MATTERS FORENSIC

Because of the bad weather, the Colby nine was able to play only one game on the Massachusetts trip, defeating the Amherst Aggies 9 to 8. Five runs were gained in the sixth. The opponent's first pitcher, Lent, was batted out of the box, and was replaced by Crafts.

Bucknam and Taylor batted well for Colby and Lent for Amherst. All three were recorded with at least three hits for their work with the bat. M. A. C. got the jump on Colby by knocking in a couple of counters in the fourth inning, but tried in vain to make enough runs to outdo the bitter sixth. The score:

GIFT OF BOOKS TO COLLEGE

Students at work in the library several days ago were amazed to see the librarian, Professor Chipman, carry into the reading room armful after armful of books, identical in binding, and set them on one of the tables. Curiosity got the better of the writer, and when the professor had finished carrying and arranging the books, he found that they totaled 141.

These very valuable books are the gift of J. Ackerman Coles, in memory of his father, Dr. Abraham Coles. They are known as the Delphin Classics, and the title on the binding is "Auctores Classici Latini." The text was edited in 1670, under Bishop Huet of France, for the use of the French dauphin. This edition was published in England between 1819 and 1830. They are bound in half library calf, with fancy green edges.

This large acquisition of books ought to prove of especial interest and profit to Latin students.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR SENIORS

From time to time there have been papers tacked on the bulletin boards in Chemical Hall and the Library dealing with openings for Seniors, not only in business but along the lines of further education. The Standard Oil Company of New York offers foreign service in the Far East and the Levant. These positions may be obtained by interview and examinations. Men between the ages of 21 and 28 are desired. Boston University offers scholarships for three-year courses in the law school. A senior from Colby College may get one of these on special recommendation from the faculty. The American Scandinavian Foundation of New York City has twenty fellowships to be given to students of American birth who wish to study abroad. College graduates are preferred and they must be familiar with at least one language in addition to English, preferably, Spanish, Danish, or Norwegian. The sum of $1,000 is given for a course of one academic year. Sweden, Denmark and Norway are the countries in which the students chosen may study one of the special courses outlined. These fellowships are obtained by selection of fellows by a jury of university professors and technical experts.

It is well worth anyone's time to keep watch of the bulletin boards for these openings. One may see just the opportunity he has been looking for.

Sport and the world sports with you,
Grind, and you grind alone.

DR. BLACK LEADS CHAPEL

Professor Black, of the Department of History, in chapel Monday morning, praised the lofty idealism of President Wilson, who, he said, elevated the Peace Conference at Versailles to a higher plane than that of any other conference of its kind in history.

"Wilson went to Europe with great fraternal sympathy and a passion for world brotherhood; he plunged into the maelstrom of corrupt European diplomacy. He blocked the schemes of the other Allies to appropriate the German colonies liberally among themselves. With strong determination he faced the difficult Italian problem, and, from the latest news, his policies will give the solution. He was the dismay of Clemenceau, Orlando and other great diplomats at the conference. Clemenceau declared him the most obstinate man he had ever known. It is certain that history will record him for his victory at the Peace Conference, his victory for right and justice.

"President Wilson is serving out the last months of his administration, a pathetic figure, broken in spirit and health, as a result of his persistent fight for his high ideals.

"Like Lincoln, he has the heart mind and keen vision of a great statesman and moralist. Unlike Lincoln, he lacks the power to dramatize great moral issues of the day and make the people feel them as they ought; he is too academic, too far removed from the people."

Dr. Little (in Geology I, discussing the coastal features of Norway)—"Norway the home of the ancient _____"

Moody (hastily, with assurance)—"Mariner!"

COLBY FOR COLBY MEN For COLBY

In whatever work we happen to be engaged there is one thing that we are forever having impressed upon us or are impressing upon someone else, and that is, the value of cooperation. In college life it is the same as in everything else. There must be cooperation among those who are striving for a goal or there can be no success.

This year the students of Colby are asked to cooperate in probably the biggest single thing that this college ever undertook, our Centennial Celebration and Pageant. It is going to be a big undertaking to put that pageant "across" with success.

Dr. Libby says that every student will be called upon to do something. Let us, when that call comes, be willing to sacrifice something for Colby. Thus far, many have "cut" the rehearsals, although a list of those to take part has been posted every day on the bulletin board and there has been no excuse for not knowing the time of appointment. Can we not in this, the year of the Hundredth Anniversary of Colby College, pull together and let the success of this pageant be uppermost in our minds? One thing is certain, as long as we live we shall never forget the coming celebration. Let us co-operate so that the memories of it will be brightened by the thought: "I did something to help make that a success."

Colby men! Show the true Colby spirit and Colby's Centennial will be a great success!

D. A. S.

O tempora! O mores!

Time was, at Colby, when Freshmen were required to speak to all upperclassmen. This practice, in force during the Freshman's first year, naturally tended to form in him that intimate Colby habit of greeting every student he met—a habit which he carried with him thruout his college career. Whether a man knew a fellow student intimately or not, there was always a hearty "hello" for him whenever they met. It was a typical Colby practice, a bit of Western frankness that indicated that Colby was not merely an austere Eastern institution. I question whether this personal greeting still exists at Colby. I question whether every Freshman has a greeting for other Colby men. I know the upperclassmen are, on the whole, respecters of this traditional Colby practice—but the Freshmen! I earnestly urge that they take it upon themselves to correct their habits. Many do not fall into this category—many do respect Colby's traditions—it is only the "outlaw" spirit that we seek to reach.

Another time-honored Colby custom is that of touching one's cap to the professors. A beautiful old practice, as old as the college itself, this must not pass into disrepute. Again, in this respect, the Freshmen are the worst offenders. Let's all "get together" and observe all these traditional customs that tend to create better Colby spirit and make our college a truly democratic institution.

R. H. S.

At morning chapel two weeks ago, Professor Libby reported a noteworthy conversation with a Waterville business man. It needed little comment from the chapel speaker; from the Echo it needs scarcely more than a printing in its editorial column, in order that it may be read by more men than were in chapel that day. The conversation is paraphrased:

Business man: "In carrying out this great project, I shall need at least fifty men, but I do not know where to find them."

Prof. Libby: "I think I can find fifty men at the college, who, in their spare time, can do this work for you."

Business man: "No, college men will not do."

Prof. Libby: "Why not?"

Business man: "I have employed men from the college in the past, and have found them, almost without exception, not to be depended upon. I shall never employ one again."

These words sting. Perhaps the man is the victim of an imperfect induction. At any rate, such a testimony is a serious thing, and we can learn a lesson from it.

Chaucer:

"Som tyme this world was so stedfast and stable
That mannes word was obligacioun,
And now hit is so fals and deceivable
That word and deed, as in concludioun,
Ben no-thing oon, for turned up so down
Is al this world through mede and wilfulnesse
That al is lost for lak of stedfastnesse."

Summer Work

We still have room
For a few LIVE men
Provided they want to
Earn a lot of MONEY
This summer.

This isn't a gamble
It is a SURE THING
For the man who HUSTLES
And besides
We pay a SALARY.

NOW is the time
To get on the Band Wagon
So see our local man
Or write us direct and
Ask for the dope.
