COLBY-MAINE INTERCOLLEGIATE DEBATE.

The Colby debating teams won a double victory over the University of Maine, on Wednesday, April 21, discussing the question: Resolved, that in cities of twenty-five thousand and over, in the United States, a tax upon land alone should be substituted for the present real property tax, and Mr. Charles B. Haskell of Pittsfield, made up the board of judges.

At Orono, in the Chapel of Alumni Hall, our negative team—Paul F. Fraser, '15, Carroll B. Flanders, '17, and Albert D. Gilbert, '15—gained a unanimous decision over Maine's affirmative team—Frank C. Ferguson, '18, John H. Magee, '18, and Harry E. Rollins, '16. Here President Aley presided and the judges tax, the substitution to be gradual and completed within ten years.

At Waterville, in the College Chapel, our affirmative team—Harold S. Campbell, '15, Claude A. LaBelle, '17, and A. Raymond Rogers, '17—gained a two to one decision over Maine's negative team—Walter C. Jones, '17, Albert W. Wunderlich, '18, and Carl Magnus, '15. Here Professor Thomas B. Ashcraft presided, and the Honorable John A. Morrill of Auburn, Mr. Roland T. Patten of Skowhewere: Dr. David N. Beach of Bangor, Arthur L. Thayer, Esq., of Bangor, and Principal George H. Larrabee of Bangor.

The question debated, one can see, is nothing if not specific. Now a specific question is usually a technical question, which means that the debaters couldn't assume much knowledge on the part of the audience, and this made the work of interesting and holding the audience all the harder. Likewise the question is one on which the average person hasn't any decided opinion, and so the debaters didn't have any very deep-rooted prejudices to meet. But for all this there was a decided burden of proof. The affirmative found itself in the position of proposing and defending a definite reform, a reform hedged about with qualifications. They had to show not only that some reform in taxation is desirable, but that this particular reform in taxation is desirable; in other words, they had to shoulder a fairly heavy burden of proof.

One might gather as much from a emphatically as third speaker in rebuttal.

Colby's second speaker, Mr. LaBelle, after giving a much needed definition of "ground rent," began to develop in very general terms certain advantages of the land tax, that it would stimulate business by forcing all real estate holders to improve their land, that it could not possibly be shifted to the tenant, and that it would largely check speculation in land. It may be remarked in passing that Mr. LaBelle's second point was the only general statement made in the debate that glance at the question, but in any case Mr. Campbell's opening speech for the affirmative would have made the point evident. After clearing the way for constructive work by explaining that the affirmative did not intend to claim too much, Mr. Campbell dwelt on the central argument for the affirmative, that society has a right to appropriate land values, because such values are created entirely by society. This proposition, abstract as it is, was really the mainstay of their case, and Mr. Campbell chose to repeat it very passed quite unchallenged during the evening. Mr. Rogers, as third speaker, tried to show that a land tax would help to lower rents and would solve the housing problem. His task, perhaps, was the hardest on the affirmative side.

In contrast to Colby's general line of argument, Maine's negative team used quotations and statistics very freely; their arguments were on the whole more detailed and complex. Only Mr. Jones, in opening the discussion for his side, devoted himself to the broader aspects of their case, arguing that authorities on taxation are not demanding this particular reform in the present system and that other things beside land owe their value to the presence of population. But Mr. Wunderlich, with his rapid delivery and abundant supply of material, got an elaborate argument into his twelve minutes and went into detail about home-builders and slums; not only did he argue that taxation has nothing to do with the slum problem but he attempted to show what is the cause of the problem, and how it other points, they submitted that there was no assurance that rents would be lowered under the proposed scheme, that speculation in land is not after all very general, that by certain reforms which they proposed the present system of taxation could be remedied without any radical change in policy. Colby did not have so much material to present, or at any rate did not present so much. If the affirmative had tried to meet point by point all the contentions of the negative they would have had time for nothing else. The might be solved, and so forth. Likewise Mr. Magnus dwelt at length on the effect the land tax would have upon the distribution of manufacturing plants; he tried to show that under the proposed tax industries would naturally migrate to the larger cities, since in such locations their buildings and equipment would go tax-free.

On rebuttal Maine was the more active, at least in the sense of introducing new material, and did some comprehensive though not very vigorous work. Among period of five minutes allowed each man for rebuttal doesn't give a prudent debater opportunity to wander very far afield. What our team did was to work hard on a few points that could be clearly and vigorously stated in the time at their disposal. For example, in answer to Maine's repeated demands that they show the defects in the present system of taxation, Colby simply produced one vigorous and authoritative quotation.

It was in manner of presentation and in delivery that Colby excelled. If a good point in theory is a debater's opportunity, the fact remains that it takes good platform work to grasp that opportunity. No abundance of ideas can make up for failure to "put ideas across" in the rough and tumble of actual discussion. Setting aside any partisan feeling in the audience, it was quite evident that the Colby men were "putting ideas across" more effectively than their opponents. At any rate the judges took not more than five minutes to reach their individual decisions, and the audience went home highly satisfied.

At Orono much the same differences in the methods and tactics of the two teams appeared. Possibly the nature of the question was such that the case for the affirmative didn't lend itself very well to detailed statistical treatment. Both Maine teams used this sort of argument and probably their affirmative used it too freely—even the blackboard and the diagrams they had on hand were not entirely convincing. Mr. Ferguson, the opening speaker on Maine's affirmative team, touched a good many points. His speech included an exposition of what the question to be debated meant; an outline of the case for his side; an attack on the present system in the name of certain requirements of an ideal tax—that the tax should be levied and collected in an easy and efficient way; and a statement of the affirmative's cardinal point, that land values rightly belong to society. Then Mr. Magee, the ablest speaker on his team, began making specific claims for the land tax, how it would force vacant land into use and thus urge on production, and how the tenant would not have to bear the tax burden. He tried to cite definite cases where the tax had been applied successfully and used charts and diagrams to back up his arguments.

On the whole Maine's affirmative seemed inclined to make larger claims for the land tax than did Colby's affirmative. Mr. Rollins, third speaker for Maine, first took up the land tax as a fiscal device, that is, discussed it from the point of view of the official who is simply trying to get revenue for the government in the best possible way. But soon he went back to the general social aspects of the tax, arguing that speculation would be discouraged and housing conditions improved; it is worth noticing that this social side of the question took up almost the entire attention of both sides.

Mr. Fraser, opening Colby's negative, challenged the idea that society produces all land values, urging that at that rate no individual could take credit for producing anything, and then went on to say that a building boom caused by the land tax would be really unhealthy and would divert capital from more productive channels. Mr. Flanders followed with a very clear and effective discussion of the housing problem; his most striking point was that a land tax would bring about a more intensive use of sites in districts already congested and would thus actually aggravate housing conditions. To a certain extent he anticipated Maine's third speaker.

Mr. Gilbert, third speaker for the negative, covered a good deal of ground; his main points were that it was essentially unfair that the land owner should pay and the owner of buildings go scot free, that owners of urban home sites would be hard hit by the land tax, and that the present system, although it has its defects, is correct in principle and needs only sound administration.

On rebuttal Colby concentrated fire, as it were. Thus Mr. Flanders devoted all his time to showing that the proposed reform, though it does fulfil some of the requirements of a good tax, conspicuously violates the principle that a man should be taxed according to his ability to pay. Though Mr. Magee made a good rebuttal speech for Maine, Colby had the advantage that goes with forceful personality and good platform presence. The audience was not only courteous but cordial toward our team, and agreed generally with the unanimous decision of the judges.

The decisive result is what makes the victory so notable. When two teams "split even" in a debate of this sort, that is, when both affirmative teams win or both negative teams win, there is always a lingering suspicion that the merits of the question may have had something to do with the verdict. No such suspicion is possible here—we won pro and con. After all, intercollegiate debate combines in a unique way clear thinking with personal, thoroughly human, competition. It is a good thing to take a sporting interest in ideas now and then; it is a good thing when the same undergraduate body can turn out winning football teams and winning debating teams.

The Bangor News in its write-up of the Colby-Maine debate at Orono, had the following to say of the Colby debaters:

"Paul Fraser was then introduced as the first speaker of the negative side of the question and 'Ginger,' as he is more familiarly known, received a great ovation from the audience. Ginger proved that the football field was not the only place where he could be a hero and gave the audience the impression that he had been accustomed to the stage all his life. His arguments were clear and well stated. . . . The second speaker of the negative side was in a class by himself and his arguments, method of presenting, and delivery all won the unanimous approval of the audience. Mr. Flanders was the most convincing speaker of the evening and was the leading factor in the victory which his team won. . . . Mr. Gilbert, the last speaker on the negative side, had a convincing way of presenting his points which won for him the hearty approval of the audience. . . . Mr. Gilbert was probably the most quick-witted man on either team and many of his remarks brought forth laughter from his audience."

HOWE WINS FOURTH IN 100-YARD DASH AT PENN RELAY CARNIVAL.

Irving Howe, Colby's star sprinter, captured fourth place in the 100-dash at the relay carnival of the University of Pennsylvania, Saturday, at Philadelphia. In this annual meet, there was competition between the best track material in America, eighty colleges being represented. Howe ran his trial heat in 10.1 seconds. In the final sprint, Drew of Southern California, the holder of the world's record in this event, finished first place in 10 seconds. Smith of Michigan came in second, and Knight of Chicago third, Howe making the last position.

Howe was the only athlete from the Maine colleges and he was the only man in the eastern part of the country to take a point in the so-called special events.

RIFLE CLUB FORMED.

Due to a recent announcement in the ECHO regarding the formation of a Rifle Club here at Colby, a meeting was held Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock. Over thirty men were present and much interest was shown in the proposed organization. A committee of three was appointed to draw up a constitution to suit conditions here at Colby.

There will be another meeting next Friday evening at 7.00 o'clock in Shannon Observatory. Officers will be elected at that time. Any member of the student body or faculty is eligible for membership. Every five members will be furnished with a new Krag rifle, and each man with 120 rounds of ammunition. The annual fee will be about fifty cents, and everyone is urged to join, as this will be a live organization. For further information see Kelsey, '15. Don't forget the meeting Friday evening!

Hear Dr. Stair tonight, tomorrow night and Friday night at the Chapel!

Don't forget that you're going to see "The Japanese Girl" at the Opera House tomorrow night at eight o'clock!

Owing to the fact that only meagre details in regard to the Orono end of the dual debate were available last week when the ECHO went to press, no suitable account of the event was possible; but in this issue we are glad to be able to publish an extended write-up of both ends of the double victory.

The ECHO wishes most heartily to endorse the efforts of the college Y. M. C. A. in securing Dr. Stair of Portland for the series of four evening services, the first of which attracted a good sized audience of young men last evening. Dr. Stair is a very pleasing and magnetic speaker, and makes a logical and stirring appeal, especially to college men. While the meetings are to be primarily evangelical, all is to be carried on in a quiet way. They will offer a chance for each man to determine and to declare on which side he is standing. Not a man in college can afford to miss this splendid opportunity to hear one of the most popular preachers of the day.

MURRAY DEBATE FOR 1913-14, MAY 3.

The Murray Prize Debate which was scheduled to take place during the last academic year and was postponed to this will be held on Monday evening, May 3rd, in the First Baptist Church. The question to be debated will be somewhat similar to that debated in the dual debates with the University of Maine, except that it will be broader in scope and will be much nearer in application to the Single Tax proposition. The exact wording of the resolution is as follows:

Resolved, that in cities of 25,000 and over, in the United States, a tax upon land alone should be substituted for the present general property tax, the substitution to be gradual and extending over a period of ten years.

The affirmative team will be composed of Harold S. Campbell, '15, Waldo C. Lincoln, '16, and Vernelle W. Dyer, '15. The negative team will be composed of Arthur B. Riley, '16, Frederick F. Sully, '16, and Carroll B. Flanders, '17.

The officials of this debate have not as yet been appointed.

The prizes, aggregating $100, are the gift of George Edwin Murray, of Lawrence, Mass., of the class of '79.

SIXTY-FIVE CONTESTANTS IN THE LYFORD.

The sixth annual Lyford Interscholastic Prize Speaking Contest will be held on the afternoon and evening of May 14. This year's contest promises to eclipse all previous ones in point of number of schools represented and in the total number of representatives. It will undoubtedly be the largest gathering of young orators ever held in New England, a fact worthy of public notice.

Up to the present date, April 26, forty schools have signified their intention of sending a total of sixty-five representatives. These schools are located in Maine and New Hampshire, and are both public and private institutions.

The following figures will show the number of schools represented in the past six years and the number of representatives registered:

Year	Schools	Contestants
1910	29	44
1911	30	50
1912	26	44
1913	34	49
1914	31	43

In all, seventy-five different schools will have representatives at the various contests, and a total of 295 young orators will have contested for the prizes.

Preparations are already underway for the entertainment of the contestants. They will be invited to be the guests of the College over Saturday, May 15, when the intercollegiate track meet will be held on Alumni field.

Following is a list of the schools to be represented:

Kent's Hill Seminary, Ricker Classical Institute, East Maine Conference Seminary, Maine Central Institute, Freedom Academy, Thornton Academy, Coburn Classical Institute, Foxcroft Academy, Erskine Academy, Colby Academy, Pennell Institute, Somerset Academy, Hebron Academy, Monmouth Academy, Cherryfield Academy, Sanborn Seminary, Geo-Stevens Academy, Tilton Seminary, Westbrook Seminary, Skowhegan High, Edward Little High, Sabattus High, Phillips High, Livermore Falls High, Camden High, Lewiston High, Clinton High, Deering High, No. Haven High, Fort Fairfield High, Mexico High, Buxton High, Dexter High, Waterville High, Bangor High, Bar Harbor High, Winterport High, Good Will High, New Gloucester High, Waterboro High.

The prizes aggregate $100 and are the gift of Hon. Will Hartwell Lyford, class of '79, of Chicago, Illinois.

The above mentioned schools will be represented by the following men:

Clyde C. Badger, Thomas E. Maplebeck, Harold D. Taylor, Smith Dunnack, Charles W. Gustin, Arthur H. Edwards, Bernard C. Marsh, Reynold F. Thompson, Homer Ray, Raymond W. Blaisdell, William M. Damm, Nicholas A. Curran, Carlton Smart, Arlo M. Vance, Benjamin H. Clark, Webster Wentworth, Gordon Gates, Earle Wingate, Serenus Rodick, Edward B. Kirk, Oscar E. Stewart, Forest B. #### BATES AT LEWISTON SATURDAY.

With the State Championship series beginning next Saturday, Colby playing Bates at Lewiston, the baseball team occupies the center of the stage. The recent Massachusetts trip was not so successful as could have been wished, but it served to show the weaknesses of the team.

After the hard drubbing at the hands of Holy Cross, Colby came back and turned the tables upon the luckless Connecticut Aggies to the tune of 12 to 0. The chief feature of the latter game was the fine pitching of Wright. In spite of the intense cold, "Jimmie 2nd" twirled like a veteran, and his gilt-edged work was one of the chief causes for encouragement from the whole trip. Wright allowed but two hits, gave but two passes and fanned seven—some record for such a cold day. Another feature of the game was a terrific home run drive off the bat of "Candy" LaFleur.

Innings	.....	1	2	3	4	5	6

COLBY REPEATS AT EXPENSE OF CONN.
"AGGIES."

On Friday, Colby again took the measure of the Connecticut Aggies, this time by a 15 to 2 score. For the visitors, "Big Bill" Pendergast was in the points, and he twirled a masterly game. His teammates promptly gave him a good lead, and the mighty southpaw did not have to exert himself after the third inning; but even at that he had the Indian sign on the opposing betters.

As was expected, Colby was no match for the fast Williams team, on Saturday. The score would have been much closer, however, except for the damp, cold wind. "Jimmie" James did the twirling and he had all kinds of trouble keeping his arm warm. As a result, he was touched hard and often by the Williams sluggers. The visiting fielders were also affected by the cold, and their frequent and costly misplays did not help matters in the least. Likewise, Colby could do nothing with the opposing pitcher and the final score of 12 to 5 gives a fair idea of the relative playing of the two teams.

Williams	.....	005	510	01x	—12
Colby	.....	102	020	000	— 5

As stated above, next Saturday will see the ringing up of the curtain on the 1915 championship race. The Lewiston college promises to be one of the strongest contenders for the gonfalon, this year, and will no doubt give Colby a hard rub on Saturday. Davidson, Bates' clever port-rider, is pitching great ball, and the red has a well-balanced, hard-hitting team.

Colby will be right in the midst of the melee, however, and Bates will have to show something to win. "Ginger" Fraser is out for the first time, and he is right there with the old "whollop." "Eddie" Cawley also promises to have his differences with the Faculty settled by Saturday. With these two men in the line-up, the Blue and Gray will look twenty-five per cent stronger.

James is slated to occupy the mound, and, if he gets any breaks at all, he will have the Bates batters cutting wide-swaths in the ozone.

SOME PROM!!!

Yes, it was some Prom, even if we did have to cut out nine dances in order to submit to the higher word of the Powers. In spite of this disappointment, everything went off finely and it was one real dance. The attendance was not up to the maximum in size, on account of the postponement of the affair, which made it impossible for some to be present; but as the new Elks' Hall is rather small, it fitted like a glove, although leaving just enough room for all the complex variations of the Fox Trot, Gavotte and even the whirls of ye old fashioned waltz. From eight to nine, a reception was held, with an excellent concert by Pullen's orchestra of nine pieces, including the majority of our college's far-famed harmony distributors. Allen, President of the Junior Class first welcomed the guests and then they were introduced to Miss Barker, President of the Women's division, Mayor Bartlett and Mrs. Bartlett, and Dr. and Mrs. J. William Black. Finally, the round up was called off, and the grand march, led by the two presidents, with a train of the fairest of the fair and their proud attendants, wended its way around the hall, and all received their programs. And the programs? The best ever, without a doubt—blue leather memorandum pads and card cases combined, which will make excellent shopping list for our girls, and note books for the rest of us.

As soon as the first excitement had subsided, the waltz "Beautiful Roses" began, and then, also, began the fun. The order ran off very smoothly, giving all the most ample opportunity to trip the light fantastic to their hearts' content. One of the pleasing effects of the evening, one in which Nature played more than her part, was the moonlight waltzes. Shall we ever forget them? By a clever arrangement of the lights, a subdued and delightful effect was produced, including a large "16" in blue lights over the balcony. Now and then, wierdly enough, the scene was brightened by—flashes of the spot light? No, indeed. Nature helped us out here, and saved us the cost of installing an intermittent system. We were visited by a thunder storm, which, aside from cooling off the air for the dancers, made the moonlight dance, a lightning dance, an innovation long to be remembered. At intermision, a concoction, under the romantic title of "Parfait," was served by Hager. There was also a lunch at the Deke House, and there were several private parties at the Chop House.

AROOSTOOK ALUMNI DINE AT HOULTON.

(From Aroostook Pioneer of April 22).

Twenty-six loyal Colby men gathered at Watson hall, Houlton, Tuesday evening, for the eighth annual meeting and dinner of the Aroostook Colby Club.

At the business meeting which was presided over by Howard Pierce, President of the Club, the following officers were elected: President, Judge John B. Roberts, '04, of Caribou; First Vice President, George A. Gorham, '90; Second Vice President, Ernest W. Loane, '08, of Easton; Secretary, Albert K. Stetson, '07; Treasurer, Walter F. Titcomb, '97.

Stephen W. Hanson, '95, a most loyal "booster" of the college, served as toastmaster and it is needless to say "that there was something doing every minute."

The speakers were Howard Pierce, Esq.,

Judge Philbrook, Hon Herbert W. Trafton, Rev. George Dana Sanders, and President Roberts.

The President was given a most cordial reception when he arose to speak and it was several minutes before Colby's most popular head could begin speaking.

"One great evil in American college life today is student extravagance in the expenditure of money," declared President Roberts. "The less money a boy spends at college, the better. At Colby we are trying to teach men to think for themselves and to think straight, and to emphasize the importance of doing a day's work every day."

DEFICIENCIES.

The following new ruling in regard to deficiencies has been made by the faculty and was read by the President at chapel, Monday morning:

No student with more than three deficiencies shall enter the succeeding class, or be retained in college, after the fourth Wednesday of the academic year.

This rule shall apply to the class of 1918 and succeeding classes. For the classes of 1916 and 1917, instead of "three" read "four."

No student shall be permitted to elect more than six courses, unless his average for the previous semester has been 80 or more.

RESOLUTIONS OF AROOSTOOK ALUMNI.

Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Faulkingham,
West Jonesport, Maine.

Dear Sir:

The annual meeting of the Aroostook Association of Alumni of Colby College which was held at Houlton on Tuesday, April 20, was saddened by the shadow of the great grief that has darkened your life with the passing of your noble boy, Philmore M. Faulkingham, at Waterville, on Monday, the 19th of this month.

A stranger to most of the older sons of Colby, Philmore was our brother; and in sympathy with you in your overwhelming loss the Association, by us, its committee, hereby tenders to you and your estimable wife its fraternal condolence.

May the thought that he died that another might live, after the first pangs of sorrow are spent, in a measure assuage your grief.

How It Used To Be

In the early day of railroading, there was a card in the depot at Waterville which read as follows: "The Locomotive will leave every morning at 10 o'clock, provided the weather is fair."

There used to be just as much uncertainty about ready-made clothing. If all the conditions were right, it fitted fairly well.

Nowadays

The Empire State Express, the Parcel Post and
