COLBY ON TOP.

After a Vacation of Four Years the Pennant Returns.

Friday the tenth of June, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, will be long remembered by all staunch adherents of old Colby. It was a great day for us all. Very early in the morning of the eventful day the feeling of anxious unrest, which always pervades the college campus before a decisive game, began to be felt by all the boys. It was tempting Fortune for anyone to venture a prophecy as to the outcome of the day, but it was generally conceded that the most that we could hope for was to tie ourselves with Bowdoin in the race for the much coveted pennant. This would mean a final game on Monday with our rival, at either Augusta or Portland, and with this in view, many who would have otherwise gone to Lewiston to support the team remained behind. But in spite of this it was a very large, enthusiastic and loyal band who went along with the team and who later thanked their lucky stars that they had been permitted to see the final game of the series.

When the news came to Bates, in the early afternoon, that they had defeated Bowdoin on her own grounds, for the third consecutive year, the boys went wild. Their old college bell rang out the joyful news, news that was fully as pleasant, too, to the Colbyites who watched the antics of the Bates men with much interest. Such affecting sentiments as "to hell with Colby" served only to whet our appetites for the coming game. Colby was to have a glorious opportunity, could she improve it?

Well, the game was called; a little late to be sure, for the Bates team could not get back from Brunswick until after three o'clock. The Bates co-eds had assembled to cheer their team to victory, and they can cheer; the men are not in it there at all. But speaking of cheering, the twenty odd men Colby provided completely drowned out the whole of Bates College. In fact the Bates students were so interested in the way we yelled and cheered that they just stopped all cheering and stared with mouths wide open. Poor Bates, they had good intentions but they had little to cheer for. Colby had really an easy victory. The Hussey upon whom Bates chose to bank their hopes proved but a rotten prop upon which to lean. He was simply a mark and when in the seventh inning, with a score of five to three in our favor, Aroostook Put knocked the ball clear out of sight behind the fence and started a regular procession around the bases, Bates' hopes went down. And then, a few moments later in the same inning, when Rice touched up things for another long drive to center field, scoring a home run and bringing in two more with him, Hussey fainted and the crowd bore him away. Two home runs and four earned runs in one inning has a discouraging effect on any pitcher.

After that all was easy. The Bates aggregation yelled spasmodically in a faint half-hearted way that would have sent cold shivers down the back of a polar bear. C-O-L-B-Y rang out unceasingly across Leo Park with the ringing accents of victory. Pulsifer as usual was hit freely by our team. Colby was jubilant, Bates had nothing to say. The co-eds wept and implored but their tears were vain.

At the close of the ninth inning our men concluded they had had enough sport, so with a bow to the grand stand by Captain "Jack" the last league game of the season of '98 was ended, with a score of ten to three in Colby's favor. The pennant was ours and won by some of the cleanest ball playing for the season ever put up by a Maine College team.

Colby owned Lewiston for the rest of the day and the return to the hotel was one big triumphal procession. The blue and the gray fluttered on every hand, Colby had put them on top.

A New Contest.

There will be a contest in extemporaneous composition in Memorial Hall Saturday morning at 9.30, open to members of every class of both colleges. The contest will be for two prizes of $5 each. There will be a prize for the men's college and a prize for the women's college. The rules of the contest are that the subject will be announced after the candidates are assembled and two hours will be given for the preparation of the article which shall not exceed 1000 words in length. The awards will be made upon Commencement day and will be given upon the general excellence of the article, taking into consideration the subject matter, arrangement, punctuation and all the points which go to make up a good manuscript. Those who intend to enter the contest will leave their names with Prof. Hall at the library before Friday night.

Phi Beta Kappa.

The appointments to Phi Beta Kappa from '98 are as follows: Page, Browne, Cleaves, J. E. Nelson, Linscott, Richardson and Pratt; Miss Colo, Miss Evans, Miss Smith and Miss Cook.

'98. Samuel D. Graves of Co. H. is regimental historian of the First Maine Regiment. Mr. Graves was for some time on the editorial staff of the Rockland Star and has recently been connected with the Boston papers. He is an experienced newspaper man and his appointment by Adj. Gen. Richards is very pleasing to all his friends.

WE CELEBRATE.

The Victories of Our Champion Teams in Athletics, etc.

Monday night was a great night for Colby and everyone was filled with the spirit of enthusiasm and loyalty. The occasion was the celebration of Colby's victories in football, debating, tennis and baseball. Almost the entire men's college participated, and festivities were kept up from eight in the evening until daylight began to break over the Winslow hills on Tuesday morning.

The exercises began at eight o'clock with a grand parade of the students starting from the college. Hall's Military Band kindly offered their services for the occasion and headed the procession. It was a long one and the spaces between the selections by the band were filled in with horns and megaphones. Capt. Brooks, or ex-captain we should say, was the marshal of the procession and led the way assisted by our ever present and ever welcome janitor. The line of march was down College Avenue, down Main street to Silver, counter-march and back to the Elmwood, where the band rendered several selection before the banquet.

More than fifty sat down to the banquet: the baseball team, faculty, alumni and students, all participating. The banquet was a good one and quickly stowed away in order to get to the substantial part of the programme which the president termed rightly a conversation. Conversation or not, the speeches were excellent, overflowing with loyalty to the college and satisfaction over the victories of the teams.

President Maling of the Athletic Association presided and introduced the speakers, first of course calling upon Capt. Jack Scannell of the team. Scannell told a good Irish story to open with and followed it up with some little account of his experiences as captain of this year's team. Stephenson, the manager followed, of course his story was of the same nationality as Scannell's and was a good one. He thanked the faculty and students for their support, the members of the team for their faithful work and the baseball committee for its valuable assistance.

Pike was called upon to speak for the Seniors and responded with another Irish story, applying its point to the students who receive their education at the expense of the state. Pierce, '98, spoke for THE ECHO, and made the point that the pennant had been won by straight collegiate students. Brooks was called upon to say something and gave a little account of the history of baseball since '98 entered college. He also deprecated the fact that so many men were compelled to play upon both the baseball and football teams.

J. E. Nelson was called upon to speak for the debating team and The Oracle. He spoke in his usual witty vein and his speech was one of the best of the evening. The next speaker was Sam who "stood by Coburn Hall and watched do first ball game and has been standing there off an' on ever since." He gave a very interesting account of the success of baseball at Colby in years past and from that branched off on the success of Colby in other lines. Sam gives every man on the team who makes a home run, three eggs; and he says that as long as he can keep a hon that will bring the pennant to Colby, so long will he keep hens. Sam's speech was the oration of the evening and received very hearty applause.

Mr. Charles H. Pepper, '89, was asked to speak for the alumni and said they were all very glad that the pennant had come back home once more, and that they hoped it would remain there. Dr. Marquardt made a very witty speech in which he scored several both of the faculty and students and brought down the house. Dr. Warren was also very witty and said that he was sorry that all the venerable members of the faculty whom he named over were kept at home by the infirmities of age, while the younger members like he and Dr. Pepper were there enjoying themselves. He kept the company in a roar of laughter and was heartily applauded. Dr. Warren is a firm friend of Colby athletics.

Dr. Pepper spoke of his coming here in '82 when it was the exception rather than the rule for the pennant to stray away from Colby's campus. Dr. Hill expressed his great satisfaction over the victories of the teams and pledged again his hearty support to Colby athletics.

Dr. Butler was the last speaker of the evening. He summed up in a few words what we have accomplished during the year just closing, mentioning the debating team, the musical organizations, the football, the weekly Echo, The Oracle, the tennis and the baseball, all of which have made records of which to be proud. Dr. Butler has improvised a new yell which he gave in closing:

"First in Tennis,
First in Debate,
First for the Pennant
Of Ninety-Eight!
First in Ideals
Of Work and Play.
Colby is COMING,
Clear the Way."

Senior Appointments.

The appointments for commencement from the senior classes are the following: Herrick, The Anglo-Saxon Supremacy; Page, In the Mind and in the World; J. E. Nelson, Social Discontent; Linscott, The Spirit of New England; Richardson, The Father of English Song; Cleaves, Modern Philosophy and Practical Liberty; Woodman, Diverging Paths; Fuller, Anglo-American Alliance; Browne, Amusements; Miss Bessey, A Vexed Question; Miss J. C. Stephens, On the Little Tin God in Literature; Miss Evans, The Poet—An Apostle of the True; Miss Dascomb, A Home Among Homes; Miss E. H. Stephens, History and Modern Fiction; Miss Cole, Some Curiosities of Our Colonial Literature; Miss Cook, Ethics of Longfellow; Miss Smith, Ethics of Punishment; Miss Sullivan, The Speakers are Herrick, Page, Nelson, Linscott, Richardson, Cleaves, Miss Bessey, Miss J. C. Stephens and Miss Evans.

'04. Miss Clara Morrill, assistant teacher in the Fort Fairfield High school, returned to her home at Waterville, Saturday. Her services have been solicited for the next school year by our school officers, and it is probable that she will accept their proposition, though she preferred to reserve her final decision until after her return home. It would be a difficult matter to find anyone who could fill her place. She is pre-eminently adapted to her chosen vocation. She delights in her work, and in the success of those under her care. In social life she is one of the kind of people whose influence is an inspiration to all about her, to live higher, nobler lives. And so one and all look forward with bright anticipation to the prospect of her return in September.—Aroostook Republican.

COMMENCEMENT ECHO.

The next issue of the ECHO will be a jubilee commencement issue, celebrating the victories of Colby during the past year. The number will contain eight pages, fully illustrated with half tones, and will make an excellent souvenir of the '98 commencement. It is intended to make this number the finest thing of the kind ever issued. It will appear sometime on Tuesday of commencement week.

CO-ORDINATION.

The editor of our esteemed contemporary, The Evening Mail, in commenting upon the recent showing made by Colby at the intercollegiate field day at Brunswick enumerates causes that tend to produce this unpleasant condition of affairs. One of these causes, he is pleased to style, "the not unmixed blessing of co-education as it exists at Colby today." The persistency with which the Mail keeps harping on this old score amuses us greatly. Really the burden which they place upon our young ladies is mighty indeed. If we lose a football game, or a baseball game or make a poor showing in track athletics, it is always the co-ords who have to take the blame of it all. Verily their lot is a hard one.

Now co-education and the young ladies have been here at Colby for a quarter of a century and certainly the question of their being here is no longer an experiment but a settled thing. In the language of diplomacy, "the incident is closed" and the young ladies are here to stay. For anyone to keep on crying out against co-ordination is like keeping the old quarrel between North and South on debate. The question is settled and should be allowed to rest.

A few facts in regard to the part of the young ladies in our athletics. We have observed that it is not the men who have young lady friends who do not train. If one looks into the matter a little, it will be found that the fact of the case is this. No one is more pleased over a victory or more grieved over a defeat of the Colby team than our loyal young ladies. We have watched the practice of the different teams and in many cases the men who work the hardest are those who have young lady friends to urge them on to battle for the honor of the college. The athletic interests of Colby are just as dear to the hearts of the young ladies as they are to the men and we cannot believe that the young ladies of Colby are in any way detrimental to athletics.

Again, there are more women in Colby today than ever before in the history of co-education. The year just passed has been the most victorious in the history of the college. Certainly these two facts must be reconciled before anyone can be made to believe that the statements of the Mail are true. We recognize the fact that the Mail has always been a staunch friend of the college and has been of great service, but we cannot see any possible ground for their persistent warfare against co-ordination and trust that they will in the future cease to lay upon the girls the burdens which should rightly fall upon their brethren.

FRESHMEN LOSE.

Dual Meet at Bowdoin Last Saturday Afternoon.

Last Friday morning the Colby Freshmen left Waterville with the 'Varsity nine for Lewiston, where they saw the final game in the pennant race. Some of the boys stayed in Lewiston over night, but the majority went on to Brunswick where they enjoyed the hospitality of Bowdoin.

Saturday was a very rainy day, something like the day of the meet held in Waterville last year, but in spite of the disagreeable weather and a heavy track, the games were started at about two o'clock.

The events were very interesting, and although Bowdoin took every first on the track, Colby was a very close second in every race but the high hurdles. In the field events Bowdoin excelled only by two points, Colby showing herself superior in the pole vault, discus and high jump.

Cloudman was easily the best all-around man, taking four firsts, a second and a third. He ran the hundred in ten and two-fifths seconds, with baseball shoes on a heavy track, and the twenty in twenty-four flat. His broad jumping put an excellent finish to his day's work. Gregson also was a valuable man for Bowdoin, scoring nineteen points.

For Colby, Newenham took ten points, three seconds and a third. After the strain of the Orono and Lewiston games, he was generous enough to still further exert himself for the honor of his college. He went into the quarter after winning his heats in the hundred and low hurdles and even then he made Snow run his best to win. Had Newenham not run the quarter, he would have been able to win in other events, but he didn't care to see the quarter run off without a Colby man trying for a place. Rice also, after a hard week in baseball, did excellent work and won eight points. Newcombe won the pole-vault and Bean the discus. Withee and Sprague tied for the high-jump. Withee won the toss for the prize.

Ten men on each team scored, Bowdoin taking eleven firsts, four seconds and nine thirds—seventy-six points—against fifty for Colby. This is a better showing than was made by Colby 1900 last year, when the score was seventy-four to forty-three.

Sam Entertains.

"Sam" royally entertained the women of the Senior class, together with the Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar Club, at his home on Ash street, Saturday evening. Anyone who has ever been so fortunate as to be a guest at Mr. Osborne's can readily imagine what a good time they had. Sam is a most faithful and witty historian and the Senior women learned more about their Alma Mater, Saturday evening, than they have during their four years' stay at Colby. Refreshments and music closed a delightful evening and with a hearty good night to "Sam" and his family the girls departed with pleasant memories of their genial janitor.

OF INTEREST.

New screens are being placed on the library windows.

Miss Peacock of Lubec, is visiting her sister Miss Peacock 1901.

Mr. Charles Pepper, Colby '88, arrived from Paris, with his family, Saturday.

Cook '98, has secured a position as principal of the Sterling, Mass., High school.

Prof. Hall has added a new revolving book case for his convenience to the library equipment.

The top has been ordered for the '98 fountain and will be in place and spouting before Baccalaureate Sunday.

Miss Cole '98, who has been teaching in Hartford, Conn., has returned to college and will graduate with her class.

Miss Bessey, Miss J. C. Stephens, and Miss Humphrey went to Sidney, Friday evening, with Mrs. Bessey who gave a talk before the Good Templars.

The baseball team sat for their pictures at Preble's yesterday afternoon. At the same time, Putnam '99, was elected captain of the team of '99.

The library has recently received from Dr. William Mathews of the class of '35, about two hundred volumes of English Literature and a handsome walnut case.

Miss Philbrook, the matron at the Dunn house has been obliged to leave for the remainder of the term. Her place is filled by Miss Bassett of Winslow.

The Waterville Grocers' clerks who subscribed to the chemical building fund met their first payment promptly on Monday. Success to them and many thanks.

Miss Sawtelle is to be the guest of the Woman's Literary Union of Portland, on the occasion of the ninth annual Field Day to be held at the new Casino, Cape Elizabeth.

The trees on the campus are being trimmed of their dead limbs and everything about the grounds is taking on a holiday aspect in preparation for Commencement.

A gold ring was lost on the roof of Ladies' Hall on the evening of the annual decollete parade. The finder will confer a favor by leaving the same with some member of THE ECHO board.

The president returned Sunday from attending Commencement at Newton Theological seminary and a short trip to Presque Isle where he delivered the address before the graduating class of the High school.

On Friday evening, June 17th, will occur at Ladies' Hall the annual garden party of the Y. W. C. A. Candy, punch and flowers will be for sale at their respective booths. Admission 15 cts. If the weather proves unfavorable the party will be postponed till Saturday.

The senior class have engaged Prof. R. B. Hall of the Waterville military band to take charge of the music at Commencement. The band will number 25 men and there will be eighteen in the orchestra, many of whom were members of the Maine Symphony orchestra. It will be the finest music ever furnished for Commencement.

Other Colleges

The senior class at Lasell held its class night June seventh and its Commencement the ninth. The gift of the graduating class this year surpasses the gifts of all its predecessors. They will present the Seminary with a memorial hall. The cost is to be $25,000, of which the larger part will be borne by the members of the graduating class and the remainder by former pupils.

The Wellesley girls enjoyed their tree day June 8.

ROBE DE NUIT.

Annual Decollete Parade Held After Banquet Monday Night.

The most successful robe de nuit parade held in the history of the college was carried out Monday evening immediately after the celebration banquet at the Elmwood. The men marched to the Bricks and quickly donned the appropriate apparel and were joined by those who had not attended the banquet, until fully 75 of the men of the college were drawn up in front of South college ready for the parade.

There was no regular marshal but by common consent the marine band, consisting of the megaphones and ash cans, led the way, while the horns were well distributed throughout the procession. Much red fire was burned and the spectacle was an exceedingly amusing one. The line of march was taken up two by two and the couples were sufficiently far apart so the procession was a long one.

The Colby yell was given at frequent intervals and when the horns were quiet enough, Phi Chi was given. Hanson Cottage, on Elm street, was serenaded. The bells of each church were rung as the procession filed by and few inhabitants of Waterville slept that night. On Main street, a dress parade was given and the costumes exhibited were by far the best ever seen in any parade on the street. The costumes of the "Rear Guard" were especially fetching.

The first long stop was made at the Palmer House where the young ladies were expecting the procession. After an impromptu horn concert, a war dance was executed and three cheers given for Fort Palmer. A short march on the double quick brought the head of the line to Ladies' Hall where the principal festivities took place. As a ladder had been gathered in on the way up, the drum corps ascended to the balcony and held forth from there, while the co-ords filled every window in their eagerness to witness every act of the performance. A second concert was given for their benefit and a war dance. The "Rear Guard" were so taken up by the young ladies that they took no part in the festivities. A few pranks were cut up around the house but no damage was done.

Returning to the Bricks, horns and musical instruments were laid aside and the time given to "Remembering the Maine" and other kindred amusements. The parade was the most successful ever held; in the first place, because it showed that the old Colby spirit to get out and have a rousing good time was not dead; in the second place, because everything was conducted with perfect propriety, the only disposition being to have a jolly time; and in the third place, because no college property was destroyed as has been the case sometimes in years heretofore.

One of the amusing incidents of the evening's frolic was the letting of the water on in the '98 fountain, which proved that it could work when given an opportunity. Many vied for the honor of having the first drink from its sparkling water, but one of THE ECHO board claims the honor of having been the first to discover its moist properties.
