Who's Who: Mark Van Doren, Pulitzer Prize poet, premier short story writer and literary critic, is professor emeritus of English, Columbia University.

David H. Burton, professor of history at St. Joseph's College in Philadelphia, has previously written on the "common vision" of EAR and Theodore Roosevelt. Recipient of a Distinguished Teaching award, Burton's book on Roosevelt will be out this year, as will two other studies in the scholarly journals on EAR's thinking and tendencies in religion.

Newly returned from a Fulbright year at the University of Sydney (Down Under), Robert D. Stevick is also newly returned to the subject of EAR, whom he had forsaken after the dissertation for the field of linguistics. Associate professor of English at the University of Washington, Dr. Stevick has published extensively in the philological quarterlies.

Like EAR, Dr. Louise Dauner knows the violin. Unlike EAR, who scared the daylights out of cats when he played, she solos in concert hall and on radio, is a member of string quartets and orchestras, and at the moment assistant concertmaster of the Indianapolis Philharmonic. She is associate professor of English and assistant chairman of department at Indiana University.

Lewis E. Weeks, Jr., with B.A. from Colby, M.A. from Brown, and Ph.D. from Boston University, did most of his early writing on Whittier, but has since spread to EAR, Mark Twain, Hemingway, and Whitman. His current position is associate professor of Humanities at Clarkson College of Technology.

Centennial Fare: In keeping with the anniversary spirit, an extensive exhibit of new memorabilia has been added to the standing display in the EAR Memorial Room at Colby, a weekend of speech-seminar-recital-recitation is being organized for October, and the Colby College Press will bring out a volume devoted to the work of EAR. A request for a commemorative stamp is working its way through the labyrinthine halls of the Post Office Department.
