6-20-1895

To George W. Latham - June 20, 1895

Edwin Arlington Robinson

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.colby.edu/robinson_transcriptions

Part of the Literature in English, North America Commons

Recommended Citation

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by the The Letters of Edwin Arlington Robinson: A Digital Edition at Digital Commons @ Colby.
It has been accepted for inclusion in Edwin Arlington Robinson Letters and Transcriptions by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons @ Colby. For more information, please contact mkelly@colby.edu.
TO GEORGE W. LATHAM

Gardiner, Maine –
20 June – 1895—

My dear Latham,
I have got myself into a little "mess"
with "Im Paradiese", but the way out of it is not hard so no great harm is done. Wh\{en\} you wrote me that you had read the book but thanked me all the sam\{e\} for my offer, I had not much enthusiasm for the idea of sending [it] to you even {t}hough I thought you might like it as a gift from a friend; so I have given the novel to Ford with the intention of sending you something in its place. So when a package comes to you from Maine, you will know wel{l} enough what is in it. Just when it will come, I cannot say.

I spend Sunday {the 16th} with Ford at Exeter and found him in most flourishing circumstances—popular and holding a far more prominent position than I had supposed probable—considering his age and the standing of the school. Not that I doubted his ability to fill the position,
but you know there is a popular prejudice against over-young\a instructors. The kids call him "Little Joey" and seem to like him he says{s} becau{se} he makes them think

---2---

that they know more than they do. That is the first thing for a man to do in a place like Exeter—or any other place for that matter: get the boys to like you. If they dont you had better be in hell and done with it.       Ford is going to France in about a week to stay all summer. He has an invitation from Paul Bourget & will doubtless hav\{e\} a "little glass" with Daudet and the rest of them. He tells me that he would give dollars to talk an

\a WA suggests this reading in square brackets, with a question mark, but transcribes "our young".
hour with Zola. By the way, the girls are reading *La Debacle*¹ at Radcliffe.
Old things seem to be passing away from Cambridge.

I entertained vague hopes that I might manage to see you someday this summer, but I fear it will be impossible unless you happen to come this way—which I suppose, is hardly probable.² I shall not go to Boston this spring, for some very good reasons, and one in particular. But if you go there—you wrote in your last letter that you think of it—do not forget to call upon Butler.

³

He is not enjoying himself over much just at present and I know that a call from you would put new life into him. He hasn't a single friend in the city whom he cares for—at least he had none a year ago—and I know what he thinks of you. As to his father's failure, he did not write me much—only told me that the business would go right on and the balance would be returned to the firm when the creditors had fixed things to suit themselves. So I suppose it was not a total smash—like DeQuincey's trunk. Or was that a "grand smash?"² I know it was one or the other—it struck me as one of the best things in the Opium-Eater.²

I rather fancy that you ask me those questions concerning Meredith³ to see what you can draw of out of me; but I will take them in earnest and say this:—Read every novel for the style and nothing else. Read every word and repeat the reading of every striking paragraph and above all—take your time. To read Meredith in a hurry is to drink Pommery from the bottle. More than that, it is intellectual waste. No good can come from it and it is a rank injustice to a man who works like the devil with his pen. If "The Egoist"—the "hardest" by all odds of them all—seems to[o] much for a process like that, take Rho[n]-da Fleming—but no, dont take that, either,—for you would forget all

---

b WA has "possible".

² Written vertically.

d WA reads "one".

² WA reads "very striking paragraphs".

² Written vertically.
about the style, which is only half Meredithian. Diana of the Crossways is about midway and but contains the damnedest opening chapter in the world. But whatever you take, try to forget that you are reading a novel and I think you will have no more trouble; for Meredith is really great and intensely entertaining when once you "get into" him I remember my battle with "The Egoist," however, and am inclined to think that you would do better to take up Diana—which, along with Daudet's Jack, I hold to be a proper book for all men and women to read; particularly women, perhaps. I have never read Lord Ormont, by judge from Gates' criticism and others that it must be a good thing. The morality—has been questioned—something after "The Woman Who Did" in plot, isn't it?—I should like to have seen that article in the Nation—and, speaking of articles, be sure to send me yours when it appears. It will be the next thing to a talk with you.

Yours most sincerely,

I suppose you know of Hubbells engagement to a Miss Slade. He has taken her home for inspection.

---

P.S. (Copy)

William Butler Jr Tremont Street Boston
Saben destitute Will you cable hundred dollars for return to America Wallace Jones Reply Lithophyl London.

What is going to be the future of this man? Of course one can have no feeling for him but that of honest pity. If he isn't a genius he is lost and I must confess that I have yet to discover the spark. There was a time when I thought him gifted with a tremendous intellect but during the second year of his acquaintance I went through many disillusionments. I am generous enough, however, to hope that I am all wrong and that he may ultimately be greater than Herbert Spencer. In the meantime let us thank God—or whatever it is—that we can work and wait.5

Butler writes me a letter in which he tells me that he has worn away 30 pounds by riding a bicycle—a bit of graveyard humor which fits beautifully to the four long

---

8 WA has "onto".
pages that go before it. He wants me to tell him what I know about you, but I think it better for you to tell him your own story. Some day, when things are straightened out,
we will have a "feed" together and talk it over
--Saben too, if he is around.

Sincerely,
R.

-P.S.-

Hubbell's engagement is not yet announced
but Ford said nothing about keeping still so I suppose it is all right for me to tell you. It seems to me that some girl has done confoundedly well.
R.

HCL

NOTES

1. The next to the last volume of Zola's series of novels, "Les Rougon-Macquart," portraying various aspects of French life through the history of a family. Published in 1892, La Débacle deals with military life at the time of the Franco-Prussian War.
2. Thomas De Quincey's memoir Confessions of an English Opium-Eater, published in 1821. (SL)
3. George Meredith (1828-1909), influential Victorian novelist and poet. (SL)
4. A controversial novel of 1895 by Grant Allen, depicting an unmarried couple and the struggles of a single mother whose child was born out of wedlock. (SL)
5. Cp. EAR's line in "Richard Cory": "So on we worked, and waited for the light."

\[h\] Written in the center of the page.
\[i\] This is WA's note 2.