South African Stocks Sold

The college divested more than three-quarters of a million dollars worth of stock from its portfolio in September because two corporations did not comply with Colby's guidelines concerning operations in South Africa.

The unanimous decision by the Investment Committee of the board of trustees was made on the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on Investment Responsibility. Faculty, students, alumni, and administrative vice-president

Robert Pullen were appointed to the committee in 1978 after a faculty resolution condemned the apartheid regime, a white-minority rule in South Africa that systematically oppresses blacks. The latest action of the trustees is part of the "aggressive shareholder" policy, supported by the majority of the advisory committee, which seeks to improve the situation in South Africa through changes in corporate activities. A minority dissent prepared last year by the two students on the advisory committee urged the college to divest all of its holdings in South Africa, calling profits from companies in that country "tainted." The majority report disagreed, saying that by being active shareholders, by voting for those resolutions which support human rights, Colby could ameliorate conditions for blacks in South Africa. Economics professor Thomas Tietenberg, chairman of the advisory committee, said, "When company actions seem clearly and inevitably to violate human rights, Colby will divest."

The stocks divested were from Dresser Industries and the Engelhard Minerals and Chemicals Corporation.

Dresser, a manufacturing company, refused to sign the Sullivan Principles, which require companies in South Africa to improve conditions for blacks, through desegregated facilities and better education and housing. Dresser also declined to comply with outside monitoring of its activities in that country. Colby's stocks in Dresser were valued at $326,250.

Tietenberg

Although Engelhard, a manufacturer and refiner of ores, minerals, and metals, has signed the Principles, it has not complied with the monitoring requirements. The Engelhard stock was worth $442,500.

"Without any opportunity to verify the company's accomplishments, the committee presumed that they are not sufficient," said Professor Tietenberg. "We invited Engelhard to rebut that presumption with solid evidence. It failed to do so; we recommended divestment." He also said, "The behavior of Dresser and Engelhard was clearly extraordinary: most companies in equivalent circumstances in South Africa sign and comply with the Principles."

The college has no investments in any South African firms, nor in any multi-national corporation whose major activities are in South Africa. The portfolio of the college does have stocks in industries with affiliates in that nation, including three companies which last year had not signed the Principles. Since then, Loctite and Coca Cola have adopted the Principles. College guidelines suggest that if a corporation has not signed the Principles, the college will divest its holdings unless the company can show that it has similar standards of business ethics. The committee is investigating the remaining company, Pepsico, to see whether its own policies are adequate.

The recent divestment is only a small part of the college's continual evaluation of the corporations in its portfolio to insure that the college invests ethically. Last year, the committee investigated, among other issues, the marketing of pesticides banned in the U.S., uranium mining in this country, and the foreign marketing of infant formula. "The committee has found it can make distinctions among resolutions," said Tietenberg. "We have ended up supporting management about half the time."

Fraternities to Fight Property Taxes

For the first time, Colby's eight fraternity houses are being taxed by the city of Waterville. Seven houses will each be billed between $3,200 and $3,700. The eighth and largest, Kappa Delta Rho, will be asked to pay more than $8,000.

The city tax assessor has said that privately owned fraternity houses are not granted the same exemption as educational buildings. He cited "a lack of understanding as to ownership" as the reason the buildings have not been taxed in previous years.

K.D.R. was estimated to be worth $428,820, and the other seven fraternities were each valued at about $159,000. Interfraternity Council president Daniel Sheehy '81 called the assessments "unreasonable." None of the buildings has heating equipment (heat is piped in from the boiler in Roberts Union), kitchen facilities, or an adequate number of showers.

Dean of Students Earl Smith called the tax bills "one of the most serious threats to the fraternity system in many years." The fraternities have suffered throughout the 1970's from declining membership and rising costs. Mr. Sheehy said that the fraternities have united to appeal the tax assessor's decision, and will "try to prove we're not fraternities, but dormitories, we can really only sell the houses to the college, since Colby owns the land." The administration, according to Dean Smith, will "assist the fraternities in the preparation of a defense in any way we can."

Homecoming Awards

Arthur "Red" O'Halloran '50 was named Colby "C" Club Man of the Year and ten alumni were honored for outstanding work as class agents during homecoming weekend.

Pen Williamson, director of alumni relations and annual giving, said that O'Halloran's "enthusiasm for Colby had been his trademark for years. Everywhere he goes, he talks of Colby and as his own children admit, he had consistently promoted its excellence in academics before anything else."

The "C" Club award is presented annually by graduate letter-athletes of the college. An insurance executive for nearly thirty years, Mr. O'Halloran was a track star and team co-captain as an undergraduate. He has encouraged many people to attend Colby, including his son, Daniel '80, who was co-captain of the hockey team last year.

Achievement awards to class agents were presented by David Marson '48, chairman of the alumni fund.

Raymond Spinney '21 was awarded the G. Cecil Goddard Class Agent Achievement Award for his nine years as a class agent.

Jane Russell Abbott '41, Susan Comeau '63, J. Warren Bishop '35, and Stephen Bartow '60 received the Frank S. Carpenter Improvement Awards.

Joseph Coburn Smith Best Overall Performance Awards went to Arthur J. Sullivan '22, A. Frank Stiegler, Jr. '28, Robert S. Aisner '68, and Thomas A. Record '30.

Federal Grant to Support Energy Conservation

A grant of $125,150 from the U.S. Department of Energy will allow the college to extend a computerized system which controls energy use and to install storm windows in nine dormitories. The funding, which must be matched by the college, comes under the second phase of a three-part federal program to reduce energy consumption in schools, hospitals, and public facilities.

Earlier this year, the college received nearly $90,000 to help pay for the energy-control computer, to put storm windows in five classroom buildings, to insulate two dormitories, and to replace an underground heating main. The new funds will be used to install instruments in 19 buildings that are to be linked to the computer in Colby's physical plant building. The system will measure and control the heat in the buildings more efficiently. That, coupled with the additional storm windows, will reduce annual energy costs by approximately $200,000. The newest measures should be working by second semester.

Plans for the third phase of the funding include installing solar panels to heat water for the athletic complex and a passive solar heating system in the fieldhouse. Reducing heat loss from the Hill-side dormitory complex is also a top priority.

Dick Maxwell

President Emeritus Robert E. L. Strider II (center) chats with Kristine Winkin and Ruth and A. A. D'Amico at a reception following the unveiling of his portrait at the Museum of Art in October. Commissioned by the board of trustees, the oil-on-canvas work is by Everett Raymond Kinstler, who has also painted portraits of former President Gerald Ford, and Dag Hammarskjöld, past secretary-general of the United Nations. Robert N. Anthony, chairman of the board, said that the work "is the least of the remembrances that we have of Bob and Helen Strider. Of much more importance are the 15 buildings, a tripling of the endowment, and growth in academic excellence that has taken place over the last two decades." The president emeritus thanked the board of trustees for "tangible evidence that we were part of this community and that this community is a very significant part of our lives."

New Coffeehouse Quietly Successful

With what The Colby Echo termed "an ambience all its own," a student coffeehouse in the Mary Low dormitory opened in October. Nearly one hundred and fifty people arrived on the first night to sit at small tables in the near-dark to listen to guitar music in the renovated dining hall. Open four nights a week, the coffeehouse features entertainment on Friday and Saturday and a quiet place for study breaks on other evenings. With more student help, the coffeehouse will be open every night.

The idea began last year with a few students who sought an alternative to the Spa and social events where alcoholic beverages were served. A gift from members of the Class of 1975 in memory of their classmate, William Robert Klaus, Jr., funding from the Student Association, and a sale of forgotten belongings from dormitory trunk rooms supported the renovations. A stage and a small kitchen have been installed. In addition to the tables and desk chairs that fill the room, church pews line the walls. Teas, coffee, and pastries are served, and the emphasis is on quiet entertainment and lucid conversation.

The inaugural performer was a guitarist whose specialty is the music of George Gershwin. Program director Susan Perry '83 said that she would like to see students perform and the scope of entertainment widened. Eventually, poetry readings, films, one-act plays, and comedy routines may be part of the program.

Dean of Faculty Position Open

A committee has been established to search for a new dean of faculty and vice-president for academic affairs. Paul G. Jenson, who served for nine years, resigned in July to become president of Thomas College. Sonya O. Rose, associate dean and assistant professor of sociology, is acting dean in the interim.

The committee of seven faculty members—four elected by the faculty, three appointed by the president—will interview applicants and advise the president. A group chosen from the student association and the alumni council will also participate in the selection process.

Holding the college's major academic office, the dean and vice-president supervises the curriculum, faculty selection and development, and the registrar's and placement offices.

According to the chairman of the committee, Professor Henry A. Gemery of the economics department, the position should be filled by "a scholar of recognized academic achievement and administrative ability." Nominations are invited, and the applications should be addressed to Professor Gemery.

The Class of 1984

Most of the entering freshmen will only be in their thirties when the 21st century arrives, as President Cotter pointed out in his welcoming address. The Class of 1984 is comprised of 226 women and 240 men from 28 states and 5 foreign countries. About 60% graduated in the top fifth of their high school class and 34% are from independent schools.

Alumni Trustees Nominated

At the annual homecoming weekend meeting, the alumni council nominated Anne Lawrence Bondy '46, Philip W. Hussey, Jr. '53, both overseers, and Robert W. Burke '61 to three-year terms as alumni trustees.

Mrs. Bondy is a member of the Board of Cooperative Educational Services in Port Chester, New York, and is past president of the Rye Neck board of education. She

"Every now and then in life we have an experience that moves us so deeply, that holds us with such sheer transcendent beauty, that it takes us completely out of the world. It is the feeling that only an artist can convey in his art. It is a journey into infinity," wrote William Zorach. The sculpture above of his wife, "Portrait of Marguerite," is part of The Maine Years at the art museum through December 14. Organized by the Farnsworth Museum in Rockland, the exhibition is a collection of tapestries, sculpture, and watercolors produced by both artists after they moved to Robinhood in 1923. Mr. Zorach received an honorary doctor of fine arts degree in 1961 from Colby, and he and his wife served on the advisory committee on art until their deaths in the mid-1960's.

Christopher Hallowell

The college singing group, The Colby Eight, performed for New York City alumni at a college songfest last May. Across the country last year, the alumni clubs held dinners, attended Colby sports events, sponsored telethons, and held parties for prospective students. For information on a club in your region, please contact Jean Papalia, associate director of alumni relations.

has been a fund agent and is vice-president of her class.

Mr. Burke, of Somerset, New Jersey, received his M.B.A. from New York University and is vice-president of personnel at Goldman, Sachs, and Company in New York City. He has served as president of the New Jersey alumni club, vice-chairman of the Plan for Colby campaign in that state, and has been a member of the alumni council. A "C" Club Man of the Year, he has also received a Colby Brick. He has four children, including a daughter, Kelly, who is a sophomore at Colby.

The president of Hussey Manufacturing Company in North Berwick, Mr. Hussey has been chairman of the nominating committee and of the Ford Challenge campaign in York County. He and his wife, Martha (DeWolf '55), have four children, including Timothy '78 and Ann '80. Hussey has been awarded a Colby Gavel.

Other candidates may be nominated by filing a petition, signed by at least 150 alumni, with the executive secretary of the council, Pen Williamson, by February 1, 1981. If no petitions are received, the three nominees will be declared elected at the winter council meeting.

President's Annual Report Available

William R. Cotter has reviewed his first year at Colby, reporting progress on nearly every issue raised the previous fall in his inaugural address.

The text is divided into six sections: "Trustees, Overseers, and Visiting Committees"; "Faculty and Curriculum"; "Students and Campus Life"; "Finances and Construction"; "External Relations"; and "Milestones." Following the report are three appendices listing the Colby Overseers, a selection of faculty publications, exhibitions, scholarly papers and lectures, and the year's academic and cultural events.

The nearly fifty page publication may be obtained by writing to the office of the president.

New Faculty Members

THE HUMANITIES

New appointments to the division of humanities have been named for the academic year 1980-81.

Julia M. Budenz, Taylor Lecturer in Classics, is a published poet whose research involves myth and ritual in poetry. Her graduate work in classics and comparative literature was done at Catholic University and at Harvard University, where she was a research assistant and editor preparing a new translation of Newton's Principia. While she taught at Radcliffe, she held a Bunting Institute fellowship for writing poetry.

Alain D. Fresco, assistant professor of modern foreign languages in French, has completed his doctoral dissertation at Indiana University on the work of Camara Laye, a French-African novelist from Guinea. He is a graduate of the University of Delaware.

Timothy A. Hunt, assistant professor of English, was curriculum coordinator for the freshman-honors program at the University of Delaware and director of the freshman liberal arts sequence in American studies at the University of Utah. He has published poems and articles on contemporary poets and novelists. His critical study, The Crooked Road: Development of Kerouac's Fiction, has been accepted for publication. Professor Hunt earned bachelor's, master's, and doctoral degrees from Cornell University. ¶ Claudia J. Kraehling, instructor in art, is a 1974 Colby graduate and has an M.F.A. from the University of Pennsylvania. She has taught batik during a Colby January Plan and has directed an outdoor wall painting program in inner-city Philadelphia.

Federico Pérez-Pineda is assistant professor of modern foreign languages in Spanish. Professor Pérez-Pineda is a native of the Dominican Republic and graduated from the State University of New York at Fredonia. His graduate degrees are from the Pennsylvania State University, and his dissertation is entitled "Alienation in Contemporary Spanish Theater." He has taught at Susquehanna and Bucknell universities, both in Pennsylvania. ¶ Dianne F. Sadoff, assistant professor of English, is on leave from Antioch College, where she is coordinator of the women's studies program and serves on the editorial board of the Antioch Review. Her essays on women's studies have appeared in a number of collections. Professor Sadoff is completing a book, Fictional Fathers, a study of father-daughter relationships in Victorian fiction. She holds bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Oregon and a doctorate from the University of Rochester.

Sarah M. Strong, lecturer in modern foreign languages in Japanese, is a doctoral candidate at the University of Chicago. The subject of her dissertation is the poetry of Miyazawa Kenji. She has taught English in Tokyo and Kyoto. Ms. Strong was a Japanese Ministry of Education Scholar during 1979. ¶ Gina S. Werfel, instructor in art, has studied at the New York Studio School and Columbia University. She was co-administrator of the Studio School's summer session in Paris, France. Her paintings, which are principally landscapes, have been on exhibit at Columbia University, the Studio School, and the Prince Street Gallery in New York City.

THE NATURAL SCIENCES

New faculty members in the division of natural sciences have been announced for the 1980-81 academic year.

Murray F. Campbell, assistant professor of physics, is an astronomer and research associate, who was previously at the Steward Observatory at the University of Arizona. His research concerns developing the use of balloon-borne, cryogenically cooled, far-infrared survey telescopes. Professor Campbell is a graduate of Pennsylvania State University and holds master's and doctoral degrees from Cornell University.

Marcel Flamm, lecturer in mathematics, has taught at the New York Institute of Technology, the University of Puerto Rico, St. John's University in Queens, N.Y., and has been a programmer at Bell Labs. He has a bachelor's degree from Columbia University and a master's from San Francisco State College. ¶ Geoffrey W. Kiralis, instructor in mathematics, is a doctoral candidate at Cornell, where he has concentrated on topology in mathematics. He graduated from Williams College. ¶ Dale J. Skrien, assistant professor of mathematics, is a graduate of St. Olaf College and has master's and doctoral degrees from the University of Washington. Professor Skrien's research is in interval graphs, chronological orderings, and graph theory. ¶ David S. Westerman, assistant professor of geology, is president of the Maine Geological Society and has published articles on complex geological structural relations in central and northwestern Maine. He has worked as a field geologist for the Maine Geological Survey. While at Northeastern University and the University of Maine at Orono, Professor Westerman taught descriptive mineralogy, optical mineralogy, and petrography.

THE SOCIAL SCIENCES

The division of social sciences will have eleven new members on its faculty in the 1980-81 academic year.

Todd A. Behr, instructor in economics, is a specialist in money, banking, labor economics, and corporate finance. A doctoral candidate at Lehigh University, Mr. Behr will serve as a one-year replacement for Robert E. Christiansen, who is on a Fulbright Fellowship in Malawi, East Africa. Mr. Behr is a graduate of Gettysburg College. ¶ Joel C. Bernard, assistant professor of history, is a doctoral candidate at Yale, where he is focusing on American cultural history. He has held a Whiting Fellowship in Humanities at Yale and a Kanzer Research Fellowship in psychoanalysis in the humanities. Professor Bernard's is a joint appointment with his wife, Professor Jane H. Hunter. ¶ Gregory B. Christainsen, instructor in economics, has published papers on public employment and wage subsidies, jobs and the environment, and environmental policy and the slowdown in U.S. productivity. He is a doctoral candidate at the University of Wisconsin at Madison, where he earned both his bachelor's and master's degrees. A University Fellow last year, Mr. Christainsen has won two distinguished teaching awards.

Benjamin A. Elman is the Ziskind Lecturer in East Asian Studies in philosophy. His dissertation at the University of Pennsylvania, where he is a doctoral candidate, concerns the lower Yangtze academic community in late imperial China. While an undergraduate at Hamilton College, he studied for a year in Taiwan and at the East-West Center of the University of Hawaii. He was a Peace Corps volunteer in Thailand. ¶ Talbott W. Huey, lecturer in government, received his doctorate in political science from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and has been an information officer for the U.S. Foreign Service. Mr. Huey has taught at the University of Massachusetts, Boston, and has served as a research associate at the Fairbank Center for East Asian Research at Harvard. He is a graduate of Yale and holds a master's from Johns Hopkins University. ¶ Jane H. Hunter, assistant professor of history, is completing work on a doctorate from Yale University and is writing on American cultural and intellectual history in the late 19th and 20th centuries. She has taught at Yale and at Samwuih University in Hong Kong. Her research concerns the role of American women missionaries in China. ¶ Philip McGough, assistant professor of administrative science, formerly served as an assistant dean for academic affairs at the School of Business Administration at the University of California at Berkeley, where he also taught accounting and directed the computer facility. Professor McGough graduated from Boston College and has a master's of business administration and a doctorate from the University of California at Berkeley.

Bernard D. McGrane, assistant professor of sociology, is author of the book, Beyond Europe: An Archeology of Anthropology from the Renaissance to the Twentieth Century. Professor McGrane is a graduate of Fairfield University and has a doctorate from New York University. He has taught at Norwich University. ¶ David P. O'Brien, assistant professor of psychology, was a counselor in the Massachusetts mental health department after receiving a bachelor's degree in philosophy and psychology at Boston University. Professor O'Brien's doctoral dissertation at Temple University focused on the development of logical thinking in children and adolescents. ¶ Laurence D. Richards, assistant professor of administrative science, received his bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering from the University of Maine at Orono. He holds a master's in aeronautical engineering from the University of West Florida, a master's of business administration from Mississippi State University, and a doctorate from the University of Pennsylvania. Professor Richards was formerly a jet pilot and flight instructor in the U.S. Marine Corps, a research fellow at the Logistics Management Institute in Washington, D.C., and has published articles on constraint theory and management indication.

Robert S. Weisbrot, assistant professor of history, is a graduate of Brandeis University. His senior honors thesis, "Jews in Argentina, From the Inquisition to Peron," was published after his graduation. He taught black history and recent American political history at Harvard University. His doctoral dissertation is on the black civil rights leader, Father Divine.

The Colby Overseers

The overseers, chosen from alumni, parents, and other friends of the college, have been established by the trustees. Elected to renewable four-year terms, members, which number 26, will annually review the president's report and will serve on visiting committees to the college's departments and programs.

At least once every four years, a committee will visit each department to learn its strengths, needs, and future plans. This year, overseers will review the economics, administrative science, biology, chemistry, and English departments and the career planning office.

Because the overseers include accomplished business people, academics, and physicians, they will have an "expert" point of view. President Cotter noted that they will not, however, be evaluating individual faculty members. Their role is to examine the broader policies of each department or program.

The names which follow are Colby Overseers as of November 1. Additional appointments are being made and will be announced.

Richard Lloyd Abedon '56, Chairman, Richard L. Abedon Company, Visiting Committee on Economics and Administrative Science. ¶ Harold Alfond, L.H.D. '80, Chairman of the Board, Dexter Shoe Co., Visiting Committee on Physical Education and Athletics. ¶ Leigh Buchanan Bangs '58, Research Leader, Dow Chemical Co., Visiting Committee on Chemistry. ¶ Clifford Allan Bean '51, Management Consultant, Arthur D. Little, Incorporated, Visiting Committee on Economics and Administrative Science.

Patricia Downs Berger '62, Physician, Visiting Committee on Biology. ¶ Anne Lawrence Bondy '46, President, Board of Cooperative Educational Services, Southern Westchester, N.Y., Visiting Committee on English. ¶ Jennie Davis Brown '55, Director, Essex County (New Jersey) Division of Correctional Services, Visiting Committee in the Social Sciences. ¶ Ralph Johnson Bunche, Jr. '65, Vice-President, Morgan Guaranty Trust, London Branch, Honorary Chairman, Ralph J. Bunche Scholars Program. ¶ Clark Hopkins Carter '40, L.H.D. '80, Vice-President, Richardson-Merrell Incorporated, Trustee Committee on Budget and Finance.

Augustine Anthony D'Amico '28, D.F.A. '78, President, retired, Penobscot Paint Co., Trustee Committee on Buildings and Grounds. ¶ Edith Eilene Emery '37, Associate Dean of Students, retired, Northeastern University, Visiting Committee on Student Affairs. ¶ John W. Field, Sr., Former Chairman of the Board of Warnaco, Visiting Committee on Economics and Administrative Science.

Rae Jean Goodman '69, Assistant Professor of Economics, U.S. Naval Academy, Visiting Committee on Economics and Administrative Science. ¶ Gerald J. Holtz '52, C.P.A., Arthur Andersen and Company, Trustee Committee on Planning. ¶ Philip W. Hussey, Jr. '53, President, Hussey Manufacturing Company, Visiting Committee on Economics and Administrative Science.

Edith Kemper Jetté, M.A. '62,

Cofounder, The Friends of Art at Colby, Visiting Committee on Art. ¶ John H. McGowan, Former President, Wyandotte Industries, Trustee Committee on Buildings and Grounds. ¶ Kershaw E. Powell '51, Dentist, Visiting Committee on Biology. ¶ Lawrence R. Pugh '56, President, V.F. Corporation, Trustee Committee on Nominations. ¶ John Franklin Reynolds '36, Sc.D. '78, Chief of Surgery, Mid-Maine Medical Center, Trustee Committee on Student Affairs.

Frederick A. Schreiber '34, Management Consultant, Visiting Committee in the Social Sciences. ¶ Sylvia Caron Sullivan '53, Trustee Committee on Student Affairs. ¶ Barbara Howard Traister '65, Associate Professor of English, Lehigh University, Visiting Committee on English. ¶ Elmer Chapman Warren, Director of Planning Services, retired, National Life Insurance Company, Trustee Committee on Buildings and Grounds. ¶ Esther Ziskind Weltman, L.L.D. '66, Trustee, Jacob Ziskind Trust for Charitable Purposes, Trustee Committee on Educational Policy.

Judith Levine Brody '58 has been appointed assistant to the dean of admissions. Mrs. Brody has taught English in Newton, Mass., and has been a Title One reading tutor in Waterville. Last year, she was a part-time interviewer in the admissions office. ¶ Alison K. Bielli and Walter J. Brooks, assistant deans of admissions, have been promoted to associate deans. ¶ Joan Alway '72, assistant to the dean, is now an assistant dean of admissions.

Sherman A. Rosser, Jr., assistant to the dean of admissions, has resigned to become assistant director of admissions at Boston College.

Finegan

Warren J. Finegan '51 of Wayland, Mass., has been appointed an alumni trustee by the executive committee of the alumni council. He replaces Peter Vlachos '58, who resigned. A senior account executive with First Commodity Corporation in Boston, Mr. Finegan is a graduate of the School of Financial Marketing and Public Relations at Northwestern University. He is a former vice-chairman and chairman of the alumni council, former president of the Boston Alumni association and the Boston Colby Club, and was an overseer. In 1973, he was awarded a Colby Brick.

Laurie Fitts '75 has resigned as associate director of annual giving. She joined the development staff in 1976.

Kingsley Harlow Birge 1916–1980

Kingsley Harlow Birge, professor and former chairman of the sociology department, died July 17 at his summer home in Georgetown at the age of 64.

He was born in Worcester, Mass., and grew up in that state, and in Istanbul, Turkey, where his parents were educational missionaries. A graduate of high school at Robert College in Istanbul, and of Deerfield Academy, he received his undergraduate education at Dartmouth College, and his doctorate from Yale University in 1946. He joined the Colby faculty that year, and in 1962 became chairman of the department, a position he held for more than a decade. A specialist in social behavior, Professor Birge always questioned the easy assumption, the deeply cynical idea. He wanted to know what made a society good. In an article in 1952 for the Colby Scholar, a now-defunct journal he helped establish, he wrote:

People who believe that warfare is a natural consequence of inborn tendencies to aggression must explain the fact that soldiers have to be drafted against their will, that there are innumerable pressures from society to fight wars when the time comes, that soldiers receive a wide variety of rewards for doing their duty, and are punished for not doing what they are called upon to do, that a steady and intense propaganda is aimed at reinforcing the will to fight. Such an arrangement of rewards and punishments and influences implies that war cannot be so simply explained in terms of inborn tendencies.

His teaching methods were often called Socratic, a term Gustave Todrank discussed in the memorial service. "Like Socrates, he enticed students into an intellectual safari of ever-expanding horizons which led the students to make their own discoveries." Professor Todrank remembered Kingsley Birge as a man who believed what Alfred North Whitehead proposed, that it was more important for an idea to be interesting than true. The fascinating idea, even if fallacious, was a kind of lure for students.

Stephen Marks, formerly a sociology professor at Colby, said: "He reshaped the thrust of my intellect in the most gentle and unprepossessing manner imaginable and it is not an exaggeration to say that everything I've written since then was written for him and everything always will be."

He is survived by his wife, Jane Burges Sill Birge, whom he married in 1940, his daughter, Darice, a brother and two sisters.

The sociology department has established the Kingsley H. Birge Memorial Fund for an annual lecture in his name. Individuals wishing to contribute may call or write Professor Frederick A. Geib at Colby College.

A Tribute

ONE OF THE MOST GRATIFYING EXPERIENCES OF these years of retirement has come with the chance to meet former Colby students and to listen to stories of the classroom, and reminiscences of the teachers who influenced their undergraduate days. A name that comes up as often as any, and always with great respect and affection, is that of Kingsley Birge. Of King's outstanding contribution there can be no question. He had the mind of a productive scholar—that is one of the reasons he taught so well. He had also a genuine enthusiasm for the teaching process itself. I didn't visit his classes, but I often watched him in action with groups of students, or sometimes students and faculty, at informal gatherings.

It was always both interesting and amusing to note his method. Whether it was consciously cultivated, or simply his natural way of talking and acting, I don't know, but certainly it was effective in holding his hearers' attention and getting their response. He would start with a statement or question put in such extreme terms as to bring a shock. At the same time he would assume a posture of intense concentration, as though this were a matter of extreme significance, calling for the best thought and most serious reflection. Then after a few minutes his mood would relax, frequently his face would break into a broad smile, and his whole demeanor would suggest that, momentous as the subject matter was, and stringent as were its demands on the mind, the feelings should not be too deeply involved. As a result, the initial shock would give way to amusement and appreciation for King's method of getting attention, while the sense of the weightiness of the topic would remain.

King had a feeling for the college as a teaching institution as well as for the teaching hour itself. He suggested a number of devices for stimulating the intellectual interest of the community. One of these was for the "Book of the Year." We used to choose a book that had implications for thought in many fields and ask all students to read it. Then the faculty would discuss it in class and show how it illustrated the need of keeping alive an awareness of the college's overall purpose in an age of specialization. King was also very active on the committee which founded and edited the Colby Scholar, a journal which published the work of faculty and students and appeared from time to time as we were able to find financial backing.

His colleagues in sociology may not take this as the compliment it is intended to be, but I always thought of King as a philosopher who happened to have specialized in the sociological field. His concern was for the universal, the ultimately rational, the idea that must be true because its opposite is unthinkable. The Socratic method, as he employed it, effectively made his hearers aware of the college as a place for the raising of many questions and the discovery of answers to some. Students went out from his influence to become philosophers themselves.

King's father, J. Kingsley Birge, was a missionary and a scholar. He had a keen interest in his fellow men as human beings and as a trained etymologist became the editor of a standard dictionary of the Turkish language. His maternal uncle, Ralph Harlow, professor at Smith College, was a prophet of social justice straight out of the Old Testament. King himself had the qualities of both men—the human concern, the scholarly ability, and the passion for social righteousness. His wife Jane, a Ph.D. herself, shared these interests and made theirs a home that contributed in rich fashion to the life of the Colby community. To both the college owes a great debt.

Endings and Beginnings: A Young Family's Experience with Death and Renewal

by Sandra Hayward Albertson '64
Random House: 1980

"Most of us proceed, I suspect, as if we believed personal mortality to be an unfounded rumor."

Mark David Albertson '64, a graduate student at the University of Pennsylvania, and the author's husband, died of cancer in 1972, at the age of 29. The book's elements are, according to a New York Times review, "How a family faces the dying of one of its members, how they become more open with each other, and with those on the outside, how they persuade the medical profession of their views, their search for an 'open' physician, how the false hopes that arise during remission sustain them all for a while and how the terror of the return of the disease afflicts them."

All through the 1960's, the Albertsons refused to pay the federal tax on the telephone bill, a tax which was used to augment the national military budget. They calmly enclosed a note explaining they were morally opposed to the war in Viet Nam, while the I.R.S. placed a lien on their car and drew money from their bank accounts. It is this steady, almost childish naive belief in the strength of the individual which characterizes Mark and Sandra Albertson's reaction to the awesome: the unconscionable war efforts, the terminal illness.

When Mrs. Albertson could not believe that her husband's death was ordained for any purpose, she set out to find some meaning in it. As part of her graduate work, she designed a curriculum introducing the subject of death into Chicago's public school system, she led workshops to help health care people understand the terminally ill and their families, and she wrote this book.

Ores to Metals

The Rocky Mountain Smelting Industry

by James E. Fell, Jr. '66

The University of Nebraska Press: 1979

Smelting, the melting process by which metal is separated from ore, played an indispensable role in the minerals industry of the American West. The industry leaders rose, succeeded, and died in symbiosis with the mines they served. They have not so far received the attention given to the more mythical and attractive aspects of gold and silver mining.

The author, an historian at the Colorado State Historic Preservation Office, sets out to remedy this neglect. He writes about the people, the technology, and the business decisions that shaped the smelting industry in the Rocky Mountains.

The smelters of Colorado appeared in the 1860's when miners desperately needed a technology that could recover gold and silver from ores resistant to milling. Once begun, the industry evolved from one composed of several hundred small ventures reducing ores in isolated mining camps to one composed of several large, integrated firms operating in major cities—Leadville, Denver, Pueblo, and Durango. A long series of mergers finally culminated with the formation of the American Smelting and Refining Company.

Drawing heavily on archival materials, Mr. Fell shows how the entrepreneurs in the industry adjusted to competition, how they exploited new opportunities, and how they coped with changing ore markets.

Rebellion and Democracy in Meiji Japan

by Roger W. Bowen

University of California Press: 1980

Three popular rebellions that occurred during the late 19th century in Japan in the name of democratic principles are analyzed in this book by Professor Bowen of the government department. Examining the objectives, the people involved, and the methods of the Fukushima, Kabasan, and Chichibu incidents, the author shows how the rebellions were related to the popular rights movements of the 1870's and early 1880's. Throughout the book, particularly in the appendices listing biographical data on the leaders of the rebellions, Professor Bowen avoids the "great man" theory of history: he is clearly interested in the many middle-level farmers who became agitators during this period.

The common objective of the three incidents was the establishment of a constitutional and representational form of government. The rebels were farmers oppressed by the government and a fluctuating economy. The conditions that bred the rebellions are outlined: an historic tradition of rebellion in the area; a changing agrarian social structure, whereby farmers became politically active; the farmers' vulnerability to changing market situations; and the attempts by the Meiji government to exploit the agrarian community to create a solid industrial base for the modern economy. A national liberal party emerged out of the popular rights movement of this time.

It was a movement that failed, on the surface at least. The efforts to change the system, through everything from litigation to violence, were crushed by the government. Many of the leaders were executed or stripped of property. But, to say that the movement was without consequence is untrue. Professor Bowen concludes the book by writing, "I would say, first, that the warm reception the people of Japan gave to Taisho democracy (1912-1926), and second, the equally warm one they gave to the democratic reforms effected by the Occupation after the Second World War lead us to infer that the effects of the democratic experiment begun by the farmers of the 1880's were not lost to subsequent generations."

"This is not simply a business of ringing doorbells"

CHARLES PENROSE WILLIAMSON, JR. '63, WHO BEGAN IN September as the director of alumni relations and annual giving, plans to "build on the accomplishments of [his] predecessors: to improve the clubs, and the annual giving participation, and to inform the alumni about the college."

"Pen" has long been active in alumni affairs. "I first served on the alumni council, as my class representative, in 1969," he said. "Through the years the alumni have become more informed, and their role has been expanded. They are interviewing prospective students, evaluating the broader policies of the college, and recommending changes. They interviewed the final candidates for college president. They serve as trustees and several alumni are overseers, as part of Colby's new program. Alumni becoming more involved is part of the steady progress of the college."

A good part of Williamson's time will be devoted to improving annual giving, financial support from alumni. He said that he would like to "personalize this business more. We are asking people to make a commitment and an investment, and few people can evaluate the college from a form letter. I'd like to see trustees, staff, and volunteers visit alumni, so that we can answer their questions about Colby. Some people believe that donating should be part of every Colby person's life—and I agree—but we cannot take that for granted. We have had a rising participation rate for years: 40% of our alumni annually donate to the college. This puts us in the top two-thirds of all colleges in the country. I would like to see Colby achieve a 50% participation rate within a few years."

The clubs are part of the efforts to keep alumni informed and to promote participation. Frequently, a professor or an administrator will talk to club members. Jean Papalia, associate director of alumni relations, reports that in the last year, the number of events has increased more than 50%. The alumni clubs raise scholarship funds, organize telethons, and hold receptions for prospective students. "We want to organize more clubs," said Williamson, "because we believe that wherever Colby people are, they want to know more about the college. President Cotter's October trip to the West Coast made this evident. More than 50 people attended his talk in Seattle, where there is not even a club established."

Pen Williamson concluded by answering a question he is often asked. "When people wonder why I am in fund raising, I tell them that it is not simply a business of ringing doorbells. The nice thing about this work is that people endorse what you believe in, they endorse Colby College as a place for quality education."

Colby and East Germany

"For various reasons, the average American citizen knows little about the German Democratic Republic (the G.D.R., or what many call East Germany). That the former capital of the Third Reich, the now-divided city of Berlin, is more than 100 miles inside the borders of the G.D.R. seems astonishing to most Americans, yet the city was partitioned 35 years ago," writes Professor of Modern Languages John Reynolds in his forthcoming book. The G.D.R. Reader will be the first book for American students on that section of Germany which became a Soviet zone in the settlements after World War II.

The book is about the country where the Berlin Wall is both a reality and a metaphor, a country which has risen from the wreckage of the war to develop one of the most successful industrial complexes in the world, with the highest standard of living of any Soviet-bloc society.

Professor Reynolds used information gathered from G.D.R. publications, from Western newspapers and journals, and from his research trips to the country, particularly his four-month visit to Leipzig in 1978 as an International Research and Exchange Fellow. Reinhard Isensee, who taught here last year, inaugurating Colby's unique program of inviting an East German lecturer each year, also helped Reynolds.

In an Alumnus interview, Professor Reynolds talked about the country, his book, and Colby's program with the G.D.R.

The Brandenburg Gate, the entrance to what years before was the center of Berlin. The Wall is just in front of it; the stand at right is for tourists from the West.

What is the purpose of the book, and why did you write it?

The book is designed to compliment courses on East and West Germany in this country. The G.D.R. gets shortchanged since there is little information about it compiled in English.

Most people, of course, believe the country is Soviet-dominated, but few realize how dramatically the country has developed since 1949. For example, in three years, the country has built 30,000 apartments outside of Berlin, working night and day, to fulfill their plans. They are seventh in the world in per capita income. From 1945-1949 it was a Soviet zone. Between 1949, when it became a country, and 1961, when the Wall was built, many skilled workers left the country, lured by better paying jobs and prosperity in the West. The Berlin Wall saved the G.D.R.: the government had to do something, they were losing so many people. With the Wall, their industry flourished. The citizens are seldom allowed to go to the West, except for brief periods of time, when they may attend funerals and other family occasions. They are allowed, however, to have visitors from the West.

Several divisions of the Soviet army are there, and the Soviets are consulted on major policies. The G.D.R. belongs to a trade organization called Come-Con (Council on Mutual Economic Advice), a group of Soviet-bloc countries that work together, somewhat like the Common Market countries. Production and development are supposed to be coordinated, but the G.D.R. produces at a tremendous rate, and the other member nations are envious.

The East Germans are so successful for several reasons: they are well-organized, efficient, and hard-working. They also have always had the technology—the experience in optics, agricultural machinery, and precision tools—which is crucial to industrialization. Both men and women work in that country: husbands and wives wake up early in the morning, take their children to government care centers, and put in a full day. In an area the size of Maine, they produce enough food for 17 million citizens and for exportation. Eastern Germany was the agricultural region of Germany, so they have always had the technology that is now imitated around the world.

The price of such industrialization is pollution. The chemical and rubber industries, and energy production complex, are based on the use of soft coal, so in cities such as Halle and Jena, you can hardly breathe, and there are few rivers with fish.

What is education like in the G.D.R.?

Reinhard Isensee told me that students in the G.D.R. take more classes than Americans: 40 hours of instruction a week. Ten years of polytechnical education—where in addition to classroom work, students learn how factories operate—are obligatory for every child. Students are required to take a course in Marxist-Leninist thought. Even if you're an engineer, you have to know socialist economic philosophy.

What is Colby's program with the G.D.R.?

Unlike just about every university that has tried to start a program with the G.D.R., we explicitly wrote what we wanted, and sent it to the G.D.R. Ministry of Higher Education. We asked for someone who was young, who was in American Studies or English literature, and who could live in the dormitory. When the letter arrived at the ministry, Reinhard Isensee was working as an interpreter there. It was a happy meeting.

Several institutions have expressed interest in our program and were quite surprised the the G.D.R. chose Colby, instead of a large or urban university, which may have been trying for years to start a program. Brown University does have a program, but on the graduate level, and it had taken them eight years to establish it. That it took us only six months is a reflection of the improved political climate between the G.D.R. and the United States. A cultural pact between the two countries is in Berlin, pending the signature of East Germany. It will be the first such agreement in history for our country and the G.D.R.

I first contacted the G.D.R.'s higher education ministry in the fall of 1978, and by the spring of 1979, the program was underway.

Reinhard returned in January, and met with the Minister of Education, telling him that the program was successful, and should continue.

The new lecturer from the G.D.R. is Elfi Schneidenbach, from the Friedrich-Schiller University in Jena. She has finished her doctoral dissertation in American Studies, and her minor is in German, a requirement of Colby's. Here, she will teach German literature, take American Studies courses, and give seminars on the G.D.R.

Does the G.D.R. want lecturers to visit from Colby?

Yes, I've been invited. My speciality, however, is 18th century German literature. They want someone to come over and teach American Studies. Although the pay is lower there, a few Colby professors have expressed interest in lecturing in East Germany.

The country would also like to have American students visit. They reserve two places in their summer courses every year for Colby students, but so far, no one has taken them, even after the G.D.R. waived the tuition.

Do you think that as the country becomes more attractive to live in, the Wall will be removed, that the government won't need it anymore?

I was talking to a friend in the government there, and he said, "Give us ten years." That was five years ago. There will still be a wall, but it will be easier for the citizens to participate in Western programs such as Colby's. Reinhard visited and Elfi is here now, so it seems the situation is changing. The G.D.R. is no longer paranoid about people running away. There is a growing pride in the country, and a high standard of living, so there are incentives to stay in East Germany.

Would it be a temptation for a lecturer from the G.D.R. to defect?

I'm sure the people they send here have to be trustworthy. Reinhard was a member of the S.E.D., the Sozialistische Einheitspartei Deutschlands, the ruling political party. He is convinced that socialism will work in the G.D.R., and wants to be there to see that. So, there was no real danger that he would stay in this country. A lot of people did ask him questions such as, "Wouldn't it be nice to own a Honda, or to buy a piece of land on Great Pond?" He said, no, not really. What puzzled him were the different prices—he would see the same thing in the A&P and the First National for different costs, and didn't understand it, since prices are fixed in the G.D.R.

He was impressed with the United States, especially by the industry. After hearing about the contradictions in the free-market system, and that the Gross National Product was going down, he was surprised at the tremendous industrial power in this country, which you can see every time you get on a train that travels through the outside of a city.

He sent business books and American literature back to the G.D.R. The libraries in the country separate Western reading materials, which are considered to be dangerous, and reserve them for certain people, such as scholars. The government does approve of American authors—Ernest Hemingway, Frank Norris, and Joseph Heller—who write about the working class.

Are there parts of the book which may damage Colby's relations with the G.D.R.?

I hope not. I've tried to be scholarly, and that should not offend anyone. My task is to explain the G.D.R. as the average citizen experiences it. I wanted to write it in an objective way, so that negative entities such as the Wall could be treated as a necessity. It is still horrible to have a wall, but I wrote about what it meant to the development of the G.D.R.

There is a new idea there which I call positive criticism. You may criticize anything in the G.D.R. if it is being corrected. You may complain about the shortage of cars, or the condition of your apartment, because those, eventually, will be corrected. But you may not criticize the Wall, or a state-owned restaurant, or socialism as a system that won't work, because the system absolutely works. The punishment for such criticism is up to eight years in jail.

How much tolerance is there for dissidents in the G.D.R.?

I do know that when outspoken critics of the government are invited by the West to lecture, and receive permission to go, the G.D.R. may cancel their passports when they try to return. The dissidents may still write, but they, in effect, have lost their voices. If they are in France, or elsewhere, there is little point in complaining because no one from the East will ever hear from them again. The famous protest-song writer, Wolf Biermann, for example, was not allowed to return to the G.D.R. after he visited the West. He was devastated, since his friends and relatives were still in the country. The G.D.R. lost many good people that way. Cancelling a passport, however, is a last resort. First, meetings are held to discuss the merits of a writer's works, and if the members of, say, the Writer's Guild find the works lacking in any way, the writer is expelled from the Guild. He or she can no longer be published.

Writers have to write what is favorable to the advancement of socialism. That is the function of a writer in a socialist country. It may seem like repression to us, but they become writers because they believe in socialism. There are various kinds of social and political repression in the G.D.R. For instance, if a professor is not a member of the S.E.D., his chances of promotion at a university are lessened. All of the important jobs in the country are held by members of the party. There are no guards, however, standing outside of churches telling people that they may not go in, and they have elections in which they vote. The citizens cannot criticize socialism, but there is a common Western assumption that they wish to.

Every week, workers go to meetings in factories and apartment complexes, where they are urged to discuss any dissatisfactions. If they don't like the way an assembly line is being run, they may complain.

When students read the chapters on the structures of the government and how the party works, they will think it is a wonderful system. The complaints are discussed at meetings, and suggestions work their way up to the factory administrators, and solutions umbrella out until everyone benefits. Well, it doesn't always work that way. It should, but it doesn't now. The people want a wider variety of consumer goods and more apartments, but the government has to support the Soviet army stationed there, and construct more buildings. The government just cannot solve every problem. The system works as best it can, but it doesn't work for everyone.

Are the citizens satisfied with their lives in the G.D.R.?

Most are, particularly the young. The government supports its people with free education, medical and child care. I have heard many citizens say that at least they have a job and a guaranteed income. They are assured of a thirteen-month income every year. What the G.D.R. does for workers is incredible. Companies build summer housing complexes on lakes where workers spend vacations. Many Americans would ask, what if you don't want to go to the lake, what if you want to spend the summer in Marseilles? Well, the answer is no. You can visit Prague, or the Carpatian Mountains, or the Black Sea, but you cannot go to the West.

The Invention of the ALCAEUS COOLEY WORKS IN A grey wooden building on Preble Street in Portland. That he works in a wooden building is ironic, because for nearly 50 years, Mr. Cooley, in his steady, gracious way, has promoted brick as the most enduring and beautiful of building materials. In his 80's, he is a tall man, with fine posture, who is the president, owner, and one of two employees (his secretary of 40 years is the other) of the North Yarmouth Brick Company. Cooley has consistently sold 80-90 percent of the bricks used in Maine, and an appreciable number throughout New England, including those that are a part of Boston's city hall, and which pave some of the streets and sidewalks in Portland.

In the 1930's, as a sales representative for the Morin Company of Danville, Cooley designed the Colby Brick. When the Mayflower Hill campus was being planned, Harvard and Dartmouth already had specially produced bricks that had become brand names in the trade. Jens Frederick Larson, the architect who had designed the Baker Library at Dartmouth, and Walter Wyman, chairman of the building committee, wanted a material that would symbolize the new and innovative character of the Colby campus. They invited

"It's a skill setting those bricks in the kiln, the men who did it were called 'setters,' the 'burners' fired the kiln, and the men who mixed the clay and molded the bricks were called 'strikers.' Most brick manufacturers are proud of what they do."

twelve manufacturers to present brick samples for consideration.

Cooley remembers, "Morin was initially pretty well satisfied that I couldn't get the contract but I persisted." What, exactly, the building committee wanted was never explained. "I spent two years submitting slightly different versions. I can't tell you how many bricks I put into a one-pipe heater before the architect approved. After Morin won the contract for 27 million bricks, I said that my sister had graduated from Colby. Mr. Wyman joked that if I had mentioned that earlier, I could have saved myself two years of work. I promoted the brick steadily, but I like to believe the product sold itself."

Like any proper brick, the Colby should endure. Archeologists are still unearthing bricks that were part of Babylonian civilization 6,000 years ago. The Colby is made in much the same way. Clay, which is essentially pulverized granite, is mined from riverbeds, slaked like lime, mixed with a small amount of sand, dried in the sun, and baked. Water and controlled heat change it until it no longer resembles clay, but acquires a phenomenal strength of its own. In comparison, wood and concrete seem fragile, and the Mayflower Hill campus is built to withstand Maine's particular brand of temperate weather. They may be tested by earthquake and nuclear war, but the bricks, if not the mortar that connects them, will likely last for centuries.

Because of the long and specific process of its manufacture, the Colby is functional, and distinctively beautiful. From mixing the clay to removing it from the kiln, the brick takes 40 days, and according to its designer, the color, texture, and surface in combination have never been reproduced by another company. Sunlight and where it is placed in the kiln (pronounced "kill") by Cooley and other strikers) determine the deepness of color, ranging from a roan to a near-black. Dashing the mold with water, or "water striking," scars the surface, and the edges are intentionally slightly jagged. Waterglass glosses the surface. Except that oil, instead of wood, now fires the kilns, the process at Danville has remained the same.

In 1931, Cooley was unemployed, and he had to choose between working in a bank in Florida, or managing the Morin Company. Running a business in Maine in the middle of the depression seemed an inescapable challenge, and a chance to live in the state that he loved. Now, at 82, Al Cooley continues to arrive at his office early in the morning to begin again the business of selling bricks. He has not regretted the decision he made in the 1930's.

"I never cared for 'material things,' " he said, "but for what I think are 'real' things, buildings that last, where you can help out and you know it. That's the kind of work I like. It's a skill setting those bricks in the kiln, the men who did it were called 'setters,' the 'burners' fired the kiln, and the men who mixed the clay and molded the bricks were called 'strikers.' Most brick manufacturers are proud of what they do."

The Human Development Major: Product of an Era

by Leonard Mayo

AFTER NEARLY HALF A CENTURY MY WIFE AND I returned to Colby in the mid-1960's for five exciting and rewarding years. The opening of college in the fall of our return is a delightful recollection. It was one of those September days one can experience only in Maine; although a touch of fall was in the air, no haze dulled the blue of the sky, and no tell-tale leaves were in evidence on the maples. Following the freshman convocation, and as the hour for the first classes of the new college year approached, students walking singly, with a friend or two, or in small groups began moving slowly across the campus. I stood just to the right of Runnalls Union, where the convocation had been held, and watched the scene unfold. Away, for the time being at least, from the tensions of the Vietnam war, remote from the distractions of a large city, here was a stronghold of our society where freedom of thought, of speech and assembly prevailed and where faculty and students alike were motivated to seek the truth and declare it.

I had had no exposure to academic life on a small campus since I had graduated from Colby. This new experience was like a rebirth. Every aspect of student life and faculty activity was of interest and concern. I worked like a beaver to prepare my first lecture and listened with admiration as I heard my experienced colleagues expound and lead discussions in the classroom. I remarked one day to President Bob Strider that on starting out as a faculty member at the college I had attended I felt as humble as the greenest freshman. "I'm sorry, Len," Bob said, "but that's hardly humble enough!"

As the months went by the Vietnam war intensified. The bombing of Cambodia and the tragedy at Kent State fed the smouldering fires of student protest and anger and exacerbated the tensions that already existed. If students lost their perspective in those days so did many of their elders on the campuses of the country.

One evening in the spring of 1968 I was invited to speak to the student group that was staging a "sit-in" in the chapel. As I talked with several of the leaders ahead of time I realized how vulnerable they were, how insecure and confused and yet how idealistic in reaching out for something in which they could believe and to which they could hold. Later I tried to help the "sitters" see how desperately we needed each other and how important a sense of community was on a college campus when the nation was torn by dissension. They listened but they were responding to the frustration and impotence they felt at their inability to influence national policy; the next best thing was to demand changes in the college environment—and so they continued their protest for a time.

Perhaps never had the conflict of I vs. we, self vs. community, and gratification vs. restraint been as obvious as it was in the mid-1960's. The irony was that basically students, faculty, administration, and board shared the same goals: an end to the Vietnam war, a country increasingly sensitive to human needs and rights, and a college community that reflected such values. As the Vietnam tragedy continued, however, we all began to realize how vital in meeting the problems we were facing on campus was an understanding of those who were torn by conflicting loyalties and overwhelmed by the reality of a war they could not justify. On the campus, I was finding a long held conviction confirmed: that the top priority in higher education should be the development of every student as an individual with a sense of responsibility and obligation to the community.

At first, during these exciting years, it was easy to forget that I had returned to Colby for a specific purpose—to explore the possibility and hopefully to help establish an interdisciplinary major in human development, a program that would integrate some of the major contributions of the social and natural sciences and provide the basis for a coordinated approach to social problems.

I first discussed the idea of a major in human development with Ed Turner over breakfast in Boston in March, 1964. Outlining for the first time a plan that had been forming in my mind for some months, I took the menu and traced on the back a rough sketch of a program or major in human development. Ed was interested and urged me to write a memo to the president spelling out the suggestion in some detail. I did so, and with Bob Strider's encouragement I took the next step. I talked with Margaret Payson, L.H.D. '56, a highly valued friend whose interest in child welfare and family services as well as higher education set her apart as one of the first citizens of Maine. Her willingness to support

Contributors to Colby

July 1, 1979—June 30, 1980

Dear Alumni, Parents, and Friends:

Thank you for your contributions to the Annual Fund. Last year was certainly one to remember, for you helped us set a high standard for the years to come.

Moreover, the response to the fund-raising effort constitutes an enthusiastic and tangible endorsement of President Cotter and is a reaffirmation of your dedication to the concept of the private liberal arts college. You support Colby because you wish to perpetuate quality education.

Many of the accomplishments of the past year are attributable to the hard work of Frank Stephenson, the former Director of Alumni Relations and Annual Giving. He never considered that our endeavors would be anything but successful. He gave us his inexhaustible energy and his friendship, and the results are a testimony to his effectiveness. I never met a Colby person who did not like Frank; we will miss him, and we wish him well.

To Associate Director Laurie Fitts, who unfortunately is also leaving, our thanks and gratitude for years of going that extra mile for us. Her contagious enthusiasm and ability to get things done will be long remembered.

Colby is fortunate to have Charles "Pen" Williamson '63 as our new Director of Alumni Relations and Annual Giving. He is superbly qualified for this job, and his friendly manner and concern for others are consistent with the tradition established by his Colby predecessors.

To all of you who gave, and to those alumni volunteer workers who made me appear to be so effective, I say thank you for Colby and for the future generations of students. Remember, we needed you yesterday, and we will need you tomorrow because the quest for excellence in education is unending.

Through your generosity you have formed an inseparable and personally rewarding alliance with Colby. You are the strength of the college today, as well as the promise of its future.

Sincerely,

Planned Gifts are vital resources that enhance the future success of Colby. These include Life Income Plans/Trusts with Colby the current trustee, which earn lifetime income for the donor and/or other loved ones; gifts of life insurance, land, or residences with retained life estate; and certain known established trusts managed by outside banks, etc. We extend our thanks to those alumni and friends for whom this form of giving is best suited.

We regarded a major in human development as far more than a curriculum innovation; actually we saw it as a way of learning about the origins of man and hence about oneself and the complexities of human nature.

the plan financially, which she quite properly called "an experiment," and her continuing concern and backing were indispensable to the entire undertaking.

We regarded a major in human development as far more than a curriculum innovation; actually we saw it as a way of learning about the origins of man and hence about oneself and the complexities of human nature. And in a sense it could be a way of restating and reemphasizing some of the basic concepts to which Colby had been committed since the day of its founding. "It is necessary," I wrote later in reflecting on the importance of the major, "for any institution from time to time to reaffirm its tenets and to declare in new terms, and via new manifestations, the beliefs and the convictions it holds dear."

The Constitution Convention held in 1969 went a long way in helping us to reestablish these values and to set the stage for a proposed major. "Con Con," as we called it, designed to examine and recommend changes in the governance of the college, also turned out to be a healing experience. Representatives from every constituency of the college made up the delegate body of over a hundred. The Convention, conducted under strict, but not rigid, rules of order, was an exercise in change via negotiation, compromise, and majority rule as opposed to the revolutionary methods advocated by a few students.

All this was grist to the mill of the new major for the experience in compromise and self-discipline was a ready-made demonstration in the art and skill of human relations. In addition, the department chairmen in the social and natural sciences were receptive, many students were interested, the administration could be counted on for support, and there were movements afoot to establish interdisciplinary programs in other fields. It appeared to be a propitious time to move. A task force of faculty members drew up a plan for the proposed major in human development, presented it to the Educational Policy Committee, which approved it, and then to the faculty as a whole. An idea in generic form is one thing, a specific proposal that naturally raises questions as to philosophy, content, structure, and relationships is quite another. After lively discussion, the motion to approve was tabled.

That was 1969. It was not until 1974 that the faculty approved a comprehensive plan for the major; but it was a much better plan than the one originally proposed and it had the full backing of all the appropriate department chairmen.

It is good to report that the human development major continues at Colby. It has been successful both in the quality and number of students it has attracted and also, I believe, in demonstrating the validity of this type of interdepartmental and interdisciplinary program: nearly one hundred students have registered in the program since its inception in the fall of 1975. The program has never had a full-time director, so its success is all the more remarkable.

Certainly the most satisfying recollection of my five years on campus in the 1960's is of those students who found constructive outlets for their concerns in participating in a variety of social programs. Literally hundreds of students took the time on afternoons, evenings, during vacations, and as their choice for the Jan Plan to volunteer in public schools, day-care centers, and schools and clinics for the mentally retarded and emotionally disturbed. They worked with the aged, in hospitals for the mentally ill, and in city and county welfare departments.

What better way could there be to express concern and at the same time learn something of the complexity of human problems and the importance of what René Dubos, the distinguished biologist and a Colby honorary degree recipient, has called "training in the interpenetration of different forms of knowledge?"

Leonard Mayo '22, D.S.Sc. '42, taught from 1966 to 1971 as Colby's first professor of human development, an interdisciplinary major he helped create. A former trustee, he also has served on four White House Conferences on children and youth, and as president of both the Child Welfare League of America and the International Union for World Welfare. An endowed professorship, honoring Dr. Mayo, was established at the School of Applied Social Sciences at Case Western Reserve University in 1978.

Broadsides from the Cuala Press

FOR ALMOST FORTY YEARS, AND IN THE NAME OF Irish Nationalism, Cuala Industries accomplished what a small press is seldom capable of: the high quality production of both established and new literature. Founded in 1908 by Elizabeth and Lily Yeats, sisters of the poet, William Butler Yeats, the Cuala Press printed poetry, drama, and essays, in books and on broadsides, using fine Irish paper and nearly forgotten but classical typography. The "weird sisters" as James Joyce called them in Ulysses, published the obscure and the influential: they revived Gaelic folklore and printed for the first time works by modern writers such as Ezra Pound, W. B. Yeats, John Synge, Lady Gregory, and Sean O'Faolain. Through the first gift of James Healy, establishing the Irish literature collection in 1948, Colby College holds the entire run of the sixty-seven book series, several special editions, and almost all of the broadsides of the Cuala Press.

Elizabeth Corbett Yeats was particularly suited to founding the press. Her family was dedicated to Ireland through literature and art, and was surrounded by a community of artists and writers. As a young woman, she had studied with the foremost typographer of her time—Emery Walker of the Kelmscott Press, and as her father, John Butler Yeats, once wrote, "Elizabeth is not meditative, but has a certain salient talent for constructive work." She was, however, supposed to have been afraid of machines.

Elizabeth and Lily studied embroidery design with William Morris, architect and owner of the Kelmscott Press. Lily stayed on, while Elizabeth took a course at the Women's Printing Society in London. In the early part of the century, hand-press work was a woman's craft, much like embroidery or weaving. Later, from her lessons with Walker, Elizabeth developed her simple and discerning taste in book production. The Cuala books are all printed in plain Caslon type, which was a font out of general use for a hundred years, on a high-rag-content paper, bound in blue linen-covered board.

The Yeats sisters and Evelyn Gleeson, another young woman who studied with Morris, founded Dun Emer Industries, dedicated to embroidery, rug production, and book publishing. Five years later, Elizabeth and Lily left to start the Cuala Press. Miss Gleeson continued to make rugs for Dun Emer. The Cuala Press is named after the barony in which it is located, Bri Cuallann. Soon after Colby acquired the books, College Historian Ernest C. Marriner wrote

Sean O'Kelly, then president of the Irish Republic, asking how Cuala should be pronounced. "The C is hard and the u long," replied Mr. O'Kelly. "The proper pronunciation would be like 'koola.' "

The newly established press was staffed by five women, with Elizabeth as its director, and W. B. Yeats as editor. Two books were published annually, as well as broadsides and commissioned greeting cards and special editions. The unifying subject was Ireland.

• SAINT • BRENDAN • THE NAVIGATOR •

ST. EMMORE, ACHILL.

In a 1970 article in the Wesleyan Library Notes, Michael J. Durkan quoted W. B. as writing to a friend, "My sister's books are like an old family magazine. A few hundred people could buy them all and expect a common theme. Only once did I put a book into the series that was not Irish. Ezra Pound's Noh Plays [his translation of the Japanese, ed.], and I had to write a long introduction to annex Ireland to Japan."

In 1908, Elizabeth started "A Broadside," a monthly publication of what looked like small posters: 11 in. x 7 in. pages with colored drawings, calligraphed verse, and musical scores. W. B. Yeats supplied much of the poetry, and their brother, Jack, sketched many of the pictures. Ancient ballads and folklore were published, illustrated with drawings of an idyllic Irish countryside. Three hundred of each four-page edition were printed until 1915, and subsequently revived for several years in the 1930's. Durkan reports what W. B., writing in a letter, had hoped for the series. "We wanted to get new or queer verse into circulation and we shall succeed. The work of Irish poets, quite deliberately put into circulation with its music [from] thirty years ago is now all over the country." The broadsides, with their bright colors and elaborate calligraphy, are as busy as the Cuala books are austere.

The Cuala Press has since been taken over by another company. Elizabeth, who started the press "to give work to Irish girls and to enable us to live in Ireland doing good work," died in 1940, a year after her brother, William. Mrs. W. B. Yeats began managing the press and printed a few books, and many hand-colored prints until her death in 1968. The most vital age of the press, however, was when Elizabeth and William were in charge. As director and publisher, they could often be at odds over what was best for the press, and for Ireland. Michael Durkan's article quotes W. B. Yeats as once saying to his wife, "I'm meeting Elizabeth at the Shelbourne Hotel because there we won't be able to shout at one another." The press was successful because it transcended its purpose as a family business, and even a patriotic one: it printed literature of universal significance in a way that has been destroyed by the industry itself. The quality of production and of writing has ensured that the work of Cuala Industries will be around for a long time.

Colby College's holdings of the books, broadsides, and illustrations of the Cuala and Dun Emer presses can be seen in Special Collections, Monday through Saturday. Background information for this article is from articles by Ernest C. Marriner in the August, 1953 issue of the Colby Library Quarterly and Michael J. Durkan in Wesleyan Library Notes, Spring, 1970.

INTO THE TWILIGHT

UT-WORN HEART IN A TIME OUT-WORN

Come clear of the nets of wrong & right;
Laugh heart again in the gray twilight.
Sigh, heart, again in the dew of the morn.

Your mother Erie is always young,
Dew ever shining and twilight gray;
Though hope fall from you and love decay,
Burning in fires of a slanderous tongue.

Come, heart, where hill is heaped upon hill:
For there the mystical brotherhood
Of sun and moon and hollow and wood
And river and stream work out their will;

And God stands winding His lonely horn,
And time and the world are ever in flight;
And love is less kind than the gray twilight,
And hope is less dear than the dew of the morn.

Women's Tennis Retains State Title; Men's Soccer Rallies to Winning Season

by James Cook '78

Paul Deranian '84

Freshman Sheila Ryan (Walpole, Mass.), shown in action against Univ. of Maine-Farmington, was named a second team Northeast Tournament All-Star.

James Cook '78

The practice paid off. Goalie Jeffra Becknell '82 (Franklin Lakes, N.J.) allowed only 18 goals in 1980.

While Colby's football season was a disappointment, bewildering players, coaches, and fans alike, the other fall sports teams, paced by a top notch women's tennis squad, provided many superior performances.

Women's varsity tennis, under the first-year direction of former team member Beverly Nalbandian '80, continued its tradition of excellence, capturing the state crown for the second consecutive season and winning eight of ten matches. The team gained regional respect by finishing among the top 15 of 57 colleges participating in the New England tournament.

In the state tournament held at Bates, Colby was guaranteed the singles crown as top-seeded Maura Shaughnessy '83 (Sudbury, Mass.) and teammate Brigid McCarthy '83 (San Francisco, Calif.) both reached the final round. Opponents in practice all season, the pair battled four hours for the championship.

After dropping the first set 3-6, McCarthy handed Shaughnessy her first loss of the season by virtue of two grueling 7-6 sets to gain top honors.

The team performance gave Colby the state championship, the third in the past four seasons.

"Superb" is how Coach Debbie Pluck characterized women's field hockey. With a final record of 11-2-1, the team registered its finest campaign.

One reason for the success was the defense led by Captain Sara Bunnell '81 (Norwell, Mass.). The goalie allowed only nine goals while recording seven shutouts.

The White Mules' offense, paced by link Leah Maher '82 (Hudson, Ohio), tallied 47 goals to set a college record.

The team's effort garnered national recognition as Colby was ranked fourth in team offense and second in overall defense among 300 colleges and universities.

In state competition, the women captured second place, beating Univ. of Maine-Presque Isle 3-0 and dropping a 0-2 decision to Univ. of Maine-Orono.

Finishing at 6-5-1, the men's soccer team recorded its third consecutive winning season. The feat, however, was not easily achieved. The team, expected to be among the best in New England at the start, lost four of its first five.

The squad exhibited maturity and composure and bounced back to win six of seven games. A 2-1 win over Bates allowed the White Mules to capture a share of the CBB crown.

"I'm tremendously proud of the way the team turned things around after the horrendous start," said fifth-year coach Mark Serdjenian '73.

The second-year women's soccer team, 3-5-1, showed "great improvement," according to Coach Steve Knight.

The squad's record progressed from 1-8, but Knight was especially encouraged by the better playing. "Last year we gave up 42 goals; this year we allowed only 18," he said.

The 1980 football team had a difficult and frustrating season. The White Mules managed only one win against seven losses. The lone victory was a 20-17 upset of highly-rated Trinity.

Defense was the team strength all season. The White Mules intercepted seven W.P.I. passes to tie a Colby record and finished the season with 18 to set a new mark.

Expected to be among the best in 1980, Colby returned 15 starters from last season's 5-3 club. But a failure to execute properly and a measure of hard luck proved too much for the team to overcome.

Kelly Dodge '83 (Seabrook, N.H.) and Todd Coffin '83 (Bath) surprised all by taking first and third places in the N.E.S.C.A.C. cross-country championships held at Colby. Dodge's time of 27:02 for the five miles was a course record. Virginia Low '81 (Old Greenwich, Conn.) was the top finisher for Colby in the women's event, placing 19th.

Class Correspondence

05 Ida Phoebe Keen, of Pomona, Calif., was honored on July 13, 1980 by belatedly receiving her honorable discharge from the U.S. Army. Now 96 years old, Phoebe was a telephone operator in the Army Signal Corps in World War I, long before women were accepted into the armed services. In 1918 she answered an advertisement asking for women who could speak French to apply as telephone operators with General Pershing's A.E.F. in France, and was accepted. Only this year did the Army get around to officially recognizing that service and finally granted the operators honorable discharge.

24 The Reverend Percy Beatty, of New Jersey, returned to Waterville in July to attend the 60th anniversary of his high school graduation. He spoke at the Getchell Street Church, where his father was the minister for many years.

31 I enjoy the fruits of my husband's labor in the garden. My summer was spent having two of my three children nearby with their families, and going to summer theater. I chatted with Barbara Sherman Burger '32 and Ethel MacDougall Ale-mian. Ethel had a trip abroad • Our class sympathy to the widow of Norman Glover, who died March 12, 1980 • Thelma Chase Bevin, despite bouts with illness, sounded great, doing art work and seeing her children and "grands." She has seen Jennie Dunn Millett • Myrtle Paine Barker is our archaeologist and had a wonderful trip by Greek freighter on the way to a dig of tombs in Italy • Henry Bubar is still busy with student Christian activities at campus centers • Barbara Gurney Cassidy went to England for the 50th Rotarian anniversary. She has the privilege to still visit a mother, now 101 years young • John and Faith Rollins Davidson are active in community affairs. John goes duck hunting on occasion • Gertrude Sykes Elwell enjoyed trips to Hawaii and England. In the winter at Bradenton, Fla., she directs a band and chorus • Helen Ramsey Felt went to Sri Lanka and India. Her granddaughter from Sweden spent three weeks with her • Howard Ferguson keeps fit and trim as a sports official in greater Boston high schools • Elliott Hatch is president of the Bristol Lions Club • Jean Littlefield Howard is now a rural gardener and loves it. She visits with Wayne and Alice Linscott Roberts, and Fran Page Taylor • Andrew Karkos represented us at the inauguration of the new Colby president. At the reunion he talked to several of our class, including Rod and Peg (Davis '28) Farnham • Flora Trussell Larri-vee plays in a tambourine band with senior citizens in New Hampshire • Frances Libby got here to Cape Cod and we had a good feed and talk • Carroll McLeary reports a great-grandchild this time. He and his wife, Margaret, took a Caribbean cruise. At home he's a golfer • John McCoy still spends the summer in China. In the winter he is on the board of the Wayne, N.J., Methodist church, and directs the local paper drive • Margaret McGann Merrill planned a stay on Martha's Vineyard this summer. She and Eleanor Hilton Martin are frequent visitors • Clayton Smith, our Canal Man, was honored with a "This is Your Life" program by members of the New Jersey Canal Society. He and Richard Williamson visit with George Sprague at Owls Head • Ruby Bickmore Wiggin has her hothouses and gardens to keep her busy. I wish I could get to her road stand sometime. One of her customers is Virgil Totman • Have a wonderful winter. Do you know where these folks are? Nathan Cooperstein, Paul Davis, Beulah Stiles Harris, Francis McGowan, Arthur Meckenberg, Eunice Dawson Murphy, Joseph Rogull, Henry Schick, Alice Lepoe Scrimgeour, Leon Tebbetts?

Class secretary: EUNICE FOYE HUTCHINS (Mrs. Linwood), Box 267, Hill Top Drive, Sagamore, Mass. 02561.

32 As I was writing this column in May for the fall Alumnus, I received a note from John Leno '34 (formerly of our class) telling me the sad news that Anthony John DeMiceli had died in February, and his wife of 45 years in March. Tony's obituary was in the summer issue. It was good to have a last letter from him. John said he had known Tony for 55 years. He will be sadly missed by his many friends • Evelyn Platt Johnson is still in St. Pete, having moved from a condominium to a single home with a daughter and three grandchildren, while another daughter lives in Dunedin. Evelyn and her husband retired from dairy farming in New Hampshire, where she held offices in the Ep-som, N.H., Women's Club, the D.A.R., and Rebekahs. Both traveled with Shriners to Hawaii, all over New England, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick. They are active in the Shrine, Masons, Grotto, and she attends the Phi Mu alumnae meetings. They miss New England, but go to a nearby Valley's for Maine lobster • Jane Belcher divides her time between Sweetbriar, Va., and Pittsford, Vt. She is now retired after 3 years at Colby and 35 years at Sweetbriar College, where she is professor emerita of biology. She's up to her ears collaborating on a picture book history of Pittsford, the first since 1867, Pittsford Then and Now. She still haunts the local trout stream and welcomes any Colby friends when in Vermont. She "has plenty of beds and is easy to find" • Bill Steinhoff, in Ridge, N.Y., retired from his job as management analyst with computer systems for Nassau County, N.Y. He keeps busy working with the budget committee of Leisure Knolls, sailing, and nismatics. He and Blanche have two sons with five grandsons and one granddaughter. He corresponds with Glen Lawrence, who is still selling real estate on St. Croix • Doug Allan plans to retire next June. He is the personnel director of Lawrence, Mass., General Hospital. He and Lib Swanton Allan '33 have one daughter and two grandchildren. In spring 1979 they toured the British Isles. In Skibbereen, County Cork, Ireland, they attended a Swanton Family "rally" • Nissie Grossman has more irons in the fire than any ten of the rest of us. He is an active officer in Temple Emanuel, in the Jewish theological seminary from which he received a National Community Service Award as a fund raiser, president of the Boston Alumni Association and the Boston Colby Club, a Colby trustee, trustee of the Reuben A. and Lizzie Grossman Foundation, chairman of the Quincy Red Cross, president of the Rotary Club, and director of the Quincy Y.M.C.A. He serves on the boards of Horizons for Youth, Solomon Schechter Day School, New England Hebrew Academy, Liberty Bank and Trust Company, New England Baptist Hospital, and is organizer and chairman of the Granite Cooperative Bank. All this outside of his business career in Grossman's, where he has been vice-president, president, and chairman of the board. He is now first vice-president of North Eastern Retail Lumbermen's Association. His wife, Ethel, accompanied him to our 45th reunion and we hope to see them both again in 1982 • Christo Nasse retired from teaching mathematics at Tantasqua Regional High School in Sturbridge, Mass. He has a son and a daughter. He spends the fall months in Ormond Beach, Fla.

Class secretary: GWEN MARDIN HAYNES (Mrs. William), Oakwood Manor, 5 Red Maple Terrace, Sarasota, Fla. 33577.

34 As I gathered your notes together for this Alumnus, it was 90° on our lakeshore • George Mann writes from Houston that he has been doing all outdoor work before 7 A.M. because of the intensity of the heat there. George keeps busy running unopposed for precinct judge and traveling. They visited the caverns of New Mexico in March, and hiked the Guadalupe Mountains. They saw all the sights of Washington, D.C., Williamsburg, and the Shenandoah Valley in April, and had planned a Grecian cruise in October • This summer, Andrew Daigle did not return from Sebring, Fla., to his summer retreat on North Haven Island until mid-July. He wrote a funny description of the reason for this delay, "the chiseling of my gall bladder and assorted rocks by Dr. Davey Jones, who failed to get me into his locker!" Glad you are better, Andy • Janet Mills, daughter of Peter Mills, was named Maine's first woman district attorney, for Androscoggin, Oxford, and Franklin counties.

A Matter of Will Power

The late Professor Everett Strong and his wife, Margarita Marshall Strong, have made significant bequests to the college. From the estate of Margarita Strong, an outright bequest of $10,000 was made, plus $71,819, which represents a 50% remainder interest of a trust established under her will. Both gifts are unrestricted and will be placed in the college's endowment. Professor Strong has left Colby $2,000, in addition to another $5,000 in life income plan trust principal, plus 67 volumes to the Miller Library. Also Colby is to receive one-quarter net residue of Professor Strong's estate. These monetary bequests will be placed in the endowment fund.

For four decades, Everett Strong was on the modern languages faculty. He retired in 1962. He had served as the organist at the Waterville First Congregational Church for 23 years, and helped establish the summer Institute of Church Music at Colby. For many years the director of the Institute, he maintained a life-long interest in music.

Margarita Strong died in 1972, and Everett Strong last January. The entire Colby community will miss these devoted friends, and their kind and generous actions will stand as enduring memorials.

Reaction to this appointment by the women of Maine was swift and positive • Frances Palmer visited in St. Cloud, Fla., with her sister, Beatrice Palmer Frederick '29. Frannie's study program this year included classes in colonial history and romance literatures. She also attended the Star Island Nature Institute where she studied birds, insects, shells, marine drawings, and calligraphy. In August she was to attend the fiftieth reunion of her class at Maine Central Institute • Arthur Stetson was master of ceremonies at the fiftieth reunion of his Cony High School class, which was held at the Augusta Country Club. Several members of that class went on to Colby, but of them only Harriet Pease Patrick was present, and a former teacher, Hazel Gibbs '17. The Stetsons then vacationed at the cottage of Portia Pendleton Rideout on Webber Pond. They enjoyed a night out with George Hunt and his wife, dining at the Hawaiian Gardens Restaurant in Augusta, and attending a performance of Bells are Ringing at The Brunswick Theatre • Annie Tuck Russell and her husband made a delightful trip by car to visit her sister in Green Valley, Ariz. Annie planned to spend the month of August with another sister in Augusta. I saw her at The Senator at a luncheon reunion that B.Z. White Morse arranged • Madelyn Higgins Stanley wrote that by the time I received her note she would be well on her way to Alaska to visit friends and fish for salmon. Their ten-year-old grandson would accompany them • Don and I took our own fishing trip in the north woods on the Canadian Trail. Once bewitched by that country, you go back to it again and again • Thanks for your notes, and keep writing.

Class secretary: PEG SALMOND MATHESON (Mrs. Donald), Lakeview Drive, China, Maine 04926.

35 We had an historic 45th class reunion, attended by over 50 people. Wonderful weather, kaleidoscopic program events, good food, and abundant camaraderie made 1980 alumni weekend magnificent! A social hour prior to '35's reunion banquet accentuated the exhilaration of renewed companionship with former classmates. An inspiring response by the class to the alumni fund responsibility heightened the event considerably • Ellen Dignam Downing ably presided at the reunion dinner at Millett Alumni House. She was appropriately commended for her efforts as retiring class proxy. Dana Jaquith was recognized for faithful services to '35. Joe Bishop, class agent, expressed pleasure for a fruitful fund-raising experience • My gratitude for being honored by the college as a Colby Brick recipient was expressed in my secretary-treasurer report. Roney Williams, as "guest speaker," was applauded for a lucid and formidable talk about Colby's past and future educational and administrative roles • The splendid efforts and wonderful arrangements by David and Ann Trimble Hilton made reunion time noteworthy and successful. Both deserved the applause and praise accorded them • Newly-elected class officers for the next five years are: Joe Bishop, president; David Hilton, vice-president; my reelection as secretary-treasurer; and Mary Small Copithorne, alumni council representative • Present at our 45th festivities were: Merle and J. Warren Bishop; Alice and Joe Brogden; Ruth Thome Chaplin; Beth Pendleton Clark and her daughter; Mary Small Copithorne; Larry Dow; Blanche Silverman Field; Ford '34 and Briley Thomas Grant; Bunny and Maurice Krinsky; Mary and Dana Jaquith; Virginia and Don Larkin; Auneka and Dick Noyes; Dorothy Washburn Polley; Carl and Eleanor Shore Reed; Gordon Patch Thompson; John Ward; Al '36 and Bettina Wellington Piper; John English; Muriel Bailie Plum; Charles and Louise Hinckley Tweedie; R. Miller and Margaret Jordan Lewis; Melvin Flood; Elmore and Ruth Wheeler Wood; Ralph Peabody; Dorothy and George Lowell; Peg Raymond Small '34; Thomas and Ellen Dignam Downing; Ralph and Barbara Howard Williams; David and Ann Trimble Hilton; Mary and Joe Stevens; and Grace Wheeler Marsh • According to a recent phone call, David and Ann Trimble Hilton enjoy their West Southport home. Summer was "slipping by too fast" and proving "most enjoyable with the usual influx of family and friends" • Dana and Mary Jaquith, at Peaks Island until Labor Day, enjoyed "seeing so many back" at reunion weekend, as did Blanche Silverman Field, whose pleasant note brought much cheer and satisfaction • As these lines are written, Houston is sweltering. The consistently over-100-degree temperatures are proving burdensome. Right now, nobody would enjoy being up in Maine more than I. Do let me hear about your summer activities, trips, experiences, and family facts in forthcoming mail. Stay well and best regards.

Class secretary: MAURICE KRINSKY, P.O. Box 639, Houston, Tex. 77001.

40 Our fortieth reunion was a fine time. The campus was abloom with lilacs and apple blossoms. Maine had never looked more beautiful to me, and truly our classmates had never looked better • We started off Friday with small groups of friends gathering together as they arrived in the dorm, Dana, and regrouping for dinner either at the official Awards Dinner at Foss Hall or making their own arrangements. Saturday was the big day: a seminar with President Cotter, a visit to the art gallery, and the traditional lobster picnic lunch at the field-house. Later we attended a wonderful cocktail party at Howard and Gisele Miller's home. Five years ago Howie invited us and he surely kept his word. It was an outstanding party. From there we went to the dinner at The Silent Woman. Bill Taylor, as class president, presided wittily and was unanimously reelected for the next five years. He opened with a funny limerick. (Sometime, when I am desperate for news I might tell it, if I decide it is not in poor taste or hasn't become too well known, so be warned.) A recent mailing from Bill about our class gift of $40,000 to Colby gave you a list of who was at the reunion. I sorely missed others. We heard a rumor that Roger and Ruth Gould Stebbins might come. Maybe some of those we so wanted to see will come next time. . . . I am proud to announce here that we have among us an honorary degree recipient. President Cotter conferred a Doctor of Humane Letters upon Clark Hopkins Carter. The citation was published in the summer Alumnus. Clark has worked devotedly and selflessly for Colby. He has a rare versatility. I received a welcome letter in May from a long silent classmate, Connie Pratt Spinney of Barre, Mass. Her two boys are grown but she's blessed with twin girls still at home, juniors at Springfield College. Connie is laboratory supervisor at the Athol Memorial Hospital. The boys are Bruce, an engineer at New England Telephone Company in Boston, and David, who has just completed his master's at Virginia Polytechnic Institute. Both boys are married and Connie and Bruce have two grandchildren, ages 3 and 5. • Frances Gray missed the reunion for a trip to Europe, as did Isabel Abbott and Peg Johnson Kenoyer. • Walter Strong, of Thomaston, has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for representative to the Legislature from his district. He is a lifelong resident of Thomaston and is special accounts representative at Blue Cross-Blue Shield of Maine. He has served on the Thomaston school board and is a member of the Thomaston planning board. • Arthur Thompson is serving as Provost of Wentworth Institute in Boston. • Hope you'll send me news.

Class secretary: E. ROBERT BRUCE, 58 Longview Ave., Watertown, Conn. 06795.

41 I find myself completely devoid of class news. In the four years that I have been your correspondent, the vast majority of you have never been heard from. I would, then, urge those of you who have not responded, ever or recently, to write me a line or two. It isn't at all too early to start making plans to attend our 40th reunion coming up next June. Let's make it a big one.

Class secretary: CHARLES E. BARNFATHER, 81 Brewster Rd., West Springfield, Mass. 01089.

42 A letter from Teddy Wright Weston informed us that she is recuperating from surgery, her second major operation in as many years. We hope that good health is now here to stay. She was looking forward to spending time at their camp on Patten Pond in Ellsworth. • Ruth Crowell Knight lives in Baton Rouge, La. • Dorris Heaney Batt wrote that she and George were planning a trip to Germany, where they planned to visit George's cousin in Heidelberg. • Priscilla Moldenke Drake '43 sent a nice note, which was appreciated. She lives in Webster Grove, Mo. • Our sympathy to Marion Thomas Whipple on the death of her father. • I enjoyed attending the spring meeting of the South Central Massachusetts Colby Alumnae Association at the home of Elizabeth Solie Howard '39, in Weston, Mass. The flowering shrubs and plants, everything from dogwood to pink and yellow ladyslippers in the woods, were lovely. • The Rev. Addison Steeves recently resigned as minister of the Melrose, Mass., Unitarian Universalist church to occupy the pulpit of the First Universalist church in Auburn, after almost 13 years in Melrose. He will assume his new duties in September. His wife, Marilyn Ireland Steeves, has been a teacher in the Stoneham public schools since 1968. They have three children, a daughter, a son, and Ellen '80, a third-generation member of the Steeves family to graduate from Colby.

Class secretary: PRISCILLA GEORGE MCNALLY (Mrs. Leslie), 11 Palmer Rd., Foxboro, Mass. 02035.

43 It was great to find answers to my latest letter when I returned from a brief vacation in Maine. • The Rev. Hubert Beckwith has just celebrated a double anniversary as the founding pastor of the Church of Christ in Annandale, Va. He has whom is a four-year-old Korean orphan. Last summer they managed to get their five children and spouses, grandchildren, and the three surviving great-grandparents together. These included their son, Richard '68, and Evie's parents, Dr. Gordon and Helen Baldwin Gates, both '19. Jim and Evie were in Europe this spring and planned to be in the Far East this fall for several weeks. • Tom Pursley, son of Tom and Marjorie Brown Pursley, was attorney for the Winter Olympics, so Tom and Marjorie were in Lake Placid for the games. They also visited their son, David, and his wife in Chapel Hill, N.C., where David has just completed a three-year residency in neurology at the Univ. of North Carolina hospital. Marjorie and Tom had entertained Charlie Cross and his wife in the summer of 1979, but reported that Charlie died suddenly in February 1980. Our sincere sympathy to Mrs. Cross and the family. • The Rev. Edwin Alexander is still playing tennis and this year, with the help of his youngest daughter, coached the Winterville, Ohio, high school team to a division championship. Eddie also planned to play in a doubles tournament in Wilton while they were vacationing in Maine in August. • I'll be looking for more of those orange reply forms from those of you who haven't yet found the time to send them along.

Class secretary: ELEANOR SMART BRAUN-MULLER (Mrs. Albert), 115 Lake Rd., Basking Ridge, N.J. 07920.

INAUGURATIONS

Colby periodically is invited to send a representative to academic events at colleges and universities. The following alumni have represented the college in past months:

Laura Tolman Brown '36, inauguration of John Selwyn Morris as president of Union College and chancellor of Union University.

Helen Henry Merritt '42, inauguration of Norman Lawrence Stewart as president of Rockford College.

Kevin Hill '50, inauguration of Michael I. Sovern as president of Columbia University.

Donald McG. Jacobs '51, inauguration of Donald K. Calgaard as president of Trinity University.

Franklin King III '53, inauguration of Julian H. Gibbs as president of Amherst College.

Richard Tyler, Jr. '53, inauguration of Stanford Cazier as president of Utah State University.

Lee Fernandez '55, inauguration of Allen E. Koenig as president of Emerson College.

Charles Carey '63, inauguration of David G. Horner as president of Barrington College.

Robert T. Emmet '64, inauguration of Edwin J. Delattre as president of St. John's College.

learned crewel work, made his own clerical stoles, and won recognition for his work, which he entered in the Woodlawn Plantation Exhibition. • Dwight Howard spent the summer operating his Bay View Lodge at the beach in Saco. He plans to retire from teaching in Scarborough after another year and continue running the lodge during retirement. He has four children and four grandchildren, all of whom live near enough so that he sees them frequently. • This must have been DU month as I also heard from Jim and Evie (Gates '44) Moriarty. They have five grandchildren, one of

44 I had a nice letter from John (Pete) Bliss, who is living in Jaffrey, N.H. He has retired from the U.S. Foreign Service, and is also a retired lieutenant colonel, U.S.A.R. He is the student loan officer at Franklin Pierce College. Pete would like very much to see members of the class. His address is Three Chimneys, Mountain Rd., Jaffrey Center, N.H. His neighbors are the former President and Mrs. Bixler. He and his wife, Geneva, invite any classmates to stop in to say hello. • Malcolm McQuillan is a teacher-counselor in Livonia, Mich. He gardens and is active in the community neighborhood club • Janice Tappin Lowell is chairman of the English department of Fryeburg Academy in Maine. She lives in Bridgton. Her son, Peter '70, owns a wholesale-retail craft business in Bridgton. She flies around New England with her husband trying to get up her nerve for a longer trip. She ought to talk with Alice Leyh Fisher • Robert Curtis is retired and living in Raleigh, N.C. He is a golfer. At his retirement dinner, he received a plaque recognizing freight car sales exceeding one half billion dollars • From torrid Dallas, Alden Wagner writes he is a real estate developer and investor. He and his wife started building a home in Vail, Colo., which should be completed by now. He skis and plays tennis and golf • Kay Howes Brooks lives in Wayland, Mass. Her husband is director of security at Brandeis Univ. in Waltham, Mass. She is a doting grandma to her 10-year-old granddaughter. Kay says she is very happy, after 20 years of Foreign Service travel, to have been settled for the last ten years in Massachusetts • Louis Deraney is a U.S. government realty specialist and lives in Roslindale, Mass. He and his wife have four children. Their travels have taken them to Jamaica, South America, and Cape Cod. He was in Waterville with his church group last year to help set up a mission. They visited with Dr. Richard Nawfel and his family while there. He is active in St. George's Syrian Orthodox Church and is a past president of the adult fellowship. He has seen Thomas Norton '43, Woody Tarlow '45, and 'Turk' Hassan '41 • James Whitten writes from Gorham that he is coordinator for graduate programs in adult continuing education at the Univ. of Southern Maine • From Framingham, Mass., dentist Arnold Grossman writes he has his practice and is also on the faculty of the Tufts dental school. Last year he went with Tufts to attend seminars in London, Vienna, and Athens. A new grandson was the highlight of the year. He has seen David Marson '48 in Nantucket • Deborah Dobson Fekete is in the financial office at Choate-Rosemary Hall School and lives in Wallingford, Conn. They spent January and February in Florida and travelled to Huntington Beach, Calif., to see their daughter, Marilyn. She sees Hope Jane Gillingham Meyer '43 often and would like to hear from her old roommate, Ecla Hanscom Merrill. Her address is 49 Powers Rd., Wallingford, Conn. 06492 • John Calahan took early retirement from Ford Motor Co. and has been self-employed for the last three years. He is also involved in real estate part time and special research assignments as an "executive associate" with a division of Booz, Allen & Hamilton, Inc. • Please keep the letters coming so we can continue to have news.

Class secretary: BARBARA BAYLIS PRIMIANO (Mrs. Wetherell), 15 Crossways, Barrington, R.I. 02806.

46 I traveled to Presque Isle where I visited my aunt and attended a family reunion. Though I had visited in that area frequently as a child, I hadn't been up for 20 years. Flying low over Aroostook County, I was again struck by the incredible beauty of northern Maine with its miles and miles of timberland and lakes and the immense potato fields, with Mt. Katahdin standing guard over to the west. I visited the home my great-grandfather built over a hundred years ago at the foot of Haystack Mountain, and went in to Squa Pan Lake, one of his favorite fishing grounds • Having had only one reply to my last plea for news, I am most happy to turn over the rest of the column for a report on Dr. Philip Boyne. Phil wrote from Loma Linda Univ. in Loma Linda, Calif., where he is a professor in the department of surgery and director of the graduate program in oral and maxillofacial surgery. He has had six years of teaching at Univ. of California at Los Angeles, four at Univ. of Texas, and twenty years in the Navy before that. He took up running again seven years ago, having run the mile back in high school days. This was his third year running in the Boston Marathon. His best time was a respectable 3 hours and 22 minutes. He has also run the Chicago Marathon, the Rice Festival Marathon in Louisiana, the Orange Bowl Marathon in Miami, as well as others from Maine to California. He is unique in his style because he runs barefoot. He said, "It's a different way of running, because instead of hitting on your heel, you run on your toes, the metatarsals right behind the toes, actually. After a while it's a relaxing way to run. It's the way the Indians used to run." A Maine native, Phil and his wife, Mary Ann Young (Univ. of Maine '46), return to Maine every summer. They are both looking forward to being with us at our class reunion next year.

Class secretary: NORMA TWIST MURRAY (Mrs. Paul), 28 Birdsall St., Winsted, Conn. 06098.

47 I was saddened when I received notice of the death of my old friend Barbara King Longley. I'm sure you all join me in extending sympathy to her husband, Frank, and her family. I had no idea she was stricken with cancer. In the same envelope there was a letter from the Hampshire Day House, which Barb assisted in founding and served as a social worker and executive director. The House, a psychiatric outpatient center in Northampton, is establishing the Barbara Longley Memorial Lecture Fund for a series of lectures by distinguished speakers on the subject of treatment of adults with psychiatric problems. Contributions are tax deductible and may be made to Hampshire Day House, Inc., 71 Pomeroy Terrace, Northampton, Mass. 01060. Pledges for periodic contributions are also acceptable. Let's all try to help this worthwhile cause. I'm sure Barb would have been very pleased • Marjorie Maynard Englert is partially retired in Columbia, Conn., where she is a consultant in early childhood education • The following classmates are "lost" as far as the alumni office is concerned. If you know of their whereabouts, please drop a note to the office. Shirley Foster Bechtel, Joyce Curtis, Ruth Warner Kilby, Jane Lee, Philip Sugg, William Switzer, Claire Finkeldey Waterous • Charlie and Arnie Kiessling Will's son, Dick, a new M.D., married another M.D. whom he met while studying in Belgium last fall. They were married in his parents' living room. Should be great to have a "doctor in the house" (let alone two) • Have you noticed we no longer scan the birth and wedding announcements columns in the Alumnus?

Class secretary: DOROTHY CLEAVES RODGERS (Mrs. Clifton), 44 Miller St., Belfast 04915.

48 Mike Puia, athletic director at Rumford High School, was elected to the Maine Baseball Hall of Fame in a ceremony conducted in South Portland last May. Colby will always remember his outstanding success with the White Mule squad in 1946 • Marguerite Jack Robinson's poem "Sunset" was published in the Saco Valley Paper. Also, the monthly newspaper of the First Baptist Church in Portland, published her book review on Billy Graham, Evangelist to the World, by John Pollock • Gordon Miller, Shrewsbury, Mass., our alumni council representative, writes that he is cutting down on community activities in order to "vacation wherever and whenever I feel like it" • I was delighted to hear from Millie Schnebbe Riordan who, for the past seventeen years, has been doing accounting and tax work. Continuing her involvement with Delta Delta Delta, she attended their national convention in Scotsdale, Ariz., this past June. She often lunches with Deanie Whitcomb Wolf '49 and Taffy Thackeray Tiedemann '49. I regret to say Millie's husband, Frank, died in March 1975 • Marie Machel Milliken, Ph.D., of Littleton, Colo., was appointed professor and director of the program in nursing at Loretta Heights College. Congratulations • In March 1979, Shirley Stowe Sarkis, of Glastonbury, Conn., became director of the Whiton Library in Manchester, Conn. • Construction representative for the U.S. Corps of Engineers, Paul Murray, of Winsted, Conn., enjoys his church choir music and is president of the northwestern Connecticut area Gideons • In Los Angeles, Joan Crawley Pollock visited with the former President and Mrs. Strider and enjoyed recounting to younger alumni the campus life of the 1940's: trains through the campus, "busing" Colby style, and President Bixler's fine qualities. This year their grandson, Joey, was born and their children presented them with a VW camper. Their first excursion was to Bryce and Zion parks. Joan spent New Year's with P. Jay Fratanio '49. Obviously, Joseph, five children, and teaching have given Joan a fulfilling, joyous life • Ruth Rogers Doering of Schenectady, N.Y., manages the workroom of an interior decorator. Since their three children have left the nest, she has accompanied her husband on business trips to Houston, London, and Copenhagen. Otherwise, Ruth drives for the Red Cross and teaches at her church school • I close with regards to all.

Class secretary: CAROL SILVERSTEIN BAKER (Mrs. Solomon), 129 Edgewater Dr., Needham, Mass. 02192.

49 Thanks for the great response to the questionnaire • I was in Belmont, Mass., at Bob and Phyllis (McKiel '48) Bedig's house for a mini-reunion with Barbara Foley Felt and Mayrlou Reed Huse and her husband, Bob. Barb lives in Andover and works as a secretary at General Electric, in Wilmington, Mass. • A clipping from Sherborn, Mass., tells of Bob Cook's running for reelection as cemetery commissioner. He is an automobile dealer in Needham, Mass. Bob and his wife, June Stairs, have lived in Sherborn for 15 years • Tema Kaplan Cushner was the first to respond to the questionnaire. She lives in Brookline, Mass., with her husband, Len, who is an orthodontist. They have two sons and a new granddaughter. Their younger son, Stuart, was at Colby for 2½ years, then went on to Tufts and its dental school. Tema and Len have a summer cottage in Oakland and thus keep up with events at Colby. She works as a vocational counselor at an alternative high school in Brookline • Bette Brandt Gutman has three children and lives and teaches remedial reading in Greenwich, Conn. • Charlie and Virginia (Davis '50) Pearce live in Hingham, Mass., and have three children, one of whom, Sarah, graduated from Colby in 1978. Charlie is president of The Quincy Savings Bank and, in 1978-1979, served as chairman of The National Association of Mutual Savings Banks • Alice Covell Bender, a librarian responsible for children's activities and services at the Waikiki-Kapahulu Community Library in Hawaii, was presented with the state department of education's highest award for outstanding service at a meeting of the state board of education in June. She has three children • Florence Fisher Hooper writes from Canoga Park, Calif., in the San Fernando Valley, where she's lived for 24 years. She's been a word processor for the energy systems group of Rockwell International for the past two years, and moved to a new townhouse • Peter Perry's daughter, Janet, was married in July. Pete went Atlantic salmon fishing in April with great results • Last December, Robert Carr started his own insurance consulting and risk management firm. He lives in Tampa, Fla., and writes that all four of his children are married, including two of his sons who married two sisters in a double wedding • Judy Mayer Schneider is career counseling at Oakland Univ. in Michigan, and is also in private practice. For their 25th anniversary last year, she and her husband, Arthur, took a fabulous trip to Israel • Robert Guterman specializes in estate planning and business program services for the John Hancock Co. His wife is a learning disabilities specialist and they have two children. He has joined the Boston Colby Club Luncheon Group and is also active with the Boy Scouts and the Boston Guild for the Hard of Hearing • Phyllis Whitcomb Laurin wrote from Muskegon, Mich., that all is well now that her husband, David, has completely recuperated from open heart surgery. Their daughter, Beth, is a junior at Colby. Phyllis supplied Gilly Washington Hufsmith's address for us • Chase Lasbury wrote that his sister, Cecelia Lasbury Johnson, is in Winter Park, Fla. • David Swindells is the director of industrial relations for Keene Corp. in New York. He has two daughters • On Memorial Day weekend, I visited with Carolyn English Beane. We spent a day in New Hampshire with Bob '51 and Tommi Thompson Staples and Mike Manus. Tommi wrote that she and Bob are starting a new business • Keep the news coming. Happy Fall!

Class secretary: MARTHA FRIEDLAENDER, 382 Central Park West, Apt. 14A, New York, N.Y. 10025.

54 Indon Christie has been appointed one of two associate directors of the Continuing Education and Extension Division (C.E.E.D.) of Husson College. His duties will include C.E.E.D. outreach activities, coordinating the work of the seven Husson continuing education sites in Maine, and developing and directing the Husson seminars and workshops. His co-worker is another Colby graduate, John Bubar '68 • Come on, classmates, how about some news? Please bring us up to date on your activities and plans.

Class secretary: BARBARA GUERNSEY EDDY (Mrs. C. Arthur), R.R. 1, Box 199B, Lincoln City Rd., Salisbury, Conn. 06068.

55 Sixty-three members of the Class of 1955, along with 36 spouses, gathered in Waterville to celebrate our 25th reunion. Our Waterville classmates did a super job in putting together a most enjoyable weekend. Special thanks should be given to Germaine Michaud Orloff, Anne Burbank Palmer, Dave and Ruth McDonald Roberts, Bucky and Mary Dundas Runser, and Sam and Carol Plavin Shapiro for opening their homes to us and giving so much of their time and energy • Reunion weekend began for many of us at the Millett Alumni House, Thursday evening, May 28. We had name tags with our yearbook pictures on them. Of course none of us had changed much, but they were an excellent idea just in case. Among the first people we saw were Nancy and Hank Taron and their son, Chris, Michele and Peter French, Jack and Ann Burham Deering, Arlene and Don Hoagland, Ted Summers, Renée and Dave Ward, Helen and Ralph Cuccuro, and Archie and Jean Hawes Anderson. Since Bob and Alice Beale Gleason and Sel and I were houseguests of Dave and Ruth Roberts, we had already had a "mini-reunion" with them and Margaret Grant Ludwig. After a social hour and dinner at the Millett Alumni House, where we visited with Harold and Betty Harris Smith, Dick and Jeanne Hahlbohm Hampton, and John Dutton, many of us returned to the Roberts's for more socializing • Friday morning we boarded busses at Foss Hall to travel to Boothbay Harbor for our boat trip. On the bus, we had our first glimpse of our California contingent, Sisty Restall Home, and Eric and Berry Wellersdieck Piper, who had driven up from Boston with Don Moore, and Harriet Sears Fraser. Barry '54 and Judy Holtz Levow (Judy should definitely be named "class photographer"). Sevy '53 and Pat Levine Levy, Don and Ginny Coggins Eilertson, Ann Eilertson York, Bob '54 and Helen Chambers Cross, Jane and Ken Van Praag, Judy Orne Shorey, Jane Bull Shaver, Karl '54 and Jane Millett Domish, Betty Cuthbertson Marshall, and Harriette Glass Siegel were among the two busloads of classmates who enjoyed the boat trip. The Awards Banquet on Friday night was special for our class. Dave Roberts and Jack Deering presented a Colby Brick to our own Lee Fernandez for his generous gift to the art museum. After dinner, the Shapiros invited us to their home, where we saw Dick Bartlett, Bunny and Dino Sirakides, Jim and Taffy Mahoney Beckman, Paula and Allan Landau, Kiernan and Carol MacIver Murphy, Ron and Ellie (Turner '54) Swanson, and Lou and Kathy (McConaughy '56) Zambello • Many of us spent Saturday morning touring the campus (I saw Ellie Larned Wescott in the bookstore), looking at the art collection, and playing in or watching the tennis tournament. We saw Chan and Jane Whip- ple Coddington (back from successful tennis), Juanita and Jack Johnston, Phil '53 and Marty De Wolf Hussey, and Put and Ann Dillingham Ingraham. Joanne Steams Graaskamp, John and Scotty Hamilton Hager, Alistair and Bev Aikman Duncan, Glen and Betty Knox Stoddard, Wheaton and Ellie Small Hudson, Bill and Nan Irons George, Beth Young Baker, George and Susan (Wayman '57) Haskell, and Paul '53 and Estelle Jacobson Ostrove were among the one hundred plus guests at the dinner. On Sunday, we enjoyed our last "official" reunion get-together, a delicious brunch at Bucky and Mary Dundas Runser's house. It was difficult to say good-bye after such a successful weekend. We hope to see everyone at our 30th.

58 The alumni office recently sent me its "lost list." If you know the whereabouts of any of them, would you please drop a note to Mrs. Bobbie Black, secretary in the alumni office? Here they are: Nathan Adams, Myron Baker, Joan Fletcher Chandler, Babs Falter Currier, Joan King Darcy, Richard Edsall, E. Conrad Forziati, Philip Golden, David Hoyt, Jane Gibbons Huang, Sandra Doolittle Hunt, Gail Arndall Iden, Lucia Johnson, Sara Stewart Johnson, Elisabeth Thompson Kirby, Chris Maginniss, Edward O'Brien, John O'Callaghan, William Orne, Dale Patchell, Carol A. Hendricks Perrin, James Rutison, Robert Saltz, Aaron Schless, Archie Twitcheil, Richard Waterman, Warren Weitzman, Andrew Willcox • Stanley Moger was to speak at the May meeting of the Advertising Club of Fairfield County, Conn. Stan is a founding partner in a media buying and programming service, S.F.M. Media Service Corp. He has been a member of the board of the International Radio and Television Society and has been a volunteer in Action for Children's Television • Virginia True was recently honored for her many volunteer activities in San Rafael, Calif., according to an article in the Piscataquis Observer. Ginny is an in-service volunteer and weekend training supervisor at the Marin General Hospital. After starting in the insurance field in Maryland and Connecticut, Ginny's job took her to California about 15 years ago. She is responsible for renewal underwriting for Firemen's Fund Insurance Co. • News comes from Needham, Mass., that Carol Hathaway De Lemos was chosen executive secretary of the Needham Business Association. Carol has four children • Marietta Pane has been named commanding officer of the Naval Technical Training Center in Meridian, Mich. She has been director of training at Service Schools Command in San Diego • Andria Peacock Kime writes that she is school psychologist for the Stoughton, Mass., public schools; her husband, John, is an aquatic specialist for the Boston public schools. They took part in a marriage-encounter weekend and recommend it to others. She and John are also involved with a local association of Special Needs Citizens. It has done wonders for them and their son, who is retarded • Burt Angrist, M.D., lives in New York City and is associate professor in the department of psychiatry at the New York Univ. medical center, where he does research in the biology of schizophrenia. Burt's wife, Anka, is a grant writer at New York Univ. He writes that they are just starting on the project of having children • Robin Hunter Clutz lives in Williamstown, Mass., where her husband, Dick, is a surgeon. She has been doing some part-time accounting work for a real estate firm and an art gallery in town. The Clutzes have two daughters and a son who attends Holderness School with our son, Steve • Al and Kay (German '59) Dean live in Leominster, Mass. They started a retail-wholesale tire business there about a year and a half ago. They have three sons. They look forward to our 25th reunion.

Class secretary: MARY ELLEN CHASE BRIDGE (Mrs. Peter), 78 Sandy Lane, Burlington, Vt. 05401.

59 It was mid-summer when I wrote this. I was lazy, having spent most of the summer at our vacation home in the Poconos. We had an enjoyable Colby mini-reunion there during the summer. Bill and Dottie Reynolds Gay were there, along with Jack '61 and Barbara Hunter Pallotta and Peggy Bradbury Gigon. Norm Gigon could not be with us because he was spending two weeks in Colorado teaching at a baseball clinic. Norm is the baseball coach in Easton, Pa., and spends a good portion of his summers recruiting future players. Peggy is a casework supervisor for the Northampton County Mental Health and Mental Retardation Office in Easton. They have a daughter and a son • Barbara Hunter Pallotta keeps busy with a 3½-year-old daughter at home and told us enthusiastically about a paralegal course she has completed • Dick and Sue Moulton Russell were unable to join us that weekend because Dick was busy with real estate in Poughkeepsie and Hyde Park, N.Y. While Dick is shuffling houses around, Sue is a probation officer with the probation department in Dutchess County • Steve Garment '62 wrote recently to say that he returned from a trip to Tokyo on an anti-dumping investigation for the Department of Commerce. While there, he spent time with Hiro Fukuda '62 and his wife, Nancy. Hiro is associated with the Tokyo Shimbun, one of Japan's largest newspapers. His wife teaches at an international school and they have three children. They said they would be delighted to be contacted by other classmates passing through town • Several clippings found their way to the alumni office this past spring regarding '59ers. Robert Bickford was named plant manager of the Naugatuck Wilmet Division of G.T.E. in Stamford, Conn. He was with the company in Madisonville, Ky., before his move • Dennis Kuntz has been named head coach of the Cohasset high school varsity baseball team in Massachusetts. A glowing article described Dennis as "one of the most well liked, yet most respected members" of that school's faculty • John "Bud" Johnson, a former Brockton Housing Authority director and a former deputy administrator for the state Department of Community Affairs, was named the new assistant executive director for the Brookline Housing Authority in Brookline, Mass. • Keep the news coming in.

Class secretary: MARY TWISS KOPCHAINS (Mrs. Robert), 4 Kyle Rd., Somerset, N.J. 08873.

60 Shouting in the wilderness of Indiana, another voice is heard from, that of a new class correspondent. My first report will be about our 20th reunion. It was a small but good group led by Jerry Goldberg, class president. Others included Doug '58 and Judy Ingram Hatfield, George '58 and Wendy McWilliam Denneen, Rick Daniels, Mike Silverberg, Alan Williamson, Kay White Keffer, Charlie '61 and Ann Dudley DeWitt, Eunice Bucholz Spooner, Judy Miller Heekin, Bernie Scherban, Debbie Wilson Albee, Jane Holden Huerta, Judy Anderson Pinkham, Sandy Mayer Zinman, husbands and wives of most of the above, and our most famous members, Dr. and Mrs. Bixler. There were a few from Maine and nearby states, but several had traveled from such far reaches as Virginia, Florida, Michigan, and even Indiana • Colby, 20 years later, has changed. The physical facilities have grown, and will continue to grow, as the library expands, which in our time housed all administrative offices, most classrooms, and the Spa; the science buildings multiply, and dorms proliferate • Our reunion dinner was in the Jetté Art Gallery, which could not have been more reminiscent of the old Foss Hall dining room, with American primitives watching our every move. The college was most hospitable. They tell us that there is drinking on campus these days, so much so that it is a real and present problem. The college is exploring alternatives. The fine spring weather suggested a few • News from others includes Kathy Linscott Barrett, who is seeking a third term on the elementary school committee in Pembroke, Mass. She has served since 1974, and has three school-age children • We visited Brad and Jean Roberts Leach in Ocean Park • Maggie Wetzel Plath reports from Yorktown Heights, N.Y., that she is considering sending her daughters to Exeter Academy, in which case her girls and our boys will be there at the same time • Gail Carter Ferguson is still living in California • Debbie Wilson Albee gets my vote for the most ambitious mother in the class. She has six children now, two of hers, and four of her husband's, and she brought all of them to our reunion • My contacts with our class seem to be primarily with the women, so I hope some of the men will be willing to share their activities with me for the next column. Questionnaires will be sent to ease your job of reporting.

Class secretary: MARGARET BARNES DYER (Mrs. Calvin), 140 Hamilton Dr., Terre Haute, Ind. 47803.

62 Dick and Joan (Dignam '63) Schmalz were hosts at a reception and dinner in Darien, Conn., last spring for Fairfield County Alumni. At that gathering, President Cotter outlined the college's plans for the 1980's and reported on the curriculum review • Alice Evans Hoffer has received her M.A. in English literature from Seton Hall Univ. This fall she planned to start working on her Ph.D. in English at New York Univ. Alice also works as a general factotum to a medical scholar, assisting in the field of medical education, which includes publications and postgraduate courses for physicians. Her husband, Paul, owns a construction business and enjoys playing the classical guitar • The alumni office needs mailing addresses for the following alumni: James Acheson, William Bassett, David Berman, Benjamin Blaney, Stanley Brown, Nelson Bruce, William Christie, Bana Cohen, Charlene Crimmins, Modesto Mario Diaz, Geoffrey Dodge, Margot Ettinger Tartak, Edward Franklin, William Furstenberg, Jean Gaffney Furuyama, Susan Gardiner Seymour, Robert Haskell, Peter Hutchinson, Edwin Jenkins, Alexander Kunzer, Lone R. Lowrance Schumer, Craig Malsch, Wayne Manty, Ronald Markowitz, Suzanne Martin, John McHale, Joyce McQuilkin, Frederick Merrill, Cynthia Nasif, Alan Neigher, Carol Pospisil Morton, Seymour Rosenbloom, Katherine Smith, David Starr, Carol Thompson Johnson, Jan Thompson

Smith, Eldwin Wixson • As you can see, I need news for this column. By the time you read this, we will have moved to Skowhegan. As soon as I have a new mailing address, I'll send out a new questionnaire.

Class secretary: COLLEEN "JO" LITTLEFIELD JONES (Mrs. William).

64 Sally Berry Chew teaches cello at the Beverly School for the Deaf in Topsfield, Mass. As a member of the fine arts council in Topsfield, Sally works to provide art and musical activities to people of all ages. Sally's education has been quite diverse. She has learned sign language and computer programming. In addition, three sons keep Sally on the move • Karen Eskesen's letter was written on stationery with a lovely drawing. In the winter, Karen paints in Florida, and in the summer, in Denmark. Her work is exhibited in four galleries and two gift shops. She may be narrowing this down because her works are selling before they are finished, which means her "inventory" is shrinking • Bob Furek lives in Oakland, Calif., and is the proud father of a one-year-old. The Fureks visited Hawaii earlier this year • Another Californian, Jon Fredrikson is also a proud parent of two children. The Fredriksons live in Woodside in their "dream house," which they built in a lovely mountain setting overlooking the Pacific • Joyce Arnold Isbister lives in Woodstock, Ill., and is a learning-disabilities mainstreaming teacher and an intern supervising teacher for the Univ. of Wisconsin in Whitewater • Also in the field of education, John Gow is a biology teacher and science department chairman. John coaches tennis and hockey as well. His wife, Maryann, is a teacher's aide. As a special hobby, John has been involved in the research and the restoration of antique science instruments, some of which are over 100 years old • Charles Hauck is vice-president of computer operation with H.C. Prauge Co. in Oneida, Wisc. In addition to trout fishing, Charles enjoys golf, as does his teenage son. The Haucks also have a daughter • Brian and Susan Sawyer McAlary live in Maryland, where Brian is chief of anesthesia at Laurel Hospital. The McAlarys are no longer a Navy family, which is a major change. Susan is busy with two part-time jobs, leading two Camp Fire groups, and riding whenever possible • Jim Harris, living in Issaquah, Wash., is a sales representative for Crown Publishers and editorial advisor on regional books published by his company. Jim and his wife, Maddie, have traveled extensively, visiting Hawaii, Acapulco, and Florida. Their active eight-year-old son also keeps them on the run. Jim reports that Dick York lives in Seattle, Wash., and owns a sailboat distributorship called "York Yachts" • Louise Brown Smith and her husband, Alan, are living in Watertown, N.Y. The Smiths have four children, including a set of twins. Louise is a physical therapist at a general hospital. They plan to fix up an old farm house and raise some sheep and goats • I heard briefly from John Robinson who is an architect-builder in Waitsfield, Vt., and the proud father of two • Gloria Shepherd lives in the Bronx, N.Y. Gloria is a teacher and is interested in art as a hobby. During the summer of 1979, she

PROFILE

Robert Levine '60 has been building ship models, making all the parts, since his boyhood days on Martha's Vineyard. A model of the U.S.S. Constitution (also known as Old Ironsides) is loaned for exhibition at the Constitution Museum in Charlestown, and a model of the clipper ship, Flying Cloud, is at the Museum of Transportation in Boston.

Scaled so that one quarter inch equals a foot, both models are about eight inches wide and six feet long. Every single item on the ships—the dories, the brass work, windlasses, and gears—were handmade. All of the parts work.

Drawing from three sets of plans of the Constitution, Levine has used a plank-on-frame construction. "I first laid the keel and then the ribs," he said. The planked hull is covered with 2,500 pieces of oxidized copper. Levine's nine-year-old son, Joshua, painstakingly drilled the tiny holes in the copper plates. Levine's wife, Barbara, an artist, did the necessary painting.

Striving for authenticity, Levine overlooked nothing. The deck of the Constitution model is made of oak from the original ship. "When Queen Elizabeth visited Boston for the Bicentennial, they had a cabinetmaker build her a box from some of the original wood, and I was able to get what was left over," he said. One of his friends, an antique dealer, provided him with some straight grain sitka spruce that came from the pipe organ of Abraham Lincoln's church in Springfield, Ill., wood which Levine used for the masts and yardarms. He sealed the Constitution's lines with pine tar from the archives of the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy.

On the Flying Cloud, he carved the figurehead—holding a trumpet in both hands, instead of the traditional single hand—to make it distinctively his.

Born and raised on Martha's Vineyard, Levine became interested in shipbuilding after watching Charles Van Riper, who was well-known for the prototypes for naval vessels he made in his workshop in Vineyard Haven during World War II. Levine pursued his hobby through college, and Tufts Dental School.

traveled to Colombia • Bob '62 and Judy Van Dine Sylvia are still in Bristol, and have a new boat-hauling and yacht-repair business on the Pemaquid peninsula. Many Colby friends pass by there during summer vacations. Judy represents our class on the alumni council and has been part of the discussions on the general housing shortage at Colby.

Class secretary: JEAN MARTIN FOWLER (Mrs. Michael), R.D. 1, Box 1013, Flemington, N.J. 08822.

65 The fifteenth reunion of the Class of 1965 brought several of our classmates back to Mayflower Hill. Domestic violence occurs among every social class, race, and ethnic group. According to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, a woman is beaten in the home every 18 seconds. The problem is no longer a private matter, largely because of the efforts of women's groups across the country in the past few years. Laws and social and government agencies have been established to prevent violence against women, and to help women and their children when it does occur.

Betty Robinson '73 is the administrative coordinator for the Massachusetts Coalition of Battered Women's Service Groups. Located in Boston, and formed in 1978, the Coalition is a nonprofit union of 18 groups across the state which offer shelter, counseling, and legal services for abused women.

With the Coalition, Robinson helps the service groups raise private and government funds, organizes people to lobby for new laws, and informs the public, through the media and lectures and films, that assistance and protection are available to battered women.

Since the Coalition and its service groups are newly established, it is difficult to set priorities. The question is always whether to focus on the long-range plans—changing the laws, studying the problem, raising money—or on the immediate needs of battered women. As Robinson said, "None of our staff can, with any conscience, answer a hotline and say, 'Sorry, but I'm going to have to put you on hold while I demonstrate in front of the mayor's office for a new law.' On the other hand, we don't want to be continually repairing damage. Our work also focuses on preventing violence."

Robinson pointed out that the immediate problems are met by the hotlines and shelters, which are mostly staffed by volunteers, some of whom are former battered women. At any time of day, women can call one of the service groups for counseling and legal advice. Most groups have shelters, residences where women can stay (and bring their children) until they decide what to do. The location of the residences is kept secret. Last year, Robinson said, a man in Connecticut set fire to a shelter where his wife was staying.

The typical woman who visits a shelter has been abused for four years, according to Robinson. "Most women have traditionally stayed in abusive situations, unless they were wealthy, or could count on another member of their family. Economic dependency prevented women from leaving."

With more women becoming aware of their rights, and of the services offered by the groups in the Coalition, the situation is slowly changing. As Betty Robinson said, "We are getting more phone calls and visits from women who have been beaten for the first time. Rather than waiting, more women are doing something immediately."
