely advice. We prophesy that she will become a second Sibyl.

DAISY IDELLA MURRAY, A Δ II

"Murray D."

Lawrence High School, '14; Y. W. C. A., 1, 2, 3, 4; Glee Club, 1; Delegate to Silver Bay, 3; Second Prize, Junior Exhibition, 3; Dramatics, 3, 4.

8:15 A.M.! Who's that? Why, Daisy Murray, of course. As a model of punctuality this young lady has no equal. She alone it is, who can appear anywhere from ten to thirty minutes late with an "I'm so sorry, Professor, but—" and get away with it. Her only hobbies are germs and receptions and nothing short of an epidemic of the former could keep her from attending every pink tea within a radius of five miles. Isn't that so, Daisy?

CATHERINE ESTHER MURRAY

"Es"

Waterville High School, '14; Glee Club, 1, 2, 3; Shakespearean Play, 3; Class Dances, 1, 2, 3.

This stylish looking miss has been quite a star in the social whirl of college life, but she is there with the marks, especially in J. Bill's History course (?). Esther believes in the motto: "If study interferes with pleasure, give up study." Here's wishing you success in the future and hope you will always be able to wear your pleasant smile.

MARGARET ELLA PERKINS, A Δ II

"Margie," "Perkie"

Waterville High School, '14; Glee Club, 1, 2; Y. W. C. A., 1, 2, 3, 4; Literary Club, 3.

Whizz! Bang! Slam! Here comes a green book-bag with Perkie attached. How her hungry friends do love that book-bag. For out of it roll luscious doughnuts, big red apples and even a stray pickle now and then. Yes, she "likes everybody," but those she loves manages to "see a lot of." Truly, Margie is a busy lady, since in addition to all her college work she has taught night school four nights a week for the last two years. We shall all miss her friendly greeting and her cheery, bustling air next fall.

LENNA HULDAH PRESCOTT, Δ Δ Δ

"Huldy," "Len"

Lawrence High, '14; Y. W. C. A., 1, 2, 3, 4; Dramatics, 3; Literary Society, 3, 4; House Council, 3; K A.

"Huldy's" quiet voice and retiring manner are well known to us all. But those who know her best can vouch for her great sense of humor and ever ready wit. She leaves behind her the spice of many a joke. Although Lenna is a great German "Star" she has absolutely no use for the Kaiser. She vows she shall be unscathed by Cupid's darts; however, we have our doubts.

ZADIE INEZ REYNOLDS, Δ Δ Δ

"Twin"

Waterville High School, '14; Glee Club.

Zadie and her double are always as ready to help and as capable as the "Gold Dust Twins." If Zadie were to have her fortune told no doubt she would find that her fate lies in the hands of a certain tall, handsome blond who drives a "limousine."

ZELLA AMANDA REYNOLDS, Δ Δ Δ

"Twin"

Waterville High School, '14; Glee Club.

To tell the Reynolds twins apart
Was once as hard for me
As 'twas to tell the difference
'Twixt Tweedle-dum and Tweedle-dee.

But now I know the way 'tis done—
Those "specs" and Zella's grin.
But when by chance she leaves them off
It's safest to say "Twin."

LUCILE RICE, X Ω

"Rickey"

Coburn Classical Institute, '14; Y. W. C. A.; Coburn Club, 2; Junior Class Poet; Literary Society, 3, 4; Exchange Editor of Colbiana, 4; K A.

Lucile has never fallen down on her way to recitations or made herself otherwise famous, but she has been known to cut Dutchy's classes to go over to meet a certain train. It is said that she spends a great deal of her time writing letters to New York. She is not an ardent believer in Woman Suffrage, which fact is a great disappointment to her more militant room-mate.

DOROTHY ISABEL ROBERTS, Σ K

"Dottie"

Caribou High School, '14; Class Executive Committee, 1; Y. W. C. A., 1, 2, 3, 4; Religious Meetings Committee, 2; Class Dance, 1; Class Vice-President, 2, 4; Secretary Woman's League, 2; Vice-President Woman's League, 3; Ode Committee, 3; Junior Exhibition, 3; Delegate to Silver Bay, 3; Tennis Tournament, 1, 2, 3; Literary Society, 3, 4; Editor-in-Chief Colbiana, 4; Leader of Freshman Bible Class, 4; Aroostook Club, 4; X Γ Θ.

Sweet, dependable, and big-hearted,—that's Dottie. Can she write? Well, I should say. What about all those dramas, and 10,000 word articles that she was always so busy writing? And then how quiet she was, and how we had to work to find out the nice things which the appreciating professor had said to her. Oh! Dottie is a genius, and is genuine, and it makes us sad to think of losing her. Oh, Dottie is our "all round" girl and we can't say enough good things about her, but our kindest thoughts and best wishes will follow you, Dorothy, wherever you go.

RUBY MARGARET ROBINSON, Σ K

"Robbie"

Maine Wesleyan Seminary, '14; Y. W. C. A.; Association News Committee, 2, 4; Missionary Committee, 3; Delegate to Silver Bay, 2; Class Dance, 3; House Committee, 3, 4; Class Secretary, 3; Literary Society, 3, 4; Fressen Essen Freshmen.

"Robbie" loves to do three things. First, she loves to take long walks and snow-shoe tramps which account for her rosy cheeks. Secondly, she loves to take her little paint brush and make dainty favors for us, and she can do it, too. Thirdly, she loves her beauty sleep, especially when she has two exams the next morning. Why worry? She curls up on her couch and dreams of A's which she surely gets. We'll miss you, Robbie, both you and your favors.

JENNIE ODELLE SANBORN, A Δ H

"Jane," "Jennie O."

Berwick Academy, '14; Y. W. C. A., 1, 2, 3, 4; First Prize Sophomore Declamation, 2; Second German Prize, 2; News Editor Echo, 3; Dramatics, 3; Ivy Day, 3; Mandolin Club, 3; Bible Study Committee, 3; Delegate to U. of M., 3; Y. W. C. A. Cabinet, 3; President Literary Society, 4; Literary Editor Colbiana, 4; K A.

Jane is one of our most accomplished young ladies. Besides pulling an A in all of her courses, she can play the mandolin and knit. She is also an ardent attender of Sunday School and many a backslider has been unceremoniously assisted down Foss Hall stairs by Jane's persistency. Her strong point is Latin which we always thought was a dead language, but since Jane began to take the course we have found that it is not a dead but a romance language.

WINIFRED CORNELIA SHAW, X Ω

"Winnie," "Dr. Shaw"

Clinton High School, '12; Maine Central Institute, '13; Y. W. C. A. Social Service Committee, 1, 4; Y. W. C. A. Cabinet, 2, 3; Ivy Day Pageant, 1, 2; Delegate to Silver Bay, 2; Shakespearean Play, 3; Le Cercle Français, 4.

Winnie—for some of her friends dare to call her by this much hated name—is a good-natured, happy-go-lucky young lady, whom nothing ever worries until, like the Sword of Damocles, the impending danger is just above her head. In spite of her apparent carelessness she has found time to do some hard, earnest work for the Social Service Committee of Y. W. C. A. We will miss her shuffle in the corridors perhaps even more than the pills and powders which have made her famous as house doctor for Foss Hall.

ALBERTA PHILBRICK SHEPHERD, A Δ H

"Berta"

Corinna Union Academy, '14; Glee Club, 1, 2; Basketball, 1, 2, 3; Tennis Tournament, 2; Vice-President Y. W. C. A., 3; Dramatics, 3; Delegate to Silver Bay, 3; Literary Club, 3, 4; Colbiana Board, 4; Captain Basketball, 4; President Y. W. C. A., 4; K A.

Berta is the girl who always has time for something more. One of her favorite pastimes is making a few baskets on the basketball field, and she doesn't scorn to swing a tennis racquet now and then. To hear her discourse on the really big things of life, one would never dream that she would ever tolerate anything small, but the ways of women have always been past understanding, so we don't pretend to understand her. But seriously, Berta is one of our fine all-round girls, a good student, a good sport and a good pal.

ISABEL EVELYN SNODGRASS, X Ω

"Izzie"

Berlin High School, '13; Y. W. C. A. Glee Club, 1; Class Treasurer, 2; Y. W. C. A. Social Committee, 2; Junior Exhibition, First Prize; ORACLE Board, 3; Pan-Hellenic Council, 3, 4; Student Government, Social Committee, 4; Class President, 4; Ivy Day Dances, 1, 2, 3; Secretary of Literary Society, 4; X Γ Θ.

The modern novelist in describing Isabel would say, "Her hair was spun from the sunbeams, and she has the bewitching habit of gently sweeping her cheeks with her golden lashes when deeply engrossed in conversation." Isabel is always at her ease, whether she is writing a fifteen page theme, walking off with the first prize in Junior Exhibition, or perambulating the MacDonald baby.

LAURA MAUDE SPAULDING

Punchard High, Andover, Mass., '11; Baptist Missionary Training School, Chicago, '14; Y. W. C. A., 1, 2, 3, 4; Cabinet Member, 4; Sophomore Declamation; Hamlin Prize Speaking; Student Volunteers, President, 2, 3, 4; Literary Society, 3, 4; Class Treasurer, 4.

We feel safe in calling L. Maude our most energetic student, for no one else has ever cared to walk a long eight miles every Sunday to preach. She has been a continual surprise ever since she came to us from training school four years ago. We do not know yet whether Maude's future lies up in Aroostook or among the heathen of Africa, but wherever it may be we wish her all the happiness in the world.

MARION ISABEL STARBIRD, X Ω

"Marion Isabel"

Oxford High School, '14; Y. W. C. A., Membership Committee, 2; Mandolin Club, 3, 4; Equal Suffrage Association, 3; Ivy Day Pageant, 3; First German Prize, 3; Literary Society, Executive Board, 3, 4; President of Student Government, 4; Delegate to Student Government Convention at University of Syracuse, 4; K A.

We'll endeavor, with these few lines, to reveal to the world what a poetess we have living in our midst. Her room is lined with Keats and Shelley and she talks easily of quatrains and Alexandrian verse. When she entertains a certain member of the Hebron Faculty in the parlor she first secures copies of the "Rubiayat" and "Kubla Khan;" "now for a feast of reason and flow of soul." In spite of her dreaming Marion has developed from a demure, homesick Freshman to the awe-inspiring President of Student Government.

KATHRYNE MARY STURTEVANT, X Ω
"Kath," "Katrine"

Hebron Academy, '14; First Prize, Freshman Reading; Glee Club, 1; Ivy Day Committee, 1; Y. W. C. A.; Class Secretary, 2; Ivy Day Dances, 2, 3; Reader of Glee Club, 3; Junior Play; Literary Society, 4; President Equal Suffrage Club, 4; Head of Dramatics, 4; X Γ Θ.

Judging from Katrine's stature some may think she is not capable of reaching the high things of life—but we who are acquainted with her, know better. Her talent lies in public speaking, for she was one of the few Freshmen who did not tremble ignominiously before Herbert Carlyle. One of her most delightful roles has been Nancy in "The Old Peabody Pew." We know she gets A's in her courses, but we also know of one C she has obtained, for she wears it on her sweater. She has a fondness for all out-of-door sports, especially canoeing, and is always ready for a good time, but she never neglects her studies.

GLADYS PEARL TWITCHELL

Hallowell High School, '05; Farmington Normal School, '09; Y. W. C. A.; Second Freshman Scholarship Prize; Vice-President of Literary Society, 3; Executive Committee Literary Society, 4; Echo Board, 4; K A.

Hail to the exponent of mental gymnastics, to whom problems mathematical, economic, or chemical, are as great a delight as the goal post and home plate are to the professional athlete! Many a worried Sophomore or Junior goes into Gladys' room with a Math or Economics book under her arm and a perplexed frown on her brow—only to issue forth later, fairly radiating achievement. Gladys is first at class, first in class, and first on the list of the honor roll.

LEILA MARGARET WASHBURN, Σ K
"Leily"

Caribou High School, '14; Y. W. C. A.; Hamilton Prize Speaking, 1; Pan-Hellenic, 3, 4; Class Dances, 1, 3; Glee Club, 2; Colbiana Board, 3, 4; Business Manager Colbiana, 4; Aroostook Club, 4; X Γ Θ.

Behold the fair visage of an experienced school-ma'am. To be sure, eight of her nine pupils belonged to one family, but it is not often necessary to mention this fact.

Her favorite quotation is "The House of laughter makes the house of woe," for she receives many welcome (?) calls from the house chairman on account of her uproarious and unrestrainable laughter, and with each call a demerit as a remembrance of the occasion. But when it comes to efficiency Leila's right there with a ready and willing hand. Our best wishes go with you, Leila, and may you be successful in all you undertake.

HAZEL LUCILE WHITNEY, Σ K
"Hazel"

Ricker Classical Institute, '14; Hamlin Prize Speaking, Second Prize, 1; Y. W. C. A., 1, 2, 3, 4; Finance Committee, 2; Cabinet, 3, 4; Chairman Voluntary Study Committee, 3; Social Committee, 4; Glee Club, 1, 2, 3, 4; Leader of Glee Club, 4; Mandolin Club, 4; College Choir, 1, 2, 3, 4; Chairman Ivy Day Pageant Committee, 3; Dramatics, 3; Literary Society, 3, 4; Student Government Committee, 3; House Council, 2, 4; Senior Member Executive Board of Students League, 4; Aroostook Club, 4.

Quiet, thoughtful, and deliberate. That describes her. Hazel is efficient, too. She can order food for sixty and have just enough. She can find you any book in the library from Esop's "Fables" to Seth's "Hegelianism and Personality." We hope your success in the future will equal that of your college career.

MARGARET WILKINS, Σ K
"Wilkie," "Mrs. Wilkins"

Ricker Classical Institute, '14; Glee Club, 1, 2, 4; Basketball, 1, 2, 3; Y. W. C. A.; Bible Study Committee, 3; Secretary and Treasurer Reading Room Association, 3; President Reading Room Association, 4; Class Dance, 3; Executive Committee Aroostook Club, 4.

Our Wilkie! Oh, what can we say? How can we describe her? Fat? "Pas de tout." Blushes? "Indubitably." We admit that the "blush is beautiful but it is sometimes inconvenient." and Wilkie agrees with us. But Wilkie is a good all-round girl. (She studies, dances, is always ready for a good time and just loves French Club parties.) We love you, Wilkie dear, and we're very sure it's true, we wouldn't have so many black marks, if it hadn't been for you.

ISABELLE HERVEY WING, Α Δ Π
"Belle"

New Bedford (Mass.) High School, '14; Echo Board, 1; Glee Club, 1, 2, 3, 4; Colbiana Board, 1, 2, 4; Y. W. C. A. Committee, 2; F. E. F.; Mandolin Club, 2, 3, 4; Dramatics, 3; Class Ode, 3; College Choir, 3, 4; Head of Musical Clubs, 4.

Behold in this dashing young lady the chief financier of Foss Hall. Have you anything you want sold? Well! Isabelle can sell it for you. Books, post-cards, recipes, darning cotton, calendars, chocolate, in fact, anything that is salable. And her crushes! But why mention them! They will go down in the annals of history as never-to-be-forgotten events. (But never mind, Isabelle, you're all right.)

PAULINE WINDSBERG

"Polly"

New Bedford High, '14; Glee Club, 1, 2; Ivy Day Pageant, 1, 2; Le Cercle Français; Literary Society, 4; Secretary of "The Sons and Daughters of Zion."

Rack our brains as we might, Polly, we haven't been able to find a thing to slam you on. Eager to learn, ready to sympathize, and above all, a good sport—such is the impression you leave in the hearts of those who love you. May luck attend you wherever your ambition may lead.

Senior History

FATE, in the person of the editor-in-chief of the ORACLE, has decreed that the history of 1918 must be written in these pages. Ah, but that history is just in the making.

During our first year we were, I imagine, very much like every other entering class, very enthusiastic and very eager to fill our place in the Colby world, but a little confused by the newness of it all, and bewildered by the many activities that seemed to claim our interest. But especially were we proud!—proud of our class, her colors, her banner, her basketball team, and her members, collectively and individually—and our Alma Mater. My, weren't we proud of Colby? It doesn't seem that ever in our lives will there come a feeling of such supreme pride as we experienced on a certain moon-lit, snowy evening in the fall of our Freshman year when we watched our Colby brethren very efficiently perform the time-honored snake dance under the glare of torches and the noisy confusion of shouts and cheers.

In this, our Senior year, we are just realizing the opportunities and privileges that Colby is giving us. Four years of pleasant comradeship in Foss Hall, four years of interesting work in our classes, and four years of helpful association with our professors and classmates—when shall we find another four years to equal these?

Ah, yes, the history of 1918 is just in the making. It is not for us to tell of the things we have achieved and the honors we have won, but rather it is for us to prove that the things we want to achieve and the honors we hope to win will be worthy of Colby—our Alma Mater.

Junior History

Should you ask me of this gathering
This great gathering of women ;
In the land of Colby College,
I should answer, I should tell you
'Tis the Class of 1919,
1919, the strong hearted,
1919, the illustrious.
I should tell you, how as Freshmen
Colby's doors were open to them
And the other classes wondered,
Wondered at their wit and talent,
Wondered at their marks of genius.
Then as Sophomores they gathered,
And they trained the little Freshmen
In the straight and narrow pathway.
O! the weeping and the wailing!
O! the anguish of the children!
But they cried and loud they cried it,
"Honor be to 1919."
Next they came as Jolly Juniors,
Upper classmen, most respected.
Three long years they've spent together.
Questioning, seeking, working, learning
Filled their minds with words of wisdom,
Were encouraged and were strengthened,
And the years were crowned with blessing
With the blessedness of service.
All their danger is in discord,
All their strength is in their union,
So they'll work in love together
And when time comes for the parting
Smoke the calumet, the peace-pipe,
As a signal to the classes
That the Class of 1919,
True will be to all its members,
Loyal be to Alma Mater.

Sophomore History

WE FULLY realize that self-praise is worse than no praise at all, but lest we should seem inferior to our predecessors we must relate some of the achievements of 1920.

In the fall of 1916 a band of timid Freshmen, forty or more strong, entered the walls of old Colby. Warmly welcomed, we were sheltered from all harm for the first week. Soon, however, "Phi Chi" sounded and her commands had to be obeyed. "Bloody Monday" with all its proverbial terror came, but we quite enjoyed the occasion and fairly brought dismay to the hearts of 1919 when we refused to sing their praises. To wear those high green hats was enjoyable, and how wretched the Sophomores became when they found that they were so becoming. Sophomore rules were on for some time, but we cannot say that they were enforced very capably, for we can recall very easily several instances of clever escapes.

Did we have a banquet? Well, I guess we did. How unsuspecting those Sophomores were when we sauntered leisurely out of Foss Hall in small groups. We cleverly escaped their vigilant eyes and arrived at Union Hall in Augusta without being captured. We banqueted to our hearts' content along with some of our Junior friends, while the Sophomores were obliged to rely upon their own (?) resources for "eats."

But the heights of our joy were reached when Colby Day came, which proved so glorious for us and so fateful for 1919. On that day amid the ringing cheers of our Junior friends and our own little band and stimulated by the sight of that banner, our basketball team won from the Sophomores with a score of 30 to 5. How old Foss Hall did ring with the notes of "Phi Chi," a swelling from the throats of proud Freshmen.

A number of good things happened to Colby during our first year. Colby captured the football championship, a Student Government was launched and the Literary Society was organized.

We returned for our Sophomore year with our numbers somewhat diminished. New cares and difficulties awaited us and we were confronted by the wearisome task of training sixty Freshmen for Colby's ranks. Such fresh recruits were never found before. We were delightfully entertained on "Bloody Monday" by their songs and dances and even the Juniors were unable to protect them. We had cause to rejoice when we heard their baby voices cheering 1920. They are beginning now to realize their inferiority, and instead of being blustering and boastful they are beginning to show some modest and retiring traits. We surely hope that our labor has not been in vain.

Thus we bring to a close those first two years of our college course, regretting that they are gone but guided by them as an incentive, we hope to press on through the years to come, making them as active and useful as possible.

Freshman History

'Twas late in nineteen seventeen,
A bright October day,
When sixty little Freshmen green
Came trooping in from play.

Then said the older Sophomore band,
"O, Mother Colby, dear,
Just let us take these kids in hand,
We'll show them why they're here."

So on a dark and "bloody" night,
At Nineteen Twenty's call,
These Freshman babes, both black and white,
Came trembling to the Hall,

Where Old Phi Chi's rule soon taught them how
They henceforth must obey,
And humbly to the Sophomores bow
Till after Colby Day.

Forthwith upon the street were seen,
With swagger stick and bow,
Thrice twenty maids in helmets green
All hastening to and fro.

And now vague rumors 'gin to fly
To list'ning Sophomore ears,
That Freshman Banquet night is near—
We smile and say, "Poor dears!"

For well we know these puerile minds
A plan could ne'er devise,
That would, no matter what the pains,
Deceive the Sophomores wise.

Alas, for plans of mice and men,
And loyal Freshmen all!
These wily schemes were brewing, when
There came this sharp, clear call:

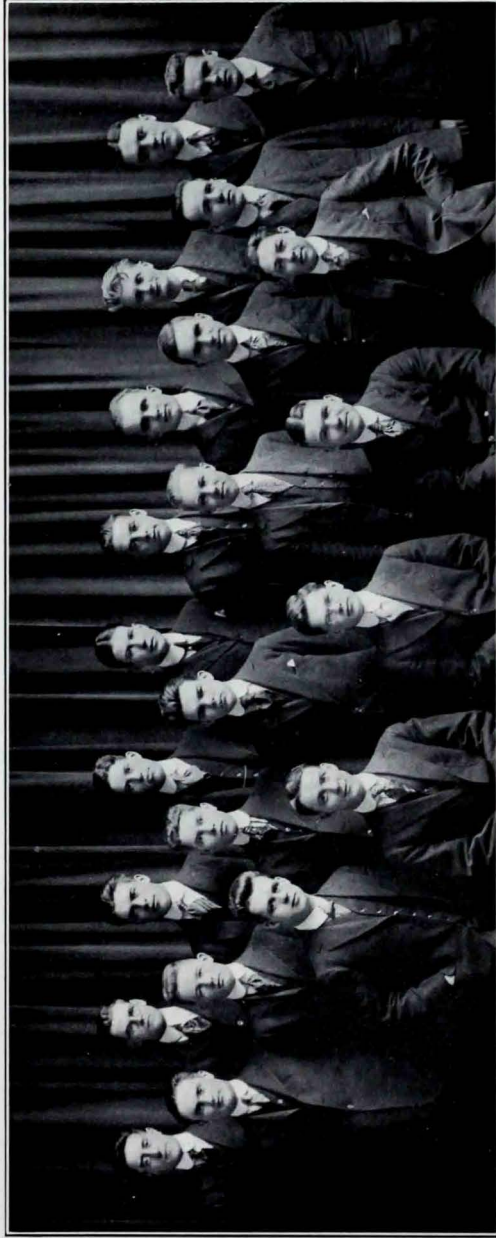

"The need is great in far-off France,
Will you do aught for it?
'Twill bring more joy than feast or dance,
To know you've done your bit."

"No slackers we," the Freshmen cried,
"We will give up our fun,
We'll put our banquet plans aside,
There's work that must be done."

Class Ode

AIR: Melody in F

Colby, our college, thy children are here,
 Lauding with Nature thy glory so dear;
 Sunlight and shadows are blending to-day,
 Blending the Blue and Gray.

Willows are bending to catch from the waters
 Whispers of Colby, praises from afar,
 O'er the campus the zephyrs are wafting to us
 Brightest dreams for her future, which nothing shall mar.

O, Colby, we love thee, we praise thee each day;
 Spirit of Colby, live, live for aye!
 Colby, the Gray and Blue!

AIR: Somewhere a Voice is Calling

Bright flowers round thee are springing,
Over lawn and lea;
Colby, thy sons are singing,
Singing of thee.

Gently the breeze comes straying,
Out of the summer sea,
Colby, thy sons are praying,
Praying for thee.

And while the stars are gleaming,
Ever we'll be
Working, hoping and dreaming,
Colby, for thee.

Pipe Ode

AIR: Melody of Love

'Neath the waving elms and willows grand,
Meet we here today a loyal band,
Pledge our friendship true with heart and hand,
To our Alma Mater dear.

Sweet the hour that brings release,
When from irksome toil our labors cease;
Sweet to share the ancient pipe of peace,
For our Alma Mater dear.

See the curling smoke arise,
Mingling with the azure summer skies,
While our hearts are bound with firmer ties
To our Alma Mater dear.

Symbol of a hidden living fire,
Symbol, too, of peace, our heart's desire;
May its secret truth our souls inspire,
For our Alma Mater dear.

GRACE ALMA FARNUM

Parting Ode

AIR: On the Road to Mandalay

We must leave Thee, Alma Mater, and our eyes are dim with tears.
 Thou has guided us so gently and so kindly through the years.
 But the world beyond is calling, and although we fain would stay,
 Fare thee well, dear Alma Mater, life is calling us away.
 Fare thee well, old Alma Mater,
 Fare thee well, dear Alma Mater,
 By thy teachings thou shalt know us, we will hold thy banners high,
 Fare thee well, old Alma Mater,
 Fare thee well, dear Alma Mater,
 In our hearts we'll hold thy mem'ry, we will love thee till we die.

In the dreaming, distant future, we shall live again with thee,
 Hear the chapel bell a-calling, wander happy and care-free,
 'Neath the rivers to the river, beckoning now with golden gleams,
 Fare thee well, dear Alma Mater, mother of our dearest dreams,
 Fare thee well, old Alma Mater,
 Fare thee well, dear Alma Mater,
 By thy teachings thou shalt know us, we will hold thy banners high,
 Fare thee well, old Alma Mater,
 Fare thee well, dear Alma Mater,
 In our hearts we'll hold thy mem'ry, we will love thee till we die.

The Students' League

The Students' League of Colby College has grown from the organization known as the Woman's League, formed in 1915. Its constitution, modelled rather closely on that of the Mount Holyoke College League, was accepted by the students of the woman's division February 12, 1917. A Grant of Powers was asked of the President and the Faculty, and was given. Among the powers given to the students were the maintenance of quiet in college buildings, the making and enforcement of all regulations governing the conduct of students in certain non-academic matters, and the supervision of absences from college.

The purpose of the League is to enact and enforce laws in accordance with the Grant of Powers, to promote the spirit of mutual helpfulness, service, and personal responsibility among the students, and to strengthen their loyalty to the College.

HISTORY OF THE MILITARY COMPANY

In a letter to the Echo on March 7, 1917, George F. L. Bryant, '17, advocated strongly the formation of some kind of military organization among the students. The Editor of the Echo, E. Donald Record, '17, had previously urged much the same idea. On Wednesday afternoon, April 4, at a meeting held in the college chapel, the Colby Company was finally organized. Stirring speeches were made by President Roberts, Lieutenant Rogers and others. At this meeting Lieutenant Rogers, '17, was appointed Drill-Master.

On Thursday afternoon, April 5, at four o'clock P.M., the first drill was held in the gymnasium. Within a week after its organization between 75 and 100 men had enlisted. Among this number there were several members of the Faculty.

As soon as the company was formed, Judge Leslie C. Cornish, '75, President of the Board of Trustees, extended to the organization the support of the alumni and presented the company with a suitable flag.

On Monday, April 30, the Company elected its officers as follows: Captain, R. J. Miranda, '19; First Lieutenant, Hugh S. Pratt, '17; Second Lieutenant, Elliot E. Buse, '20. All these men had had considerable military training. Lieutenant Rogers was called to Bath, Maine, for guard duty with his company and was obliged to tender his resignation as Drill-Master. In his place Frederick D. McAlary, former Lieutenant in Company H, was appointed.

On Tuesday, May 8, the Company took part in the patriotic demonstration held at Augusta. A great deal of favorable comment was made by the press on the appearance of the Company.

On Monday afternoon, May 14, a mass-meeting was held in the gymnasium to discuss the work of the Company. The officers delivered stirring speeches and as a result a number of new recruits offered their services. Lieutenant Pratt was appointed to the Plattsburg camp and submitted his resignation as First Lieutenant. Second Lieutenant Buse was promoted to his office and Robert A. Mathews, '18, was elected to the position left vacant by Buse. Two weeks later sergeants and corporals were appointed.

On the afternoon of Friday, June 1, the final review of the Company took place.

LITERARY

A Bit of Realism

Mrs. Blake sat rocking before the open fire, clinking her knitting needles with rhythmical precision, while her husband dozed comfortably over his paper in the big arm chair. The bright sparks from the flames leaped cheerily up the black soot of the chimney, and chased each other rapidly from sight. Outside the snow was packed against the window, and it was cold and dark.

Gradually the fire burned lower, but the knitting needles worked none the less energetically. Her husband's deeper, more regular breathing warned Mrs. Blake that bed-time was approaching; so carefully reaching across the space of the intervening study table, she tapped his newspaper gently with her needle. "Fred," she said, softly, "Fred, it's time to put the cats to bed." "How?" came the half awakened ruffled response. "Yes, dear, it is. Come, here's Blackie right here on the hearth." Evidently this bit of information was worthy of note, for the sleepy man hastily adjusted his glasses, slipped his heels more firmly down into his slippers and, with an energetic push, rose from the depths of his chair. With agility unexpected from so stout a person, he made a deft, low sweep of his arm and caught the black cat in his firm grasp. Smiling triumphantly, he handed her over to Mrs. Blake, saying, "You hold her, Sophie, while I find Queenie. Don't let her go." With this parting admonition Mr. Blake stepped from the room.

Presently a real persuasive voice was heard proceeding from the kitchen: "Here, kitty kitty, kitty, Queenie, come Queenie." Then came a thud, thud, thud as of a falling broomstick, followed by a hurrying, scurrying swish as of an escaping cat. Again that enticing voice sounded, but this time a slightly exasperated note could be distinguished. "Aw, come now, kitty, kitty, kitty. Here Queenie—Sophie, what ails this cat? She won't let me catch her at all."

"Well, well, Fred, try again. You'll soon catch her" was the encouraging answer.

Mrs. Blake was right, for at length when the gentle gift of persuasion had given way to the more forceful art of snatching, pussy was stopped in a last frantic dash for freedom by a hand clasped tightly around her tail.

With the light of victory radiating from his sunny countenance Mr. Blake returned to the living room with his struggling captive under his arm. "Now give me Blackie," he said, and when the delivery of the latter had been safely accomplished he smiled at Mrs. Blake who was still sitting composedly knitting, and started harnward with the household pets.

DOROTHY I. ROBERTS, '18.

Deutschland Ueber Alles

(Impersonation of a German Spy in the Lumber Camps of Maine.)

Darkness is settling about me. I listen! In the distance a medley of voices announces that the crew of the Merrill Lumber Company has added another day's work to its winter's operation. May it be their last! From down the tote road I hear the tinkle, tinkle, of the teams hurrying campward from their last day's trip to the landing.

What shall I do? The Emperor's business requires haste and every moment of delay may be dangerous to my mission, but policy bids me remain in concealment. One team, two teams, three, four, five, six teams pass—the teamsters singing, laughing, or chatting merrily. One lusty voice is singing "Where Do We Go From Here?" as if in unconscious derision. Yes, they are happy, but—they are Americans! And those lips must be silenced, those hands must be made useless, if I would do my part for my Fatherland.

My time for action has come. But one straggling team now follows some distance in the rear. I venture from my hiding place behind the trunk of an upturned tree (thank God for my providential shelter!), and make my way to the road leading to the camp.

German I may be but no one must know it. If I am mistrusted for a single moment, my mission will fail. The right must win. But though my whole being breathes out threatenings and slaughter, I must adopt the wolf in sheep's clothing policy.

The moon has arisen and is shining upon me in benediction. In its light I survey my attire. No one can suspect me to be a lieutenant in the Imperial German Reserve. My holey leggins, ripped moccasins, patched pants, and mackinaw, much the worse for wear, will surely brand me as a typical tramp.

The team behind me is gaining rapidly and will soon overtake me. In the short interval I must become a soldier again. With true military dignity I draw myself up to full stature, and with my right hand upon the little flag pinned to my breast, pledge once more allegiance to my Emperor. Then, breathing a prayer for protection and success, I assume again the posture of a tramp, and step aside for the team to pass.

"Could ye give me a ride, sir?" I asked.

"Jump right on," said the burly teamster surveying me critically, "S'pose you're strikin' for camp."

"Yes sir, I'm hungry and lookin' for a job."

"I guess you're aimed for the right spot," said the teamster, "chances are top notch for a job if you're any good. We'll soon see the old skylight and as for something to eat, boss's wife can cook beans that would make your mouth water a mile away."

A slap with the reins sends the horses into a trot and we ride for a time in silence. How fortunate for me that this man cannot read my thoughts!

"This has been a tough day," the stranger suddenly ejaculates, somewhat disturbing my deliberations. "I broke a chain the first send-off this morning and ditched my load. Then old Molly the off mare, cut herself pretty bad and it's going to take a good bit of the evening to fix her up. Sometimes I think it's hardly worth while to live such a cat and dog life, but then when a fellow's got a home—wife and children—he'll go through a lot of tough places." To this I grunt assent and lapse again into silence.

Surely one cannot refrain from admiring the specimen of manhood by my side. He is living for his family and his struggles are for what he conceives to be the best things in life. But nevertheless he is an American—the enemy of my fatherland. His every day's work is helping to defeat my loved ones and clothe them with disgrace. Shall I be swerved from the plain path of duty? Never! There is but one thing for me to do as a lieutenant in disguise. He must die! But I must not give life for life. To be rash is to be unwise.

I complete my plan of action and await developments. I am not going over the top, with steel helmet and bayonet, but thousands of miles from the trenches I can be a link in the great chain that will one day fetter the world. I am not dealing with a crowd of men armed to the teeth. Indeed, they are wholly unsuspecting of any evil foreboding. But I am here on duty and "live or die, survive or perish," my hand must be raised against them to smite them.

Swinging about a bend in the road, I see the skylight but a few rods distant, with the outline of the camp plainly visible in the moonlight.

Now is my time of testing! There is now no such word as fail. I must be as wise and deadly as a serpent.

The boss's wife responds to a knock on the kitchen door.

"Is the boss in?" I ask with apparent innocence.

"I'll see," she replies pleasantly; "come right in and be washing for supper."

Leaving the steaming beans on the stove, she goes out to speak to her husband.

With a swift, though careful, glance about the room, I survey my field of action. At the table, apparently absorbed in her story book, is a little girl. This is my chance. Hastily washing, I step to the towel where only an arm's reach away is the pot of juicy beans. Heaven is surely favoring me. Hurriedly I reach into my pocket for the secret paper and empty its contents into the pot. I continue wiping and pass out into the men's apartment to a Deacon seat.

Thus far my plan has been perfectly successful. The crew is eyeing me curiously, but they are accustomed to transients, and I am certain they do not suspect me. It is unthinkable that a little girl absorbed in a book can possibly convey information of my deed. The proper time will inevitably reveal the ghastly harvest.

Thinking it best to bury myself from the crew until the supper gong sounds, I make my way out into the night. In the general confusion my departure seems apparently unnoticed.

Through the moonlight I see the boss and his wife talking anxiously together. I listen, but no conversation is audible. My heart sinks within me for a moment. Is it possible that they mistrust my motive? Nonsense! How foolish to think that such a sleight-of-hand performance should be noticed, and that by a little girl. The fellows are talking over the day's experiences, joking and making merry. I take a hasty look out over the hillside toward the thick, black growth before me. Then, with face upturned to Heaven I thank God for his help and ask him to make bare His arm to slay this camp full of men—my enemies.

With my prayer hardly finished, a change seems to come over the inside of the camp. Voices are hushed and I hear them whispering together. What can it mean? Perhaps they are accustomed to quiet down before the call to supper. Dong! Dong! goes the supper bell and slipping back into the camp I join myself with the crew.

At the end of the table sits the boss with an empty seat beside him. "Right around here," the boss calls out and every eye in the room is fixed upon me. "Pass the bean dish this way and we will start things moving," said the boss to the teamster with whom I rode in. All too quickly the boss's wife's beans are steaming uncomfortably near my nose. A glance down the table shows that some have them on their plates but not a man has touched them. What shall I do?

With as much politeness as I can muster I decline with the excuse that "I never eat beans; they always hurt me." But this excuse falls flat, though I cannot understand why. Something tells me that every eye is again fixed on me. Policy bids me not to lift my eyes, and with apparent unconcern I continue to spread my bread.

A shuffle at the end of the table arouses my curiosity and looking up I stare into the barrel of a revolver. "Sir," this time the Boss's voice is stern, "if you do not eat a plate of those beans, I will fill your bean with lead."

My time for action has come again. Shall I take a chance? I surely am between the devil and the deep sea. Perhaps my plate may come from the bottom of the dish, and then, again, my powder may possibly have been made powerless by exposure. If so, I may save my life and still accomplish my result. It is worth a try, anyway. I nod assent.

"Fill up his plate," shouts the boss. The atmosphere in the room is tense. If death be my portion, I have done my duty. Death may come as well one way as another. I lift my fork to take of the portion—

* * * * *

"A devil is among us! A German flag covers his breast!" Some one calls out as he bends over him. Those words rouse him to consciousness. A devil! A German Flag! What does it all mean?

"I have been caught in the act! I have been outwitted! I have done my duty—but God is unavenged." Drowsiness steals over him again. "With confidence and trust I look up to Heaven, God—accept—my efforts. Forgive—me—for my failure. In—Thine—own way—smite—every enemy—of—the—Fatherland."

Hope

Oh Hope! I wonder why
Thou art conceived of artists' minds to be
So frail and delicate a thing,
Fleeting as a bird on wing,
And shrined in mystery.

Methinks they must have lost
True knowledge of the part thou played before,
And will play, till the end of time,
In leading men to nobler clime,
Where fears oppress no more.

Oh, would that I could paint
And show mankind my Hope, a mighty power,
A spirit that looks forth and sees
Beyond life's brooding mysteries,
Some one redeeming hour.

Oh, Universal Hope!
Ne'er before hast man to thee so feverish clung;
Sovereign of a world grief-tossed,
Half concealed but never lost,
Afar thy praise be sung.

Our Boys

Every day
They are marching away,
Those khaki-clad boys of ours,
They are marching away
To a baffling fray,
To a land where the War-God glowers.

Every day
They are sailing away,
Those lads so noble and true.
They are sailing away
O'er the seas so gray,
To battle for me and for you.

Proudly they
Will come back we pray,
But we tremble and hide a tear.
They'll come back, we pray,
Just as strong and gay,
Yet we fear, Oh, how we fear!

"Her Sons Shall Bear it Far"

[Written for THE ORACLE.]

Round the wide world and o'er the seven seas
 Where'er Old Glory floats upon the breeze,—
 Through "Merrie England's" rows of blooming thorn,
 Where Scottish cliffs re-echo to the horn;
 Through tiny villages of Normandy;
 Yon where the skulking pirates scourge the sea;
 In south-land camps beneath the murmuring pine,
 Or in the trench-cut, shell-scarred battle line;

A name is heard strange to the ears that hear;
 A fame is spread by sons that hold Her dear.
 Of "Dear old COLBY," glamoured o'er with dreams
 All safely bowered by her flowing streams.
 Her name shall travel on the wings of war—
 Her sons shall proudly bear it,—bear it far!

Meine Mutter, by Miss Doty

AN IMPRESSION

Meine Mutter is a gripping, realistic sketch of the Great War. Realism is the keynote of the sketch. We are now listening to the roar of the great shells as they tear up the earth, now sweeping through the air with the joy of battle surging in our ears, now standing horror-stricken before the lifeless form of the boy, our enemy. Then comes the sublime pathos of the letter to the boy's mother and her reply,—the magnanimous reply of a saint to his tormentors. Somehow there seems always ringing through the story the words of the dying Christ, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Only in this case the words are changed, "Father, forgive us, for we know not what we do" is the cry of the boy and his dead enemy's mother.

The style is simple, direct, and forceful. No other method of treatment would have been effective with such a subject. No technical words or phrases confuse the ordinary reader. It is almost Biblical in its direct simplicity. Perhaps this is the main factor in the great appeal of the sketch.

GEORGE GLENWOOD WATSON.

"Made in America"

America is like a happy-go-lucky boy; she never does today what she can do tomorrow, for she believes if she puts off doing things long enough they will be done for her. Like Tom Sawyer and the whitewashing of the fence, when in the eleventh hour she does get around to doing her task, she does it better and differently from anybody else—in the American way.

One of the greatest effects of the war on America is that she is forced to do things for herself. America is young in the great family of nations and, as is true in most large families, the youngest does not know how to do things for herself because the older brothers and sisters have always done them for her. But America now has been thrown on her own resources and, altho she tottered somewhat at first, with every new step she is gaining self-confidence and in a short time she will not only be self-supporting but also be lending a helping hand to her poor old war-worn brothers and sisters.

Among the greatest of America's new enterprises is toy-making. Wars may come and wars may go, but children will play on forever. The play instinct is born in the young of all ages and science and invention can be traced by the evolution of the plaything as well as by the evolution of the stage-coach and other means of transportation. Dolls talk and walk, kittens mew and cows made out of real cow-hide, moo.

Winchendon, Massachusetts, is the cradle of America's infant toy-making industry. In this small Massachusetts town not only the same old toys are made and improved on, but new ideas are being turned out of the shops every day.

"Mr. Noah has lost his Teutonic look, his live stock their old-time air of stupidity and the answer is that Noah, his family, flock and abode are all 'Made in America' now." Noah never should have had a German appearance for he was a cosmopolite, a citizen of the world; Germany is fighting to conquer the world and America is fighting for the freedom of the world; so Noah has only come into his own—American naturalization.

The members of the doll family no longer have that terrible birthmark on the back of their necks—"Made in Germany." These ladies and gentlemen have not travelled quite so much as their predecessors, but their sweet and lasting smiles give testimony to the belief that "where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise." However, American dolls can converse as volubly on as great a number of subjects as their German ancestors. Their physical conditions, too, should be a source of great satisfaction to their family physicians. Their arms, now, are a part of their bodies instead of an after-thought and their eyes do not fall back into their heads at the slightest shock. The doll family are active in Red Cross work and military training—they are being educated in America.

American initiative, however, does not stop at making the old toys better than they were ever made before—it goes a step further and invents new and unheard-of delights. Huge quantities of tool chests are turned out for embryonic Fords and Edisons. Seven freight carloads of these chests are the average daily output of the three toy factories in Winchendon. Everything which interests the big boys and girls of America is made in fac simile for the little ones,—from the hoe and the carpet-sweeper to the automobile and the flying-machine. Wonderful skyscrapers are constructed out of a hopeless mass of wire sections by the future architects of America, while tomorrow's kings of transportation and communication labor tirelessly over their biplanes and wireless equipment.

The Indian and the cow-boy suits have lost their fascination. The bow and arrow and stone sling have passed and now the king of boydom struts to the rendezvous dressed in a boy scout suit, a knapsack strapped to his back and an American rifle over his shoulder—young manhood “made in America.”

The Last Class

It was my last recitation as a student of Colby College. Late Thursday afternoon I was in my Latin class reviewing the semester's work. There were only a few in the class for not many students follow up that course nowadays. Only a few girls, some of whom have been there all four years; and my chum, who has been beside me since that first class when we entered; the old professor, noble with the golden experience of fifty years, the very personification of the Roman ideal, reserved and courteous; these were all.

“The sun had just set and left the horizon over the trees glowing with a rose tint like the inside of a tropical sea-shell. Already it was growing dark in the room, for the lights had not been turned on, and as we read a half pathetic poem of Tiballus, a quiet glow of sentiment stole over me,—a kind of feeling that only the hush of a beautiful sunset even can produce,—and I mused.

“The last class,—one week, busy with examinations and preparations for departure, and college for me would be over. A happy period, it had been, full of pleasant memories. How fitting that the last class should fall to the period of my favorite study, that the quiet dignity of a professor so highly revered, should be my parting impression. I felt a longing that my life might attain to any degree of the culture of that one, and my mind might live in worlds of final esthetic enjoyment.

“Gazing out the window, in inattention to class work, my eye fixed itself on a distant beacon. At the very horizon barely surmounting the vista of tree-tops, a flag was flying, spread wide in the sunset breeze. Was this not an emblem? From the quiet ease of classroom, was not the flag calling to service? Not for the young men of America to-day, is the life of esthetic seclusion. It is a time for vigorous action. The flag of the nation calls for defenders and it is our glorious privilege to follow. In hundreds of classrooms thousands of men are laying aside book and pen to go out and serve. To serve,—to die if need be, and gladly they are doing it.

A Modern Utopia

I was sitting at my desk one evening just before an exam, trying to "cram" enough of "Im Zwielicht" into my head to last me through the next day. I was trying in vain to remember whether "ein Kanz" was "eine grosse Eule" or "eine kleine Eule" and had almost decided to look it up in the dictionary, when suddenly I was startled by a great commotion on the top floor. There was a sound as of great rejoicing. I recollected that a meeting of the student body had been called immediately after dinner, but I had been too busy to attend.

The noise grew more deafening, and girls began to come down the stairs, all talking at once. My room-mate rushed into the room, all out of breath, but by the expression on her face I knew she had remarkable news to tell. As soon as she could speak she began, gaining momentum as she went on,—“Oh, why didn't you go to the meeting? The most wonderful things! They have found a new will of Mr. Colby's—you know, the founder of Colby College—and he has left ten million dollars to the Women's Division, provided that all changes are made, according to his wishes! And listen to the changes!

“A new Gym, with a swimming pool, and we are to have a swim before breakfast every morning. Breakfast at nine o'clock! Palmer House and Dutton House all made over—with subways leading to Foss Hall. Maids to take care of our rooms and run errands! No more exams, and no classes when the weather is stormy or cloudy. Twenty-nine cuts a semester! Subway from Foss Hall to Chemical and by paying two cents extra, you can have a private car!”

My mind was ready to snap with the strain, but still she went on, “Ice-cream every night for dinner, a private telephone in every room, and when you graduate, they frame your diploma for you in——” Crash!!!

I awoke with a start, as my German dictionary tumbled to the floor.

Our Piano

There is no musical instrument more abused than the piano in the living room of my fraternity house. We hear much about atrocities in this present age, but who ever thinks of applying such a term to the treatment accorded our piano? Still, from morning to night some one is thumping at it, vainly striving to produce harmony, or viciously attempting to tear the ivory from the keys.

These are not the only abuses which have been heaped upon our piano. It must grind out anything from popular songs, such as “Poor Butterfly,” to some of Beethoven's masterpieces. I have often thought of the surprise that our old dilapidated music-box must receive, when, after laboring for hours on popular selections, it suddenly finds that someone is trying to play classical music, and yet it is equal to the task, that is, if one is not particular about harmony.

In the evening we crowd around our old friend and with voices ranging from ultra bass to extreme tenor, we attempt to sing our college songs, keeping as far from the pitch as possible without incurring the wrath of our fellow-sufferers. But the piano labors bravely on amidst the encircling din.

There comes a time, however, when, like mortals, our piano reaches the limit of its endurance. A key begins to stick or the ivory has been torn from some of them, and the tune is beyond the power of expression. We decide that it needs a little attention and send for the piano tuner. Then a day for recuperation is set apart. By evening, however, our old friend is ready for business again, and the punishment begins anew. So it goes on, year in and year out, until one day the piano is beyond repair and a new one must take its place.

MS. Found in a Bottle

(After Poe)

There is little that I can say of myself and doubtless that little is better left unsaid. Suffice it therefore, that once I was a member of an ancient and much revered family and lived in ease and luxury, receiving such education from a leading university as I chose to avail myself of, but family discord and petty quarrels early sent me into the world to seek my own fortune.

After many years of knocking about the globe I found myself in the year 1914 in Paris, where I maintained a suite of rooms and pursued my studies in ancient and medieval literature, when every other pastime failed. I was a happy-go-lucky fellow, forgetting the past and caring not a whit for the future. And of course when the war came I enlisted, choosing the navy. For several months I was sent hither and yon in drill, but was at last assigned to a large man-of-war. Early in the month of June, 1916, she steamed out from B—. For forty-eight hours we rolled along on a smooth sea, meeting nothing troublesome.

Standing at the gunwale on the evening of the second day, I looked off over the gray expanse of waters and found it hard to realize that war was a reality. A new moon was slowly dipping toward the sea off to the westward; here and there stars twinkled out of the inky blackness of the sky while low over the water hung a thin white veil of mist as filmy and elusive as a lady's scarf. In fact, the night was too perfect, and the silence too pronounced. It was oppressive; it was foreboding, and when the order came to turn in it was with reluctance that I obeyed. I slept fitfully and about midnight was tossing restlessly in my hammock, when the cry of "submarine!" rang out from the watch.

Instantly every man was on deck and we felt the shock of the shells striking our sides, amidships. Our vessel lunged, turned on her side and plowed along a few lengths, righted herself a second time and then, quivering, settled back as though resigned to her fate. In the meanwhile, all was hubbub and confusion on board. Men were rushing here and there in a desperate scramble for life-belts; that wild, horror-stricken look upon their faces that men wear only when they face inevitable death.

After a hasty glance about me, I decided to take my chances on swimming until some craft might pick me up rather than to go down with the poor, shattered ship and that wild mob. So looking carefully to the fastenings of my life belt, I leaped overboard and struck out in a westward direction as nearly as I could determine.

I had been a champion swimmer in my university days and I soon realized that this training was to stand me in a good stead now. For several hours—or so it seemed to me—I swam slowly, letting myself float when I became too exhausted to paddle. The mist that I had noticed in the evening had now developed into such a thick, gray fog that I could see in no direction more than a few feet. What course I was pursuing or whether it would take me I had no way of knowing.

Just as I was beginning to wonder how much longer I would stay afloat, a huge shape loomed up before me—long, and low, and black. Be it friend or foe, I knew not. I shouted loudly for help but received no reply. The vessel seemed to be merely drifting. Swimming up alongside I grasped a rope which hung limply over her side, and started to climb aboard. All was strangely silent and I wondered where the watch might be.

Being wearied with my long swim, I climbed slowly and had only raised myself a few feet from the water when I was startled to find myself face to face with a huge death's head painted in livid white upon the dull black hull of the vessel. I say I was startled, yet I was not altogether surprised. My first impression of this strange ship had been one of mystery and now every moment that impression was being confirmed.

I climbed over the railing and slipped noiselessly on deck. Again my suspicions as to the type of vessel proved true. It was very evidently a submarine, only much larger than any I had ever seen. Crouching there among the pile of ropes where I had dropped, I peered cautiously about me. Two men in marine suits were bending over some chains a few paces down the deck, but they seemed not to have seen or heard me. Other men were stalking slowly about here and there, each seemingly bent upon some task of his own. One passed me almost within reach of my hand, yet he saw me not. And then I realized that they spoke not a word to one another. All was a deathly, penetrating silence, not a sound on board save the creaking and rattle of the heavy iron chains and the wash of the waves.

After watching proceedings for some time I decided to venture out and see what sort of reception I should be granted. I need not have troubled myself about hiding. No one appeared to see me or to pay the slightest attention to my movements. I sauntered up and down the decks inspecting my strange craft, yet no one questioned my presence. * * * * *

I have been below and there I found the materials with which I have written and shall write. I have a foreboding that I shall not be permitted to tell the whole of my strange adventures, unless by my pen. I have secured a bottle in which I shall from time to time enclose these messages to be cast into the sea at whatever time I may feel that the end is coming.

The interior of the vessel is as strange as its exterior. I wandered about inspecting the engine and torpedo room and visited the captain's conning tower. This is a tiny room, fitted up with many maps and strange charts and piled high with books. Above the table hangs a human skull. A huge, iron-bound volume lies on the table, but it was closed with a ponderous clasp. I intend to get a look inside that book soon, however. * * * * *

I have been below again. This time the iron-bound book was open and the captain (or I suppose it was he, these fellows all look alike in their suits and one cannot see their faces) was sitting before it writing slowly with a long stick—or such it appeared to be at first sight. I peered over his shoulder and was startled to see that in the darkness the words stood out with a weird, effervescent glow. Then I noticed that the peculiar stick with which he was writing was a long splinter of bone tipped with phosphorus.

As I bent closer to read the words the captain rose and stalked away. Hastily I turned to the front of the book and read in bold letters these words: "Der Appell des Kaisers" which if I remembered correctly, means "The Kaiser's Roll-call." And below were written the names of vessels and their crews and the passengers who have been destroyed by German torpedoes since this war began. I turned the pages and scanned them closely, that was all—just name after name. I turned to the back and found the name of my own vessel and her crew—all but my own name. My God! I wonder how soon that will be written there, too!

* * * * *

The fog is lifting now. I feel that the end is near. The ropes and paraphernalia which have been lying scattered about the deck are being taken below, and the men are all disappearing, too. Horror upon horror! They have closed the hatches! And I left my life belt below! The boat is sinking! I feel her quiver! And I am left to perish! The water is already washing the deck! Perhaps even now my name is being written in the Kaiser's book! The water has reached my knees—I am lost!!

DORIS P. ANDREWS.

"To Know a Good Man When You See Him"

William James, who was in many ways a very wise man, says that the value of college breeding is to enable us to know a good man when we see him. It is an inspiring idea—correct evolutions of men! Certainly this is fundamental knowledge, for do we not have to live among men—men of all kinds—and not angels?

But in college we are merely given the impulses, or have our original impulses strengthened, toward that end. The power in its fullness is not gained in college. That requires a lifetime. The college man has an appreciable start over other men, but the ability of knowing good men when he sees them may or may not accrue to him.

Frederic Harrison thinks that much of this power comes from books. To be sure, one derives a great deal from association—association in college with fraternity-mates, with the students as a body, and with the members of the faculty. Yet associations are the privilege of non-college men, too—perhaps to an equal degree with college men.

Hence books must be the main advantage to which college men can lay claim. Our associates are not wiser than books. From them we learn what is wise and true and of good report. "The true books are not easier to find than the true men. The bad books or the vulgar books are not less obtrusive and not less ubiquitous than the bad or vulgar men are everywhere." It is as valuable to have a friend suggest right books as it is to have a friend help us to see what associates will help us and what hinder. "The art of right reading is as long and difficult to learn as the art of right living."

But it is largely through the direction and impetus that college men receive in right reading that they advance more rapidly in the art of right living,—which is both being and knowing good men.

G. B. F.

Bryan at Colby

"Bryan is all right!" some one exclaimed over my shoulder as we swung down the chapel steps. With amazement I viewed the speaker—a standpatter of the G. O. P. and the son of a standpatter,—and pondered for the cause of this sudden outburst.

Colby had welcomed Bryan and Bryan had left a profound impression upon the college, yet there was something extraordinary about the visit. Was it that for three successive presidential campaigns he had aspired to the White House? Was it due in part to the statement broadcast today that without Bryan we would not have had Wilson? Would not the fact that he has always featured as an American statesman merit him a ready hearing? Undoubtedly all these contributed their part to the factors that interested his college audience.

But there was something about a personal contact with the man that called forth great admiration and wonder. Did we not see before our eyes the accomplishment of a paradox? On the platform stood the silver-tongued orator of America, speaking on the subject of oratory. Yet so successful was he in embodying his message that the messenger was forgotten. In self-forgetfulness he had exalted himself.

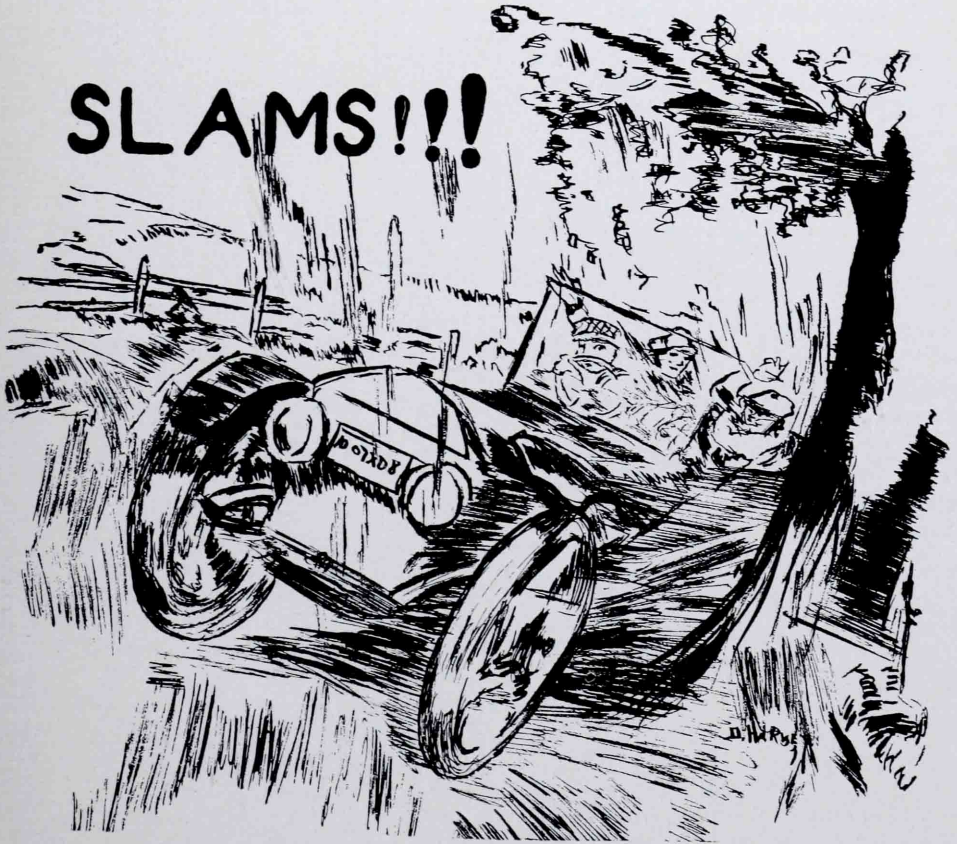

Then too, there faced us a man of conviction. We did not need to call to mind that this man had defied the Cabinet and President of the United States—that he had risked his reputation at the hands of the American people for the sake of satisfying a conscience-gripping conviction. A personal contact convinced us that this man bore in his character the quality of absolute sincerity.

There was another extraordinary cause for wonder about this visit. The Bryan of today could not be called a "has been." Why should not a man of such statesmanship and ability be taking an active part in such an hour of national crisis? Was Bryan's mouth stopped that he should be removed from any present day discussion? I said a personal contact aroused mingled admiration and wonder. We admired the marvelous powers and possibilities of this man to sway, to influence, to mold the ideals of the American people; we wondered if he were rendering a maximum service when the powers of each man should be taxed to the utmost.

With optimistic hopes for the future we voice the sentiments of the standpatter, "Bryan is all right."

ENGLISH LITERATURE

2 English Composition. The work of this course consists of daily lectures on "How I treat my Family," "How I felt when I had the typhoid," "Why I love good music and appreciate art," "How it feels to be run over by a Ford." Emphasis is placed upon the personal equation, upon the seven deadly sins and how to avoid them, and upon the evolution of man from the prehistoric Trinil race as exemplified by Pithecanthropus Erectus. Discussions and conferences on marriage and advice and consultations given to students in their love affairs.

1 Reading. The first few hours of this course will be devoted to lectures on such subjects as wine, women and song, the value of a white collar in a bluff. When and how to bluff. Students will be required to memorize the days of the week and the names of the months.

3 Continuation of course 1. Memorizing of "Mary had a Little Lamb" and "Old Mother Hubbard." Students taking no cuts will receive A in the course.

JOURNALISM

Fuit. Not to be conducted as formerly, see new catalogue.

GEOLOGY

3 Petrography. Students are required to read and memorize the descriptions of five hundred and thirty-two different kinds of rocks, extra work optional. Assignments in text-book half a book a day. (No book will cost over six dollars.) Original research work in collecting specimens required.

4 Physical and Historical Geology. In this course the student will learn what has happened to him and why and what is going to happen to him and wherefore. Topics, why ice is cold, why Greenland isn't green, where the donkey got his long ears, and why fleas are no larger.

Gems from Prexy's Philosophy

"I've left my glasses at home. What shall I do? Fortunately I don't need them."—Prex.

Reading from text-book, "'Those crazy people . . . who imagine themselves to be pitchers.' Here, you see, in this old philosopher is a direct reference to baseball."—Prex.

"It would make some of these philosophers turn over in their graves to know what I make them say these mornings."—Prex.

"It is not so much finding out what Spinoza tried to say, because no one knows just what he did try to say."—Prex.

"A man would make a good trade if he exchanged any one of his five senses, except sight perhaps, for the sixth sense, the sense of humor. The seventh sense is common sense. Philosophers don't have any sense of humor."—Prex.

"A man might be happy if he had six or seven wives and a small farm."—Prex.

Prex.—"When you would do good what is always with you?"

W-ma- "The devil."

Prex—"Give Locke's proof of the existence of God."

F-in- —"Nothing can equal two right angles."

One Act, That's All

SCENE I

Cellar of Phi Delt House. Prex and Short gazing at empty coal bin.

Prex—Well, Short, you better go over to Foss Hall and get some of those big chunks of wood and burn here for a while. I'll have to go and get some coal.

Short—Yes, sir, I'll go right over. (To bystanders.) Come on, you guys, the more of you come and help me the longer you'll keep warm. (Exit with bystanders.)

Curtain

SCENE II

College Avenue.

Prex walking down street and Short leading a bunch of Phi Delt across from Foss Hall laden with armfuls of wood. Miss Butman in window of Foss Hall.

Miss Butman—President Roberts, you mustn't let Short take all my wood away. How do you suppose I'm going to feed a hundred and fifty girls without any wood to cook with?

Prex—Now, Short, what do you mean by stealing a poor old lady's wood. That's all she has to keep her warm. Now look here, Short, I have to furnish brains for nearly five hundred students, besides the faculty, but when it comes to furnishing brains for the janitor, I balk out."

Exit Prex down street, Short and Phi Delt's disappear with puzzled airs.

Curtain

Heard Somewhere

Prex—(after announcing in chapel that Senior pictures must be taken)—"Ah, if I were only young and handsome, how I should like to have my picture taken."

Prof. Franklin—"And outside the garden of Eden he saw a great fire that never went out."

Miss St-r-ev--t—"That must be the cause of the high cost of coal."

Prof. Carter—"A point has neither length nor thickness.

Bright Student—"Does that apply to a period, too?"

Prof. C—"Why, yes."

B. S—"This period seems to have length to me."

Prof. C—"And it seems to have some thickness to me."

Prof. Little—"What is a well, Marble?"

Marble—"Er, a well is a hole in the ground with water in it."

Prof. Little—"Under what conditions does limestone form, Marble?"

Prof. Little—"What is climate, Mr. Alden?"

Alden—"Climate is the emotion of the earth around the sun."

From Biology quiz—"The skeleton is what is left after the insides have been taken out and the outsides taken off."

Favorite Sayings of Colby Profs.

White—"Mercy. Yes."

Black—"May I pause for a moment to speak parenthetically."

Carter—"Of course it isn't necessary to know this, but it's kinda nice."

Little—"Geologically speaking as a matter of fact."

Chester—"Queerly enough."

Ashcraft—"That is to say."

Parmenter—(registering great glee before an exam) "Now, this isn't hard if you know it." (And in lab) "There goes 25 cents."

Grover—"Now to recapitulate."

Caswell—"Obviously that isn't so."

Marquardt—"I always call on my special friends."

Harry—(innocently) "So they tell me."

Libby—"Now, I don't know about that, do you think—?"

Tolman—"From a physical point of view."

MacDonald—(fondly scratching the back of his head with his elbow) "Now don't take any notes on this."

Crowell—"Well, I'd hardly say that."

Prex—"Where's Short?"

Dean Cooper—"Come now, girls."

Trefethen—"You'll get by if you do good work on the exam."

McAlary—"So fashion."

Children's Corner

We have many letters from our little ones, too many to print all of them, but a few of the more interesting we shall try to answer.

Dear Editor:

I have a dramatic club all my own, that is, it's Boardy's and mine. Boardy is a nice boy, too. The matter is, my actors are too stuck on themselves to do any work. What ought I to do, paddle them or kick them out?

Anxiously,

Raymond P——.

You ask us a hard question, Raymond, you better try one and then the other.

Dear Editor:

The boys are very unkind to me. They often kid me about my theoretical knowledge. Don't you think they are mean? What shall I do? I couldn't be practical if I wanted to anyway. Also I get my feet tangled up in my suspenders when I try to dance. Can you suggest any remedy?

Respectfully,

Arthur S——.

The boys are certainly very cruel to you. Try making faces at them. As for dancing, try the Highland Fling for practice.

Dear Editor:

The girls think I'm cute, and I am, too. They don't take me seriously, though. How can I impress them? I like pie very much, but it gets mussed up in my ears; how may I avoid this?

Robert W——.

Girls delight in fancy vests and vers libre. Try that on them, Bobby. You might try wearing a bonnet when eating pie.

This department absolutely refuses to give advice to the love-lorn. We hope the little ones understand that it is not in good form to fall in love until they wear long pants, and besides, it's endless trouble, except it generally comes to a troublesome end.

Acknowledgment

The drawings of a college publication are its most distinctive feature. The Editor feels that the work of the Art Editress, Miss Goodhue, is worthy of much commendation. To her and to all those who contributed drawings the Editor expresses his appreciating thanks.

Whatever of accuracy and care there may be in this book is due to the efforts of the associate editors. For their painstaking and perhaps wearisome labors the Editor is very grateful, especially to those who volunteered to do more than was asked of them.

The manager and his assistant have done a great deal of hard work. On them is laid the financial burden and to them is due financial success.

At the last proof-reading it was necessary to delete some of the literary material to keep within the limits of expense.

Professor Libby and Professor Crowell have done much to help in the collection of essential material. Professor Franklin was of inestimable aid in advice and suggestions in connection with the Literary Department. Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Small kindly lent photographs from which many cuts were made. To these, to the literary contributors, and to all others who have in any way helped in the publication of this Oracle, the Editor is thankful.
