DELTA KAPPA EPSILON INITIATION BANQUET.

The fifty-ninth annual initiation of Xi chapter of Delta Kappa Epsilon was held at the chapter house last Friday evening, October sixth. At the conclusion of the initiation ceremonies all the members of the chapter with their alumni guests marched down to the Elmwood Hotel for the annual initiation banquet. At exactly ten o'clock Landlord Judkins threw open the doors of the dining room and the assembled Dekes to the number of thirty-five marched in to their seats at the table to the rousing strains of the Phi Marching Song. The tables were arranged in the form of a Maltese cross and were beautifully decorated with cut flowers. The center-piece was an immense bouquet of scarlet geraniums, while other bouquets of white carnations and roses were placed at intervals along the tables.

Landlord Judkins outdid himself in the preparation of the menu, to every course of which each Deke did more than ample justice. From the oysters to the cigars there was something "doing" the whole time. Between all of the courses rousing Deke and college songs were indulged in, Brother Rex W. Dodge acting as choragus with Brother George Gould at the piano. Not a moment was lost and the hall rang with fraternity songs, Down in Mobile, Heidelberg, Tommy, Yankee Doodle Boy and other popular airs.

As the clocks were striking midnight, the cigars were lighted, chairs pushed back, and Brother E. P. Craig, as toastmaster, called the company to order, introducing the speakers of the evening with witty and appropriate remarks. The following list of toasts was greatly enjoyed and when at half past one the mystic circle was formed, and the parting yell given, every Deke present felt that the banquet was in all respects an unusually delightful and memorable occasion.

Hearts linked to hearts thus we bid our farewell."

The following alumni brothers were present and responded to impromptu toasts: Rev. H. R. Mitchell, '72, Rev. George D. Saunders, '82, Professor John Hedman, '95, of this city, Rev. J. H. Roberts, Wesleyan, '83, of Fairfield and Allen Clark, '04, of Augusta.

The initiates were: From 1906, Harold D. Pepper, Waterville; from 1909, Clark Drummond Chapman, Portland; Orlando M. Dayhuff, Portland; William Austin Flewelling, Calais; Howard Benjamin Foster, Cherryfield; Thomas Jackson Seaton, Wilton; Leo Steward Trask, Springfield; John Dearborn Whittier, Farmington; Munroe Elias Young, Calais.

For the first time in the history of the chapter a grandson of a Deke has been initiated. Clark Drummond Chapman is the son of Brother Wilford G. Chapman, '83, and the grandson of the late Hon. Josiah H. Drummond, '47, the "Father" of Xi of A. K. E.

THE FORT PREBLE GAME.

Colby met the heavy Fort Preble team on Alumni field Saturday and took the soldier boys into camp with a score of 11 to 0.

When Fort Preble appeared on the field Colby's chances looked doubtful. The soldier's line with their two hundred and eighty pound center appeared too weighty for the blue and grey backs to penetrate.

The Colby team played as one man, the Preble boys as eleven, that is the story of the game in a nutshell. Very seldom was a Colby back allowed to stop when tackled. It seemed as if every man on the team was in every play, pulling the runner along for every foot possible. The linemen played hard and low, piling up the visitors cross plays before they were fairly started and helping each other out in a way very encouraging for this time in the season. Colby's backs hit the line hard and made good gains at every point in Preble's line possibly excepting their right end, where Dickinson put up a star game for the visitors. The most noticeable defect in Colby's game was the fumbling, but the season is early yet and this will undoubtedly be corrected before the Maine college games.

Preble won the toss, defending the east goal. Palmer kicked off to the soldiers' 25 yard line where Lambkin caught and was thrown with a gain of ten yards. The visitors kicked on third down, the ball going to Hammond on Colby's 45 yard line, who ran it in some 15 yards. Colby gained consistently, good work by all the backs forced the ball to the 15 yard line and Hammond made the first touchdown in the first five minutes of play, Flewelling missed a difficult goal.

Colby kicked off again, Yates taking the ball on Preble's 20 yard line. The visitors made some 20 yards by short gains, helped by a five yard penalty for Colby's off side play. Preble fumbled, Hammond fell on the ball. Palmer made a 20 yard gain around right and Colby was thrown back for a loss on the next play, on third down Hammond punted to Preble's 10 yard line, when Lambkin was thrown in his tracks.

Preble fumbled, Hammond recovered the ball but lost it again, Ross fell on the ball. Colby's ball on the visitors 80 yard line. Hammond made several round right end, line bucking took the ball to the visitors 1 yard line, DeWitt tried left guard but was held with the ball six inches from the line, time called.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Monday evening the student body and friends had a rare treat in the lecture given in the chapel by Mr. Asher C. Hinds, L.L.D. of the class of '83. Mr. Hinds, as clerk to the Speaker of the House since Thomas Reed was first elected to that office, has the deciding of the parliamentary procedure of the House and is therefore better fitted than any other man in the country to speak on the above subject. The lecture was intensely interesting and was delivered in a pleasing conversational tone. Running through it were homely illustrations that vividly portrayed the precise points the speaker wished to bring out. We give below a substantial abstract of the lecture.

Our forefathers saw the weakness of other governments and divided ours into three parts, the legislative, executive and judicial. The legislative body is again divided into the House of Representatives and the Senate. While each state is represented in the Senate by two men, the House is made up of representatives from each Congressional district containing about two hundred thousand people. It thus represents the real forces of the country, the people as a mass not as a state. It does not follow that this body shall have its way altogether but in order to preserve peace and to carry on the government they should at first be consulted. It is also necessary that the House should have restrictions by which the members can be held to effective action in accordance with the beliefs and feelings of the people. These rules of procedure are derived from three sources and are not written down in any one book but are scattered through many.

The first source is Jefferson's Manual, a code of the rules and precedents brought over from England, compiled into a digest by Thomas Jefferson. These rules are fundamental but time has wrought many changes in the rules for procedure, so that the House has departed widely from Jefferson's Manual. It is however very valuable for reference. It is never safe to follow it exactly nor is it safe to disregard it. In the case of the bill passed by the Senate recognizing the Cuban Republic during the Spanish War a great crisis was averted by standing by the letter of a rule in this old manual.

The second source is the House Rules; a code of procedure theoretically adopted by each new House of Representatives but practically passed down from the preceding House, there being a new one every two years. These rules form a new system of procedure built up during a period of a hundred years to cover points not provided for by Jefferson's Manual. They are called Reed's Rules but in reality only a few lines in them are his work. These few lines, however, are very important and determined the nature of the great reform which he brought about.

The third source is the decisions made by the different Speakers. In a rather tumultuous body like the House composed of three hundred and eighty-six members, questions are constantly arising, for which there is no rule. The Speaker then examines all the old rules and precedents and makes a decision, which may either be sustained or overruled by a majority in the House. There are several thousand of these decisions, most of which are wise and just. Some exceptions at the time seemingly slight later become of serious importance. John Quincy Adams' refusing to vote on Sunday about 1830 established the precedent that a member could refuse to vote at any time. This method of obstruction was largely used during the great debates on the slavery question, because a quorum could be broken on the roll call by the silence of a number of members. Measures were obstructed in this way until Speaker Reed decided that such procedure was not right and ruled that a quorum was constituted of the members present whether they voted or not. He met with a storm of objection and so stirred up conflicts that lasted for years with great bitterness. But as a result of Speaker Reed's wise decision there were not ten seconds of obstruction in the last Congress.

The House and Senate are good neighbors but the members of each rather look down upon the rules of procedure of the opposite body. The truth is that the rules suitable for a body of ninety men like the Senate would not apply in a great body like the House of Representatives. "The rules of the House are good for the House and the rules of the Senate are passably good for the Senate" said Mr. Hinds with a little thrust at the clumsy code of procedure employed in the Senate. He also contended that the House Rules should be the foundation for legislative action throughout the country.

A member can speak for fifteen consecutive hours in the Senate while in the House the hour rule of debate prevails and will last as long as the government exists. This limiting of the time was made necessary by the increase in the membership and in the amount of business to be transacted. The principle of selecting the measures and speakers for them is also rigorously observed. This is done through fifty standing committees, who sort out of the twenty thousand or more bills presented by representatives about four thousand to be placed on the calendar of the House. Of this number about twenty-five hundred actually come before the representatives for discussion and decision. The speakers for the different bills are carefully chosen and a new member has a very slight chance for many years of making a name for himself even if he is a man of exceptional ability. "The House is at the mercy of no man however eloquent or eminent." This necessary difficulty of gaining a hearing discourages some able men from continuing to serve as representatives.

The hall in which the House sits is about as long as the chapel here at Colby but twice as wide. Around it are galleries that will seat fifteen hundred people. The seats are arranged in semi-circular tiers rising one above another. To the left of the middle aisle sits the Republican party. Whenever there is a disparity between the two sides, the overflow does not go into adjacent seats across the aisle but over against the opposite wall and towards the rear. In the present House the Republican overflow is about a hundred, who are seated on the "Cherokee strip" as it is called.

Visitors are often struck with the apparent lack of decorum in the House but it must be remembered that it is "neither a sewing circle nor a reception but a great business place." There is undoubtedly not the same decorum and courtesy of the old continental days, for the bitterness of the slavery struggle tore down

A year ago last spring a movement was started by the Colby Club looking to the setting apart of a day in the fall term of each year to be known as Colby Day, when the students and alumni might meet to celebrate Colby's athletic victories and to foster a spirit of loyalty to the college. In accordance with this plan the first Saturday of October was chosen and a football game was scheduled for that date. The fraternities entered heartily into the plan, holding their usual initiations and banquets on the preceding Friday night in order to attract as many of the alumni as possible. As a result of this planning and cooperation the first Colby Day was a decided success. Last spring no definite steps were taken, so far as can be learned, but the sub-committee on football understood that they were expected to arrange a football game for Colby Day as in the preceding year. Accordingly a game was again scheduled on the first Saturday of October with the Fort Preble eleven. It was thus understood at the beginning of this term that Colby Day was to be celebrated October 7. The fraternities, wishing to do their part in carrying out the idea, planned their initiations so that the initiation banquets would occur on the Friday night before. By the first of last week two fraternities, at least, had engaged hotels for their banquets. One of these also had sent out the usual invitations to the alumni, calling their attention to the holding of Colby Day October 7. Last Thursday the report was spread abroad that Colby Day had been postponed. The preparations for the initiation and banquet of the latter fraternity above had then been carried too far for postponement and they occurred Friday evening as originally planned. It seems rather unfortunate for all concerned that the arrangements for Colby Day were not more carefully made, if they were made at all before last Wednesday, and that due notice of the change was not given to all the fraternities. There has evidently been neglect on the part of some one, who, we are not in a position to state. Such an important matter as that of Colby Day, especially since it is in its infancy, should be in the hands of an energetic and responsible committee who may be depended on to plan for, and carry out, a successful observance of the day. We do not wish to play the part of "kicker" but we feel that there has been a lack of responsibility and management in regard to Colby Day that is at least unfortunate. We are glad that plans are now on foot for an interesting and fitting observance of the day next Saturday and trust that it will be the success that it deserves to be.

The new chapel arrangements, by which the two divisions of the college worship separately, have now been thoroughly tested and have proved to be decidedly a change for the better. The men of the student body are now quiet and orderly during the service, which is much more enjoyable and impressive with the faculty and students nearer together. The attendance is better and the different parts of the service are entered into more heartily. The singing especially is improved. With the college choir a permanent feature of our chapel service, added interest is gained and the exercise which was formerly too often the scene of ungentelemanly and almost sacrilegious conduct, will become an inspiring service of genuine worship. One improvement, however, might still be made. There is a tendency to occupy the rear seats which results in a stretch of empty pews separating the audience from the platform. This is sometimes rather awkward for the member of the faculty happening to lead chapel, not to mention the displeasing effect produced upon a visitor by such an arrangement. Let the men of the college show their interest, in and respect for, the chapel service by taking seats nearer the front.

It is a noticeable fact that the attendance of the faculty at chapel has much improved since the new order of things. Is it because the student body are setting a better example or—for some other reason?

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

the courtesy and respect formerly so rigorously observed. It is not however a body to be ashamed of. In many respects the decorum of the House of Representatives is greatly above that of the English Parliament and French Chamber of Deputies.

Our congressmen are a body of men almost all of whom the United States should be proud of. They are picked men, of ability, perseverance, and gratitude, and above all are loyal to their homes and country. Mr. Reed said of them, "after all if you rub up hard against any one of them you will find flint somewhere."

No other legislative body is superior to our House of Representatives in age or tradition. It is original as a government institution, in which the sovereignty rests with the people. It had its germ in the small General Assembly of the colonies and was framed after them. It was the first truly representative legislative body in history.

THE FORT PREBLE GAME.

Second half, Reed went in at quarter-back, Eastwood, Venot and Green went in for the visitors.

Preble kicked to Hetherington who ran it in 15 yards. Several good gains by all the backs followed, then a fumble which Hammond covered made a kick necessary. Hammond punted to visitors 40 yard line, Preble was held for downs. Colby carried the ball by good gains to the 5 yard line where the soldiers braced and held for downs, Preble made first down three times, gaining through the line, Colby held for downs on Preble's 35 yard line. Then the Colby backs got into the game and carried it steadily down the field. DeWitt was shoved over for the touchdown, Flewelling kicked the goal.

For the rest of the half the ball stayed near the center of the field. Colby punted once but the ball was brought back and given to the visitors for offside play. Colby covered a fumble and the whistle blew with the ball on Colby's 45 yard line.

COLBY 5; COBURN 0.

Colby opened her football season Wednesday afternoon by playing Coburn on the Alumni field. Coburn sprang a surprise on the college boys by holding them down to 5 points, but the "prep" boys weighed as much and knew as much about football as the college boys and at all times Coburn played good snappy football making the best of every opportunity to advance the ball, while Colby was weak in the line and the boys did not play together, doing only individual work.

Coaches Rice and Cowing gave several men a chance to show what they could do by changing the lineup several times.

For Colby, Hammond, DeWitt and Capt. Palmer excelled while Smith and Howard Welch did the star playing for Coburn.

The game was fine practice for Colby who by hard work under the coaches should turn out a winning team.

For the past few years Colby girls have given comparatively little attention to athletics. This year marks a change in that respect. Under the influence and direction of Dr. Croswell enthusiasm, not felt before, is being aroused and the girls are entering heartily into plans for the year's work or rather play. As the apparatus for the "gym" has not yet arrived, all sports which take one out-of-doors are in vogue; center ball, tetherball, volley ball and tennis all have their devotees, but by far the most popular is basket ball. Out-of-door basket ball? Yes indeed. In the rear of Foss Hall, almost any time in the day may be seen enthusiasts engaged in putting that ball into the basket. The Sophomores and Freshmen have organized class teams and have appointed as captains Miss Corbett and Miss Clarke respectively. The first interclass game is scheduled for the day of Hallowe'en.
