FEATURES12/A Long Way from Home

They come from varied backgrounds and arrive with varied expectations. But as the first in their families to go to college, these students bring a fresh perspective and encounter unique challenges at Colby.

20/Of the People

From social workers to career diplomats, many Colbians are bucking a national trend by choosing to work in government. They say it's the best way to make a difference.

24/Open Mic

Kevin Whalen '92 and Gregg Jackson '90 had never worked in radio. Eighteen months later, they are hosts of a popular radio talk show on Boston's WRKO. An impossible feat? Not with links in the blogosphere.

Colby Online (www.colby.edu/mag)Geib's Lessons

The recent death of retired sociology professor Fred Geib moved Richard Foster '68 to consider exactly what lessons Geib's teaching held.

Something to Say

John Mullen '89 died in July while doing what he loved: whitewater kayaking. A copy editor and outdoors columnist for The Washington Post, he wrote about kayaking and other joys he found in the outdoors.
