October 2006

Alumni @ Large

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.colby.edu/colbymagazine

Recommended Citation
Available at: http://digitalcommons.colby.edu/colbymagazine/vol95/iss3/11

This Content is brought to you for free and open access by the College Archives: Colbiana Collection at Digital Commons @ Colby. It has been accepted for inclusion in Colby Magazine by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons @ Colby. For more information, please contact mfkelly@colby.edu.
Know Your Trustees

There will be six new faces at a slightly bigger table when Colby’s Board of Trustees convenes in the fall. Last year the board agreed to expand the maximum number of trustees to help bring more diversity to its membership. Subsequently it elected four new corporate members: Rebecca Littleton Corbett ’74 of Baltimore, Maryland, deputy bureau chief in the Washington, D.C., bureau of the New York Times; Seth W. Lawry, M.B.A., of Weston, Massachusetts, managing director of the Thomas H. Lee Partners, L.P.; Richard Y. Uchida ’79, J.D., of Bow, New Hampshire, an attorney and president emeritus of the New Hampshire Bar Association; and Charles Terrell ’70, Ed.D., of Brookline, Mass., vice president of the Division of Diversity Policy and Programs of the Association of American Medical Colleges. All four will serve through May 2010.

Also joining the board are two new alumni members: John B. Devine Jr. ’78 of Phoenix, Maryland, former vice president of sales for CVS and Target, L’Oreal Paris; and Todd W. Halloran ’84, M.B.A., of Darien, Connecticut, a partner at Freeman Spogli & Co.

20s/30s milestones

40s milestones

Hard to believe that we have been graduates of Colby for 62 years! Some of us graduated even earlier, and a few returned after serving in the Armed Forces and got degrees several years later. Regardless, congratulations to all. ♦ Nan Grahn Christiansen lives in Pompano Beach, Fla., in a retirement center and enjoys it thoroughly. She says her days are busy with aerobics, swimming, bridge, and short excursions to nearby places of interest. She said that a delightful lady from Maine, 100 years old, recently moved into her retirement complex and that she looks and reminds her of Dean Runnals, Down East accent and all. ♦ Ethel (Paradis ’43) and Merritt Emerson dropped by my home in March for a visit. Not only have they found happy homes for all of the books from their successful Book Barn, which they closed permanently last year, they have plans to move into smaller living quarters before another winter. Their daughter-in-law, Kathy Lynn Emerson, who lives in Maine, is a successful writer of historical mystery novels. Her latest, Face Down Beside St. Ann’s Well, got a very favorable review in the Bangor Daily News. ♦ Nancy Pattison McCarthy and her husband, Joe, kept the medical people busy this past year. Joe had a pacemaker implant, and Nancy had major back surgery, so they missed Joe’s 60th West Point reunion. Once they recovered, they were hosts for a reunion of Joe’s Gelnhausen, Germany, battalion of 40 years ago.—Josephine Pitts McAraly

47 Louise Kelley Pape Rochester observes that it is hard to believe she turned 80 and graduated from Colby 60 years ago next June. Two of her six children also graduated from Colby—Paul Pape ’75 and Andrea Pape ’79. Her other four children are spread out in many different directions. Of her 10 grandchildren, one is coming home soon from two years in Sendai, 400 miles north of Tokyo. Another was in Cyprus during the second semester of her junior year at MIT. Jill Pape spent the last half of her senior year at Newton (Mass.) South in Beijing, China. Louise sees a wonderful pattern of international integration and a trend toward world peace. She looks forward to seeing classmates and many others in June 2007. ♦ Dorothy Rodgers Jordan reports the sad news that she lost her dear husband, Clay Jordan, on May 12, 2006, after a three-month illness due to complications of pneumonia. She has many cherished memories of their world travels to sustain her. She, too, looks forward to our 60th reunion.

48 Kay Weisman Jaffe wrote in early April that she had just returned from a cruise around South America. The continent is beautiful, she said, from the glaciers and the snow-topped Andes to the warm colorful towns, big cities, and ranches. ♦ Gordon Miller attended the Colby reunion and hoped to meet some old friends. He wrote that Jane is still unable to be at home after her stroke three years ago. He manages to play a little golf every so often and does some volunteer work. He said he enjoys taking a Windjammer cruise once or twice a year in the Caribbean and that he’s hearing a lot better after his first experience with hearing aids in each ear. ♦ Everett Rockwell sent details of the health of his wife, Mim, and her prognosis. They are doing the best they can under the circumstances. They remained in Florida this summer, leaving Wolfeboro to be cared for by others. Everett sent
1920s-30s Correspondents

1920s-30s
1942, 1943, 1945, 1947
C/o Meg Bernier
Colby College
Office of Alumni Relations
Waterville, ME 04901
207-859-4312
classnews1942@alum.colby.edu
classnews1943@alum.colby.edu
classnews1945@alum.colby.edu
classnews1947@alum.colby.edu

1940
Ernest C. Marriner Jr.
10 Walnut Drive
Augusta, ME 04330-6032
207-623-0543
classnews1940@alum.colby.edu

1941
Bonnie Roberts Hathaway
8366 Trillium Road
Rockport, ME 04856
207-729-0395
classnews1941@alum.colby.edu

1944
Josephine Pitts McAraly
131 Russell Avenue
Portland, ME 04102
860-688-4025
classnews1944@alum.colby.edu

1946
Shirley Martin Dudley
68 Giddings Avenue
Windsor, CT 06095
860-688-4025
classnews1946@alum.colby.edu

1948
David and Dorothy Marson
41 Woods End Road
Dedham, MA 02026
781-329-3970
fax: 617-329-6518
classnews1948@alum.colby.edu

1949
Anne Hagar Eustis
24 Sewall Lane
Topsham, ME 04086
207-729-0395
classnews1949@alum.colby.edu

Only three classmates. Please send news.—David and Dorothy Marson

49 Toby Harvey Graf and I spent June 10 at the 2006 reunion festivities. There were 11 ‘49ers on the 50-plus Club roster, and I saw 10 of them. On the list were John Appleton, Walter Borucki, Virginia Young Ellis, Ruth Endicott Freeman, Mary Bauman Gates, Sid McKeen, Bud Nannig, Ann Jennings Tausigg, Robert Tonge, Hope (Toby) Harvey Graf, and myself. We were in another of the three- or four-day rainstorms that plagued Maine this spring, so the parade of classes was one of several things canceled. After we’d all par-taken of the traditional lobster bake, the weather improved slightly—stopped raining anyway! * Last year Toby and I went to an informal open house at the almost complete alumni center, so this year we went back to see the finished product. The walls are a very interesting picture gallery of alumni/alumnae, benefactors, and others who have made an impact on the College and students through the years. * During the reception prior to the 50-plus Club dinner, we were entertained by Af-ter 8, an a cappella group of former members of the Colby Eight. A de-light as usual. The oldest member of the 50-plus Club attending our din-ner was Fred Howard, Class of 1929, and 99 years young! Something for all of us to strive for in 2026! —Anne Hagar Eustis

51 Dorrie and Bump Bean will be going on an Audubon-sponsored cruise to the Chilean fjords for two weeks this fall. * Ernie Fortin continues to be busy, both in Sarasota and in Maine. After 10 years of plan-ning and hosting the Colby alumni luncheon in Sarasota in February, he has asked Norm Lee ’58 and his wife, Charlotte (Clifton) ’61, to assume the luncheon duties, along with help from Denny Dionne ’61. * I was sorry to have to miss the 55th reunion in June, but I know everyone had a great time. —Nancy Nilson Archibald

52 Bill Taylor sent a quick note: “I recently met a woman whose son went to Bowdoin. I told her about the Colby-Bowdoin football game at Brunswick, when the Bowdoin polar bear statue turned blue (a little paint probably helped). I had nothing to do with it. I think it had to do with po-larity and humidity.” I couldn’t resist e-mailing Bill back to let him know that his item would certainly be in this issue. Two days later he wrote again. “Sandy, this morning I recognized my neighbor, who has a Bowdoin connec-tion (his granddaughter is attending Bowdoin and was wearing a Bowdoin sweatshirt). I asked her if she’d had ever seen the blue bear. She responded that the bear has sported all kinds of colors over the years. Then she asked me if Colby’s mascot was the white mule. (Remember, his statue stands outside the Harold Alfond Athletic Center.) She had been required, as a freshman, to have her picture taken in front of the mule. I asked her, ‘Which end?’ ‘Front,’ she said. Bowdoin kids have better manners than we had.” * A newspaper article about Jean Remington McCaffery reported that she was seeking re-election as a Chelmsford, Mass., cem-etery commissioner. Jean has lived in Chelmsford for 52 years. She is now very involved with four children and seven grandchildren. In her working life she was a trust officer for a bank and also a tax examiner for the IRS in Andover, Mass. She’s now involved in local town activities. * Sheila and Don Hailers saw Joan Kelby Cannell, Barbara (Hills) ’54 and Ned Stuart ’51, and Howie and Claire ’58 while they were in Florida. Later, in April, the Hailers had a “grand luncheon” at the Coon-amessett Inn on Cape Cod with Carl and Muffie Morgan Leaf, Charlotte and Lum Lemberz, and Judy and Herb Nagle. Then, on April 29, they were guests at the 50th anniversary celebration for Jean and Bob Lee ’51. The Leas were there as were Joan Kelby Cannell, Louise Ginsberg Heriszberg, and Phil Lawson ’50 and his wife. It was a lovely party. * I received a surprise phone call from Chris Christenson Honshberger, who wanted me (and our classmates) to know that she has moved to 2322 Tall Oak Drive in Cantonment, FL 32533. She says she is doing well and is glad to be nearer her children, who are all in the South. * John McCoy wrote that in March he sailed on the Regent Seven Seas Voyager from Singapore to Mumbia (Bombay), with stops in Malaysia, Myanmar (Burma), and southern India. The highlight of the trip was a post-cruise tour of India’s Golden Triangle—Delhi, Agra, and Jaipur. John said, “the journey confirmed for me that India is an incredible, exotic, and chaotic place.” * Chuck ’53 and I had a really nice reunion in March with Carolyn English Caci ’53 and her husband, John, who had traveled to Barnstable on Cape Cod to see my most recent stage undertaking, On Golden Pond. The week before, Barbara Bone Leavitt also came, with her sister Dorothy. Now that’s friendship, and I did appreciate it! * My best to you all. —Jan “Sandy” Pearson Anderson

53 Some time ago I heard from Denny Leach. He retired but keeps active with ballooning in New Mexico and cruising to Alaska, the Columbia River, and the Caribbean. He plans to go to the Winter Olympics in Vancouver. * Tommi Thompson Staples reports that she and Carolyn English Caci were planning a trip to New York City to visit Marty Friedlander. * Ginny Falkenbury Aronson broke her wrist in February, but this is not stopping her from a group trip to Africa, concerning AIDS and TB, followed by a sightseeing tour to Johannesburg. * I had a long e-mail from Sam Graft. Although he did not graduate with our class, he still has some fond memories with Jerry and Vic Venta ’57. Sam got his degree from Montana State and his master’s from the University of Illinois. Subse-quent ly, he had success in public life in New Mexico. * Rick Tyler was to be back in Ogunquit, Maine, for the summer. He and his wife, Barbara, celebrated their 50th wedding an-niversary in September. * Chase and Nan Murray Lasbury will be off to Russia on a river cruise this fall. They had a nice visit with Carol Carlson Van Alstyne in April in Florida. * I attended my 92-year-old uncle’s induction into the Swampscott Hall of Fame at their dinner in March, and much to my surprise Frank Huntress ’56 gave the formal blessing. * Carolyn Doe Woznicky toured with a British group exploring the Palladin Villas around Vicenza, Italy, then took some personal days to see Venice on her own. * Jane McLeod Hinson received a distinguished service award at the 2006 commencement of the University of Maine, Machias. She has spent many years volunteering since she retired after 18 years at the school. She continues to be a piano accompanist there and serves on various boards to promote the performing arts. Her most exciting event, as member of the board of directors, was to secure funds to purchase eight acres of land.
bordering on deep water, two lobster pounds, and an existing facility, the Downeast Institute for applied marine research and education—all open to others for research. Last spring she managed to do a study/travel trip with one of her granddaughters to Dublin and Wales. * The last passings in our class, I regret to say, were of Kent Dickerman and Jane Metcalf Healey. * At this reporting, my roommate, Diane Chamberlin Starcher ’54, spent two nights with me. She was off to her husband’s reunion at Harvard. Then, after a brief stay in Houston, she and her family were going to Maui, Hawai’i, to celebrate her 50th wedding anniversary. In attendance were Ron Duce and his wife, Harold, continue to enjoy their travels. This year they took a newly built log cabin in the woods away in October 2004, and he wanted to come back and enjoy his new place. He recently started a new company, which this year was host to a Colby student during her Jan Plan. Daughter number five, Kate, is a third-year midshipman at Annapolis, and wife Karen (Lawrence ’67) will be opening her third restaurant in Boston’s South End in early 2007. * Mary and Ed Ducharme moved to St. Pete Beach, Fla., in July, declaring they’ve had enough cold weather. They will do some consulting work with a textbook company or university, but “nothing too involved.” * Ginny Coggins Eilertson and her husband, Don, celebrated their 50th with a “fantastic family cruise” to the Caribbean. They have nine grandchildren, ages 6 to 20. Ginny volunteers and teaches at a nonprofit yarn shop that sends all its revenues to cancer research. She sees Bob ’54 and Helen Chambers Cross and Bill ’53 and Ann Eilertson McDonough often and recently met Marcia Jebb for lunch in Portsmouth. * Dorothy Couillard Carlson is still very involved in physical activities. She learned to kayak in Florida last winter and last summer taught water aerobics, which led her to recall her first teaching assignment at the Waterville Boys’ Club. What a great organization that is, still doing business today as the Boys and Girls Club at the Alfond Youth Center in Waterville. * Betty Harris Smith and her husband, Harold, continue to enjoy their travels. This year they took their first Elderhostel tour to Japan. They look forward to condo living when their grandchildren, who live with them, go off to college. * Kathy (McConaughy ’56) and Lou Zambello attended Kathy’s 50th reunion in June. They were hosts for a big gathering the Wednesday before, and Larry ’56 and Jean Van Curan Pugh entertained the Class of ’56 with a wonderful Maine luncheon as they did for our class last year. Jean and Larry’s grandson will join his older brother at Colby this fall. Kathy and Lou recently lunched with author Robert B. Parker ’54 and his wife, Joan (Hall ’54), in Cambridge. The Zambellos tasted some nostalgia when they stopped at the former Park’s Diner in New Vineyard, Maine. They also recommended Billy Ganem’s restaurant in Damariscotta—Larsen’s Lunch, which features great lobster rolls. Billy’s dad is Super Ganem (Bill Ganem ’54), as you have probably guessed. * Please jot down any interesting events in your lives that you want to share and send them to classnew1955@alum.colby.edu. Thank you all. —Ann Burnham Deering

56 Classmates, are you still relishing in the joys of that incredible Reunion Weekend? How insightful of the housekeeping staff who prepared the rooms in Foss and Woodman to omit the mirrors! For three days, we basked in nostalgia without a reality check. Our 50th reunion lived up to every expectation, and those classmates who traveled long distances were well rewarded. Journeying the farthest were Vonnie Noble and her husband, Hugh Davies, from England, Shelia Mc Laughlin Freckmann and her husband, Brian Dillon, from Australia, Tess and John “Jube” Jubsinsky from Hawai’i, and Brian Stompe from California. I am certain that each of us left with a different cache of Kodak moments. * The campus is a showcase with those familiar buildings we knew so well now surrounded by spectacular additions. Many thanks to Jean (Van Curan ’35) and Larry Pugh for the Down East luncheon at their lovely home in Yarmouth. The big tent was a gala extraordinaire, and everyone had a fabulous time. * President Adams’s State of the College address was a comprehensive overview, and I sincerely urge those of you who did not hear it to read it online. To try to recap it here would be an injustice. * Greg Williams, from the Museum of Art, assisted by Paula and Peter Lunder, led a tour of the museum, and we glimpsed the Lunders’ dedication and passion for art that birthed their magnificent space. * Certainly another reunion highlight was welcoming those classmates returning to campus for the first time since graduation. Many tears of joy were shed embracing Ruthann Simmonds Mac Kinnon, Jean Farmer White, Vinnie Ferrara, Ann Lowery, Louise Peterson Forsleff, Judy Bramhall Getchell, Barry Karetick, Heidi Pauly Lansing, Jackie Huebsch Scandalias, Gerry Goldsmith, Pat Coffin Davis, and Carolyn Donley Inman. * I won’t credit Bill Wyman with planning his national book tour to coincide with our reunion, but I will give him kudos for the inspired readings and book signings. His book, High Country, in its fourth printing, will be on the night table of most every reunion goer, and
A Rising Tide | Jane Hinson ’53

Many decades after she chose it as her major at Colby, Jane McLeod Hinson ’53 has rediscovered her fascination with biology.

She owes it to clams.

For the past nine years, Hinson has served on the board of directors of the Downeast Institute for Applied Marine Research and Education, which runs Maine’s first and only public shellfish hatchery. For most of her tenure, Hinson has served as board chairwoman.

The institute grows clams to reseed defunct clam flats all along the briny coast of Maine. “Clams aren’t very sexy,” explained Hinson, 76, in a telephone interview from her home in the downeast community of Machias. “Mention lobster and people snap right to attention. Clams are just sort of there.”

Downeast Institute is a rising star in Maine’s marine research sector. Last spring the completed acquisition of eight acres of land and a former lobster pound on Great Wass Island allowed for a significant expansion of the institute. The $1.3-million deal was five years in the making and was made possible by funding from Maine Technology Institute and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The acquisition allows the institute to expand its research, hatchery, education, and business incubation goals. While the institute is moving into the growing scallops and lobsters, its mainstay has been clams. The hatchery produces 10,000,000 clams a year, most no bigger than a fingernail and sold in lots of 1,000. The reseeding program has gradually shown coastal communities a modern way to maintain a traditional industry, Hinson said. Productive clam flats require careful management as well as control of septic waste, which has fouled many flats, she said.

“We try to get them past the native suspicion to acceptance and participation,” she explained. “It took quite a while before the clammers recognized that management and working with scientists was feasible. Initially, people thought it was an idea that wouldn’t necessarily work. There was a ‘show me’ attitude, particularly downeast. But once you showed results, they got real excited.”

Now more than 40 communities rely on hatchery clams to maintain viable clam flats. Each restored clam flat creates more employment as more diggers can work there, Hinson said.

Hinson had initially planned a science career but postponed it while she raised four children. “I didn’t have that kind of time.”

A journalist, she and her now ex-husband owned and ran a weekly newspaper, the Calais Advertiser. Later she held public relations positions in the Maine paper industry and at the University of New Brunswick. She returned to Maine and took a position with the University of Maine Machias, eventually becoming director of special programs there, a job she held until 1997. It was there that she first started hearing about the work of Brian Beal, a professor of marine ecology at UM Machias who was the driving force behind the hatchery. Their offices were in the same building. Upon retirement, she joined the board of the fledgling Downeast Institute.

“It was a chance to get back into biology,” she said. “It all came right back. I had such a good general education as well as an excellent science education. It never really left me.”

Growing clams requires a working knowledge of tidal flows, clean water, and protection from predators like green crabs and moon snails, she said. “Because it is a biological entity, it is not perfect,” she said. “Each clam flat is kind of a challenge. What is the best density, what’s the best protection, what part of the flat is more likely to result in better growth?”

Most rewarding has been improving the quality of life for job-scarce downeast communities, she said. “I think aquaculture is the way of the future,” Hinson said. “You can control the resource. It’s not left up to the whims of nature.”

—Lee Burnett

Jane Hinson ’53 in the shellfish facility at the Downeast Institute for Applied Marine Research and Education.

in the Maine paper industry and at the University of New Brunswick. She returned to Maine and took a position with the University of Maine Machias, eventually becoming director of special programs there, a job she held until 1997. It was there that she first started hearing about the work of Brian Beal, a professor of marine ecology at UM Machias who was the driving force behind the hatchery. Their offices were in the same building. Upon retirement, she joined the board of the fledgling Downeast Institute.

“It was a chance to get back into biology,” she said. “It all came right back. I had such a good general education as well as an excellent science education. It never really left me.”

Growing clams requires a working knowledge of tidal flows, clean water, and protection from predators like green crabs and moon snails, she said. “Because it is a biological entity, it is not perfect,” she said. “Each clam flat is kind of a challenge. What is the best density, what’s the best protection, what part of the flat is more likely to result in better growth?”

Most rewarding has been improving the quality of life for job-scarce downeast communities, she said. “I think aquaculture is the way of the future,” Hinson said. “You can control the resource. It’s not left up to the whims of nature.”

A Rising Tide | Jane Hinson ’53

Jane Hinson ’53 in the shellfish facility at the Downeast Institute for Applied Marine Research and Education.

in the Maine paper industry and at the University of New Brunswick. She returned to Maine and took a position with the University of Maine Machias, eventually becoming director of special programs there, a job she held until 1997. It was there that she first started hearing about the work of Brian Beal, a professor of marine ecology at UM Machias who was the driving force behind the hatchery. Their offices were in the same building. Upon retirement, she joined the board of the fledgling Downeast Institute.

“It was a chance to get back into biology,” she said. “It all came right back. I had such a good general education as well as an excellent science education. It never really left me.”

Growing clams requires a working knowledge of tidal flows, clean water, and protection from predators like green crabs and moon snails, she said. “Because it is a biological entity, it is not perfect,” she said. “Each clam flat is kind of a challenge. What is the best density, what’s the best protection, what part of the flat is more likely to result in better growth?”

Most rewarding has been improving the quality of life for job-scarce downeast communities, she said. “I think aquaculture is the way of the future,” Hinson said. “You can control the resource. It’s not left up to the whims of nature.”

—Lee Burnett

Jane Hinson ’53 in the shellfish facility at the Downeast Institute for Applied Marine Research and Education.

in the Maine paper industry and at the University of New Brunswick. She returned to Maine and took a position with the University of Maine Machias, eventually becoming director of special programs there, a job she held until 1997. It was there that she first started hearing about the work of Brian Beal, a professor of marine ecology at UM Machias who was the driving force behind the hatchery. Their offices were in the same building. Upon retirement, she joined the board of the fledgling Downeast Institute.

“It was a chance to get back into biology,” she said. “It all came right back. I had such a good general education as well as an excellent science education. It never really left me.”

Growing clams requires a working knowledge of tidal flows, clean water, and protection from predators like green crabs and moon snails, she said. “Because it is a biological entity, it is not perfect,” she said. “Each clam flat is kind of a challenge. What is the best density, what’s the best protection, what part of the flat is more likely to result in better growth?”

Most rewarding has been improving the quality of life for job-scarce downeast communities, she said. “I think aquaculture is the way of the future,” Hinson said. “You can control the resource. It’s not left up to the whims of nature.”

—Lee Burnett

they won’t be disappointed. • The class dinner was as chic as a night at the Ritz. The menu was superb, and the slide presentation produced by Dave Sortor enthralled everyone. The entire class was rapt in nostalgia and appreciation for the incredible trip down memory lane. • Have I rambled on too long? Have I missed your favorite moment? Please e-mail or write to me and I will include your highlights in the next column. Both John and I send warm wishes to you all. —Joan Williams Marshall

57 Here we are, less than a year away from the big one, and plans are shaping up very nicely. More classmates have joined the reunion committee, and a lot of networking is under way. • Marilyn Perkins Canton e-mails that she and Dick had a healthy and busy eight months in Naples, Fla., before heading north to Bridgton, Maine. Perkins has been in touch with the now part-time Mainer Audrey Hittinger Katz, who is working hard on our reunion and urges all of us to work even harder! Never to leave a stone unturned or a wave unrippled, Perkins and Dick will be taking a Viking river cruise on the Dnieper in the Ukraine before enjoying a round or more of golf with the Vigs this summer! • Babs (Faltings ’56) and Warren Kinsman live on Datar Island, S.C., for eight months and in Ellsworth, Maine, for the summer and fall. It was a busy winter for the Kinsmans, with visits from the Colby contingent of Larry ’56 and Diane Schnauffer Zullinger (who were very happy at Datar and hoped to return for a month in ’07), Patsy and David O’Brien ’58, Sherry and Don Rice ’56, and Lyn Brooks ’56 and Harry Wey ’56. • Linda and Don Tracy hoped that the Maine weather would cooperate for their summertime small family reunion. Some relatives traveled all the way from Como, Italy, for the “Vacation Land” fun. • Andrea and Allan van Gestel spent a week in San Francisco with son Eric ’84 and then two weeks in Oahu and Maui in Hawai’i. After a wonderful trip, it was out of “retirement” and back to work for Allan as presiding justice of the Massachusetts Business Litigation Court. So much for afternoon snoozes, Al. • In the cultural improvement department, Mikki Chomicz Manno and Betsey Morgan Salisbury are certainly standouts. The summer of ’05 found them at Tanglewood (in the beautiful Berkshires of Massachusetts) for wonderful performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and a little Shakespearean theater. Then it was on to New York in the fall to enjoy the New York City Opera. Our Colby adventures at the Waterville Opera House sort of dim by comparison. ♦ Bob Pettegrew sends his best to everyone and is looking forward to our 50th next June, as we are. —Guy and Eleanor Ewing Vigne

58 Ellie Fortenbaugh de la Bandera was again in Washington, administering the oral Spanish federal court interpreter certification test. She and Marcia Griggs Atsaves got together, and more recently Ellie spent a couple of nights on Pawleys Island, S.C., with Bob ’59 and Mary Twiss Kopchains ’59. I might add that Pawleys is one of the not-to-be-missed settings on the East Coast! ♦ Word from Susan Bower Hendrickson is that she and her husband, Jack, John ’55 and Jane Daib Reisman, Bill and Nancy Harmon Clark, and Sue and Steve Loeb (Steve, a Bowdoin graduate, is the son of former Colby athletic director Mike Loeb) have been gathering in Columbus for some “fine reminiscing times.” The interlopers enjoy these Colby gatherings as they discover more and more people they know mutually. And, serendipitously, it turns out that Jack and Steve are eighth cousins! ♦ Debbie Robson Cobbs reports that they expected their entire gang to be together on Cape Cod this summer for the first time in eight years. Their son, Jim, lives in Seattle with his clan, and daughter Sarah and family were moving—yet again—to Belgium, where her career Air Force husband will be stationed at SHAPE. ♦ Great to hear from George Stetson. He’s been doing some serious volunteering, such as working in a men’s homeless shelter, building homes for Habitat, and mentoring. He says it’s really “self-serving and allows me to work with some good people.” He spends June to October in Nova Scotia, where “all sorts of good activities follow.” ♦ Helen Payson Seager wrote that she continues to “spend discretionary funds soaking up the best of the Boston choral music scene.” She’s also in a recorder group—the instrument, that is—and is conducting a chapel chorale of oldsters. ♦ I’ve just returned from Bob’s 50th Bowdoin reunion, which was held during the June monsoons! My son, Dave, joined me. He’s a double for his dad so was easily recognizable, and of course he was subjected to myriad war stories about Bob’s college days! ♦ Twas a most memorable experience! —Beryl Scott Glover

59 Thank you to all who responded to my request for news. It was wonderful to hear from you. ♦ Carolyn Cummings Crain has retired after six years in the antiquities business and now has more leisure time. She planned to travel to Milo, Maine, with her sister in August for a reunion of the Hamlin family cousins and to visit Erol Cleaves Davis in South Portland. ♦ Stanley Painter had a heart attack and open-heart surgery five years ago and now is limited to practicing medicine part time. He recently was elected Worshipful Master of his Masonic Lodge for the third time and has been in Masonic office since he was installed as Tiler in January 1970. ♦ Sandy and Steve Levine retired to Sarasota, Fla., in 2000. They have four grandchildren, two in Florida and two in Seattle. They saw Barb and Dave Tamaccio, who live on the east coast of Florida, and keep in regular touch with Ted Lockhart ’61 and David Bloom. Steve recently was “recruited” by a local manufacturer that he represented in California and works three days a week. In 2001, Steve and Sandy piloted a 30-foot boat through a couple of French canals and plan a similar trip this fall. They would be happy to help anyone who wants to make such a trip. ♦ Sheila and Felix Suchecki sold their home in Michigan in December and lived with one of their sons in South Jersey until they moved into their new condo in Michigan. They have been in touch with Kiki Kies Madden, whose daughter, Claire, ran in the Boston Marathon in honor of her father, Dan. ♦ Since retiring as a professor at Northeastern, Dick Morrison has continued his consulting work at Morrison Market Strategies. He also has expanded his pro bono activities, doing audience surveys for Revels in Cambridge, Mass., as well as an alumni survey for the Harvard Business School Association of Boston. He’s in his third year on the HBSAB board of governors and will chair the program committee in the 2006–07 fiscal year. Dick also has served as a citizen representative to a joint FAA-Massport-Citizens Advisory Council study of airport-related noise. ♦ Mike Farren helped Dick early on in the process with his considerable knowledge of this problem. Dick and his wife did a one-week Florida tour, visiting friends and attending a granddaughter’s wedding. They visited Bob Keltie and Carol Maiden in Florida and planned to get together again this summer when Bob and Carol visited the Boston area. The Morrisons split their time between a condo on the Chelsea waterfront and their home in Northport on the coast of Maine. ♦ Three Colby alums are working to spread progressive politics in Pennsylvania this year: Art Goldschmidt and Betty Lohnes Grudin ’45 are the precinct chairs for their election district in State College and backed a Democratic candidate, Chuck Pennacchio, for nomination to the U.S. Senate. Art and his wife, Louise (Robb ’60), were hosts for a reception for the candidate, and Art and Betty campaigned door to door. Although the candidate lost the primary, he won among the Democrats of State College. Meanwhile, Art and Betty were both re-elected to the local Democratic committee by the voters in their district. Art co-edited, with Barak Salomini, a collection of scholarly articles, Re-Envisioning Egypt, 1919-1952, published by the American University in Cairo Press. This year he helped edit a collection of chapters from books published by Westview Press. State College Area High School plans to offer a Middle East history course for the first time in 2006–07, and Art will mentor a very talented senior who wants to teach from the eighth edition of his book A Concise History of the Middle East (co-written with Lawrence Davidson and also published by Westview Press in 2006). ♦ Please keep the news coming. —Jeanne K. Woods

61 We missed all of you who were unable to attend the fantastic 45th! Please plan now for a fabulous 50th, June 2011, when you can look forward to being guests of the College. ♦ Our weekend began Thursday evening with a Samoset Resort pre-reunion party in Rockport. Colby ’61 enjoyed a sumptuous buffet featuring signature clam chowder in a private room overlooking the ocean. The reminiscing continued with nightcaps at the Edgewater Cafe, followed by breakfast at the Brown Bag in Rockland before the drive to Mayflower Hill. Be sure to attend the pre-reunion activity in 2011; the smaller gatherings offer a wonderful opportunity to renew friendships in an intimate setting. ♦ Friday’s highlight: the Alumni Awards Banquet honoring Jeanette Benn Anderson for her outstanding contribution to multiple sclerosis research. Jeanette’s entire family, including husband Bob, daughter Kathy, and son Kris, were on hand—40 strong from Houlton,
Maine—to see Jeanette receive the Distinguished Alumna Award. Her former roommates, Sandy Nolet Quinlan and your correspondent, were particularly thrilled with the moving presentation. On Saturday we enjoyed the traditional lobster bake and barbecue sheltered from inclement weather in the Field House of the Alfond Athletic Center—we had our own parade! Our class dinner was sited in the inspiring Paul J. Schupf Wing for the Art of Alex Katz, in the Museum of Art. Special guests included Professor Peter Ré and hockey coach Jack Kelly. Thank you again, Penny Dietz Sullivan, for your past service as president, and Nancy Cunneen Boardman, for serving as vice president and member of the Alumni Council. New officers for the next five years are Bob Burke, president, and Steve Chase, vice president. Your correspondent also continues! Your support of Colby ’61 is greatly appreciated—please stay connected. For a list of classmates who attended the 45th reunion and for additional news, please visit Colby’s online magazine and the Blue Light Alumni Web Site (www.colby.edu/alumni), where you’ll find our own space for photos, e-mail forwarding features, and much more! Aloha! Please go to Colby online for more news of our classmates. —Diane Scafion Coben Ferreira 62 Our reunion committee is hard at work planning our 45th for 2007. Best set the date aside now: June 8-10. I’ve not been able to get to the meetings but do plan to be on June 8-10. I’ve not been able to get housing in the medical center, 10,000 theater, opera, and ballet. Judy volunteered all the travel they continue to enjoy experiences visiting the townships. They had some uplifting but unsettling animals, but flying in bush planes. They loved safari life and being with and Johannesburg in South Africa.

Hoagland Bristol and Harry are still going strong in their attempt “to see the world while we still can.” They travel to Ireland and to Botswana, Zimbabwe, Namibia, and Capetown and Johannesburg in South Africa. They loved safari life and being with the animals, but flying in bush planes was “an interesting experience,” and they had some uplifting but unsettling experiences visiting the townships. They had just returned from a tour of Turkey, time at a dude ranch with son David, and a trek to Big Bend with son Wes and his son. In addition to all the travel they continue to enjoy theater, opera, and ballet. Judy volunteers many hours with homeless pets, housing in the medical center, 10,000 Villages, and church along with her daily Y workout. Sadly, Judy lost her 90-year-old mother last Christmas. Ten years ago, Judy’s mother came from Connecticut to live in a retirement complex, and she traveled extensively with Judy and Harry. The Bristol’s plan to be at our 45th. Tony Kramer wrote that his daughter started at Colby this fall as a member of the Class of 2010. Can anyone else out there claim a child or grandchild attending Colby? Ceylon Barclay and his wife, Irina, were joined by Penny (Wheeler ’64) and Ralph where he is CEO of an international search firm. He goes to the office one day a week, then works at home. Two daughters and six grandchildren are close by so Tony and Cindy spend a great deal of time playing doting grandparents. For their 40th anniversary this fall they planned an extended vacation to Rome and the Greek Isles. The Maineros plan to be with us in June 2007. Pam Taylor retired last fall but manages to keep a finger in the pie. I ran into her at an Alzheimer’s conference recently. She lives in Bangor and summers on the Neighborhood Legal Services serving low-income residents, and working as a public defender. He got interested in food and co-wrote Quick Pickles. He now owns a catering business named Smoke & Pickles and has found himself in Gourmet magazine and on the Martha Stewart show. Johanna and Bob Mangion went to Argentina this year for nearly a month and saw “a tiny bit of the country” with friends of theirs living there. Bob reported that after the flight down to Buenos Aires they jumped on a bus for another 12-hour ride into the hinterland and that bus ride was far better than the flight: stewardesses, two liters of Coke, seats that turned into beds, an upper deck for sightseeing, and Argentine beef dinner served at 11 p.m. and breakfast at 6 a.m., all for $33 first class! At one point they went up into the mountains (which only go up, not down, according to Bob). At the summit, all smoothly hilly and arid, tea was served, the guests arriving on horseback and partaking of tea and sweets from china and silver! Peter and Gail Koch Cooper have been retired from public education for several years. Gail was a seventh and eighth grade teacher, and Peter was an elementary school counselor. They are now involved in volunteer activities and Vermont politics, particularly the Vermont Progressive Party. Peter has worked hard on bills for single-payer health care and protection from genetically modified food. Gail’s work varies from helping out at a homeless shelter to visiting new moms and babies in an early education services program to demonstrating against the war in Iraq. Daughter Amy is an guidance counselor at Waltham (Mass.) High School, and son Sheldon is the director of the Homestead Community Land Trust in Seattle, Wash. The Coopers planned a rafting trip in July with Bill ’62 and Barbara Haines Chase ’63, and they stay in close touch with Barb Mc Lean Bing, Sandy Hayward Albertson-Shea, Lynn Damon Clapp, and Peggy Miller. Peter Hart returned to his native roots in Berkeley to teach at the Goldman School for Public Policy at the University of California. He taught a seminar course “from Vietnam to Iraq,” about the changing tides of public opinion. Guest lecturers included Torie Clarke, Richard Perle, James Carville, and Hamilton Jordan. His daughter, Elizabeth, graduated from the University of Pennsylvania

60s newsmakers

Morgan McGinley ’64, editorial page editor of The Day in New London, Conn., won first place in editorial writing in the Connecticut Sigma Delta Chi contest for newspapers under 50,000 circulation. Recently stepping down after a term as president of the National Conference of Editorial Writers Foundation, McGinley helped double the net worth of the foundation, which is raising money to train minority newspaper and TV staff members in opinion writing. Bob Field ’67, second baseman on a team that almost made the final round of the College World Series, has refined other talents. As primary researcher and scriptwriter for Boston Productions in Norwood, Mass., Field produces interactive museum presentations exhibited throughout the country. He told the Sunday Valley News (West Lebanon, N.H.) his job is to bring history to life by combining stories of our past with modern technology. “I love it,” Field said. “Each assignment presents a new opportunity, not only to be creative, but you actually learn a lot in the process.”

milestones

Deaths: Frank C. Morgan ’60, August 20, 2006, in Webster, Mass., at 67 ✦ Marc S. Cummings ’64, June 20, 2006, in Old Lyme, Conn., at 63.

Bradshaw for Thanksgiving at their home in the Blue Ridge Mountains of N.C. Irina teaches at Appalachian State University and planned to take a group of her students to Russia for the summer. Ceylon has been doing some consulting work in Russia this year. “It is true,” he says, “democracy is on the wane in Russia. The KGB is out in force, registration of foreigners is in effect, and there is a chill to the air again that I’d not witnessed since my first trip behind the Iron Curtain in ’72.” My sister and I did an Elderhostel in April at The Mountain in Highlands on Appalachia, the air again that I’d not witnessed. 64 One classmate frequently asked about at reunions is Danny George. At last I have news! He was written up in Westport Shorelines in April 2006 under the heading “Lawyer Turned Caterer, Pickle Smoker.” Highlights of his life include serving with VISTA in Portland, Ore., and meeting his wife there, working for

48 COLBY / FALL 2006
Medical School and is doing her residency in Cleveland. His son, Aaron, is an agent at the William Morris Agency in L.A. • Jim Simon got word regarding patent number three: “this time for an LED in the distal end of the endotracheal tube with a self-contained battery.” Jim says that two out of five intubations by EMT/paramedics go into the esophagus instead of main stem bronchus, and people die. His LED allows “better visualization during intubation and confirmation of placement in the ambulance, ER, and ICU. Hopefully paramedics go into the esophagus two out of five intubations by EMT/endotracheal tube with a ‘this time for an LED in the distal word regarding patent number three:”

65 Time flies. ’Twas 45 years ago that we all assembled on Mayflower Hill to start our great adventure. Both John Kennedy and Robert E.L. Strider were newly installed presidents. The Mustang and Beatles had yet to be discovered. The Scott Paper woodchip pile was humongous; as long as we had a west wind, all was well. Downtown Waterville was a sea of “loans” signs and very crowded, with parking at a premium. Ted was playing guitar in front of Zeta Psi . . . beanie signs and . . . Dean Nickerson explaining “S-E-X” to the boys in Given Auditorium. Perhaps the girls had something similar in Runnals, but they were locked up by 10 p.m. and probably were told to “stay away from the boys” rather than given any details. Last year’s Mono Lisa Smile with Julia Roberts captured the era well. The late Betty Freidman visited Colby and spread her message to those of us in the hinterlands. Strange indeed! • Some changes since then. Lew Krinsky has joined Robert W. Baird & Co. as senior VP, investments. It’s a new private client branch. Lew spent 17 years with Legg Mason, who sold their business to Citigroup, allowing Lew the chance to move on. Need something? Call 800-792-6732. • Duane Record retired in June 2006 after 30 years in private practice as an ob/gyn in Plattsburg, N.Y. He and Sharon, his bride of 40 years, say “travel is in the near future.” • Dave Fearon’s son David ‘89 has finished his Ph.D. in sociology at the University of California and plans to do some writing on organizations. Papa Dave hopes “to be joining him in some of his writing projects as a son and father act.” • John Bragg will now have to revise the family business name. His daughter, Abby, was planning on working for Dad (John) in the N.W. Bragg & Sons warehouse this summer. Abby graduated from Rollins College in Winter Park, Fla., in May 2006. John says he’s spending more and more winter time in Ft. Myers Beach as retirement nears. • Perhaps John will run into Dave Hatch in Ft. Myers. Dave says, “I have become bored with retirement so have a full-time job as the club house attendant here at the development in which I live.” He cruises around in a golf cart taking function-hall reservations and passing out pool passes to new owners, among other things. He sees Dave Parish, an attorney in Weston, Fla., and Dale “Peanut” Rottner Haas. • Also in Florida is Randy Antik. He and Ronnie moved to Naples and built a new home, and he moved his business to Florida in January 2006. They’re no longer in Texas but have retained their house on Martha’s Vineyard. • Nick Loceil spent the last 20 years in high-tech international marketing with Hewlett Packard. That ended last January, and he’s looking to join a smaller company in either Boston or Maine, where he plans, “eventually,” to build a house on property he has in Woolwich. • Claire and Dana Abbott “thoroughly enjoy the year-long summer and leisurely pace of life in Montgomery, Ala.” Dana says he “throttled back from 60-hour weeks and long commutes to become an IT consultant working from home. This keeps me in touch with technology, enables me to work with talented people who defend our nation, lets me play lots of golf, and provides business travel from time to time.” Dana has a married daughter, Andrea, in N.Y.C. and another daughter living in Boston. Dana and Claire are owned by Wilhelm, a 14-year-old miniature pinscher. • Hail, Colby, Hail!—Richard W. Bankart

1960
Jane Holden Huerta
3417 Tallywood Lane
Sarasota, FL 34237
305-446-5082
classnews1960@alum.colby.edu

1961
Diane Scraffton Ferreira
Pihanakalani Ranch
P.O. Box 249
Pa’alului, HI 96776
classnews1961@alum.colby.edu

1962
Patricia Farnham Russell
181 Maine Avenue
Millinocket, ME 04462
207-723-5472

1963
Karen Forslund Falb
245 Brattle Street
Cambridge, MA 02138
617-864-4291
classnews1963@alum.colby.edu

1964
Sara Shaw Rhoades
76 Norton Road
Kittery, ME 03904-5413
207-439-2620
classnews1964@alum.colby.edu

1965
Richard W. Bankart
20 Valley Avenue, Apt. D2
Westwood, NJ 07675-3607
201-664-7672
classnews1965@alum.colby.edu

1966
Meg Fallon Wheeler
19 Rice Road
P.O. Box 102
Waterford, ME 04088
207-583-2509
classnews1966@alum.colby.edu

1967
Robert Gracia
295 Burgess Avenue
Westwood, MA 02090
781-329-2101

1968
Peter Jost
65 West Main Street
P.O. Box 5389
Clinton, NJ 08809
classnews1968@alum.colby.edu

1969
Ray Gerbi
26 Columbus Avenue
Concord, NH 03301-3119
603-224-3642
classnews1969@alum.colby.edu

COLBY / FALL 2006 49
unchanged—except us. Oh sure, there was evidence of our 60-plus years in the predictable physical changes, but there was also important evidence of a shared sense of appreciation for our Colby years and a delight in being back there together, still sharing, still caring. We laughed, we cried, we hugged, we danced, we listened and learned, we extended our still-growing circle of college friends, we promised to stay in touch, and we went home with new Colby memories to add to the old. Did I mention that it rained on our parade—and on our hoped-for Monhegan boat trip and on most of our weekend on campus? It hardly needs mentioning, because it really didn’t matter. We still had a wonderful time together, and that was what mattered. That was what made it so special. Thank you, retiring class president and reunion chair Fran Finizio and Alumni Council rep Linda Mitchell Potter. Thank you, Gary Knight, for extracting piles of money from us for the benefit of Colby. Thank you, reunion committee members Fran, Linda, Debbie, Mary Sue, Barry, Stan Marchut, Karen Rienode Remine, Denny Maguire, Brian Shacter, and Dick Gilmore. New class president Stan Marchut will lead us onward to our 45th reunion, Mary Sue will keep us informed about Colby doings in her new role as Alumni Council rep, and I will bug you on a regular basis for your news, views, and pearls of wisdom in my continuing role as your class correspondent. One returning classmate commented that being back at Colby made the years seem to melt away. Great comment! Great feeling! Great reunion! —Meg Fallon Wheeler

Elaine and Kurt Swenson attended the dedication of the Schair-Swenson-Watson Alumni Center last October. It was, Kurt reports, a sad day in most respects as the building was not intended to be a memorial to Doug Schair, but owing to his untimely death the ceremony was, in part, just that. Kurt lost a very good friend, we lost an outstanding classmate, and Colby lost a distinguished alumnus. Karen and Tom Watson were present along with the majority of the Schair family. Kurt tells us that the last several quarters have been rough in the granite business but that 2006 seems to be a recovery year. He has completed renovations on his summerhouse in Rye, N.H., and he and Elaine looked forward to spending time there this summer. Kurt ended his note with the hard-earned advice that we should all learn to take each day as a gift, a real gift, and enjoy it. Amen to you, Kurt. • Ivry Faunce also attended the dedication and found the event moving and full of fond remembrances of Doug and the long-standing loyalty, devotion, and generosity of Doug, Kurt, and Tom. Ivry reported feeling honored to be there as part of the Class of ’67 along with Lee Potter, Lou Richardson, Terry Shaw, and others. • Phyllis Jalbert spoke last fall at the groundbreaking ceremony of the Michael Klahr Holocaust Education Resource Center that will be built next year on the campus of the University of Maine, Augusta. More than 130 people attended the ceremony that honored Michael, a Holocaust survivor. Phyllis delivered a moving testimony to her husband’s will and spirit. • Chris (Nahabedian ’70) and George Markley proudly report that their son, Todd, was ordained as a rabbi by Hebrew Union College in New York. One of the members of the recurring committee offering the position to Todd is our own Chuck Levin. Chuck lives in Needham, Mass., and practices law with his son, Jonathan ’97. In addition to his law practice, Chuck is practicing his grandparenting skills as he and Jo Ellen welcomed their first granddaughter this year. Chuck already is planning for a third generation Colby acceptance in 2024. • Sally Ray Bennett will join the ranks of the retired this year when she leaves her position as school counselor in South Kingston, R.I. Sally and Charlie will keep busy traveling about to visit with their four grandchildren. • Jeanne C.P. Sommers drove down south on a week-long mission sponsored by her church to lend a hand to Hurricane Katrina victims in Pearlington, Miss., who had lost every material possession. Worried about the heat, the bugs, the dangers from unsanitary conditions, Jeanne said that she and the others in her group nevertheless pushed the boundaries a little farther back each day, and with support from each other and the prayers from the congregation back home they brought Pearlington a little closer to normal. Jeanne did some research and found that “Katrina” has German and Greek roots and that the meanings are “pure” and “torture.” What she found on her trip, she says, supported both meanings. • Eric Meindl, you might recall from a column last year, directly experienced the wrath of Hurricane Katrina. After they lost their home of 20 years on the Gulf coast of Mississippi and most of their possessions, they decided to relocate to the foothills of South Carolina in Greenville and are now settling in to their new home. • By the time you read this column, our 40th reunion will be less than a year away. Mark the calendar and save the time next June to come to Colby. The trip will be worth the effort if you do no more than visit the Schair-Swenson-Watson Alumni Center. • Please go to the Colby magazine Web site for lots more news of our classmates. —Robert Gracia

Jane Finkeldey Stephenson and Donna Massey ’69 attended Greg Crawford’s 60th birthday bash in March. Greg is retired and living in Greenfield, Mass., but is the “unofficial mayor” of Greenfield, so his party was a cast of hundreds. Jane blew up Greg’s picture from “Faces and Places” and his yearbook picture to display at the party. Jane also spent two days with Dana Heikes in his home at Charleston, S.C., in late November. Dana still has an active plastic surgery practice there. • Ken Young’s daughter, Sarah, graduatedPhi Beta Kappa and summa cum laude from UMass, Amherst, and is studying in Germany on a fellowship. She planned to leave for a job in Moscow before returning to the U.S. in 2007. Ken wrote that “the nest is so empty that the floors creak with every step. It is great to learn about foreign climes and cultures.” • Bruce McDonald is currently on a j80 racing team (sailing) that went to the world competition in July. • Ellen Dockser is “still happily ensconced at Boston public television station WGBH.” In recent months I’ve spent time with Carol Bennison Hartman, Vaughan Jolly Sills, Betsy Chase, Pat Carney, and Lynn Gilley Stone ’70, and I’m pleased to report they all look younger than they did in 1968.” • The Manchester (N.H.) Union Leader reports that Mark Edelstein was unanimously recommended to become the new president of New Hampshire Community Technical College, Laconia. Mark previously was president of Diablo Valley College in California. • Carolyn Welch Ryzewicz ran into Nancy DeAngelis Morgan at a coffee shop in Denver while visiting her son, “and for the next two hours we talked non-stop. The last time we had seen each other was graduation day and there was a lot of catching up to do. She claims that I look the same—I think it was her longer hair that threw me, as her face doesn’t look that different. (Of course, neither of us mentioned that we’re both a lot older—sigh.) I definitely promise to call the next time I’m visiting Denver.” • The Waterville Morning Sentinel reports that Brigadier General John Bubar retired from leadership positions in the Maine Air National Guard and Army National Guard following 38 years in the military. A command pilot with the Air Force from 1970 to 1977, John was also a captain for American Airlines for 20 years. John now lives with his wife, Kathy, in Durham, N.H., and they enjoy frequent visits with their grandchildren. • Mary Jo Calabrese Baur and Steve Campbell spent two weeks in Tuscany in early June in a villa in Volterra with friends—a wonderful stay, with side trips to Florence and Venice. • Were you surprised to see Tony Jordan referred to as a “she” in the last column? Rest assured that Tony is still a “he.” Colby apologizes for the error. —Peter Fost Bill Lyons just returned from his second time teaching a group of international students at the University of Leiden (Holland) Masters in International Taxation program. “Leiden is a fantastic city,” Bill wrote. “I went walking every day, rain or shine, and always found something new.” He reports that the tulip exhibition at the Keukenhof, near the north coast of Holland, was breathtaking. Bill also was awarded the University of Nebraska College of Law Alumni Council Distinguished Faculty Award. Congratulations, Bill! • Don Clark made it back to Waterville en route to Bangor and a college football game in which two of his sons were playing. On the way he stopped to visit former roommate Larry Kassman and enjoyed reminiscing. Don has been with USAID for 33 years. He has been posted to Nepal for the last three years (also there 1984–88). “For those watching international news,” he wrote, “Nepal had a historic month of April with hundreds of thousands (some say millions) demonstrating for a

Colby College Gift Annuity Rates

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Age</th>
<th>One-Life Annuity Rate</th>
<th>Two-Life Annuity Rate</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>60</td>
<td>5.7%</td>
<td>62/60 5.5%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>65</td>
<td>6.0</td>
<td>67/65 5.7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>70</td>
<td>6.5</td>
<td>72/70 6.0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>75</td>
<td>7.1</td>
<td>77/75 6.4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>80</td>
<td>8.0</td>
<td>82/80 7.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>85</td>
<td>9.5</td>
<td>87/85 8.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>90</td>
<td>11.3</td>
<td>92/90 9.6</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

(Sample Ages. As of 9/06.)

To learn more about the benefits of a charitable gift annuity or for a personalized illustration, contact Sue Cook ’75 or Carolyn Kimberlin
Office of Planned Giving
800-809-0103
plangift@colby.edu

“A man cannot leave a better legacy to the world than a well educated family.”

Thomas Scott 1747-1821

With a charitable gift annuity at Colby, you can help educate the Colby men and women of the future and still provide guaranteed lifelong income for you and/or someone else. Support the Colby family and create your legacy today.

To learn more about the benefits of a charitable gift annuity or for a personalized illustration, contact Sue Cook ’75 or Carolyn Kimberlin
Office of Planned Giving
800-809-0103
plangift@colby.edu

return to democracy—thousands wounded and several killed in street demonstrations. In the end, the king stepped down, democracy has a chance, the Maoist insurgents and the new government have declared a ceasefire, and for the first time in a long time the near future for Nepal looks bright. Doing development in ‘normal’ conditions of underdevelopment, illiteracy, poverty, corruption, discrimination is a tough job—much tougher in the middle of a conflict and political impasse. I am delighted that we now have a window of opportunity to help rebuild Nepal.” Don plans to retire in a year or two and move back to N.H. * Donna Massey is as busy as ever with her work as a clinical social worker in an outpatient community mental health center, her children (two still at home), her house and yard, her Unitarian Universalist community, and hobbies (hiking, singing, knitting, reading, gardening). * Alan Clark lives in Cushing, Maine; however, he and Lola try to spend as much time as possible in Mexico. In October 2005 his play for voices, Guerrero, was produced at Colby by Dick Sewell. Alan’s paintings and prints, as well as his poetry and plays, have been displayed and presented throughout the Northeast and Mexico. An exhibition of his Mexican art, Blood and Stone, was at the Farnsworth Art Museum in Rockland in 2004, and Woman by a Pool: Pages from a Book, an exhibition of images and poems, was at the Caldbeck Gallery a few months ago. His daughter, Lyonnelle, was to marry Andy Staples in September. More about Alan can be found at his Web site, www.alanclark.com. * Ed Woodin continues to be busy with his store fixture design and manufacturing company. He stays in touch with Sari Abul-Jubein, who still operates his restaurant, Casablanca, in Cambridge. * Mike Foose spoke at Ursinus College last spring. His talk, “Earth Science Issues in Africa and the Middle East-Impacts on Economic Development, the Environment, and Foreign Policy,” showed how the U.S. government is using its expertise in earth science to address issues ranging from economic development, environmental sustainability, hazard mitigations, and conflict resolution. * Rae Jean Braunnuller Goodman continues as a professor of economics at the U.S. Naval Academy and enjoys a second role as half-time director of teaching and learning. In this role she attempts to entice faculty into thinking about their teaching and student learning and, perhaps, change what they are doing. Her son, Albert, graduated from Colby in 2003 and works in New York City; daughter Sarah graduated from Goucher in 2001 and works in Maryland. Her husband, Bob, is enjoying every minute of retirement. She says anyone who comes to the Annapolis area is welcome to call. * I look forward to hearing from many more classmates soon. —Ray Gerbi

70 Bill Aldrich has uploaded his reunion photos from June 2005 to his Web site: http://www.wpa3.com/Photos/Colby70_35/index.html. Enjoy! * Deborah Thurlow Long, associate professor of education, chair of the education department, and coordinator of the elementary education program at Elon University in Elon, N.C., has been appointed by her college president to a two-year term as faculty administrative fellow and assistant to the president. She will lead projects serving at-risk youth while continuing her teaching. At-risk students have been a focus throughout her career, which began with a stint in the Teacher Corps (1971-1973). Thanks, Debbie, for the important work you do. * Kit Wells Poland teaches at Madison (Maine) Junior High. Kit and Sheila McCarthy (head of Colby’s German and Russian Department) put on an international celebration for seventh and eighth graders, an event including 22 workshop sessions as well as an exhibition of Chinese and Maori dancing. Faculty, students, and guests plan a full-day, school-wide event next year. Kit writes that Leslie Seaman Zema and husband Gary planned to visit us this summer. Les and Kit had plans to sit by Wesserunsett Lake to chat or head out for the Lakewood and Monmouth theaters while planning a trip to Italy for their 60th (but who’s counting?) birthday celebrations! * Barb and Jeff Parness are spending the 2006-2007 school year in Virginia, where he is teaching at Washington and Lee University Law School. He adds that son Aaron received a master’s degree from Stanford in June. * Huey (James Coleman)’s film, Tony Montanaro, Theatre & Inspiration, was scheduled for release during the summer. The film celebrates Montanaro’s life and contributions to the world of theater and the joy he brought to audiences across America and Europe. Order
Paul Klainer ’70, M.D., medical director of the Knox County Health Clinic in Rockland, Maine, was named 2006 Community MVP by the New England Patriots Charitable Foundation. After practicing emergency and internal medicine for 20 years, Klainer founded the nonprofit, which provides community members with free health care. The award honors individuals demonstrating extraordinary dedication and leadership to their communities. According to the clinic’s director, Klainer has done that: “I am certain that if everyone had that same sense of community involvement and spirit of volunteerism as Dr. Klainer, the world would be a better place.”

Deborah Wathen Finn ’74 has joined engineering, construction, and operations firm CH2M HILL as senior vice president and director of transit and rail for the firm’s Transportation Business Group. A transportation industry veteran, Wathen Finn has received several awards: 2005 New York Area Council of Boy Scouts Transportation Person of the Year and 1999 Greater New York Chapter of the Women’s Transportation Seminar Woman of the Year. At CH2M HILL she will concentrate on the growth of the firm’s transit and rail services.

70s newsmakers

Paul Klainer ’70, M.D., medical director of the Knox County Health Clinic in Rockland, Maine, was named 2006 Community MVP by the New England Patriots Charitable Foundation. After practicing emergency and internal medicine for 20 years, Klainer founded the nonprofit, which provides community members with free health care. The award honors individuals demonstrating extraordinary dedication and leadership to their communities. According to the clinic’s director, Klainer has done that: “I am certain that if everyone had that same sense of community involvement and spirit of volunteerism as Dr. Klainer, the world would be a better place.”

Deborah Wathen Finn ’74 has joined engineering, construction, and operations firm CH2M HILL as senior vice president and director of transit and rail for the firm’s Transportation Business Group. A transportation industry veteran, Wathen Finn has received several awards: 2005 New York Area Council of Boy Scouts Transportation Person of the Year and 1999 Greater New York Chapter of the Women’s Transportation Seminar Woman of the Year. At CH2M HILL she will concentrate on the growth of the firm’s transit and rail services.

72 After more than 25 years at MIT in various administrative and project manager positions, Kathy Reed Lathrop (or Kate as she now prefers to be called) has changed her life somewhat dramatically. About four years ago she married John Lathrop III, who is a senior vice president in investments at UBS. Kate moved into John’s beautiful Victorian home in Haverhill, Mass., but after two years they decided to make their own life together. They moved to Barre, Mass., very near the Quabbin Reservoir, and after seeing the open pastures and barn, Kate decided to become an alpaca breeder! It’s quite a change in lifestyle, but they both love the life in the country with their adorable animals. For those of you not familiar with alpacas, check out Kathy’s Web site, www.greatrockalpacas.com, or come visit her. For the last eight years Barbara Senges has worked as director of curriculum and instruction for Chester, Deep River, and Essex, Conn. Following completion of graduate work at UConn in the executive leadership program and becoming certified in the state of Connecticut as a school superintendent, she was offered the position of superintendent for administration of the Middletown, Conn., school district beginning last summer. (Middletown is a small city, 40 percent diversity, 5,500 students.) Her only child, David, headed off to his first-choice college, Bard, as an East Asian studies major, leaving Barbara and her husband, John, with the challenge and excitement of being “empty nesters.” She looks forward to seeing everyone at our 35th reunion.

73 Alex Wilson wrote about an April mini-reunion weekend of Colby friends for golf, poker, and fun in summer.
Portsmouth, N.H. Attending were Lloyd Benson, Brian Cone, Steve Jasinski, John Krasnabog, Bob Landsvik (the organizer of the event), David Lane, Chris Lawson, Duncan Leith, Joe Mattos, Bob O’Neil, Phil Ricci, Ron Lupton ’71, Mike LaPenna ’74, and Jeff Lentz ’75. Bob O’Neil won the award for traveling the greatest distance, flying in from Sacramento, Calif. According to Alex, during the weekend Bob shared a “hot tip” for this year’s Kentucky Derby (Bob’s shares of several racehorses in California and overheard this tip at a local racetrack there). The group took up a collection to bet on his “sure-thing” to win the race, but unfortunately Bob’s sure thing finished 13th of 20 horses! * After 30 years of moving around, Nour Nahawi is moving back home to Jordan to be CEO of ABC Bank in Jordan. Nour would like to see any Colby graduate in the region, and is especially trying to locate Kamal Yalanpilla. Contact Nour at PO Box 926091, Amman 11190 Jordan or e-mail him (Nour.nahawi@arabank.jo). * Dee (Fitz-Gerald ’72) and Henry Sheckson were looking forward to a summer trip to London, Paris, Dijon, and Chablis with their son, Henry, who will be attending Duke to get a master’s in engineering management after recently graduating from Worcester Polytechnic Institute as an civil engineering major. * I’m sure I’ll hear from many more of you with news of interesting summer vacations! —Robertra Rolls Wallace

74 Mike McNamara tells me that he and his wife, Joyce, celebrated their 25th anniversary in June by spending 10 days in Ireland. Son John graduated from Loyola College in Baltimore, and son Andrew is attending Saint Joseph’s University in Philadelphia this fall. * Jim Sigmone is a software engineer by day and a musician/composer at all other times. He is learning electric and acoustic blues guitar and was thrilled when he was introduced to 91-year-old Les Paul. * Rocky Goodhope’s main endeavor is playing tennis each weekday and spending the weekends on his boat. He supports these habits by real estate development and part-time business consulting. He has paid his last kid’s college tuition and is now planning retirement someplace sunny. * Ann Jason Kenney published a feature article, “Information and Communication Technology Literacy Assessment Test,” in School Library Journal last spring. She also has been asked to attend a leadership summit for librarians in Chicago. Her daughter is at the University of Maine Law School this fall, and her son is a sophomore at Rice, where he is an enthusiastic football player. * Ted Field has been promoted to professor/managing in the Graduate School of Management and Technology at the University of Maryland, University College. * Bruce Carmichael is VP, programs at L-3 Communications in Salt Lake City. He wrote to give me the sad news about the passing of Gary Millen from a sudden heart attack. * H. Jefferson Megarge II reports that “things are about the same” with his MS. He lives in Bronxville, N.Y., where he has lived since 1997. * Robin Hamill-Ruth has one child graduating from college with a bachelor’s in social science, one with a master’s in computer security, and another with a bachelor’s in anthropology. Her first child was getting married in September. On that note I will end as reading about Robin’s energetic clan always makes me feel tired. —S. Ann Earon

75 Jennifer Mustard Titrud writes that she and her husband, Blake, were to become empty nesters when they drop off their two daughters at UConn this fall. Jen plans to spend more time with a local environmental education nonprofit and substitute teach. She also plans to do more traveling, starting with Alaska and Norway to visit relatives. * William Tuttle and his wife, Madeleine, are traveling to promote his book, The World Peace Diet: Eating for Spiritual Health and Social Harmony. In addition to book signings and lectures, he is doing piano concerts as he releases his eighth CD. He would love to see any classmates as he travels through the Midwest. * Doug Windsor wrote from Georges Mill, N.H., where his two sons, 8 and 9, are into hockey, lacrosse, and frogs. His wife, Lisa, works for Colby Sawyer College. Doug reports that his commercial construction business is thriving at 20 years, and Jeff Lentz ’75. Bob O’Neil won the award for traveling the greatest distance, flying in from Sacramento, Calif. According to Alex, during the weekend Bob shared a “hot tip” for this year’s Kentucky Derby (Bob’s shares of several racehorses in California and overheard this tip at a local racetrack there). The group took up a collection to bet on his “sure-thing” to win the race, but unfortunately Bob’s sure thing finished 13th of 20 horses! * After 30 years of moving around, Nour Nahawi is moving back home to Jordan to be CEO of ABC Bank in Jordan. Nour would like to see any Colby graduate in the region, and is especially trying to locate Kamal Yalanpilla. Contact Nour at PO Box 926091, Amman 11190 Jordan or e-mail him (Nour.nahawi@arabank.jo). * Dee (Fitz-Gerald ’72) and Henry Sheckson were looking forward to a summer trip to London, Paris, Dijon, and Chablis with their son, Henry, who will be attending Duke to get a master’s in engineering management after recently graduating from Worcester Polytechnic Institute as an civil engineering major. * I’m sure I’ll hear from many more of you with news of interesting summer vacations! —Robertra Rolls Wallace

77 I heard from my fraternity brother Mike Poulin recently. He writes that he is the poster child for midlife crises. He changed jobs several times last year and is now working for Occidental Petroleum. (I wonder if he can get us discounts on gas.) Among his many interests, he continues to coach high school hockey. Mike caught a puck in the head during a game and now has a sexy 40-stitch scar. He is hiking the Grand Canyon later this fall with his lovely wife of 20 years, Ann (Atherton), who still works in outpatient pediatrics and is therefore well qualified to look after Mike. Their younger daughter, Libby, loves horses and competes in shows, and their older daughter, Taylor, enjoys photography and has worked in the photojournalism department at the Houston Chronicle. Taylor will be attending the Tisch School of Arts at NYU this fall. The Alumni at Large

Poulins live in Texas, so don’t mess with them. • Jane Hoffman is an independent educational consultant supporting students and families with the college search and application process. She was in higher education administration before taking time off for her family and says she enjoys being back on college campuses, especially without the studying part. Her daughter, Rachel, is in her second year at Smith College, and her son, Daniel, is in high school. Husband Kevin works hard in construction, and they still find the time to enjoy their three cats. • Jeff Olmstead and his wife, Gwen, traveled to Waterville for commencement last spring to see son Todd graduate from Colby. Todd had a great Colby career, including singing in the Colby Eight and playing on the Colby Ultimate (Frisbee) team—known as The Dazzlin’ Asses. Todd’s major was English, and he had some of the same professors that Jeff had, such as Peter Harris. Jeff sends his regards to all his classmates. • Karen Sawyer Smith says she and her husband, Ken, are now empty nesters. Both daughters being away from home, she thought things would slow down, but her participation in two book clubs, a couple of gigs a month with a rock and roll band (we know whom to book for our reunion), her tenure on her church council, and working full time keeps her busy. She and Ken recently traveled to Little Cayman, where they got their open water scuba certification. Daughter Caitlin graduated from college last spring, and they are rejoicing that they are down to one tuition payment. • I am about to get on a plane to fly to the Old Sod to attend a family wedding—and for some Guinness. As the Irish say, “May the tap be open when it rusts.” Please write. —Mark Lyons

Doug and Marjorie Gonzalez Blackwell’s oldest daughter, Laura, graduated from Emory with a degree in psychology and a minor in Italian. She will continue her studies in psychology and child development at Tufts. Courtney graduated from Loomis Chaffee and was still deciding where she will attend college. Marjorie is active in her local garden club and recently won two awards for her plant photography. Doug is still with CIGNA “wishing for more time to play golf and spend time on the beach.” • Jane Linge McDonough lives in Boston with her husband, Jim, and their three children, Jimmy, 20, Elizabeth, 18, and Daniel, 14. Jim works for the City of Boston as director of legal services in the office of neighborhood development, and Jane is an assistant district clerk-magistrate in the Norfolk County Juvenile Court after serving previously as an assistant district attorney in both Plymouth and Suffolk counties. When Jane wrote, their son, Jim Jr., is a junior at Colby and “a proud member of the White Mules football team.” Elizabeth graduated from Boston Latin and was headed to Fordham University in New York City. Daniel is in the tenth grade at Boston Latin. • Betsey Judd Butler’s youngest son, Brett, is a freshman at Colgate while her daughter, Claire, is a senior at the University of Richmond. Betsey and her husband, Rich, visited New Zealand, where Claire spent her semester abroad, and walked a glacier, bungee-jumped, jet-boated, and skied (in August!). She is busy volunteering at a nursery school for homeless kids and at Recording for the Blind & Dyslexic. • Gary Robinson is living in Bangor, Maine, with his wife, Deborah, and their children, Isaac and Noah. Gary is VP/innovation at Emergent Music LLC and will be launching version 1.0 of their new music recommendation product, Goobahm.com. Before that, he wrote, “some mathematics I worked out for spam filtering were incorporated into a number of spam filters, several of which won best-in-class or best-of-the-year awards—fun but not lucrative!” • Stuart Alex’s daughter, Kathryn, graduated from U Penn. • Jack and Lisa Mathey Landry celebrated their 25th anniversary in May. Their son, Nate, 22, graduated from Columbia “and is pondering the next step. Graduate school or real job, stay in Brooklyn or move home. Pray for us all.” Devin, 19, is a sophomore at Skidmore after spending time in Greenough, Mont., at a dude ranch, where he has been a guest since the age of 10. Lisa is still the construction foreman as they continue working on their house. Jack is at Sea Containers and OEH. • Tom Suddath recently joined Reed Smith LLP as a partner in the regulatory litigation group in the firm’s Philadelphia office. • Gary Winer writes that his oldest daughter, Marci, was headed to Dartmouth in the fall. • Janet Santry Houser and Lea Jackson Morrissey

Anne Luedemann Hunt wrote that her son, Colin, was to attend the University of Vermont in Burlington. While it’s a thrill to witness one’s children heading off on their own paths in life, Anne says it makes her think—at nearly 50—about new ventures for her own career, although her love of children’s books makes it hard to leave the book industry too far behind. Daughter Gillian will start high school next year, and husband Tim ’80 continues to work for the American Forest and Paper Association in D.C. Anne gets to visit with Colby roommate Elizabeth Armstrong Lofgren and her family every once in a while in Pennsylvania, where she and her husband teach at Bucknell University. • “Two exciting things” is how Kathy Quinby Johnson starts her news. She stepped out of her job as administrative assistant to become a full-time freelance writer and editor. She’s been published in Vermont Magazine, Vermont Life, Vermont Quarterly (UVM’s alumni magazine), and the Rutland Herald in addition to local work. Add to that work on a documentary video and a young adult novel. Daughter Lydia spent most of last semester in the Indian Himalayas with a small Vermont-based environmental and cultural program, giving Kathy and Greg ’78 a chance to test the waters as empty nesters. • Richard Uchida completed his one-year term as president of the New Hampshire Bar Association. Rich worked on many different initiatives, including the Future of the Legal Profession, helping the Supreme Court create a commission, Access to Justice, to fund, advocate for, and coordinate more affordable legal services for the poor and middle class and reinventing the bar to make it more attractive to newer members. He said it was one of the best years of his life—ranking with the years at Colby. Unfortunately, his duties prevented him from attending our 25th, but Rich stays in touch with the College through the Overseers program. On his last visit he chaired the committee to review the African-American Studies Program. • A large e-mail file sent to me by William O’Donnell included a great photo of a meld of DKE and DU pals (’78-’80) at Sugarloaf last April. I sent it on to the Alumni Office to add to our Web page for all to enjoy. See if you can figure out who is who: Bill O’Donnell, Gary McCarthy, Sandy Buck ’78, Peter Schmidt-Fellner ’78, Andy Huber, Henry Kennedy ’80, Joel Harris ’81, Chris Morrissey ’78, John Geismar ’78, and Mike Slavin ’78. Bill resides in Darien, Conn., and is head of U.S. Interest Rate Strategy & Research at UBS. He’s been married to his wonderful wife for 22 years and has five girls (one deceased). The girls range from 6 to 18 so every day is like Christmas at his home. • We have survived freshman year at college with our daughter Kayleigh. We won’t be empty nesters for a while as our youngest is an eight grader this year, but we can enjoy the “only child” status while big sister is away at college. Please write and tell me how your child did away at college, or how graduation went, or where your summer travels took you. —Cheri Bailey Powers

80 Congratulations to Geoff Becker and Nora Sturges (Bowdoin ’90), who had a baby boy born May 23, 2006. And apologies to Dan Salimone for the misspelling of his daughter’s name in a previous column—her name is Arianna, not Arianne. • It was great to hear from fellow Oregonians Chris and Kelley Osgood Platt. The Platts moved to Lake Oswego in ’85. Kelley is the treasurer for Freighthouse, and Chris is a sales and marketing manager for FEI (electron beam microscopes). Their oldest son, Andrew, spent his junior year at Oxford while their second son, Colin, was a junior at Oregon Episcopal School. When not juggling busy travel schedules and school activities, the Platts like to scuba dive, ski, and backpack, among other outdoor pursuits the Northwest is famous for. • Speaking of children, Carolyn and Jim D’Isidoro are proud to report that son Jack is a member of the Colby Class of 2010! And speaking of Jack D’Isidoro, Lynn Collins Francis wrote, “One has to wonder how lives can run parallel sometimes, then meet again after more than 20 years. On June 1, 2006, in Sudbury, Mass., Jack D’Isidoro and Beth Francis, my daughter, were in the graduating class at Lincoln-Sudbury High School.” Congratulations to both Lynn and Jim. • Dan Berger recently joined Aspen Networks in Santa Clara, Calif., as its new president and CEO. Dan was about to embark on a 10-day trip to Chiang Mai, Thailand, for a reunion with friends from his days in Singapore (’84-’90). Dan’s two boys are both in high school now. • Lisa McDonough O’Neill got together with Kitty Weyl Dove and Suze Connolly Levere and their families in Newport in August 2005, and the O’Neills planned to spend last Memorial Day on the Cape with Lynn Collins Francis and her family. Lisa and her husband, Sean, performed on stage together last winter in an old-fashioned melodrama. “I hadn’t been on stage in 15 years,” she wrote, “and I can tell you, I won’t let that much time pass again before I get back on the boards.” Lisa has been cancer free for two years and is feeling great. Barb Neal has formed a consulting company, Green Legacy Tree Consultants, Inc., which specializes in helping Washington, D.C.-area homeowners make better tree decisions. This summer, Barb and her family planned to go on a tour of China—back to the birthplace of her daughter, Catie. I caught up with another in the tree care business, Mark Garvin (VP public policy and communication, Tree Care Industry) while he was at a conference in Napa, Calif. Despite a demanding schedule of golfing and wine tasting, Mark was able to carve out some time to get together. —Tom Marlitt

83 Geoff Ballesti took the top percent of Starwood Hotels’ 4,000 salespeople on a wild celebration week to Buenos Aires last winter. *Peter Klock, the oldest of Liz Murphy Klock’s four kids, was ready to attend high school this fall at Bergen Catholic while Lillie, Liz’s youngest, enters first grade. Liz enjoys her part-time job as a communications specialist at Ramapo College of New Jersey (Ramapo is “New Jersey’s Liberal Arts College”), and she’s getting more and more involved in development/scholarship matters. Liz was to start her master’s in the fall. *Jennifer Thayer Naylor and Barb Leonard had a wonderful time in New York City in April. They saw the “Bodies” exhibit, had lunch at Mario Battali’s downtown restaurant, Lupa, headed to Aveda for facials and girl stuff, hit Wylie Dufresne ’92’s WD-50, and made the curtain for Ralph Fiennes in Faith Healer. Jennifer’s communications strategy consulting is going extremely well. Through the Watson Fellowship network, she has teamed up with a Watson 10 years younger to write a sitcom. *Debbie Fenton opened her second women’s clothing shop, Lola Tortola, in the center of Edgartown, Mass. Her first shop is in Needham, Mass. *Rick Manley was elected to serve on the Weston, Mass., school committee. *Chas Catania reports that Sandi Demmler D’Amico is at Harvard pursuing a master of divinity. Chas ran into *Mark Tolette while teaching fishing to a bunch of Boy Scouts at a Trailblazer event at Seton Boy Scout Reservation in Greenwich, Conn. *Nancy Goers Hubbell and her husband, John, are raising their three children, Jack, 12, Nick, 6, and Kayla, 3. Nancy says hello to Heidi and Craig, Stuart and Kathy, and Curt and Deena. *In the May 2006 issue of *Civil Engineering News, *Luther Forest Technology Campus was featured as a “project case study” for civil engineering excellence. C.T. Male Associates chief scientist, John S. Munsey, P.G., M.S., is credited with the story. *In 2005, Phin Gay started a second business, Q-Bridge (www.qbridge.com), specializing in B2B demand generation, and their son, Parker Ellis Gay, was born. Phin checked in with John Northrop and family in the spring. *Bob Patience and his wife, Karin, have two kids in Roseland, N.J. Bob says his career seems to be “on a decent path.” He is vice president of small and mid markets for Prudential Group Insurance. *RICK and Susan Sheehan Schwerner live in Salt Lake City, Utah, and have busy lives in various philanthropic realms. Post-9/11, she was CEO of the Red Cross when the 2002 Olympics were in Salt Lake City. Rich is a courts administrator and was State Court Administrator of the Year in 2005. Rich also stays active with those less fortunate and has just as many outside commitments as Susan does. Their son, Josh, is 16 and their daughter, Aly, is 11. *Betsy Gillis Thompson is a fashion spokesperson for Talbots and overseas fashion and retail publicity for the company as well as coordinating all new store opening events. Her views and commentary are regular features of national and local print, and she is a regular guest on The Learning Channel. Kathy and Burr Johnson have two children, Caroline, 6, and Katie, 2. Burr has been an advertising copy writer for more than 20 years. Also correlating kids (three, to be exact) is Jan Gracey D’Atri, who lives in Los Angeles and works for a clothing manufacturer. *Kelly Burke Corwen’s oldest son graduated this spring. *Anne Geagan McGrath hoped to get a little golf in during the spring and summer. *Mike Schafer remains on the go as headmaster of Kimball Union Academy. In early 2006 he took his wife, Gayle, to Asia with a turnaround on the West Coast. Then Mike headed to New York City. He says that brother Mark Schafer has a new job at Siemens. I’ll need details. *Please go to the *Colby magazine Web site for more news of classmates. —Sally Lovegren Merchant

84 Tammy Jones Howe is living in Ipswich, Mass., with her husband, Scott, and two daughters, Phoebe, 10, and Charlotte, 7. Tammy is employed part time as a clinical and forensic psychologist. Kathy Hughes Sullivan ’83 lives around the corner from her, and they frequently get together with Julie Schell Collias ’84 and her
History Channel | Llewellyn Price ’85

When Llewellyn Price ’85 and his brother and mother bought a Québec City bed-and-breakfast, they suspected they were buying a piece of 18th-century history. They didn’t know they were buying more than 5,000 pieces. Price is co-owner of the Auberge Saint-Antoine, a chic boutique hotel that has taken on the aura of the history that had been hidden within. An expansion of the original inn, the hotel was an ambitious project that required extensive excavation of what had been an 17th-century wharf. The more than 5,000 artifacts unearthed include cannon, stoneware, and other household items. “We are sitting on top of one of the richest archaeological sites in North America,” Price said.

The original boutique hotel had opened in 1992. A $16-million expansion in 2001 turned it into a much larger full-service hotel, with the rich history of the site embedded (sometimes literally) into the décor. Artifacts are displayed in each of the nearly 100 rooms, and there is even a cannon on exhibit.

The hotel has become a resounding success but the permitting process was difficult. “And frankly, it should be,” Price said. “You’re building in a culturally sensitive area. We wanted this place to be different and to integrate as much of the historical heritage as possible.”

That history goes back four centuries, as evidenced by nearby historic sites such as the Place Royale, the headquarters of Samuel de Champlain. Price’s own family goes back some 200 years in Québec City. Among his ancestors is one of Québec’s first lumber barons, the builder (later knighted by the British Empire) of what was in 1912 the largest pulp and paper mill in the world. Price House, the one-time headquarters of the family’s paper interests, is a Québec City landmark that now serves as the official residence of the the province’s premier.

Though his roots in Québec are deep, Price spent most of his childhood in Africa and Europe, where his father, a Canadian foreign service officer, was assigned. Price returned to Québec for his last two years of high school and then decided to head south for college.

“My sister went to college at Johns Hopkins,” he said. “And she suggested that I look into going to school somewhere in the States. So, since Colby was only three and a half hours away, I went down and basically knocked on the door [of Colby’s admissions office].

“I wasn’t prepared at all to meet with them. Yet somehow they looked at the whole picture of me…and I was accepted to Colby.”

Once enrolled, Price decided to challenge himself by majoring in English literature, not his strength. “It was very different for me since I wasn’t a natural reader. What a higher education like the one I got at Colby brings you is not so much what you learn on topics such as Shakespeare, but how to think, analyze, and work through a problem,” he said.

After graduating, Price tried different jobs. He toiled in a French vineyard in Burgundy, worked in commercial real estate in Atlanta, and then earned an M.B.A. at the IESE Business School in Barcelona. “That’s when I realized I liked business,” he said.

After jointly buying the original 20-room St. Antoine with his brother and mother in 1990, he soon began to refurbish the tired property in what was then an unsightly but potential-filled part of old Québec City. “Initially the idea was to fix it up and flip it for a profit,” Price said. As renovations got underway, a new vision for a hotel began to emerge. But building anew in such an archeologically sensitive place would prove to be a painstaking venture.

Price prevailed, and the Auberge Saint-Antoine now combines features like a high-end restaurant and a movie theater with all of that early Québec history. After managing the operation for a decade, Price stepped down but remains a co-owner and board member. That has left him more time for road biking and salmon fishing—and mulling what his next project might be.

—Kevin Rousseau

family. * Sarah Lund Peck is still golfing. She played in the Laughlin AFB Commander’s Tournament in which her team took first place with 20 under par. She also took “longest drive” for the women’s division. Sara and her husband, David, soon to be Major Peck, are transferring to Maxwell AFB in Montgomery, Ala., where he will teach a course. Sarah says they’re excited because this is their second assignment at Maxwell, and she hoped to work at the Maxwell golf course’s pro shop and to start competing regularly in golf tournaments in Alabama. When they were stationed at Scott AFB, in Illinois, she was in five different golf leagues at one time! David and Sara have been married 14 years, and their assignment at Maxwell is going to be their last as they plan to retire in three years after 20 years of Air Force service. In the meantime, Sara welcomes anyone who’s in the area. * Kathy Soderberg had a great year. She wrote that she has been living in Cambridge, Mass., right on the Charles River in a condo that she absolutely loves. Since last year she’s been to India twice, to Shanghai, China, for the Masters Tennis Tournament, and to Australia last January. She’s gone to Australia every other year, primarily to see the Australian Open tennis tournament, but always manages to do some touring around. I guess it’s clear that she still loves tennis—she played on the Colby tennis team and has never put down her racquet. Business-wise, Kathy says, Soderberg Insurance has had the best year in their 36-year history. Her Spanish became a major part of who she is and the life she has created for herself as Soderberg Insurance opened up their Hispanic market, and she’s been consulted by Metropolitan Life Insurance to help them with their initiative to penetrate the Hispanic market, too. She stays in touch with her dear friend Cathy Walsh. * Paul Arthur is living in Wiscasset, Maine, and working as assistant director of Maine Coast Semester School, where he teaches English, ethics, and environmental issues. He says he’s excited to be going back on the Colby campus next spring semester to teach a course, Special Topics: War & Morality, in the Philosophy Department. These days he gets into a canoe as often as possible, taking part in the races that pepper the state and doing extended wilderness trips in Maine and Canada. He did the Rupert River during the summer of 2005. Paul says this trip was particularly interesting because it’s a river that’s endangered by a hydro project. He’s also looking for partners for a trip next summer, perhaps on the George River. He skis in the winter, plays a little bluegrass, and says he spends too much time flinging slugs out of his garden. * I hope everybody is finding time to enjoy life. Please e-mail and let me know what you’re up to! —Cynthia Mulliken Lazazra

85 Although summer is not quite here as I write, by the time you read this it should be just a pleasant memory. From what I hear from you, there are lots of great plans in the works. I hope that all of them turn(ed) out well. * Carolyn Althshuler Currie, a highly regarded singer-songwriter, was slated to perform in Camden, Maine, at the Camden Library Coffeehouse on June 1. Carolyn has recorded three CDs and wowed audiences throughout the U.S., playing at Bumbershoot and FolkLife in Seattle (old favorites of mine), at the High Sierra Music Festival and Napa Valley Folk Festival, both in California, and at the Telluride Bluegrass festival. * Sara Babcock wrote that she was looking forward to the end of summer when she, Larry Yorra, Alex Brown, Scott and Linda Flora Blair, John O’Toole, Andrew More ’87, and Angela Drennen Hansen would still do like to gather around a table in a room anymore,” Sara said, “but we were hoping that holding a reunion in Vermont. They were particularly interesting because it’s a river that’s endangered by a road. He skis for partners for a trip next summer, it’s a river that’s endangered by a road. It’s a river that’s endangered by a road. *Maura Shaughnessy ’83 says she became an economics major at Colby because of college athletics. “I was pre-med for the first two years . . . but I missed too many labs because I played too many sports.” Shaughnessy was featured in Barron’s magazine as senior vice president of MFS Investment Management in Boston—and one of few women running utility funds in the investment field.

milestones

Marriages: Bo Preston ’80 to Lynne Schmidtdin Kauai, Hawaii * Laura Zegel ’87 to Robert Tucker in Stockton Springs, Maine * Carolyn Bell ’89 to Dan Tuttle in Honolulu, Hawaii * Susan Breau ’89 to Daryl Kelley in South Portland, Maine

Births: A daughter, Allison Libby Durand, to Liz Libby ’86 and Alex Durand * A daughter, Abigail Rae Argazzi, to Cindy and Paul Argazzi ’89 * A daughter, Josephine Judith Barton, to Michael and Courtney Ingraffia Barton ’89 * A son, Oliver Laurence Cahill, to Christina and Brendan Cahill ’89 * A daughter, Lucy Cronin Ayers, to Kate and Andy Ayers ’89.

86 The Class of 1986 can still party. Our 20th reunion, held June 9-11, was a blast despite the rain. Friday night’s casual gathering burst the Averill lounge at the seams. With almost 80 classmates attending plus guests, we were just a few people shy (you know who you are!) of breaking the 20th reunion attendance record. I’m proud to tell you that our total class gift was also record-breaking: the biggest 20th reunion gift ever at about $122,000, beating 1985’s $111,532. * Our class dominated the alumni presentations given Saturday afternoon with three classmates speaking: Chris Parker on fiber optics, Greg Beatty (popping in from Bangkok) on the molecular economy, and Dave Epstein on meteorology (of course). * At dinner Saturday, we welcomed Suzanne Battit and Rich Deering as the new co-presidents of our class. Dave Epstein, as vice president, will represent our class to the Alumni Council. Charlie Bassett and Jane and Pete Moss popped in for a drink before dinner, and President Adams came by, too. Thanks to Cathy Woodward Gill’s organizing skills, most of us moved along from dinner to the Spa, where a DJ—who worked at the Courthouse while we were at Colby—kept us hopping well into the early hours of Sunday morning. Those tripping the light fantastic included Gretchen Bean Lurie, Colette Cote, Christine (Palmer ’87) and Mike Savage, Leslie Greenslet Perry, Bill Northfield, Linda Baroncelli and partner Alison, Wendy Lapham, Evan and Sue Roberts Dangel, Jessica Flood Leitz, Diane Yarrow and Chris Carroll, Doug and Kathy Reynolds Dunn, Cathy Woodward Gill, Terry Appleton, Phil and Lisa Woods Guarino, Lisa Foley, Amy Barnes Hurley, Kathryn Sullivan Warming ’87, and many more. Even Norma Delaney was dancing, despite being on crutches. * Along with Ru and Greg Beatty, Marie-Claude and Laurent Koschat traveled internationally to attend reunion. A friend to many Colby in Caen juniors, Laurent attended Colby as a student our senior year. Although they live in Colombes, outside of Paris, Laurent’s work at Cabot, a global specialty chemical and materials company headquartered in Billerica, Mass., brings him to New England annually. * Judy Swift Fairfull drove up from central Mass. She loves her job as director of guidance at Doherty High School in Worcester, where she counsels a diverse community, including immigrants from all over the world. She Arazu Madrid, in October 2005 in Panama. They had a church wedding on June 10, so double congratulations are in order. Dave has his own business, Fidelity Distributors, Inc., which acquires rights to the content of television programming and then “authors” the content in Spanish for DVD release in Latin America. He is working on his master’s at St. Lawrence. He says he recently heard from both Kent Fukidick and Dan Rudick and ran into Chris Tompkins at an independent schools event in Boston. • Courtney Ingraffia married Michael Barton in September 2005 and expected her first baby in August 2006. • Bill Auer swald left Camp Agawam for Indian Creek School in Maryland, where he will be business manager. He and wife Emily will live in Annapolis. • Melissa Trend Staid wrote looking for an address for Beth Craver. Beth, if you’re reading this, get in touch! Melissa lives in Angwin, Calif., with her husband, Matt, and their two kids. Angwin is in Napa Valley, so if you’re looking for a wine country tour give Melissa a call. Melissa’s twin, Robin Trend Baughan, lives in Madison, Conn., with her husband and three kids. • Kate Appleton Fitzpatrick lives in Scotland with her husband, John ’86, and two girls, and Eric and Shari Sadowski Stram live in Manchester, Maine, with their two girls. • Callie Knowles Clapp spent a wonderful winter vacation at Sarah Maddox Roger’s parents’ house in Colorado along with Sue Bratone Childs, Stacey Mitchell, Ferrall McMahon Dietrich, and Ingrid Kasaks-Moyer. If I get my act together I’ll post the pictures Callie sent on the class Web site. • After 10 years in San Diego, Barb Swartz is returning “home” to Portland, where she will work as a physician assistant at the Maine Surgical Care Group. • Kristin Eveson is still teaching at Plymouth State but is also spending time in Washington working in the area of children and armed conflict. • Jonathan MacBridge married Jennifer Lee Haigh in April 2006. He works as a partner at Rogut McCarthy Troy LLC in Consoshocken, Pa., and lives in Wilmington, Del. • Congratulations to Debbie Young Rose, who had a baby boy, Trevor Dalton, in February. • Bob Rogers, his wife, Ellen, and their two kids recently moved from Charlestown, Mass., to Hingham, Mass. Bob didn’t realize until he read Colby magazine that he sold his Charlestown house to Audrey Barone. • Kim King sent me a wonderful e-mail about her life in Boulder, Colo. She and her husband, Orion Poplawski, have two kids, Alex, 4, and Eowyn, 2. Kim was in my neck of the woods for the World Cup in Germany and brushed up her college German in preparation. • If you, too, find yourself in Europe we have plenty of room for visitors! — Anita L. Terry 90 Megan Wahl Hegenthal is busy with two teenage stepchildren, DJ, 16, and Nikki, 15, and with two preschoolers, Brooke, 5, and Estelle, 3. Megan started her master’s in the art of teaching middle school science this fall and then will teach for two years when Estelle goes to kindergarten. Megan hears occasionally from Amy Rule, who’s doing well in Norwalk, Conn. • Jen Lally Kent was awarded Coach of the Year for her work with the Norwell girls’ lacrosse program. Can you believe she pulls off these great honors while having six kids at home? • Cindy Demskie Mulligan lives in Quechee, Vt., with her two boys. She spent some of the winter skiing with Sarah Hayne Reilly and her three boys. She also saw Sue Beevers Seem and her husband, Andy, and their son, Sam. Cindy will be getting together with Sarah Maddin Curran and Emilie Davis Kosoff. • After 14 years as a sportswriter, 11 covering only baseball, Larry Rocca wrote that he burned out on the newspaper career but not on the baseball. Since January 2005 he’s been working for a team in Japan, the Chiba Lotte Marines, who are managed by Bobby Valentine. • Cathy and Matt Frynier welcomed home their daughter, Parker, last May. She has a brand new sister, Hadley. Matt still works at Banc of America Securities, where he’s been for 12 years; he’s now the managing director in the private equity group. They live in Tiburon, Calif., and water sail as much as possible. • Peter Bryant and his wife, Cosima, with their daughters, Mila and Solenne, celebrated the arrival of a baby boy, Kasper Lang Bryant (nicknamed Gus), on May 4. They moved back from Geneva, Switzerland, to Santa Fe, N.M. Pete manages the Great Rivers Partnership for The Nature Conservancy, a project to conserve three of the world’s great rivers—the Yangtze in China, the Mississippi, and the Paraguay-Parana rivers in Brazil. • Steve Coan and his wife had a daughter, Elizabeth Sally Coan, on April 11. They also moved to Beverly, Mass., where Steve was going back to Babson to get his M.B.A. • Bill ’89 and I spent a few evenings with John ’88 and Kristin Hock Davie and their two girls at Stratton this winter. — Beke Clark Bullock into contact with both Jeff Zlot ’93 and Sam Jones ’91 (both seem to be doing well). Whitney Adams Ward is still working part time in the men’s catalog division at Talbots Corp. office in Hingham, Mass. Chris and Whitney (also Hingham residents) have two children, Lily and Sam, and were expecting a third shortly. They attended the wedding of Lisa Black in Washington state, where they hung out with Tabby Biddle, Helen Hopkins Kellogg, and Dakota Glenn Smith. Kristin Wildman ’98 and Jun Shirahama were married in June 2005. Laura (Fogarty ’93) and Matt Nerney celebrated their son’s birthdays in May. Will turned 3, Jack turned 1. They are settling nicely. Matt recently started with TA Associates in Boston, a private equity firm, as IT director. On a business trip to the West Coast he met up with Mick Soth ’93 and his blushing bride, Jimmie (Jimena), for a kayak in the Pacific with the seals. They later met up with Jay Moore ’93 for dinner and a mini Foss reunion. Richard ’93 and Ashley Weld Taylor, along with their son, Reed, are moving to Norwich, VT, after four years in Michigan. Rich was to be working in the emergency department at Dartmouth Hitchcock Medical Center. Shawn Gager lives in Beverly, Mass., and is doing IT effectiveness consulting for Darwin Partners in Wakefield. The work is great, he says, but the travel is a drag. Shawn did get to spend most of ’04 in Honolulu working for Kamehameha Schools. Jim Burke finally returned my calls, Chris Tosi ’93 is working in social services in Pittsburgh, and Brian Mulvey owes me a round of golf! Please go to Colby online for more news of our classmates. —William Higgins

1990s Correspondents

1990
Barbara Clark Bullock
892 Warm Brook Road
Arlington, VT 05250
classnews1990@alum.colby.edu

1991
David Shumway
33 Mallard Road
Needham, MA 02492
781-444-1241
classnews1991@alum.colby.edu

1992
William Higgins
31 Colonial Road
Hingham, MA 02043-3638
781-749-4746
classnews1992@alum.colby.edu

1993
Krista Stein
classnews1993@alum.colby.edu

1994
Jessie Newman
3323 Clay Street
Denver, CO 80211
classnews1994@alum.colby.edu

1995
Yuhgo Yamaguchi
5 Newton Street, Apt. 2
Cambridge, MA 02139
classnews1995@alum.colby.edu

1996
Mark Mortensen
314 Marlborough Street, Apt. 3F
Boston, MA 02116
classnews1996@alum.colby.edu

1997
Patrick McBride
206 Annabessacook Road
Winthrop, ME 04364
732-921-6743
classnews1997@alum.colby.edu

1998
Brian M. Gill
24 Concord Avenue, Apt. 213
Cambridge, MA 02138-2370
617-230-2254
classnews1998@alum.colby.edu

1999
Lindsay Hayes
7 Rowayton Woods Drive
Norwalk, CT 06854
classnews1999@alum.colby.edu

93 I didn’t pick out my summer reading because the influx of class news kept me sated. Kris Balser Moussette was recently named a partner at Edwards Angell Palmer & Dodge LLP in Boston. She sees Jennifer Larsen Daileanes, Susan Sarno, and Valerie Leeds—who herself wrote in to say she was getting married in Mexico this summer and owns a personal training fitness studio in Soho with her fiancé. Scott Greenfield and his wife had their second daughter, Taliya (Tali), and Scott was named mergers and acquisitions finance manager at Intel. Jeff Kose wrote that he’s moving to Chicago to join Dann, Pecar, Newman & Kleiman as a shareholder. He says Eric Most got married June 11 in Jerusalem and that Mike Murphy is busy managing a guide service in Alaska. A girl, Quinn Mackenna Kelley, was born last April 14 to Nicole and James Kelley. Carrie Smith Woodruff was promoted to head of the world language department at Brookwood School and is expecting a baby in November. She recently spoke to Summer Lemon, who is a correspondent for IDG publications in Beijing. Carrie adds that Anne Griffin is living in Russia. Siobhan McCloskey is finishing law school in Vermont and enjoying her dogs, Babe and Astro. Sarah Steindel Keating had a boy, Tyler, and still will manage to lead a wine tasting trip in Italy and France with her husband this fall. Sarah Weiland Holland is starting a private plastic surgery practice in York, Maine. Lael Himman Stanczak is moving with her husband and children to Singapore. Beth Foohey Moore welcomed her second daughter in February. Beth writes that Sue Liacos-Dix returned to graduate school for her master’s in library science and is living in Manchester, N.H., and that Kristen Schuler Scannion and her husband, Jon, were expecting their second baby this fall. Amy Kraunz welcomed daughter Arden Skylar Kraunz-Brown in Los Angeles in February. John Cully is moving with his family to Vermont but still builds custom bicycles (Echelon Cycle Works). Stephanie and Chris Baynes had a second child, Sydney Elaine. John Mechem and his wife, Susannah, welcomed their first child, daughter Campbell Elizabeth. Gaynelle Peebles got married during the summer in suburban Philadelphia. Matthew Kearns worked at Tetra Tech in Boston and was planning a September wedding to Lucia Pond Allen. John Yormak was promoted to COO of Broadway Real Estate Partners, LLC, in New York. The new director of admissions at the Holderness School in New Hampshire is Tyler Lewis. As for me, I’m just going to sit back, relax with a cold beverage, and wait for new people to write me their news because, frankly, it’s been too hot this summer in New York for much else! —Krista Stein

94 I’m fresh off the plane from Vegas, where I attended the wedding of my old roommate Heather Eskey and got to see other roomies, Janet Powers and Michelle Satterlee, as well as pseudo roommate Colleen Brennan Thordnike. Heather is still living in Tokyo, Janet is in northern Mass. and is the VP of content development for Med Panel Inc., Colleen is a proud mamma of two lovely kids and is doing marketing work in L.A., and the ever energetic Michelle is at Pepperdine getting her law degree. BTW, if any of this information is incorrect, blame it on Vegas. The quarterly envelope from Colby was brimming with news about our favorite star, Billy Bush—including a wonderful article about Billy in the Los Angeles Magazine (April 2006). Keith Gleason had a second knee operation that forced him to end his men’s league hockey career. But in March he participated in a four-hour skate-a-thon for the Make A Wish Foundation of Maine. How this busy VP for BoA had time to train for the event is beyond me, but congratulations on a successful fund raiser. Kerry Sheedy Ward and family (Bobby ’93 and baby Ryan) have moved from California to Chicago. Weddings and things generally lovely: Heather Lounsbery is engaged to Mark Lysaght. Heather is currently a project manager at Praecis Pharmaceutical in Walham, Mass. Sara Ferry Gyan wrote to tell me that the wedding will be in Jamaica, where she’ll be joined by Marile Haylon Borden, Carolyn Hart, Bekah Freeman-Schulze, Kim Morrison Lysaght ’90, and Dave O’Shea ’93. In early May, Marika Schwartzman married Chris Bruell in Martha’s Vineyard. Tracy Larsen Powell reports that the wedding was beautiful and fun. Barbara Coulon was a bridesmaid. In attendance were Missy Fraser Gramer, Brooke Porteous Skelley, Chrissy Lynch, Alicia Hidalgo, Soy Ahn, and Tracy. Karen Fried is living in Boston with her partner, Michelle, and is pregnant with their first child, due in October. Karen works for the mayor of Boston as a director of special projects and liaison to the gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender communities in the Office of Neighborhood Services. She recently attended a panel of alumni anthropology majors at Colby to talk with current anthropology majors. Thomas and Josette Huntress Holland are expecting their second child in November. Josette is associate head and dean
Past Time  | Kim Parker ’97

Kim Parker ’97 has always been interested in tracing her family history but was hesitant because she wasn’t sure it could be done. But after her grandparents passed away, taking with them precious family memories, Parker thought the task might have become even harder. “There’s also been, traditionally, this whole dismissal of African-American genealogy because we assume there are no records,” she said.

Not so, Parker discovered.

A teacher and educator, she proved this assumption wrong recently when she won a contest sponsored by Woman’s Day magazine, awarding winners a genealogist’s help as they researched their family histories. Parker was especially driven to enter the contest because of a family-tree assignment her then 8-year-old sister, Ashley, had been given a month earlier. Ashley had been asked to write a story based on a family member and had so struggled with the assignment that she had written about a composite of different family members. Parker says that she understood her sister’s frustration from personal experience.

In the fall of 2005, Parker met with a librarian in the Urbana Free Library genealogy department in Urbana, Illinois. “I was amazed at what we were able to find in such a short amount of time,” Parker said. She found that her family carries legacies of both home ownership and literacy, two things celebrated and valued by African Americans, she said—and that continue in her family today. She says she has begun to construct a family tree, which is growing as she gathers information. Now she hopes to fill in the gaps.

It’s one more project for Parker who, since graduating from Colby, has explored a wide range of interests. She has worked as a sports information director, received her master’s in sport management from Ohio State University, and held positions as sports writer/coordinator, Web director, and high school English teacher. She received her master’s in education from Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, specializing in education of African-American boys, reading, and multicultural literature.

In the summers she has worked for organizations including the Great Books Summer Program at Stanford University and the YMCA Black Achievers program in Lexington, Kentucky. This fall she will teach reading, language arts, and writing at a small all-black boys’ middle school located on campus at Urbana-Champaign. She is especially interested in literacy among African-American boys because so many are so disadvantaged in American society. “No other person in society is more feared than the African-American male,” Parker said. “We just sort of give up on them.”

Ultimately, Parker intends to pursue a professorship and start a nonprofit organization that runs summer camps around the country aimed at promoting literacy in African-American high school-aged boys. Parker was raised by her grandparents, she said, who continued the family’s long-standing emphasis on literacy. Now Parker wants to share this tradition. “My grandmother always made reading a central part of my life, so it was something we shared together and something I share with my students.”

But family history isn’t Parker’s only motivation for her work with African-American teenage boys. She says that going to Colby reinforced the fact that there is a dearth of African-American men in private liberal arts colleges and made her realize she could do something to remedy that. Her hope is that her summer camps will help schools like Colby attract a critical mass of African-American students. She would like her camps to be held at Colby and similar schools to introduce campers to the feel of liberal arts colleges and to further encourage them to attend colleges like Colby.

“I’m optimistic,” Parker said. “It’s timely, and it’s important work.”

—Emily Judem ‘06
90s newsmakers

Dennis Nations ’95 was named director of admissions for the F.W. Olin Graduate School of Business at Babson College. Nations, a graduate of Babson’s M.B.A. program, said he hopes to “bring a breath of fresh air to the admissions process.” He will also use his job experience: “As the GM of fitness centers, I learned the importance of listening to customers define their goals. . . my team is here to help individuals learn how the Babson M.B.A. can fit into their lives and their career goals.”

milestones

Births: A daughter, Olivia Frances Waugh, to Ted and Heidi Meyers Waugh ’91 & Ason, Robert Mauran Zuccotti, to Margaret Maureen ’91 and Andy Zuccotti ’92 & A daughter, Catherine Reese Burch Whitehead, to Kelly and Chris Whitehead ’96

96

Lou Dagostine joined Cuilla & Donofrio, LLP, in North Haven, Conn., as an associate. His practice areas include business litigation and construction law. He and his wife, Renee, reside in Stratford, Conn. Christopher McMath finished his pediatric residency at Metrohealth medical center in Cleveland, Ohio, in June. In July, he moved to the Dover, N.H., area and joined Rochester Pediatric Associates in Rochester, N.H. Ben Otto was awarded a Fulbright for creative writing in Indonesia. Ben is slated to be in Java for 10 to 11 months, although his proposed site was hit by both an earthquake and a volcano eruption. Ruth Bristol Albuquerque spent a research year working in a lab at the Translational Genomics Research Institute. Ruth has one more year of residency before she becomes a practicing neurosurgeon. Her son, Lucas Bristol Albuquerque, was born at the Ohio State University Wexner Medical Center in Columbus, just 6 lbs., 5 oz. Niki continues to work part time as a hospice social worker, and continues to teach piano. Bernadette Graham Hudson and husband Michael welcomed their daughter, Clara Josephine Hudson, on March 12. She enjoyed meeting other new ’96 babies at the reunion, including Andrew Taylor Beckwith (son of Melissa Taylor), and Julian Stuart Pollack (son of Woody ’97 and Anne Robinson Pollack). Melissa is working in Waterville as a pediatrician. Amie Sicchitano Taylor’s baby girl, Brooke Taylor, was born on Feb. 2, 2006. They live in Franklin, Mass., with their Lab, Brandy. Amie, who is taking a year off from teaching kindergarten to be a full-time mom, reports that Brooke has had play dates with other recently born Colby babies. They got together with Dori Morrison Galvin and her son, Troy, and with Courtney Sullivan Homer’s son, Sullivan (both boys born in December) and hope to get together with Patti Benson Bechard and her son, Nathaniel. Patti and her husband live in Andover, Mass. Amie also keeps in touch with Jennifer Pope, who lives in the Democratic Republic of Congo. —Mark Mortensen

97

My sincerest apologies for an e-mail glitch that sent the column for the last magazine deep into cyberspace. Much of that information follows along with new updates. A whirlwind season of basketball for Dave McLaughlin concluded with his appearance as the head coach of Stonehill College in the national semifinals of the NCAA Division II Basketball Tournament. Dave had his team in the national rankings for most of the season and led the Skyhawks to their first-ever appearance in the Final Four. Dave was named the Northeast 10 Coach of the Year and the NABC Northeast Regional Coach of the Year. Dana Cease moved from New York City to Boston, purchased a house in Dedham, and was expecting his first child in August. He spent some quality time with classmates at Mike Child’s wedding in the middle of May and saw Kent Robertson, Dan Roehl, and Dave Wright. The births continue. J.J. Eklund McGawn, an attorney in Denver, had a baby boy named Brady in January. Jen Robbins Doyle was expecting her first child in September, and Kara Marchant Hooper added a second child to her family over the summer. Josh and Kate Charbonnier Oeljten recently moved to Marion, Mass., with their social worker, and continues to teach piano.
18-month-old daughter, Olivia. Josch is teaching at Tabor Academy, and Kate, enjoying motherhood, is putting her law career on hold for the time being. • Colin deBakker finished his Ph.D. in microbiology at the University of Virginia and looked forward to a cross-country trek before starting post-doctorate work at the Whitehead Institute at MIT. • Yawa Duse-Anthony was the maid of honor for Vanessa Newell’s wedding. She also reports that Rick Unruh recently relocated to Tacoma, Wash., with his wife and two children. • Anna Thomson married Chris Patterson in July 2004. They have since moved from Colorado to Bozeman, Mont., where they occupy a historic home with their yellow Lab, Woody. After working as a creative director at Action Marketing Group in Boulder, Anna has ventured into the world of freelance design. • Jason Klein reports his engagement to Judy Kokkínides on February 12 aboard a Caribbean cruise. • Jenny Lawrence Rich announced a name change to her business, now called Jennifer MAG. [www.jenniferMAG.com]. She recently joined the board of the East Bay Agency for Children (EBAC), a nonprofit organization dedicated to ensuring the health and educational well-being of children and families through specialized therapeutic, educational, and peer support. And she was anxiously awaiting the arrival of her first child in August. • Amy Rzenezkiewicz Bachand moved from Baton Rouge, La., to Boston, where she is starting an internship at the Boston VA this fall. She recently received her Ph.D. in clinical psychology from LSU (thankfully avoiding any major losses from Hurricane Katrina). She married Mike Bachand in May 2005, with Megan Stauffer and Amanda Goddard as two of her bridesmaids. Amy added that Amanda received her M.D. from UMass medical school in May 2005 and married Jamie Baker in March. • Andrew Pease tied the knot with Laura Nemicoila on Martha’s Vineyard on June 10, and a group of Colby guests included Lucas Penney, Andrew Black, Tony Rosenfeld, and Galen Carr among others. After a honeymoon in Barbados, they are living in Somerville. Andrew recently started business school at Babson while continuing to work full time. • Amanda Bligh enjoyed working as a translator at the World Cup soccer event. She received her M.B.A. from Suffolk University last year and has been living in Germany and studying German business at the International University Bremen as a Fulbright Scholar. • With our reunion quickly approaching, I ask you all to consider attending. Colby has changed significantly and it would be a great opportunity to catch up with classmates and see all the wonderful things happening on campus! —Pat McBride

98 John Brunero got married last October to Anita Thompson. He finished his Ph.D. in philosophy at Columbia University and is teaching at the University of Missouri in St. Louis this fall. • Jared Fine successfully defended his Ph.D. thesis and is now doing a post-doc at the Alzheimer’s Research Center in St. Paul, Minn. He and his wife, Liz (Hubbard ’01), have started house hunting. •Corey Hughes is engaged “to a non-Colby person!” She reports that Laura Higginson moved from N.Y. to Chicago. • Annie Merselis Bailey and her husband expected their first baby (boy) in July. She is still working at HBS in Cambridge but says that “living as dorm parents at Concord Academy in Concord, Mass., is quite an experience.” • Geoffrey Herrick finished his first year of Berkeley’s M.B.A. program and headed to N.Y.C. at the end of May to an internship with JP Morgan’s real estate and lodging investment banking group. He lived in Soho with Andy Brown ’99, who also was doing a summer internship in the city. Geoff was already looking forward to skiing two or three days a week next year. • Dave Dodwell’s wife, Kathleen, took him from Bermuda to Boston for a 30th birthday surprise gift. Dave says he’s enjoying being Bermuda’s first parasailing champion and having fun with his dog, Logan. • Sara Rigelhaupt is still living in Newton, Mass., teaching Latin and working toward her master’s in classical studies at BU. She completed the Boston Marathon last spring in a time of 3:39:19 while helping to raise nearly $3,000 for Dana Farber’s Cancer Institute. • Kristin Wildman got married to Jun Shirahama ’92 on June 18, 2005, in Connecticut. “After 8 (Colby Eight alumni) sang a few tunes,” she wrote, “and we were able to celebrate with lots of Colby folks, including Galen Nelson ’92, Christopher Frothingham ’92, Mark ’92 and Poppyan Mastrovito Longso ’93, Emma Longso (she’ll be 2023), Kris Boynton ’92, Dave O’Shea ’93, Carolyn Hart ’94, Stephanie Small, Kurt Kelley ’99, Kate Conklin, Lane Volpe, Peter ’93 and Mandy Ball Caruso ’97, Eric Adams, Cameron Frothingham, Jonathan Frothingham ’95, Mark Winiecki ’90, Marile Haylon Borden ’94, and John Marquis (former chaplain).” From Steve Higgs: “Amy (Lyons) and I are living in New Zealand and enjoying our time. I am researching environmental conflict resolution, and Amy is researching sustainability education. Our 2-year-old daughter, Ella, is researching kiwis. We’ll be here till December 2006 when we move back to the States and new jobs in Oregon.” • Robyn Thomlinson graduated from Temple Medical School in May 2006 and planned to pursue a residency in pediatrics at Stony Brook University Hospital on Long Island, N.Y. She was married to Richard LaBarca in Florida on March 29, 2005. In attendance were Liz Hubbard ’01 and Jared Fine and Jodi Beznoska. • Sarah Whitford and Sean Sweeney were engaged last spring and planned a wedding for this fall. Sarah is employed at the Gulf of Maine Research Institute, and Sean attends the University of Maine School of Law, both in Portland. • Tina Goudreau Colli-son writes, “So let’s see, I had a baby boy, Andrew, on May 21, 2005. I celebrated my 30th birthday in N.Y.C. with Lis Pimentel (who came up from D.C.), Jen Rose (who is recently engaged to Charlie Costanzo), and Lizzie Ivy Cooper. Christine Vaughn got married last November in Chicago. Julie Williams, Emily Record Lane, Jen Rose, Lizzie Ivy Cooper, Lis Pimentel, and Steve and Amy Lyons Higgs are present.” • Please see the Colby Web site for additional news from Bill Hiscock and Andrea Bassi. Thanks for all your submissions. —Brian Gill

00 Some time has passed since Julia Humes, Debbie Sabath, Melinda Stockmann, Charlotte Tiffany, and Jessie Davis shared an apartment, beer die table, and quality time in Davis Square, Somerville. Julia received a certificate in the culinary arts from Boston University and in September 2005 moved to San Francisco, where she is finishing an M.L.A. in gastronomy. She visited Demecia Lloyd, who is married and in March had a baby boy, Zaven LokesWilliams. This winter, Debbie married Andy Powers ’99 at a small family wedding in Hart’s Location, N.H. They live in Inman Square in Somerville, Mass., and Debbie teaches second grade in Andover. Jessie graduated this spring from Northeastern Law School. Melinda, after completing a year-long internship in Namibia with the Center for Global Education, took time to relax and visit friends before starting a master’s program in landscape architecture in Syracuse. She also flew to Montana in July to be in brother Keith ’95’s ranch wedding. Charlotte married Jon Stephenson in Vermont in August and is at Framingham State College pursuing a master’s in nutrition. • Mike Eller completed his M.S. in geology in January and is now working as a field geologist for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. • Katie Curry married Jeff Porch in September 2003. They had their first child, Carter, in June 2005 and expected a daughter in September. They live in Cambridge, Maine, and run the seasonal family restaurant, The Lobster Shack, at Two Lights. • Brenda Yun is living in San Francisco, teaching middle and high school English. She traveled to India, Spain, Turkey, Greece, Italy, and Croatia for three months last summer. • Whitney Lawton married Frank Linnenbringer, whom she met while in the Peace Corps, on Dec. 31, 2005. She graduated from Johns Hopkins University School of Nursing in May, and she and Frank were moving to N.H., where Whitney will work at Cheshire Medical Center in the OB unit. • Sarah Andel and Fleur Hopper are living in Portland, Maine, with their dog, Zoe. Fleur graduated from Boston College with her master’s in social work. Sarah is in her last year at the University of Southern Maine for her master’s in nursing to become a family nurse practitioner. They celebrated Becky Bagley’s graduation from the University of Vermont Medical School in Burlington. • Annalise Blech, Ph.D. candidate in Slavic and Eurasian studies at the University of Texas, Austin, was awarded a Fulbright grant to Russia for the 2006-2007 academic year. This grant will provide the opportunity to live and study in Moscow at the State Pushkin Institute. The research conducted will advance her dissertation concerning the use of 20th-century Russian literature to teach language. • Sarah Cleary Manzo and her husband Nick (Union College, 2000), are living just south of Raleigh, N.C. Their daughter, Abigail Rose, was born in February, and Sarah graduated with an M.F.A. in creative writing from Goddard College in July. • Caitlin Smith lives in Santa Cruz, Calif., with her boyfriend, Ron Turuturic, and their two corgis and two cats. She has been working for the County of Santa Cruz for the past four years as a child support specialist. • Trish Akins finished her master’s of public health at Boston University. • Jen Goodman earned her doctorate in physical therapy from SUNY, Stony Brook. • Jen Kassakian graduated from the University of Washington with a master’s of marine affairs. She was awarded a Knauss Sea Grant Fellowship, so she was headed to D.C. for a year to work for Congress on marine policy issues. • Diane Carr is finishing her master’s at Stanford University in international education administration and policy analysis. • Please check the Colby magazine Web page for more news of our class. —Caroline Calhoun

00s newsmakers

Cara Erdheim ’01 won the national ladies’ adult figure skating championships held in March in Dallas. Erdheim has been skating since she was five but said she has improved as an adult. “Skating means more to me now because I learned to appreciate the combination of both art and sport.” In addition to training and competing, she’s also working toward her Ph.D. in American literature. . . . In October 2006, Sarah Wright ’04 will travel to Sri Lanka on a Fulbright scholarship in musicology. For nine months, she will research the lives and songs of Tamil tea plantation workers. Wright plans to use songs as historical documents to explore plantation life and the extent to which singing becomes a political tool. She will interview plantations and plans to learn and translate some of their songs. Her experience with the ISLE (Intercollegiate Sri Lanka Education) program during her junior year at Colby set her on her present course, she said.

milestones

Marriages: Erin L. Roberts ’00 to Edward A. Keysor ’97 in Bristol, R.I. • Charlotte A. Tiffany ’00 to Jon D. Stephenson in Proctorsville, Vt. • Michelle Chandler ’01 to Bret W. Oettmeier in Wolfeboro, N.H. • Jeffrey P. Brink ’02 to Anna E. Thompson in Laurens, S.C. • Katherine E. Egan ’02 to William Wertheimer in Westfield, N.J. • Erin O. Gardner ’02 to Joshua Zierler-Broudou in Princeton, N.J. • Bliss M. Woolmington ’02 to Patrick J. Bernal ’01 in Manchester, Vt. • Kevin M. Brunelle ’02 to Katherine D. Wheeler ’04 in Waterville, Maine • Lindsey Mahoney ’03 to Ian Jameson in Sun Valley, Idaho • Billy Thompson ’03 to Michelle Bales in Charlottesville, Va. • Erin C. Dube ’04 to Adam Greenman in North Kingstown, R.I. • Peter Rice ’04 to Betsy Lucas in Lyme, N.H. • Aaron B. Bradford ’06 to Julie B. Heath in Wilmot, N.H.
All Outdoors | Dave Sherwood ’00

Dave Sherwood’s wife, Grace Price Sherwood ’01, was looking through car advertisements when she saw a notice, headlined “Your Dream Job,” and passed it over to her husband. After reading the ad—for a full-time outdoor writer for the Kennebec Journal and Morning Sentinel—Sherwood ’00 was sold on the spot.

Despite having no previous newspaper experience, the Colby history major was hired; the executive editor was particularly impressed by Sherwood’s list of 100 story ideas, many of which have since found their way into the newspapers.

And the hire worked out pretty well. Just a year into the new career, Sherwood was honored with the Bob Drake Young Writer’s Award, one of the Maine Press Association’s top honors. The judge for the contest, who is from Virginia, said, “I would not have expected to select an outdoor writer for a writing honor, but David Sherwood surprised me. ... Dave’s initiative goes beyond just the enthusiasm he shows for his work.” She asked, “Should anyone have that much fun working?”

After more than a year on the outdoors beat, Sherwood is more convinced than ever about the “dream job” part. He conveys an infectious delight in what he does, responding to word of a promising wolf sighting in far northern Maine, for instance, with a succinct, “Let’s go.”

He takes a fresh approach and is impatient with the idea that there’s an inherent conflict between sportsmen who hunt and fish and those who prefer to take in the outdoors by canoe and kayak, binoculars and snowshoes. “Why shouldn’t you do it all?” he asked. “Maine is an amazing place, with no limits on the experiences you can have.”

In print, he practices what he preaches. In his very first piece, Sherwood described standing above the Kennebec River in Waterville with a striped bass enthusiast who said, “I’ve seen fish down there that would scare you”—and then proceeded to hook a 20-inch striper, then another that was 45 inches long.

Sherwood has gone birding and paddled with sea kayakers. He’s written about duck-decoy carving and ice fishing, accompanied snowmobile maintenance crews and divers in Moosehead Lake studying lake trout eggs. He’s tasted fiddleheads and clams, and he shows no sign of running out of new topics. One high point was accompanying a Maine team to New Jersey for the “World Series of Birding.” (They finished a respectable seventh.)

Sherwood says he likes to emphasize celebration of the outdoors rather than follow the controversies that are the staple of much newspaper journalism. Yet he doesn’t shy away from such disputes, covering the illegal introduction of bass into the famed Rangeley Lakes watershed and disagreements over stocking of alewives in northern lakes.

“I don’t have any mundane topics,” he said. “I get to write about what I like to write about, which is a rare privilege.”

Sherwood grew up in Connecticut and in Maine. His dad showed him how to hunt and fish in the Maine woods. During summers in Spain, where he visited family, he also spent time on salt water. “I actually have more extended family in Spain than I do here—more cousins than I can count,” he said.

He earned his Maine Guide license as an undergraduate, then decided to stay in Maine, settling in Bowdoinham. He earned his Coast Guard captain’s license and started a saltwater guiding service on Casco Bay. He worked for L.L. Bean for three years as a catalogue writer, and, other than freelance magazine articles, journalism was a new field for him.

Now, Sherwood produces two weekend pages and a mid-week page as well. He said he learned about outdoor rhythms while rowing crew at Colby: “Getting up at four or five in the morning isn’t something you expect to do at college, and it isn’t easy.” But the acquired discipline is something he still values, even though he hasn’t stroked an oar since graduation. “We’d come back to the dining hall and were the first ones there. It was great to feel you’d accomplished something before most people even wake up.”

—Doug Rooks ’76

02 Congrats to Andrew Jaspersohn and Lindsay Antolino ’04 on their marriage last summer. The couple lives in Portland, Maine, and Andrew is the assistant manager at a local sports store. Justin Ucko is the happy father of a second son. Gabriel Duncan-Roitman started his own travel company, Global Outreach, which takes high school students to Costa Rica to do community service and learn Spanish. Gabriel sent his e-mail from Istanbul, Turkey. Jason Cummings and Christy Pearson got married in June in Maine. They live in Connecticut, where Christy was to start her residency in pediatrics at Yale-New Haven Children’s Hospital and Jason will teach Spanish while continuing his Ph.D. in Spanish literature through UMass, Amherst. Bill Spencer and Blake Grosch ran the Boston Marathon and raised more than $25,000 in a program called Miles for Miracles, which supports Children’s Hospital Boston. Dave Seel teaches high school English in Annapolis, Md. Ryan Davis is attending Columbia School of Journalism this fall. Steven Hooper and his wife, Laura (Levings ’03), moved back to Boston. Steve works at a venture capital firm. Sally Hall resides in Portland, Ore., works for a publishing company, and ran the Big Sun Marathon. Jonathan Marlow and Kate Zimmerman ’03 are engaged and live in N.Y.C. Ali Culpen moved to Boston to work as a consultant for the Boston Consulting Group. Sara Lovitz graduated from UVM’s School of Environmental and Natural Resources with an M.S. in natural resource planning. She did her thesis research on artisanal and small-scale gold mining in southern Ecuador. Anna Leavitt works as a veterinary technician in Colorado. Lindsey Rowland finished in Grenada, moved to Kansas for her clinical year, and graduated from veterinary school in June. Stephanie Graber married Robert Sutherland in November 2005 in Traverse City, Mich., and proudly announced the arrival of a baby boy, Colebrook Vane Sutherland, on March 29, 2006. Pam Foxley is working as an environmental planner in southern California and lives in Pasadena with her boyfriend. She recently achieved LEED professional accreditation through the United States Green Building Council.

and Jaime Langione are attending NYU, Wagner, this fall. • Amanda Cufffo lives in Northfield, Vt., where she works at Norwich University as assistant director of athletics and head volleyball coach. She recently bought a house and is happy to have any Colby visitors. • Dave Hauser enjoys urban mountain living in San Francisco. • Kate Nastou lives in Portland, Maine, with her dog, Charlie, and works for Health Dialog Analytic Solutions. • Katy Bondy attends graduate school at the Fletcher School in Boston and spent the summer in Belgrade, Serbia, doing an internship. • Chris Collopy spent last January teaching public health in Ghana. Chris is working on her master’s in public health at the Harvard School of Public Health. • Megan Laird received her law degree from the University of Maine School of Law in June. She will pursue an L.L.M. in tax at New York Law School. • After two and a half years in Providence, R.I., and a year and a half in Portland, Maine, I moved to Orange County, Calif., in July. I’m still working for Amica Insurance, where I’ve been since graduation. Last fall I completed my first marathon. I frequently hang out with Kate Nastou and Hillary Bouchard. Congratulations to Hillary on her recent graduation from Maine Law.

—Sarah Dresler

03 Kristen Vaughn married Will Olson on May 13, 2006, in Virginia Beach, Va. They honeymooned, in true Colby style, on the Appalachian Trail and now reside in Ithaca, N.Y., where Kristen is in a master’s program at Cornell in historic preservation. • Meredith Millen and Trevor Eide ’04 married in July 2006. They live in Hanover, N.H., and Meredith is in a speech pathology program at UVM. • John McManigal married Kendyll Whiting last March in Santa Barbara, Calif., where the couple resides. A Colby contingent at the wedding included Justin Hedge, Rich Cook, Andy Harnett, Tom Mace, Pete Nowak, Nate Good, Cat Jessop, and many others. See the Class of 2003 alumni Web page for a wedding picture. • Lauren Bliss and Andy St. Martin, planning a summer 2007 wedding, bought a house in Attleboro, Mass. Lauren teaches high school biology while Andy is at Anchor Capital in Boston. • Congratulations to May 2006 graduates—we have quite a few lawyers now! Caroline Riss and Tom Richardson graduated from William Mitchell College of Law. Caroline is pursuing jobs in the public interest sector working for low-income clients. Jonathan Eck graduated from Vermont Law School and accepted a position at a large firm in New Hampshire. Jill Young graduated from Drake University Law School and now works for the Third Judicial District of Minnesota for the Honorable Robert Birnbaum ’68. Josh Christie and Matt Tiarsa graduated from law schools at Indiana University and American University, respectively. Joanne Moy received an architecture degree from Washington University in St. Louis (she also is engaged to be married next summer). Bianca Belcher, newly relocated to Kansas City, Mo., to do her orthotic residency at KU Medical Center, graduated from the Newington Post-Graduate Program for Orthotics & Prosthetics in Connecticut. After living in Baltimore for a year, Elyssa Ford finished her M.A. in history at Arizona State University and has embarked on her Ph.D. • Annie Hall left her admissions job at Babson College and accepted a position at Hotchkiss School in Lakeville, Conn., as assistant director of college advising. She’s also coaching at Hotchkiss. • Laurel Burnham, Caitlin Keys, Libbie Mayhall, and Brooke McNally had a reunion weekend in Washington, D.C., where Brooke works as a press secretary for a Massachusetts congressman. Caitlin recently returned from a year in Chile. Libbie started her first year of medical school at Dartmouth after living in Boston for three years. Laurel, after finishing her M.A. in child development at Tufts, works at the Massachusetts Children’s Trust Fund and lives with Dan Deacon. • Tom Sterio and Adam Cohen are back living together in Connecticut. Tom is in his third year of dental school and Adam is in his fourth year of medical school at UConn. • Casey Brown works in Portland, Maine, as a claims rep for the Social Security Administration. • Alex Libby is in the second year of her M.A. in art at Boston University and is doing research at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. She lives with Emily Condon, who works for a Boston catering company. • Sarah Zerbonne is an AmeriCorps member with an environmental restoration organization in Seattle. • Jeff Halsey and Pat Koch left the sunny beaches of San Diego (much to PK Marshall’s dismay). Jeff is an investment broker for Fuller Real Estate in Denver. Pat moved to Washington, D.C. PK works for a bond firm in San Diego and sees Heidi Bungeroth often. • Erin Campbell left Jackson, Wyo., for London and fashion school. • Heather Fishman is now in Casco, Peru, volunteering with a nonprofit and writing about her travels for Southern America Explorers. • It’s great hearing about the successes and triumphs we’ve had as a class! —Lauren N. Tiberio

04 Elizabeth Turnbull is working for an energy and environmental consulting firm that supports the Department of Energy in D.C. • Zoe Hallowell and Parker Thompson have been intensely studying the art of sushi for the past year in Bozeman, Mont. Parker bumped into Spencer Fenniman, causing Spencer to drop the five-pound bag of carrots that he grew on his farm in Whitefish, Mont. Parker and Zoe also run into Jordana Pickman in the dark hallways of their house. • Jon Meek bumped into a fiddle player and now they have a band, Sticky Fingers, rocking the bars of Bozeman. • Becky DiSavino, sking in Jackson, Wyo., nighted Tom Rogers. And Leah Morrison arrived in Bozeman for the summer just as Henry Munter padded his way to Idaho. • Kerry Whittaker started a Ph.D. program in medical psychology this fall with the National Institute of Health at the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences in Bethesda, Md. She’ll focus her research in the areas of cardiovascular behavioral medicine and psychoneuroimmunology. • Mike Molloy started his Ph.D. in immunology at Dartmouth. • Laura Snow is studying health policy and administration at Yale School of Epidemiology and Public Health. • Lorraine Beane Baline was married last June. Christine Pennypacker, Alex Gershuny, Rob Selover, and Kirsten Zarnetske attended. • Chyanne Oliver was awarded a Ford Foundation Predoctoral Fellowship. She is in the third year of her Ph.D. program in American studies at the University of Maryland. • Matt Bacon interned last year at the Currier Museum of Art in Manchester, N.H., and was headed to Washington, D.C., to start graduate school at George Washington University for his master’s in art history/museum studies. • Anne Christman received an M.A. in social sciences from the University of Chicago in August. • Abbey Stella started her second year at Tufts Cummings School of Veterinary Medicine. • Josh Cleaver is the bass player for The Casual Fiasco. The band has performed throughout New England (including Waterville’s Mainely Brews), traveled south to Florida, and toured the Midwest last May. Check them out: www.thecasualfiasco.com or www.myspace.com/casualfiasco. • Amy Tolsdorf finished her first year of medical school at UConn. • Andrew Scull traded Long Term Natural Gas and Electricity for Shell Trading Gas & Power in San Diego. He also has volunteered for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. • Cassie Cote graduated from the master’s program in health communication at Emerson College and Tufts University Medical School. She moved to Saco, Maine, and works in the development office of the Mitchell Institute in Portland. • Katie Sweeney earned her master’s in social work at Boston College. • Erin Dube is getting married to a fellow Teach for America corps member, Adam Greenman. • Kim Betz teaches first grade at The Stanwich School in Greenwich, Conn., and is getting her master’s in elementary education at Manhattanville College. • Margaret Siciliano is teaching science to kindergarten through third grade girls at The Chapin School on the Upper East Side of Manhattan. • Marisa MacNaughton manages Second Time Around, a designer consignment shop for women in Beacon Hill in Boston, Mass. • Jon Evans, Ryan Tyler, and Scott Smith traveled around the world last summer, visiting London, Austria, India, Thailand, Indonesia, and Australia. • Sarah Wright was awarded a Fulbright grant to pursue etnomusnology in Sri Lanka. • Andrew Will is studying at the New England Institute of Art for a second degree in audio production. • Ann Claffin is in a master’s program at the University of Michigan’s School of Information. • Diane Nelson was living with Ann but moved to Richmond to start dental school at Virginia Commonwealth University. —Kate Weller

05 Lisa Reinhalter is living in Washington, D.C., and works with Lis Maguire and Susan Ellsworth ’03 doing research for a nonprofit consumer rights group, Food &
Elizabeth Watson Gerry ’27, June 20, 2006, in Houlton, Maine, at 102. A premed student at Colby, she earned nursing degrees from Massachusetts General Hospital School of Nursing and Simmons College. She held various nursing jobs in Maine, retiring in 1969. She was active in her church and sorority and in the Abenaki Girl Scout Council. Predeceased by her sisters, Mary Watson Flanders ’24 and Jean M. Watson ’29, she is survived by her daughters, Anne Gerry Gassett ’60 and Jean G. Collette, five grandchildren, including Lisa Collett Hook ’88, and seven great-grandchildren.

Howard L. Libby Jr. ’33, July 1, 2006, in Farmington, Maine, at 95. He earned his master’s in education from the University of Maine, then taught school and was superintendent in several Maine communities. He enjoyed his garden and tree farm and played Scrabble nearly every day with his wife. He is predeceased by his uncle, Herbert 1902. His wife of 71 years, Meda, two sons, seven grandchildren, including Jeoffre ’00, 13 great-grandchildren, and two great-great-grandchildren survive him.

Evelyn Stapleton Burns ’33, July 10, 2006, in Potomac, Md., at 95. A Carnegie Endowment Peace Scholarship allowed her to do graduate work in France. She taught French and Latin in public high schools until she married in 1940. A minister’s wife, she raised three children while moving around the country to various churches. Later in life she served on the Board of Church for the national United Methodist Church and spoke out against injustices in the church. Her son, Allen, a brother, a daughter-in-law, and four grandchildren survive her.

Ruth E. White ’34, August 21, 2006, in Lexington, Mass., at 93. She earned a master’s from Boston University in 1948 and taught high school English for 17 years. She is survived by her friends, Cathy and James McDermott.

Eugene A. McAlary ’35, September 2, 2006, in West Yarmouth, Mass., at 93. A captain in World War II, he served in both Panama and Germany. He worked as a graphics manager until he retired in 1977, and he served as a vestryman and junior warden for his church. Predeceased by his wife, Ruth Michalek McAlary ’36, and his brother, Frederick ’43, he is survived by his children, Alan, David, and Barbara Kashar, his sister, Ann McAlary Severns ’48, his sister-in-law, Josephine Pitts McAlary ’44, six grandchildren, and 12 great-grandchildren.

Benjamin B. Brownstein ’37, August 15, 2006, in West Palm Beach, Fla., at 91. A graduate of Boston University School of Law, he served as a U.S. Army captain during World War II. He was a marketing analyst in Massachusetts and Connecticut and was active in Connecticut politics and social causes. His daughters, Pamela Brownstein ’74 and Emily McKeigue, a stepdaughter, two stepsons, a sister, three brothers, his former wife, four grandchildren, and seven stepgrandchildren survive him.

Mary Herd Emery ’38, August 29, 2006, in Cape Elizabeth, Maine, at 89. She received nursing training and worked as a public health nurse in Maine. While raising five children, she involved herself in the Junior League of Bangor, the Athenae Club, and her church. Predeceased by her husband, Frederick ’38, she is survived by her children, Frederick Jr. ’69, James, David, Susan, and Joan Ross, and by her cousin, Charmian Herd ’50, seven grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren.

Myron “Doc” Berry ’40, August 29, 2006, in Houghton, Mich., at 87. He received his master’s from Harvard in 1942 and his doctorate from Syracuse in 1951. He taught freshman chemistry at Michigan Tech University from 1960 to 1980, retiring in 1984. He was active in his community theater, historical society, and Masonic lodge. He loved the outdoors and long walks. Predeceased by his parents, Myron 1907 and Leona Booth 1910, he is survived by three sons, Myron H. ’74, John, and George, a cousin Charles E. Garland ’50, and ten grandchildren.

J. Franklin Pinoe Jr. ’42, June 22, 2006, in Ithaca, N.Y., at 90. He earned his master’s from Temple University in 1956 and taught special education for 19 years and elementary school for two years. He did volunteer work for two years in France and traveled all over Europe, Africa, and around the world. Predeceased by his father, John Franklin ’14, he is survived by his wife, Caroline Cole Pinoe, who taught at Colby from 1941 to 1943.

William J. Tetteau ’42, M.D., November 7, 2005, in Ogunquit, Maine, at 86. He served in the Army in Europe during World War II. After earning his medical degree from University of Ottawa, he practiced as an internist in Portland, Maine, for more than 40 years. After he closed his practice he worked at the Augusta Mental Health Institute and the Veteran's Administration Hospital at Togus. A communicant of the Holy Martyrs Church in Falmouth, Maine, he was a member of his bowling team. His daughters, Mary Anne Koenig, Joanne Chase, and Dorothy Tetreau-Delmolino, two sisters, a brother, and three grandchildren survive him.

Marjorie Brown Pursley '43, May 29, 2006, in West Islip, N.Y., at 84. A special education teacher, she also worked in a toddler development program. Years later she worked as secretary and treasurer of the United Well and Pump Corporation, established by her husband. She played bridge and served in the Ladies Auxiliary of the Wyncote Yacht Club. Her husband of 62 years, Thomas '43, died 10 weeks after her, and her brother, George Brown '45, predeceased her. She is survived by her children, Thomas, George, David, and Joan Luccisano, and three grandchildren.

Thomas A. Pursley Jr. '43, August 9, 2006, in West Islip, N.Y., at 85. He served in the Navy Amphibious Force in World War II in the Pacific. After the war he became a reservist until he retired as a captain in 1968. He established the United Well and Pump Corporation and served as its president for more than 25 years. A yachtsman and commodore of the Wyncote Yacht Club, he also served as an elder and deacon of his church. Predeceased by his wife of 62 years, Marjorie Brown '43, he is survived by his children, Thomas, George, David, and Joan Luccisano, and three grandchildren.

Patricia Berquist Donna '44, August 18, 2006, in Waterville, Maine, at 87. She worked for C.F. Hathaway Company in Waterville for many years and was active with the Waterville Humane Society. An accomplished pianist, she also enjoyed tennis and traveling. Her sisters, Neta Henderson and Norma Raymond, and several nieces and nephews survive her.

Edward R. Halpin '45, April 29, 2006, in Augusta, Maine, at 83. Drafted into the Army, he served in France and Germany during World War II and earned a Purple Heart. He taught and coached in various Maine high schools until he retired in the late 1970s. His son, John, a sister, and a granddaughter survive him.

William L. Whittemore '45, September 7, 2006, in La Jolla, Calif., at 81. A dedicated scientist, he earned his doctorate in physics in 1948 from Harvard. He worked as a researcher at Brookhaven National Laboratory until he joined General Atomics in 1957, where he worked for nearly 50 years on the TRIGA reactor program. Traveling around the world advising countries on designing and building nuclear reactors, he found time for his passion for archaeology and photography. His wife, Alice, survives him.

Jean Crie Hodgkins '48, September 6, 2006, in Thomaston, Maine, at 80. An outdoorswoman, she was the National Standard Race age group skiing champion in 1976. She was active in skiing organizations in Maine and Colorado and volunteered with senior groups. Her six children, Frederick, Steven, Heidi Snead, Holly Buttermann, Kristin Macomber, and Katrina Crie, and five grandsons survive her.

S. Vincent Monaco '49, July 18, 2006, in Boynton Beach, Fla., at 83. During World War II, he served in the Navy in the Pacific as chief pharmacist aboard the LST 835. After the War he established a lifelong career in the pharmaceutical industry with Warner-Lambert. He was a member and officer of the Marblehead, Mass., Philanthropic Masonic Lodge as well as a member of the Boston Yacht Club. His wife of 54 years, Mary, his son and daughter, his sister, two grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren survive him.

B. '73 and Kevin J. Higgins '73, daughter, Lorraine, and son-in-law, Robert S. Jarnes '73, two brothers, and seven grandchildren.

Joan Millett Coon '51, August 21, 2006, in Simsbury, Conn., at 76. She worked as a computer programmer at The Stanley Works in New Britain, Conn., until she retired. A 50-year resident of Watertown, Conn., she was involved in her local church and library and she supported various causes related to the welfare of animals and children. Her children, Michael, Scott, Colin, and Whitney, her former husband, David Pape '53, her brother, her stepson, two grandchildren, and four cats survive her.

James K. Keefe '51, September 20, 2006, in Benton, Maine, at 77. He worked in several capacities related to economic development in Maine, Massachusetts, and Washington, D.C. He was honored for his work by Who’s Who in America and the U.S. Junior Chamber of Commerce. Despite suffering from multiple sclerosis, he remained active on boards and councils dedicated to improving the lives of other sufferers. His three daughters, Celeste Wesner '73, Coleen Lancaster, and Cathy Clifford, and six grandchildren survive him.

Winona Nile Eddy '52, June 19, 2006, in Harvard, Mass., at 76. She worked as a technical editor for Raytheon Company before raising her children. Later in life she became a part-time home health aide helping the elderly. She possessed a phenomenal memory for early English poetry. Her husband, Neal, three children, and two grandsons survive her.

Lloyd J. Mason '52, September 8, 2006, in Norway, Maine, at 75. He held several positions in business and banking, including ownership of Woodman's Sporting Goods in Norway and loan officer at Oxford Bank and Trust. Active in civic organizations, he was associated with the Maine Jaycees and the Salvation Army. He loved canoeing, bird hunting, and NASCAR. His sons, James, a sister, three grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren survive him.

Marc S. Cummings '64, June 20, 2006, in Old Lyme, Conn., at 63. Much of his career was spent working for family businesses. A funny man and a hockey fan, he was an avid reader and lover of black-and-white movies. His wife, Eileen, six children, a sister, four nieces and nephews, and a grandson survive him.

Albert Mavrinac, July 27, 2006, in Waterville, Maine, at 83. Emeritus Dana Professor of Government, who taught at Colby from 1958 to 1992. In addition to his academic career, Mavrinac was a consultant to the governments of the U.S., Egypt, Togo, Jordan, and South Vietnam (the latter in the early 1970s) and earned his J.D. from the University of Maine Law School in 1990. Remembered by his most famous student, Doris Kearns Goodwin '64, as her favorite professor, Mavrinac is survived by his wife of 53 years, Marilyn Sweeney Mavrinac, emerita associate professor of education and human development, and four daughters and a son.