LAUDS BRUSH, '20

Donor of Condon Medal Congratulates the First Recipient.

Randall J. Condon, 1886, Superintendent of the Cincinnati Public Schools, established in 1920 the Condon Medal which was to be given to the man of the senior class who had shown the most striking evidences of "fine Christian citizenship in college during his four years." The first medal was awarded to John W. Brush, '20, present pastor of the Glenwood Square Chapel, Portland. His recent anti-klan sentiments aroused many favorable comments among which is a letter from Superintendent Condon. It is as follows:

Cincinnati, O.
March 21, 1924.

My dear Mr. Brush:

I am proud of you, and can well understand why you were unanimously awarded the first "Condon Medal" for Christian citizenship. I am sending you this note after having read the account of your action with reference to the K. K. K. in the last issue of the Colby Echo. It is just the kind of action for which I am most glad to have the medal which I have established stand, viz., fearless action as an expression of inner conviction.

The world always needs and always will, and never more so than at the present time, men who are willing to stand up and speak out for religious, social and political toleration. That does not mean lack of conviction and lives guided by inner principles, but it means freedom of conscience and the willingness to allow other people the same right of thought that we ourselves claim. Roger Williams stood for it, and was banished from Massachusetts, but his name is immortal. Lovejoy stood for the same things, and paid the penalty with his life. A host of others, all along the way, helped to make up the company of those who are willing to stand by their conscience and their convictions, and take whatever penalty may be meted out to them by the unthinking crowd.

You remember where Valiant-for-Truth, who had been called to his Father's, said "My sword I give to him who shall succeed me in my pilgrimage, my courage and skill to him that can get it; my marks and scars I carry with me to be a witness for me that I have fought His battles who now shall be my rewarder." And then you remember that Bunyan adds, "So he passed over and all the trumpets sounded for him on the other side." Sometimes a man gets his reward in this life for doing the right thing, but the temporal reward or verdict is of little consequence compared with the eternal one.

I again congratulate you, and feel rewarded for my gift of the medal to Colby from this assurance that the first one issued is in the keeping of one who will not allow it to become tarnished in his keeping.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) Randall J. Condon,
Superintendent.

TRUSTEE MEETING.

A meeting of the trustees of Colby was held in Portland Friday and Saturday of last week. Dr. Parmenter attended as a representative of the executive committee and gave a report on conditions at the college.

Most of the trustees were present and many subjects of importance were discussed. Dr. Parmenter reports there was a spirit of good feeling at the meeting, although none of the business was made public. A report on the present status of Colby seemed quite satisfactory. The alumni association of Portland gave the trustees a banquet Saturday noon.

COLBY SENDS MEN TO CONFERENCE

Two Delegates Attend Citizenship Discussion At Washington.

At the College Citizenship Conference held in Washington April 5 and 6, Colby college was represented by Joseph C. Smith, '24, and Ellsworth W. Millett, '25. About 200 students from 85 of the leading colleges and universities were present. New England was represented by Colby, Harvard, Yale and Dartmouth.

The conference was called to discuss the question of law observance and citizenship. The speakers included such national figures as Senator Borah, Senator Glass, Senator Shepard, Judge Mable Walker, Willibrand, and others. The delegates were received by President Coolidge at the White House. The address by Senator Borah on the subject of excessive campaign funds was of national significance and excited much editorial comment.

As the conference developed, it was found that the particular phase of citizenship which most directly affected the campuses was the violations of the Eighteenth Amendment of the Constitution. Different colleges made reports on the conditions existing on their campuses and what steps were needed for improvement.

After much stormy debate, a set of findings were drawn up and accepted by the delegates. These resolutions are in part as follows:

Resolutions.

This Conference declares:
That in a democracy like the United States respect for all laws and customs should report to Manager Libby.

UNIVERSITY CLUB TO BE IN BOSTON

A distinctive feature of the new University Club of Boston will be the sports. Squash, racquets, swimming, bowling and billiards are to be fostered by club tournaments with the consequent continuance of intercollegiate rivalry. The best exponents in each sport will represent the University Club in Boston, and intercity club competition.

Upper classmen who expect to be in Boston after graduation will certainly want to be identified with this club, the location of which will be in the center of activities at the corner of Trinity Place and Stuart Street. Announcement has been made by the Executive Committee that the construction of the building will be started within a few months. The cost of the new club will reach nearly $2,000,000.

As it will require a year or more in construction, and, also, as there will undoubtedly be a long waiting list by the time the club is completed, it is the desire of the Executive Committee to offer the members of the two upper classes an opportunity to make application for membership at this time. On April 1, the privilege of purchasing certificates of ownership will be withdrawn. After that date, the applicant will be required to pay an initiation fee of $100.

Dues for the first three years out of college will be $25 each year, beginning when the club house is ready for occupancy.

Provision has been made in the plans for Turkish baths, several floors of sleeping rooms, a commodious library, large dining-room, private dining-room, ladies' dining-room and other features of the modern club.

The club is primarily for the young college men, rather than for those who have been out many years. The headquarters of the Executive Committee are at 24 Federal Street, in charge of Donald D. McKay and Barton K. Stephenson.

WHY STUDENTS
COME TO COLBY

Echo Poll Shows that Friends Are Most Important Influence.

The slogan, "We are advertised by our loving customers," certainly applies to Colby college, according to the statistics compiled recently by the COLBY ECHO. The question was asked, "What influenced you to come to Colby?" Returns show that by far the greatest factor was the influence of friends or relatives.

Next was the influence of teachers and third the academic reputation of the college.

Of course, in reality, most students had a variety of reasons for coming and it was hard to pick out any one factor. However, the ballots gave the following reasons:

172—Influence of friends (including parents and other relatives).

52—Influence of teacher.

36—Academic reputation.

13—Athletic reputation.

12—Financial reasons.

Also a large number of miscellaneous reasons were given, some of which were very interesting. Some of these are: "Just drifted here," "Advantages of a small college away from home," "Sweetheart," "Journalism Course," "Conversation with Coach Ryan," "Democratic spirit," "Climate," "Destiny," "Reputation for public speaking," "Pre-medical course near home," "My own personal desires," "Baptist college," "Co-eds," "Influence at Colburn," "Desire for higher education," "Near home."

JUNIORS HOLD ANNUAL DANCE

The annual junior dance of the women's division was given by the class of 1925 at Foss Hall, Saturday evening. The affair was very successful and was largely attended.

The room was very prettily decorated with the spring colors, lavender and gold and color also was furnished by the window boxes of gay tulips and jonquils. The refreshments also carried out the spring motif, being served in flower pots topped by a brilliant tulip.

The patrons and patronesses were Dean Nettie M. Runnals, Miss Corinne B. Van Norman, Miss Sarah W. Patrick, Professor and Mrs. Curtis H. Morrow and Professor Antonios P. Savides.

"Y" INSTALLS
NEW OFFICERS

Dr. Libby Speaks. Full Cabinet is Announced.

At the regular meeting of the Y. M. C. A. last Tuesday evening the new officers for the ensuing year were installed. Professor Libby was present and gave a very fitting address, charging each of the new officers with their trust. He urged them either to be resolved at the outset to carry out the duties faithfully or resign from their posts at once rather than hinder the workings of the organization.

On Friday evening the newly chosen cabinet met in a brief session at the home of Professor H. L. Newman. Plans were made for the annual "spring advance" to be held at Good Will Camp. The tentative plans are April 20-27.

The complete list of committee chairmen follows: Membership, W. Macomber, '27, Finance, Charles O. Ide, '26, Religious meetings, A. K. Chapman, '25, Bible study, Clarence Roddy, '25, Deputation, K. WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16, 1924.

The Cynic says: "There two types of students in classrooms: Those who sit in the front row, and those who recite with their books open."

A MODEST PROPOSAL.

Controversy has lately been rife on the relative importance of college activities. After deep pondering and exhaustive investigation, the COLBY ECHO has found the answer. We modestly propose the following panacea for the whole vexing question.

What a strange picture is the modern American college. Here we have one class of students who come for the sole purpose of enjoying "college life" and who are grievously hampered by unsympathetic scholastic requirements. On the other hand we see men who are perfectly happy in their academic pursuits and who resent the hectic distractions of the "rah-rah-rah for dear old Siwash" environment. Could any situation be more utterly ridiculous? The solution is absurdly simple, merely a matter of segregation. Here is how it would work.

If a freshman enrolls for the "collegiate course" let him live on the campus, in or near the fraternity houses, close to the athletic field, and not too far from the movies and other city attractions. Naturally there would not be any classes, but each man would be required to sign up for a certain number of activities. Just think what this arrangement would mean to Colby! Such athletic teams! Such musical clubs! Such publications! Such billiard sharks! Such mah-jonggists! Such Sheiks, cake-eaters, cooky-punchers, and plastic-agers! Truly, Colby would be known far and wide for her unsurpassed "collegiatism."

And then for those students who come to college for intellectual training, let us build a different campus. This would be away from town, isolated from the giddy whirl. It would be a quadrangle of ivy-clad stone. The interior would be finished in dark paneled oak. Thick carpets would deaden all earthly noise. Deep chairs and reading lamps would be in every nook and corner. The library, class rooms, dining hall, and dormitory would all be under the same roof so that there would be no need of a student sticking his nose into fresh air for months at a time. Classes would, of course, be free from all artificialities such as attendance records, examinations, rank and the like because such would be needless. There would be plenty of recreation. Once a week they would have an organ recital, and occasionally readings from the Greek tragedies, chats on Einstein or other such treats. In short it would be the ideal environment for intellectual achievement.

And think what this branch of the college would mean too! What a classic reputation it would weave around the name Colby! What prestige Colby men would have in the world of high-brows! What brilliant minds would make up our body of alumni! Colby would soon be known as the Olympus of Learning—home of the Ph. Deities!

There is our plan. Simple, practical, yet is it not obviously superior to the present state of mutual hindrance, and un congenial association? We submit it with entire complacency.

ON PROF-BAITING.

The word "prof-baiting" is an expression, so far as is known, peculiar to Colby. It is not strictly slang, it is a technical word. Were it in a dictionary the definition would be something like this:

"Prof-bait, vb, intr., Collegiate: 1. To stimulate great interest in courses. 2. To talk to professors with intention of producing a favorable impression, and thus raise one's scholarship standing."

There are certain men who indulge in this practice and point with pride to its visible results on their ranks. There are certain others who look with disapprobation amounting to scorn upon such iniquitous characters.

Yet, whatever the ethics of proof-baiting may be, there are certain aspects of the practice that go far to justify it. According to psychology, emotion consists of feeling the bodily changes that usually accompany that emotion. Therefore, by going through the motions of appearing interested in a subject, before one knows it, he is interested. And once interested, the drudgery and boredom connected with that course has vanished. When this comes to pass, his marks naturally go up. The ranks of a prof-baiter, then, are perfectly legitimate.

Furthermore, whatever the original motives, increased intimacy between students and faculty can not fail to be of mutual benefit.

More power to prof-baiting!

POETRY

A PSALM OF BIOLOGY LAB.

Tell me not with sad misgiving
Lab is but a frightful dream;
Specimens preserved we mangle,
Not as cruel as 'twould seem.

Pluerococcus and amoeba
Are most harmless little things;
And the honey bee,—Angelic,
He has bona fide wings.

Ciliated paramecia
In refracted rays do gleam,
So, the graceful vorticella
With contractile myoneme.

Hydra is a form eccentric,
Ever he gesticulates;
Tentacles he waves insanely,
As for artless prey he waits.

Would-be poets may praise the earth-
worm,
Martyr in the Lab of Fame,
But upon a waxen tablet
We impale the crayfish's frame.

"Aes triplex" renowned by Horace,
Did the strength of Romans brace,
Still more adequate protection
Is our crayfish's carapace.

Sad indeed is his dissection;
Some, his body scorn to touch.
Others, bold in desperation,
Deign his cheliped to clutch.

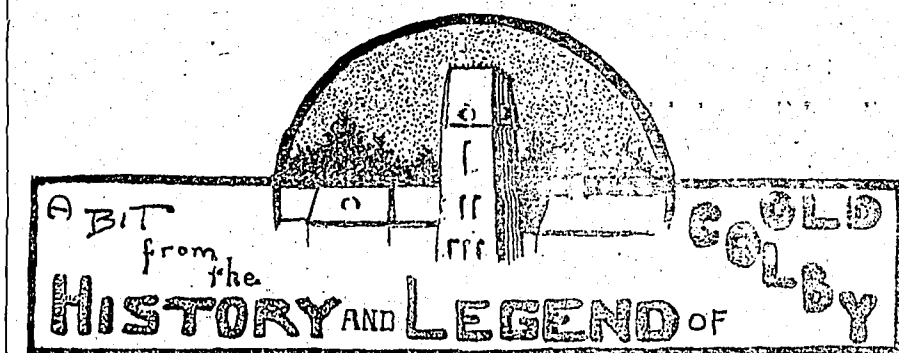

And when all his gills are severed,
Placed with care in numbered file,
Likewise, brain, and strong maxillae,
Fashioned in biramous style,

There 'twere fitting to inter him,
And, my friends, let no one laugh,
Listen well, while I promulgate
Poor, dead crayfish's epitaph.

Here, in grave of wax and water,
Not beneath the dewy clod,
In a sepulcher aquatic,
We inhumed thee, arthropod.
—Pauline Waugh, '27, in Colbiana.

DEPUTATION AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

A Colby deputation team occupied the pulpit of the First Baptist church Sunday evening. The general topic for discussion was "Is It Worth While?" The speakers were William Macomber, Kenneth Smith, C. Barnard Chapman.

EMERSON AT COLBY.

An old record of the Society of the Erosophian Adelphi reads as follows: "Aug. 12, 1840.

"Society met at four P. M. Having balloted for orator, the following gentlemen were elected: for orator, W. B. S. Moor; for substitute, R. W. Emerson."

For some reason the orator-elect did not accept the invitation of the society so the substitute, Ralph Waldo Emerson, on Aug. 11, 1841, before the alumni and friends of Waterville College, delivered his famous oration, "The Method of Nature."

Under date of July 31, 1841, Emerson writes to Carlyle: "As usual at this season of the year, I, incorrigible shouting Yankee, am writing an oration to deliver to the boys in one of our little country colleges, nine days hence. You will say that I do not deserve the aid of any muse. Oh, but if you knew how natural it is for me to run to these places. Besides, I am always lured on by the hope of saying something which shall stick by the good boys."

A Cold Welcome.

At that time, a considerable portion of the journey to Waterville had to be made by stage. Emerson arrived late in the evening, travel-worn and tired out, when almost all of the sober inhabitants had gone to bed. It appeared that there was some doubt as to the particular citizen's house at which he was to pass the night. "The stage-driver," said Emerson, "stopped at one door and rapped loudly; a window opened, something in a night-gown asked what he wanted; the stage-driver replied that he had a man inside who said he was to deliver a literary oration tomorrow and thought he was to stop there, but the night-gown disappeared with the chilling remark that he was not to stay at his house. Then we went to another, and still another, rapped, saw similar night-gowns and heard similar voices at similar raised windows, and it was only after repeated disturbances of the peace of the place that the right house was hit, where I found a hospitable reception.

An Unenthusiastic Audience.
"The next day I delivered my oration, which was heard with cold, si-

CORRESPONDENCE

To the Editor:

What an interesting study is a college man! The men with the childish minds are especially entertaining. Their idea of college seems to be a kindergarten on a large scale. There are more things to throw, more things to make noises with, more people to annoy than before, so college must mean that much more to them, as these things seem to be the ruling passion and ambition of their lives. I think the college should buy a few yards of nice white sand and some pretty blocks and let these men play by themselves down under the willows.

Yours for higher education,
I. M. Earnest.

To the Editor of the Echo:

College men need not be told the good things of past literature, English and American; they have been informed what books are good through their educational training if they will but read them. There is, however, an appalling ignorance of the desirable works in contemporary American literature on the part of Colby men with whom I have come into contact.

As a result of the solicitation for suggestions which appeared in last week's ECHO I want to commend the following works:

Edward E. Whiting's "Calvin Coolidge," a compact, readable word picture of our chief executive.

William Roscoe Thayer's "George Washington," a biography which gives us many interesting facts, hitherto unrevealed, concerning our first chief executive.

"Damaged Souls," a biographical estimate of pathetic American public figures, among them Benjamin Butler, Colby graduate.

Zona Gale's "Miss Lulu Bett," and "Faint Perfume," novels far above the literary level of the jazz age in which they were written.

Sinclair Lewis's "Babbitt," a true picture of the average American business man and one which should warn college men against the dangers of superficial college work.

Joseph Hergesheimer's "The Bright Shawl," possibly that novel which most nearly approaches artistic perfection of all those ground out by American writers in the last decade.

GEOLOGY AS A LIFE WORK

U. S. Geological Survey Offers Worth-while Career to Young Engineers.

The United States Geological Survey, in the Department of the Interior, offers a career to the three types of engineers that constitute the technical staff of the organization—the topographic engineer, the hydraulic engineer, and the geologist, who may also be properly termed an engineer. The engineer's work is many-sided, but most of his tasks lead him out of doors and often far afield. The engineer in the public service spends his life among men who do the world's work; in no sense is he a shut-in, either physically or mentally; all his powers have wide fields for expansion.

The work of the topographic engineer embraces the mapping of the surface of the country, and owing to the fact that nearly all the topographic surveying of the United States is done by the Geological Survey itself the engineers engaged in this work are trained in the technique of their work chiefly in the Survey, although they should possess as a basic preparation a sound engineering education.

The work of the hydraulic engineers in the Geological Survey embraces every phase of the study of the surface waters of the United States, including stream flow in its relation to drainage, power, irrigation, flood prevention, and the municipal use of water. The work leads up to but stops at construction. Basic education and training in construction are, however, desirable.

The work of the geologist is directed in the main to the determination of the mineral wealth of the United States. It includes also a study of the history of our part of the planet as revealed by the rocks, each layer of which may be compared with a page in human history. The time and the manner in which the records were inscribed on these rock pages, the fossils and the minerals that make up their text and illustrations, and the ways in which the record may be made useful to man are objects of the geologist's study.

The practical requisites for technical employment in the Geological Survey are college courses in engineering or geology, preferably supplemented by postgraduate studies. Employment in the Survey then becomes for the first two or three years a further and more practical postgraduate course, after which the member of the Survey may be assigned to individual or coordinated research work.

All the positions described are filled through civil-service examinations, which are held on an average about once a year. Requests for information as to examinations should be addressed to the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

WHY SHOULD WE STUDY ENGLISH LITERATURE?

Many of us have been wondering if we should take a course in English Literature next year. Even those of us who are studying for engineering or medicine or any profession where the study of English Literature seems unessential, should study it.

During an interview with Professor Carl J. Weber of the English Department, the following six general reasons were given for studying English Literature, reasons which make it seem practically indispensable.

1. Only in literature can we find expression of our own thoughts and feelings and without it we lose much of our artistic feelings.
2. Literature keeps before us a vision of our ideals.
3. Literature teaches us much of human nature and aids us in our associations and understanding of others.
4. Literature makes history live and helps us to appreciate history which by itself would be a rather dry subject.
5. It makes our own lives seem more dignified and glorious because it shows us the glory and beauty of the commonplace.
6. Lastly, literature improves our own style and is the only sure way to the mastery of self expression.

RHODES SCHOLARS TO BE CHOSEN

Colby Allowed Three Candidates to Study at Oxford.

On December 13, 1924, thirty-two states elect students to receive the Rhodes Scholarship for 1925. Is Colby to have a student at Oxford? The advantages of this are many. At Oxford a man not only has a chance to study under the world's greatest educators, but comes in contact with men of his own age from other nations as well. This helps to bring better knowledge of conditions on the two continents, and better relations with other nations as the Oxford student of today is the future statesman in many instances. Also a good part of the time is spent in travel on the continent of Europe which affords much of pleasure, and learning.

A candidate must be an unmarried, male citizen of the United States with at least five years domicile. The age limit is between nineteen and twenty-five years so that if a man was born on or after October 1, 1900, and before October 1, 1906, he would be eligible. He must also have completed at least his sophomore year at some recognized degree granting college of the United States.

Colby comes under the class of colleges with an enrollment of between 500 and 1000 students, so she is allowed three candidates.

The basis of selection of these candidates rests upon their ability along the following lines.

1. Literary and scholastic ability.
2. Qualities of manhood, force of character and leadership.
3. Physical vigor as shown by interest in outdoor sports and otherwise.

The ideal Rhodes scholar should excel in all three of the qualities indicated, but in the absence of such an ideal combination, committees will prefer a man who shows distinction either of character and personality, or of intellect, over one who shows a lower degree of excellence in both. Participation and interest in open air and athletic pursuits form an essential qualification for a Rhodes scholar, but exceptional athletic distinction is not to be treated as of equal importance with the other requirements.

It is time to be thinking this over seriously, as Colby should have a Rhodes scholar at Oxford, and there are men in college who would fill the requirements.

CITIZENS' TRAINING CAMP. Excellent Opportunity Offered Colby Students for Month of August

The Citizens' Military Training Camps are to be held in all parts of the country during the month of August. The training camps are in charge of the United States government and offer to young men between the ages of 17 and 24 years of age, an excellent opportunity for physical and mental development under the direction of competent officers.

The New England boys will go to Camp Devens, Mass., on August 1. The government provides transportation, clothing, board and all necessary equipment. A fine program of athletic and physical training is offered.

President Arthur J. Roberts of Colby college is a member of the governing committee for Maine.

College men who are interested in the course may obtain further information and enrollment forms from the Kennebec county chairman, Fred D. McAlary at 173 Main street, or from John F. Choate at the Choate Music Store.

FORMER COLBY MAN TO N. H. FACULTY.

Word has been received of the appointment of Justin Owen Wellman, superintendent of schools in Amesbury, Mass., as assistant professor of education at the University of New Hampshire.

Prof. Wellman graduated from Colby in 1898. After graduating he accepted a position as principal of the academy at Paris Hill. The following year he went to Bangor High School as assistant in the department of mathematics. In 1901 he was made principal of Ricker Classical Institute in Houlton. Four years later he was appointed principal of Colby Academy in New London, N. H. Until recently he was superintendent of the Union school district in Newmarket, N. H., which includes Durham.

BRIDGE PARTY.

Thursday evening Ethel Childs, '25, entertained at her home eight couples at bridge. The first girls' prize was won by Ruth Allen, '24, and the second prize by Marion Drisko, '24. The first men's prize was won by John Barnes, '24, and the second by Herschel Peabody, '26.

LITERARY SOCIETY.

Professor Raeburn Hunt was the speaker at the meeting of the Literary Society, Friday evening. Professor Hunt gave an interesting talk on contemporary literature.

The third of the series of talks on etiquette under the auspices of the Panhellenic Association was given Wednesday evening. Mrs. Muzzey conducted an interesting and helpful discussion on "General Etiquette."

HENRY CAVENDISH
1731-1804

English chemist and physicist, of whom Biot said, "He was the richest of the learned and the most learned of the rich." His last great achievement was his famous experiment to determine the density of the earth.

He first made water from gases

Henry Cavendish, an eccentric millionaire recluse, who devoted his life to research, was the discoverer of the H and the O in H₂O. In fact he first told the Royal Society of the existence of hydrogen.

He found what water was by making it himself, and so became one of the first of the synthetic chemists.

Cavendish concluded that the atmosphere contained elements then unknown. His conclusion has been verified by the discovery of argon and other gases.

The Research Laboratories of the General Electric Company have found a use for argon in developing lamps hundreds of times brighter than the guttering candles which lighted Cavendish's laboratory.

In this age of electricity the General Electric Company has blazed the trail of electrical progress. You will find its monogram on the giant generators that light the world; on the lamps and little motors that mean so much in the home. It is a symbol of useful service.

HEDMAN HOLLERINGS

With the coming of the warm days and good travelling the boys are up to their old tricks of taking little jaunts to nearby towns "over the road."

Sheik Lewin wended his weary feet over to Portland the past week end via the above method. When interviewed by the ECHO'S cub, the Sheik stated that he was going to withhold his reason for going but it was a good one. (P. S.—Why shouldn't it be? "It's" got a big ear!)

Hedmanites are well represented out on the diamond. Coach Parent keeps them up at the top of the list. Bill Blake is still among the present and accounted for. He sort of dropped out of sight for a time but suddenly popped up again. Can't keep a good man down.

Link MacPherson got so bound up in Dr. Marquardt's course, last semester that he came back after vacation with the German measles. That's what you call getting the knowledge under one's skin.

A reception was held in Chemical Hall recently by the Executive Committee for several Hedmanites. "Will Ye or Won't Cha" was the subject of the afternoon's discussion.

Fi Bait or a Colby See? This has been the subject of much discussion and the result of too much concentration Mr. Editor-in-Chief. Wouldn't you be surprised if Santa Claws brot us both? We would.

And speaking of the worldly problems which are perplexing Hedmanites at this time, that most important word-in-the-English-language number is a weighty one upon our minds. (Anything is weighty that presses upon our thinking apparatus). All words except Love and Justice have been eliminated from the contest.

Willie Macomber says that if you choose Love you sure can't have Justice.

CHANCE TO SEE OLYMPIC GAMES

Colby Men Eligible for Special Passage at Greatly Reduced Rates.

Under the chairmanship of B. D. Adams, of "The Oaks," Ithaca, N. Y., college men are arranging an economical excursion to England, France and other European countries this summer, sailing from New York for Plymouth, Cherbourg and Southampton on June 21st in the third cabin of the "Saxonia," and returning home on the same ship from Southampton and Cherbourg on September 6th. Only college students are eligible, but students of all colleges are welcome to join the excursion. The "Saxonia's" entire third class has been reserved for the college men, and no others will be admitted.

Round Trip, $165.
The cost for the round trip has been placed at $165, and the chairman says that with the low rate of exchange prevailing abroad students may enjoy two months sightseeing and attending exhibitions, fairs, athletic meets, and kindred attractions for $400.

Some of the features abroad the coming summer will be the British Empire Exposition, London; the Olympic Games, Paris; the Ancient Tailteann Games, to be revived in Dublin; and many lesser events throughout Great Britain and the continent.

For Colby Men Only.
Mr. Adams says that the exclusive third cabin will answer the increased demand for an economical and comfortable mode of transportation to Europe. On this excursion non-students and immigrants will positively be excluded from the third class, thereby eliminating what has been the economical traveler's only objection to the modern third class. The chairman promises "Good wholesome British food four times a day."

Students are invited to take their musical instruments along, so that impromptu parties, "song fests" and musical evenings may be the rule. The Cunard Line will arrange to store the instruments until the ship returns in September.

The "Saxonia" has just been completely renovated and reconditioned. She has always been famous for her steadiness.

pecially the Federal Constitution is a first principle of citizenship and of government.

The test of our citizenship is whether there is enough voluntary restraint and inner discipline within the body of our citizens to abide by the will of the majority. The Eighteenth Amendment is part of the fundamental law of our land and violation of it as such weakens the authority and destroys the respect of our citizens for the whole body of laws.

THEREFORE, we, the members of this Conference, feeling the importance of observance on the part of all citizens for all laws, acknowledging the right of minorities who may honestly differ to change them by legal means, and viewing the effects of prohibition as not perfect but as sufficient evidence of that which the nation may expect when the people resolve that the law shall be observed, believing that the Eighteenth Amendment is the Constitutional expression of the American people, ethically considered and legally passed, put ourselves on record as being wholeheartedly behind the Federal Amendment in our public and private lives, and give our allegiance to the State and Federal governments in observing the law and enforcing the same in all appropriate measures.
