DISTRICT CONVENTION OF DELTA UPSILON.

On Friday and Saturday of this week the northeast district of Delta Upsilon, comprising New England and Canada, will convene with the local chapter. The delegates will arrive, Friday morning, and will be entertained at the Elmwood during their stay.

Friday afternoon will be given over to the first business meeting and will be presided over by C. R. Joly, '16, president of the northeast district. Election of officers and other matters will take place at this time. The delegates from the Colby chapter are to be: F. F. Sully, '16, and "Bill" Erbb, '17. On Friday evening a formal theater party will be enjoyed. The dancing members of the Colby chapter will entertain the delegates and alumni at the new Elks Hall, from ten-thirty until one o'clock on the same night.

Saturday morning, the convention business will be concluded. Directly following, the convention picture will be taken in front of the local chapter house. In the afternoon, the Bowdoin chapter will arrive and participate in the "smoker" to be held in the chapter house. From five to six, this gathering of delegates and members of the fraternity will be entertained at the home of President Roberts, by the faculty of the college and their wives.

The evening will be given over to the joint occasion of the formal convention banquet and that of the annual banquet with Bowdoin at the Elmwood. Among the speakers are to be Holman F. Day, '87, playwright and author, and Judge Harrie L. Webber of Auburn, who will speak for the Bowdoin Alumni.

The committee in charge of the convention consists of the following men: Joly, Staples, Thayer, Sully, Allen, Craig, O'Brien, Erbb, Webb, Upton, Scribner and Sprague.

SOPHOMORE DECLAMATION.

Seven members of the men's division and four of the women's division, these having obtained honor rank in rhetoric 1 and 2, have been chosen to participate in the annual sophomore declamation contest:

Men's Division.—H. G. Boardman, I. M. Derby, N. D. Lattin, H. L. Newman, H. L. Robinson, G. H. D. Scott, R. W. Smith.

Women's Division.—Helene B. Buker, Jennie O. Sanborn, Laura M. Spaulding, Lydia L. Turner.

M. I. C. A. A. ASSOCIATION ADOPTS NEW RULES.

At a meeting of the Maine Intercollegiate A. A. at the Elmwood Hotel, Saturday afternoon, the following officers were elected: President, C. R. Stone, Bates; vice-president, A. C. Little, Colby; secretary, W. B. Haskell, U. of M.; treasurer, L. H. Marston, Bowdoin. This was the second of a series of three meetings, the first of which was held December 18th. The last meeting will be held in Lewiston in March.

The out-going officers were chosen as officials for the track meet, May 13: Grand marshal, ex-secretary Chase, Bowdoin; chief scorer, ex-treasurer Willard, Colby; assistant scorer, ex-vice-president Merrill, Bates; announcer, ex-president Philbrook, U. of M.

The following amendment was accepted: "Each college shall hold the annual track and field meet in rotation, (as stated in article 13, sec. 4), provided the college whose turn it is to hold said meeting has a suitable track. Decision on this point is to be made by the executive committee each year."

The cross-country races were placed under the I. C. A. A. by the following amendment:

"Each competing member of the association shall have scored against it the total of points tallied by the first five contestants competing for such member, and every contestant shall be scored in the place he finishes."

COMING EVENTS.

SCHOLARSHIP HONOR ROLL.

Twenty-two of the 257 members of the men's division were named in the scholarship honor roll for the first semester, which was issued, Thursday, by Registrar H. C. Libby. The distinction of receiving rank A in six courses was won by Fred A. Pottle, '17, and Hugh L. Robinson, '18.

It is interesting to note that, of the twenty-two honor men, fifteen are members of fraternities and two others are pledged to one of the societies.

The list of men receiving academic distinction, with the number of hours in which they obtained rank A, follows:

1916.—F. C. English (12), R. C. Joudry (15), V. H. Sanderson (12), S. D. Staples (12).

1917.—D. B. Flood (12), M. L. Ilsley (12), F. A. Pottle (18), C. A. Rollins (15), L. E. Young (12).

1918.—M. A. Bigelow (12), C. B. Price (15), H. L. Robinson (18).

1919.—M. L. Beverage (12), F. D. Blanchard (14), J. E. Choate (10), R. H. Drew (11), W. D. Gallier (14), A. W. Maddocks (11), P. Miller (14), H. A. Smith (11), J. L. Wilson (14), S. P. Wyman (14).

Y. M. C. A. SCHEDULE.

The following schedule of topics and leaders for the Y. M. C. A. meetings for the coming semester has been prepared:

THE CRABBER.

In every walk of life we find that parasite of humanity—the Crabber. The College Crabber interests us the most, although the characteristics of the whole genus are the same.

One of the favorite themes of the Crabber is the lack of college spirit on the campus. He can show you a dozen ways in which everything has gone to the dogs—but the Crabber himself has never been actively in the service of his Alma Mater. His collegiate activities consist of the consumption of cigarettes. He complains of the small attendance at mass meetings, though his absence at such affairs would be conspicuous if he were only more important. The Crabber never practices what he preaches.

If the team is defeated, the Crabber is right on the job with his hammer. A winning team also receives attention from Crab—how much more it could have done!

The college paper is always a source of amusement to the Crabber. There isn't any news in it; the editorials are a farce. "Now, if the editors would pursue such and such a policy, the publication might be tolerable."

You rub shoulders with him in the dining hall. The steak is always tough, the potatoes soggy—yet his companions wonder why he loudly calls for "seconds."

So it goes. Knock, knock, knock! The Crab's only pleasure is in being discontented, and he can tell you how to improve even that. He isn't an agreeable companion—but he's here and must be endured. Kick him when you get a chance, because he'll get one in whether you do or not.—Selected.

Y. M. C. A. ELECTS OFFICERS.

The Y. M. C. A., Tuesday evening, elected the following officers:

President, Cecil A. Rollins, '17; vice-president, Harry H. Upton, '17; secretary, Harold E. Hall, '17; treasurer, Paul A. Thompson, '18.

The University of Maine freshmen and sophomores had quite a scrap, recently, over the attempt of the second year men to keep the freshies away from their annual banquet.

The Bowdoin faculty has unanimously adopted a set of resolutions favoring military training at that college.

The Bates Student, the college weekly, has begun to publish a monthly supplement, in the form of a magazine section.

STUDENT HONOR DISCUSSED BY DR. PARMENTER.

Speaking before the Congregational and Baptist college men's Bible classes, Sunday, on the timely subject, "Student Honor," Dr. Parmenter, head of the chemistry department, said in part: "Honor is a nice sense of what is right, just, and true, with a corresponding course of life.

"It is highly important that we understand the changed conditions when a student passes from high school to college. The freshman finds in college for the first time in his educational career freedom in dormitory life, no required study hours, and an excellent opportunity to do anything he pleases with that bit of the world where his college is located. It speaks well for home training and inherited tendencies that so few freshmen act dishonorably.

"In all this discussion of student honor I am less concerned with that student who goes wrong than I am with his host of friends and the lack of honor which they have shown. Did not each one of them have it within his power to have helped in guiding that student and perhaps in saving him from his disgrace? This is the point at which many a student fails.

"If we have honor what need is there for any system? The weakness of the honor system is in attempting to substitute system for honor. 'Cribbing' in examinations is due to the lack of responsibility of the individual towards himself and his fellows.

"It is very seldom, in my opinion, that the college student, be he freshman or senior, acts dishonorably in athletics. The student's sense of honor in practice and in games seems more highly developed than in the preparation of lessons or in the taking of examinations. Perhaps this is due to the fact that from childhood to college days the student has had more experience and interest in play. His code of sportsmanship is highly developed. It has frequently been remarked upon that the athlete will deal more honorably with the coach than with members of the faculty of his college.

"With education comes a more complete understanding, and with it a higher sense of honor. The student in our colleges is increasing slowly but steadily. The process may be slow, but nevertheless exists. The colleges of 25 or 50 years ago were very much different institutions from those of today, not only in material things but in college life and in the unusual nice sense of student honor. Our individual student in his studies, athletics, and various other college activities is realizing more and more that success and the development of that nice sense of honor comes not so much through competition with his fellows as through competition with himself, through competition with the best that is in him both in ideals and actions."

CAMPUS CHAT.

The regular monthly meeting of the Physical Society was held in Shannon Observatory, Friday evening. Dr. Obear gave an interesting and instructive talk, with lantern slides and photographs, on the subject, "The Photography of Sound Waves." A good number were present.

Many Colby students attended the Free Baptist Church, Sunday evening, to hear the lecture, "Why I Am Not a Hindu," by Theodore Fieldbrave, '16. The speaker's interesting personality, excellent humor, and impressive delivery made his address very effective. Lantern slides of India were displayed. Miss Celeste Phelps, who was dressed as an Indian girl, added to the oriental character of the occasion.

W. F. O'Brien, '16, is recovering from the effects of a broken arm, an injury which he sustained, several weeks ago.

Jacobs, ex-'17, spent Saturday and Sunday at the D. U. House.

Frank J. Howard, '18, has been confined to the house by a severe cold.

Alan R. Fraser, '18, has a touch of the grippe.

Welcome! Visitors to Delta Upsilon Convention!

Wallace G. Hastings, '18, read the Scripture at the First Baptist Church, Sunday night.

Eat at the Chop House.—Adv.

The student body joins in sympathy with Professor and Mrs. Trefethen in their recent bereavements. Professor Trefethen's mother passed away, last week, and the death of Mrs. Trefethen's mother occurred, this week, in this city. The funeral services for the latter were held, this afternoon, Professor Brown officiating.

The returning of Holman F. Day, '87, playwright and novelist, to the college, this week, is looked forward to with great interest.

The A. T. O. fraternity gave a surprise party and smoker, Monday night, in honor of Arthur B. Riley, '16, the occasion being Mr. Riley's 21st birthday.

A short meeting of the Athletic Council was held, Monday night, but no selection of a football coach was announced. Friday night, a special meeting of the council will be held.

Vote for Foster Eaton, '17, the Republican candidate for councilman of ward six.—Political Adv.

Edward Williams of Corning, N. Y., visited friends at the Deke House, Monday night.

The members of the D. K. E. fraternity are indebted to Mrs. A. M. Drummond for a heavy brass calendar. Mrs. Drummond is the Waterville representative of the Home Insurance Company of New York City.

Winthrop L. Webb, '17, has been appointed to the news staff of THE ECHO.

The action of the Maine Inter-collegiate Athletic Association, Saturday, with regard to the rule providing for the place where the annual track meet shall be held, means that Colby will not be the scene of another meet until our track facilities shall have been improved. The adoption of the new rule, which includes the element of track investigation by the executive board of the association, is the culmination of a series of protests by our sister colleges. Alumni Field has no 220-yard straight-away, such as the fields of the other three Maine institutions have, and it looks as if something must be done in order to get Colby back in line. It is practically a certainty that, if we do not in some way improve the condition of our track within the next three years, Colby will not be permitted to entertain the state meet in 1910.

The Minnesota Daily, the student newspaper of the University of Minnesota, has asked the women students of the institution the question, "How much salary must a man receive before you would consent to marry him?" and has received replies which give amounts ranging from eight hundred to ten thousand dollars a year as requisite to a matrimonial union. We wish to congratulate the fair co-eds of the western university on the extreme conservatism which they manifest in their demands upon the eligibility of would-be benedicts. This question has never before been submitted, so far as we know, to such competent judges; and we confess that their reasonable requirement of a salary, on the average, of not over sixteen-hundred dollars a year as a requisite for the hand of a sweet college senior, just emerging from the graduation hall, is very gratifying and encouraging.

One girl, who apparently disregards the money question in her high estimation of romance, replied: "What is money to me? give me a true, loving husband and a cottage." Since the day upon which the answers were received, this adventurous damsel, we may believe, has been the idol of her classmates; for who does not bow before such marital courage?

The readers of the ECHO must not suppose, however, that we are espousing the course of the famous Mildred Champagne heart-balmers; for such a change of policy on our part might lead us into difficulty. We take this digression from the paths of conventionality merely to warn Colby men that they must not accept the decisions of the Minnesota girls as unqualifiedly applicable to the women of this college, which, contrary to the conditions in the middle West, is located in a cold, bleak country, where great quantities of coal and wood are absolutely necessary in order to keep the domestic hearth warm. If that romantic young lady, for instance, were up here where she could rub shoulders with Jack Frost six months in the year, she would, we feel sure, amend her answer by adding a monetary requirement for fuel to her other admirable requisites for an acceptable "hubby."

What do you say, fellows? Can you make enough during your first year out of college to meet the coal and wood dealer with a feeling of dignity, as you pass that individual on the street? If you can, you might do well to communicate with the co-educational department of the University of Minnesota, at once.

The refusal of the executive committee of the Yale Athletic Association to reinstate the five athletes disqualified for receiving board while playing summer baseball, is causing a sensation among the students of the New Haven college.

Cornell University took a straw vote on woman suffrage, just before New York state voted on the question last fall. The vote of the undergraduates was 512 for, to 297 against; and the faculty vote was 72 for, and only 18 against. Only 809 undergraduates out of the great student body voted at all.

COLBY OUTING CLUB?

Editor of Colby Echo:

I am writing you again in regard to the Outing Club idea and enclosing you a copy from last week's Herald commenting upon the active work that the Dartmouth Club is now doing.

Only a few years ago Dartmouth was the only college with an Outing Club. The idea, however, has rapidly spread and there are several college Outing Clubs, and at the Dartmouth Carnival last week seven college outing clubs were represented. The idea is certainly gaining ground very rapidly among the northern colleges and soon it will probably mean there will be contests in the winter sports among these college outing clubs and if Colby can establish a club she can not only have the fine physical exercise that is open to the men of the college generally, but also the pleasure of competition with other colleges in these outdoor sports. I am interested in this movement as I believe it is a good thing for Colby and for Colby men generally, as it is open to every man, and not confined to the athletic young men, but any one who enjoys the country and fresh air or desires to physically better himself, can have that opportunity and also combine with it the good fellowship that goes with outdoor life.

Yours very truly,

FRANK W. ALDEN,

Secretary, Colby Alumni Association.

Dartmouth's Victory.

Those returning from the winter carnival at Hanover—alumni, parents, sweethearts, prospective students and all—agree in their unqualified enthusiasm regarding the success of that unique affair. From its small beginnings of a few years ago it has become one of the big institutions of the inter-collegiate world, in both a social and an athletic way. It was typical of the Dartmouth spirit that it found a way to change from pity to envy the feelings of those who have looked on Hanover as a clearing in the north woods in shivering proximity to the Arctic circle. The rigors of winter in northern New England have given live Dartmouth men just the opportunity they wanted to show how easy it is to surmount insurmountable obstacles when you start climbing in the right way.

The indoor hockey matches, the glee club concerts, the proms, the ping pong tournaments, the pink teas and other indoor sports, with which most colleges while away the dreary weeks between football and baseball are all well enough in their way, but how little they weigh in the scale of youth against the winter games and the general festival program of the glorious out of doors in northern New Hampshire. It may be that our age is overdoing college sports and social functions, but far better curtail the fall and spring program than lose anything of the kind that Hanover has been reveling in of late. But, unhappily, few of our other colleges can venture such a carnival. It will remain Dartmouth's own. For that, thanks to nature, and to the needs of the Indians a century and a half ago. But for the way the supposed disability of isolation and a real winter environment has been turned into an asset and a triumph, thanks to the invincible Dartmouth spirit.—Boston Herald.

"SOMEWHERE IN BELGIUM."

Murray A. Morgan, ex-'15, "somewhere in Belgium," in a trench only 400 yards from the German lines, writes, by the dim light of a candle, vivid stories of the life of a soldier in the thickest of the fighting, in a recent letter to "Cap" Pepper. Two weeks elapsed from the time the letter was begun until its completion, January 27. The letter in part follows:

"I will now start you a letter which may not be finished for some days as I am a very busy soldier just now. First the scene; a valley just below our trenches, which are on the crest of a ridge and which have cost many a life to take. This valley is 'dead ground' which you from your military knowledge will understand. Just beyond the ridge, about 400 yards, are the Germans and they furnish the illumination by their numerous flares. Immediately behind us are several batteries of artillery and they sure are 'there.' I understand some of them are howitzers of large calibre and are called 'Lazy Lize' from the noise their shells make traveling through the air. It is a sort of lazy sound and must be heard to be understood. Next, imagine a great hole in the ground, in the side of a hill, reinforced by numerous sand bags, filled with Belgian farm. The hole is inhabited by numerous rats, more numerous lice, and a couple of dozen men grouped around a few brazers filled with burning coke. Here you have a dim picture of my habitation tonight.

"Later: I am not going to write this according to the rule book for the candle is low and I have only a few moments to spare. Our guns are playing merry hell with the Dutchmen tonight. We always give them good measure, 25 for 1, quite different from a year ago, when the ratio was reversed. I had a very strange experience today and will try and tell you about it. Way back last June I wandered into the 'Soldiers' Club' in Montreal to do some reading and writing and there got into conversation with a soldier from a Scottish regiment. I soon learned that the 'Scotchman' was a Yankee from Concord, N. H. Of course we got to be quite friends and would often go to a theater together. He left with his regiment for England before I did, but I took his name, regimental number, company, etc., and we agreed to look each other up in the old country. I did not see my friend again until one Sunday while walking along the seafront in Dover, England. I ran right into him. We were glad to see each other and dined together in the historic town. Well, I came out to France first and bid him good bye in Folkestone the night before leaving, but we agreed to look each other up if we ever got the chance. Since then his regiment has come out and I have learned that our regiments are near together. Today I was sent with a party to bury a couple of boys in the grave yard near by.

"I was looking over the names and noting the different regiments represented there. I was somewhat surprised to learn that my friend's regiment was represented but received the surprise of my life when I read my friend's name on one of the rude crosses. I consulted my note book to make sure, and it was sure enough the name, regimental number, company, regiment, and all,—of my Yankee friend. A strange meeting this, in Belgium, in a grave yard, of two boys from old New England, after many pleasant times spent together. I can't seem to forget this experience.

"Still later: I had a close call today. A shell dropped about 25 feet from me and tore up like hell and never touched me. I don't mind the rifle fire but when an iron foundry is hurled at you it gets on one's nerves a bit.

"It was pretty cold last night. I was on guard just before daybreak. Gazing over the parapet trying to get a look at Fritz at that time in the morning is enough excitement for most anyone. It's fine though when you've stood for a couple hours in the mud looking for Fritz and smelling for gas, your feet so cold that you have no feeling in them, and your eyes so heavy that you can hardly keep them open, when suddenly an odor comes up the trench that arouses your senses. Is it gas? You wait a few moments, when suddenly the smiling face of the sergeant with the rum-jar under his arm comes into view. A few words of cheer and a swallow of the 'juice' certainly gives one a new lease of life, for in a short time, feeling comes even in your toes and your appetite is imminent. A new sentry takes your place; you cook and eat enough for a dozen and retire to your dugout and hit the 'flea nest' for a few hours sleep from which neither the boom of the artillery or a 'direct hit' can wake you. This is one of the joys of a soldier's life and must be experienced to be appreciated.

"Well, Capt., will have to make a hasty close. The candle is going out.

"With best regards,

MURRAY A. MORGAN,

The rules do not prescribe whether the co-ed athlete who spoons must name her partner.

They say there's microbes in a kiss,

The rumor is most rife,

Come, lady, dear, and make of me

An invalid for life.
