COMMONS CLUBS CONVENTION A GRAND SUCCESS.

After three busy days of business and pleasures, the 10th annual convention of the National Federation of Commons Clubs will officially close tonight with an informal theater party. Many matters of great interest and importance to the individual chapters, as well as, the national organization, were settled at the meetings, and the Commons Clubs enter upon a new year with a better organization and increased enthusiasm for pursuing its particular work.

Monday evening, the Colby chapter entertained its guests at the 5th annual initiation banquet of the chapter at the Elmwood. After the splendid "feed," the remainder of the evening was given up to speeches, interspersed with C. C. songs and cheers. Ray C. Young, Colby, '15, was toastmaster, and was ably assisted by Roscoe E. Johnson, Colby, '14, as choragus. The address of welcome was given by Verne H. Sanderson, '16, and responses were made by Saxon D. Clark, Massachusetts, '16, and Edward M. Cook, Colby, '19. Real Commons Club spirit of democracy, service and manhood characterized the festivities and the words of the speakers. Of especial interest and importance to those present were the "Marconigrams," greetings and reports of progress and the place in college life of the Commons Club under the various conditions in the different colleges and universities. The features of the evening were speeches by Dr. George B. Obear on "The Academic Nugget," and H. R. Willoughby, Wesleyan, '15, National extension secretary, on "The Modern Beanstalk."

At nine o'clock, Tuesday morning, the convention was called to order by President Clark. Twenty-one delegates responded to the roll-call:

Wesleyan, Otho C. Williams, C. Robert Henry; Union, L. R. Van Wert; Tufts, L. N. Towne, R. B. Ela, George B. Loyde; Syracuse, J. Herbert Bliss; Massachusetts "Aggie," Saxon D. Clark, Walter F. Rutter. Leslie C. Bonn; Colby, Roscoe E. Johnson, Ralph W. King, John F. Everett; Hobart, Seth Wakeman, Frederick J. Moffitt; Connecticut "Aggie," E. L. Newmarker; N. H. State, C. C. Waldron, C. W. Archibald; Alleghany, Clarence A. Nash. Committees were then appointed to discuss and make reports upon the various matters of business of the convention, after which the regular routine of the meeting was carried through. A charter for a new chapter at the University of Vermont was granted.

Tuesday evening, an informal "smoker" was held at the chapter house in honor of the delegates. Following an interesting program, refreshments of punch and fancy cookies were served. A general good time was enjoyed by all until a late hour.

Wednesday morning, the unfinished business of the preceding day was transacted. The officers of the National Federation for the coming year were then elected and installed, as follows:

Honorary president, H. R. Willoughby, Wesleyan; president, Seth Wakeman, Hobart; vice-president, R. C. Graham, New Hampshire State; recording secretary, R. L. Weide, Alleghany; extension secretary C. G. Gebauer, Wesleyan; treasurer, Forrest D. Van Avery, Union college; editor-in-chief of the Chronicle, H. C. Van Derbeck, Syracuse.

In the afternoon, the delegates were shown about the campus and were then taken on a sight-seeing tour of the city. Much pleasure and enthusiasm was expressed by the visitors in regard to Colby and her surroundings. Especially were they impressed by the excellent living conditions of the men in their comfortable dormitories.

The delegates and members of the Colby chapter were tendered a reception, this afternoon, from four to six, by the members of the faculty and their wives at the residence of President Roberts. The splendid spirit of interest and co-operation thus shown was much appreciated both by the delegates and by the members of the Colby chapter.

From the standpoint of the local organization, the convention was entirely successful in every way. Much credit is due the general committee in charge, consisting of Waldo C. Lincoln, '16, Henry A. Eaton, '16, Carleton M. Bailey, '18, and Harold W. Goodrich, '18, as well as the various sub-committees.

Coach Harvey Cohn has arranged a series of track events for the next two weeks, to uncover good material among the new men. The meets will be held between the fraternities and the non-fraternity organization, but, unlike last year, all events will be from scratch. To the organization scoring the most points for the series, Coach Cohn will present a silver cup; and five medals are to be awarded to the men capturing the highest individual scores. Track "C" men are barred from receiving any of these medals.

The schedule:

Feb. 23.—Shotput, discus throw, 40-yard dash.

Feb. 26.—Broad jump, high jump, 520-yard run.

Feb. 29.—Pole vault, 40-yard high hurdles, 880-yard run.

Mar. 2.—Hammer throw, 220-yard low hurdles, one-mile run.

Mar. 6.—Two-mile run, 390-yard relay race.

The Lake Mohonk Conference on International Arbitration offers a prize of one hundred dollars for the best essay on "International Arbitration," by an undergraduate man student of any college or university in the United States or Canada. The donor of the prize is Chester Dewitt Pugsley of New York City. The contest closes March 15, 1916.

COLONEL F. S. HESSELTINE, '63.

Colonel Francis S. Hesseltime, '63, a retired Boston lawyer, veteran officer of the Civil War and Massachusetts commander of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, died, Thursday night, at his home in Newtonville, Mass., where he removed about two months ago from Melrose, which long was his home. His illness was brief. The life of this loyal son of Colby is related in the following clipping from the Boston Transcript:

Colonel Hesseltime was born in Bangor, Me., eighty-three years ago. At the age of fourteen years he was left alone to fight his own way and started as clerk in a shoe store in Maine and later in Boston. His love for Maine returned, and he soon left Boston and went to Maine once more. In the late fifties he listened to James T. Fields, in one of his lectures, which stirred young Hesseltime to literary and educational efforts; whereupon he went to Fairfax, Vt., and attended school in the old academy there. At the end of his school year, not having money to travel by cars, he walked all the way home, one hundred and fifty miles. Finally, he entered Waterville, now Colby, College and taught school winters to help out his finances. He pursued his course and was graduated with high honors, being a member of the Phi Beta Kappa Society.

When the Civil War began, young Hesseltime was the first man to enlist from Waterville, and he was followed by a large body of students, who formed nearly the whole of Company G in the Third Maine Regiment, of which company Hesseltime was made captain. The regiment, under the command of Colonel Oliver O. Howard, was ordered to Washington, and soon after was engaged in the Battle of Bull Run. When the Thirteenth Maine was organized, Hesseltime was sent to Maine to recruit for that regiment and was finally made its lieutenant-colonel. He performed unusual service and, more than thirty years after this, the war records at Washington were looked over and it was clearly decided that he was entitled to a medal of honor and the same was issued to him. He was mentioned for gallant conduct by General Howard in his report of the Battle of Bull Run.

He was discharged at the end of his term in 1864, and immediately took up the study of law as a student in the office of Edward Fox, afterwards judge of the State and United States courts. He was admitted to the bar in Portland, Me. For five years he made his home in Savannah and later was appointed register in bankruptcy, but finally removed to Boston, where he long carried on his profession as lawyer, making his home in Melrose.

Colonel Hesseltime had delivered many Memorial Day addresses and numerous lectures on various subjects before societies and clubs, had been a contributor to the Outing and Black Cat magazines; and, besides these accomplishments, he was an able artist, as his products on the canvas indicate. In addition to all this, he was a poet, canoeist and bicyclist. He believed in physical education to the letter. Colonel Hesseltime was for many years corporation counsel for the city of Melrose.

He had made several tours on his bicycle though Europe, including parts of England, France, Belgium, Norway and Italy. He always took with him a camera, from which he produced some beautiful views. His description of these trips was most entertaining.

Before he was discharged from the army, the colonel married a Waterville girl, the daughter of Stephen Stark. His first wife having died, he again married in 1900 Mrs. Caroline Thomes of Boston. He had, by his first wife, three children, two daughters and a son, Norman F. Hesseltime, who is now a lawyer in Boston.

Y. M. C. A. DELEGATES WELCOMED.

The delegates to the first annual secondary school Y. M. C. A. conference were entertained at the college, Saturday afternoon. At an enthusiastic meeting in the chapel, the visitors were welcomed by Dr. Ashcraft and Norman W. Lindsay of the Colby Y. M. C. A. The delegates were then escorted about the campus. When the points of interest had been visited, the forces were re-united at the gymnasium, where a fast game of basketball between the A. T. O.'s and the Comets was staged. Corn-balls and apples were in abundance and a general good time was enjoyed by all. Later in the afternoon, the delegates returned to Fairfield, but not until they had felt the touch of Colby hospitality.

FRAT DANCING PARTIES.

Zeta Psi and Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternities held informal dancing parties at their respective chapter houses, Monday night. The chaperons for Zeta Psi were Mrs. E. W. Heath and Mrs. Edward Welch; and for D. K. E., Dean Mary C. Cooper and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Price. The guests were as follows:

Zeta Psi—Misses French, Miller, Pratt, Brown, Cross, Moulton, Snodgrass, F. Eaton, Cook, Merrill, H. Eaton, Campbell, Hoffman, Gregory, Heath, Kelleher, Shackford, Schaubel, Kimball, Blackwell, and Cook.

The tendency to "crib" in examinations, which seems to exist in practically all the universities and colleges of the United States, forms a problem which the professors have as yet failed to solve. With regret, we notice the continual increase in the numbers of these students who prefer unfair to fair methods in the class-room. The president and professors of Lafayette College at Easton, Pa., suggest the honor system as a means of eliminating cheating in quizzes and exams. We fear that the desired end would not be accomplished even after such a system was adopted, because a student is on his honor, in a certain sense, under the present conditions, when so many evils prevail.

Colby is not unlike other institutions in respect to "cribbing." The situation here is equally grave, and some sort of remedy is demanded. It seems to us that the change in system should be effected by the students. Let every man ask himself, "Am I going according to college ideals?" The answer will be decided by that fellow's past and present habits, influenced by his idea of right and wrong. It is no more than fair to the good name of old Colby and to our beloved president that every student pledge himself to stand for those high standards of moral character which are absolutely necessary to the success of his alma mater. The interpretation of these standards is a simple matter, but the observance of them is especially important and meritorious.

The following extract from an editorial in the Lafayette Weekly on "cribbing" systems may interest Colby students:

The present method of conducting examinations is a complete failure. It has become a game between the students and the professor, and in some cases the professor is so badly beaten that the game is ludicrous. In one course about eighty per cent. of the men bring "cribs" into the room, and back seats are at such a premium that half the class goes without breakfast to get there early. One morning when the professor decided at the last minute to conduct his test in one of the rooms of another building, the men who had come to the wrong room and discovered their mistake raced at full speed down the stairs and across the campus to the other hall, almost fighting in their eagerness to secure 'a good seat.'

"Not satisfied with the advantage offered by superior numbers, undergraduates frequently develop team-work. One man occupies the professor's attention with some unimportant question while the others copy from one another's papers. A student who refuses to help another is regarded with contempt on the campus. So strong, in fact, is the feeling of comradeship among the undergraduates that one man who had stolen the questions from a classroom on the night before a test is known to have made mimeographed copies of the answers in order that his class-mates might also be well prepared to pass the examination.

"These extreme cases are sometimes amusing. But when we reflect that at a very conservative estimate fully fifty per cent. of the men who are graduating from this college have cheated occasionally, if not regularly, during their course, the case assumes a serious aspect. It means that half the men are not fully earning their degrees, and are injuring not only themselves, but also their honest classmates. Every man who graduates from Lafayette without having earned his diploma lowers the standard of scholarship of the college. When one half the men cheat, and the other half make no effort to stop it, Lafayette is not developing men of very high moral character."

MUSICAL CLUBS AT FAIRFIELD.

Last Thursday evening, the musical clubs presented their concert at the Fairfield Opera House. All the numbers were well received, especially the quartette and the solos by Lattin, '18. Hearty encores were given to every feature of the program. A fair sized crowd, including several college people from each division enjoyed the dance that followed.

SENIOR CLASS DAY OFFICERS.

At a meeting of the senior class, this afternoon, the class day officers for Commencement were elected as follows:

Orator—Norman W. Lindsay.
 Chaplain—Herbert M. Rockwell.
 Deliverer of Parting Address—Francis L. Irvin.
 Prophet—Byron M. Smith.
 Historian—Donald Putnam.
 Marshal—Wilhelm K. Schuster.

COLBY COMETS.

As fast and spectacular as any heavenly bodies, the Colby Comets, a speedy quintet of basketball stars, are making a remarkable record, this winter, in their series of games with various schools and Y. M. C. A.'s in the State. The team is captained by Smith Dunnack, '19, and managed by "Pat" Hughes, '19. A contest with the Waterville A. A. team has been arranged for Friday night, and one with the Augusta A. A. aggregation for Thursday night of next week.

The team is usually composed of the following men: Smith Dunnack and Peter Mayers, forwards; Frederick A. Gibson, center; Amos E. Shirley and Thomas D. Taylor, backs.

DR. TAYLOR SPEAKS.

Dr. J. D. Taylor delivered an address to the College Men's Class of the Congregational Church on the subject, "Speculations of a Layman," Sunday. He said in part:

True goodness, both the good man and the bad man alike will admit, must be free from the taint of self.

Will those who insist that no possible act of a human can be entirely free from the taint of self, tell us where that taint is here. For we hear it argued that there is no such thing as unselfish action, that to assert it is to assert an impossibility. If one chooses to be kind it is because that gives him more pleasure than to be cruel. If he chooses to be honest, it is for the same reason. In all cases it is his own gratification that is the determining motive. In answer to this we say that it is both true and false. It is true in the same way that it is true that there is no such thing as real freedom of the will. In reason we can not prove that the will is free, yet we know that it is. In reason there seems to be no purely unselfish act, but we know better. The truth is that in the presence of the predominating, overmastering unselfish motive prompting the action the selfish motive which, it is contended, underlies every act, is buried, lost to sight, annihilated, extinguished. Logically the selfish motive is there; morally it does not exist. Drops of rain no doubt do swell the volume of a river, but they do not create the onward rush of the current. The good Samaritan found a satisfaction in relieving pain no doubt, but that was not what made him do it. Now we must believe that the purpose for which man was placed here on earth is the perfection of his moral and spiritual nature, and that perfection will be gained when he attains complete loyalty to the voice within him, prompt, spontaneous, glad loyalty to that inward monitor.

No doubt this world might have been so arranged that it would have been filled with a company of perfectly well behaved men and women as gracious as those who fill our drawing rooms. Had it been arranged that the penalty for violating any moral law should be as swift, sure and sharp as that which follows the violations of a physical law, it would have been perfectly easy. Suppose the penalty were as swift, sudden and signal when one touches evil as when one touches fire; suppose it were a law as certain as the law of gravity that a falsehood should be instantly followed by a palsied tongue, a theft by a withered hand, a fraud by the pangs of angina pectoris; there would be no defiance or disregard of moral law with that sort of sanction behind it. Our courts of criminal law might be shut up for good. This would have been a world of saints and gentlemen—of saints like Stevenson's Mr. Hyde and of gentlemen like Lord Chesterfield. But the world of men is not thus ordered.

The most convincing proof that there is a divine ruler who orders the affairs of this world, is the care that is taken that man's choice between good and evil shall not be coerced or vitiated by the element of self interest.

It may be a question whether there would still have been philosophers or saints, but there would have been no fools. Freedom of the will would seem as essential for the one if not for the other. For that end man must have liberty both to act and to believe as he pleases. He may disbelieve in the existence of his Maker if he will. He may deny the reality of the future life, if he will. He may flout religion, if he will. He may blaspheme, he may scoff at things sacred, he may scorn virtue as a pretense and righteousness as a cloak. His sacred right to be a fool shall not be denied him. It cannot be denied him without denying him also the right to be wise.

And last of all comes the question why is it of such vast moment that man should be wise? Why all this infinite pains to develop his spirit and train his will? The conditions of this material earth, his environment, his relations to his fellows, the knowledge denied him as well as the knowledge permitted him,—the whole machinery of the universe, turned upon that one end! And is that end attained or defeated in the case of this man or that man when his earthly life is over? Is it possible that death is the end of it? If so, what was it all for?

It was left to the juniors to show the more gentle qualities, and we saw all his sweethearts, even the heiress whom he married.
