DISCUSSION MEETING BY KAPPA PHI KAPPA

Braker Teaching Fellow System Applied to Colby

Kappa Phi Kappa, the honorary educational fraternity, held its regular bi-weekly meeting Tuesday evening at the home of Cecil H. Rose, '28, on Elm Court. After the regular business meeting, conducted by President Richard J. Race, '29, Mr. Walter N. Breckenridge, instructor in economics, gave a very interesting talk to the group about the Braker Teaching Fellow system at Tufts University where he received his Master's degree as a Braker Teaching Fellow.

The Braker Teaching Fellow system has been in operation at Tufts since 1926 with the most successful results in its two-fold purpose. It aims first to cut down the large classes in the elementary courses, giving both the instructor and the students a better opportunity to work. Its second aim is to give to the Braker Fellow an excellent opportunity in actual teaching experience while he is at the same time taking his Master's degree. Each year Tufts sends out to all parts of the country over a hundred application blanks to students eligible for the Fellowship, and from the number of applications four are chosen to the honor. While the student is taking his Master's degree at Tufts he is at the same time instructing four hours a week in small group divisions in his major department. This system has solved for Tufts the problem of the overcrowded classroom which a few years ago was a problem especially in the elementary courses. The heads of the various departments now give but one lecture a week in the elementary subject and under the new method are free to specialize and put more time in on their advanced courses, having been relieved of their routine work and crowded schedule by the fellows who are instructors. The Braker Fellows gain the experience of teaching, while working for their Master's degree, and obtain valuable

DR. HERRICK SPEAKS AT CHAPEL EXERCISES

College Exists For Sake of Culture and Character

"A college still exists for the sake of culture and for character," said Dr. Everett Carleton Herrick, president of Newton Theological Seminary, Newton, Mass., speaking before the men at their regular chapel exercises yesterday morning. Dr. Herrick began his talk to the students by quoting a statement by Edgar Davis, famous financier, who said that he always played the market according to hunches. The speaker then went on to say that he too had a hunch; he had a feeling that there are good days ahead for Colby college. He added that the very excellent reports of the faculty committee during the past months have served only to emphasize that feeling.

Dr. Herrick went on to say that the college is fortunate in its choice of a new president, for President-elect Franklin Johnson has a large amount of human understanding, that indefinable but most indispensable something.

ALUMNAE BUILDING TO BE OPENED MONDAY

Fine Program is Arranged For Formal Opening

The Alumnae Building, the use of which the women have been eagerly awaiting, is to be formally opened next Monday, the eighteenth. Everyone who can come is cordially invited, and in order that as large a number as possible may be accommodated, the building will be open both afternoon and evening. During the course of the day there will be a silver tea, and a musical program will be given by the Alumnae, assisted by the women of the college. Now that the building itself is done there still remains equipment and furnishings to be secured, but if the same fine spirit and enthusiasm which the Alumnae and students have thus far shown is maintained, it should not be long before they have a finely equipped gymnasium and recreation hall.

The following committee is in charge of the opening: Mrs. Catherine Clarkin Dugas, Mrs. Mabel Dunn Libby, Mrs. Harriet Vigue Bossey, Mrs. Eleanor Creech Marriner, Miss Merce Morso, and Miss Gladys Welch.

WADSWORTH ANNOUNCES PURCHASE OF COLLEGE AVENUE PROPERTY

New Purchase Includes the Bangs' Estate and Rink of Waterville Hockey Club

The purchase of several acres of land and buildings, including a brick dwelling and the rink of the Waterville Hockey Club on College avenue, from 1858 to 1861. In 1862 he raised a company of volunteer soldiers and was mustered into the service in the War of the Rebellion the same year. The company was known as Company A of Maine and its leader tween the Delta Kappa Epsilon house and the residence of Dr. Edward J. Risley.

Although negotiations have been underway for some time for the purchase of the property the completion of the sale was made Monday when the deeds were transferred to the "President and Trustees of Colby College." Because of the number of heirs concerned in the transfer three deeds were necessary to the legal closing of the sale. The signatures of the heirs appearing on the deeds are: Walter C. and Janet M. Emerson, George F. and May M. Noyes, and Susan Milliken.

For many years the brick house involved in the sale was one of the show places of Waterville. It was owned by General Isaac Sparrow Bangs, a prominent Waterville veteran of the Civil War, and during his lifetime and that of his widow was one of the finest residences in Waterville. The Bangs estate has become an old landmark in Waterville although the source of the name is not generally known to Colby students. General Bangs came to Waterville or was Captain Bangs. From the command of the Waterville company Captain Bangs was promoted successively to the rank of lieutenant-colonel, colonel and brevet brigadier-general. He was a friend of the college during his long residence in Waterville and in his "Centennial History of Waterville," Dr. Edwin C. Whittemore states that on May 2, 1898, when Company H of the Maine National Guard left Waterville to join a regiment at Augusta General Bangs and President Nathaniel Butler of Colby delivered stirring patriotic addresses from the same platform.

The association of the property recently acquired by Colby on College avenue with the name of General Bangs has given it the distinction of being one of Waterville's most familiar homesteads. The character and prominence of the General has given it much of his personal history. Old residents of Waterville recall the velvet green lawns and vine-covered brick walls of the estate during its occupation by the Bangs family.

CONDON MEDAL.

It is nearly three years since the Condon Medal was last awarded. The plan for its award must be a failure.

In itself the idea is admirable. But to restrict the selection to one person seems a pretty fine division of character. In the past Colby has produced men and women in almost every class who have demonstrated their abilities in many fields. There is every likelihood that they were outstanding as undergraduates. So it seems reasonable to conjecture that some members of the class of '29 will succeed in attaining enviable positions as graduates. Would it be challenging fate to suggest that the senior class pick some probable future magnates?

If the Condon award has not been made for three years there must be three Condon Medals available. Let's get hold of them and at the psychological moment shake up a hatful of the names of good students, good athletes, and good fellows, if petty politics will not admit of a fairer way, and let fate gamble with fate.

That's a good one to think over when you are considering the appropriate class gift, or gifts, that '29 will leave behind.

EXPANSION.

College avenue is becoming more and more a highway through college property. Our foresighted Board of Trustees is aware of Colby's "manifest destiny." Isn't it about time some degenerate moralist found a diabolical significance in Colby's expansion?

But the control of the property on either side of College avenue by the college is "manifest" and necessary. It is indeed gratifying to find that there is sufficient belief in opportunism in the administration to allow it to improve a chance to add valuable real estate to the college holdings.

The day can be visualized when a row of fraternity houses will be proof of the integration and upbuilding of Colby.

Editor Colby Echo,

You were so angry.
Flung your head so high,
So sure—so proud—
We laughed, the wind and I.
You were so wrong, my dear
And I was right.
And yet—the wind and I
Will sob tonight.
Tara Seadsdale.

THE GINGER JAR.

It came from a shop on Boylston street.
Nearly a year ago.
(A shop where jag-scaled dragons sprawl
And romp and snort along the wall.
Sweet dusk—a jade and copper shawl—
The trousered form of a slant-eyed doll—)
(I didn't know
Just what you liked.)
It seemed so jovial, green-blue and squat
(Even a year ago.)
We laughed: you loved its "potty-ness"
And I was glad I must confess
To think I made the lucky guess.
(I didn't know
Just what you liked.)

You broke the seal of the pudgy jar
Nearly a year ago.
Incense rose from the open crock.
It smiled in its ragged wicker frock.
Gold tide full-ebbed and a ginger rock.
(I began to know
Just what you liked.)

You had "first taste," I saw you smile,
Nearly a year ago.
You gave me some with finger tips.
"Take care, the golden syrup drips!"
The ting-tang taste bit eager lips.
(I'm glad I know
Just what you like.)

It is almost gone. I brought it home
Nearly a year ago.
Pale amber crystals line the jar
But the fragrance still can bear us far
Through Camel-land and spice-bazaar:
The year has left me one deep scar.
I have one thing no year can mar—
The dreams packed in your ginger jar.
A. G., '29.

CHAFF OR WHEAT.

Not too many years ago the English department printed a little leaflet entitled "Chaff or Wheat." Its purpose was stated plainly, painfully, and hopefully. "The chaff" is at all times undesirable; quoth the English gods. Wait, here's a thought! No chaff so chaffy that it does not contain at least a single wheat grain. The saving grace of that kernel may bring pleasure to some stray chicken, or ambitious young man. Another saw about the "needle in the haystack" might be revamped to read "the needle and the strawstack." When one does find the needle it is always in the chaff, but don't defy the powers that be. For my part I spent considerable time running chaff through my fingers and just the other day I found this which you read below. I don't know just what it means. I have read into it a dozen interpretations already, but it is pleasant and thought-provoking. You will read it and wonder.

THE OLD LOVE.

I have two books:
The authors are the same;
Identical in text;
In mood and name.

This one is new
The scarlet leather binds—
Made gay with gold,
A jewel—from my friends.

And this is old—
Solled, dog-eared, and worn
The rain did that—
My notes—all torn.

This one is priceless:
That worth a song,
You may borrow that.
This I have loved too long.
Huntly.

REQUEST.

I am not one to rot alone
Beneath a monument of stone;
My flesh cries out—my flesh and bone—
Against such grim decay.

Philosopher, I do believe
My soul—if soul I have—will leave
Its sheath of earth and will not grieve
Nor care where maggots play.

I think I will not know,
I will not feel that slow
Corruption through me go,
Restoring clay to clay!
Yet I—this creature of today,
Who live and breathe, am free and gay,
Who bow to joy and love's wild sway—
I pray, this prayer I pray:

Soft, rounded curves from toe to hips,
Arms white as sails of far-off ships,
Smooth slope of cheek to eager lips,
The full pulsed throat so gaily proud—
They were not made with earth to lie
By worms devoured! For them I cry,
Give me a bier where hill meets sky—
No garland save a dawn-swept cloud—
Give me the west wind for my choir!
O, give me this, my last desire,
Give me a burial of fire,
Give me a flame to be my shroud!
Contrib., '29.

AN OLD LADY.

Beyond alarms, beyond surprise,
With calm amusement in her eyes,
She watches while the world goes by
A whirling, modern pageantry.

She darns a gaping stocking-hole,
Feeds her gold-fish in the bowl,
Polishes her chinaware
With vast composure in her air.

This is her well-won guerdon
For bearing with life's burden;
A twilight cool, sedate,
A peace inviolate.

Ye Gladiator Column

Letters in the Gladiator Column are expressions of opinion by individual contributors to that column and the editor assumes no responsibility for any statements, allusions, or assertions made in them. The column is a free-for-all and student contributions are solicited.

Dear Gladiator:

Now that mid-years are behind us, and irate students have despaired of persuading stubborn professors to pass them through the eye of the scholastic needle, it may do no harm to voice an opinion or two.

So great has been the human wreckage cast out of the history department as a result of mid-years that one feels almost justified in suspecting some methodical plan in reducing the size of the classes. At present it looks like reductio ad infinitum, or at least, reductio ad absurdum. Considering the "big, blooming, buzzing confusion" that has reigned in the history department this year, arising from frequent teaching changes, it is hardly to be expected that students could pick up the loose ends of their courses and tie them together in any comprehensive whole. And in view of this same "big, blooming, buzzing confusion" it seems rather strange that one man, however much of a scholar he may be, should arrogate to himself the sole right of saying who is or who is not to be, on the basis of a scant four weeks' acquaintance. It seems as though a much fairer way of handling the situation would be to allow first semester ranks to depend somewhat on grades received for the second semester. And I believe the students would show a far better spirit of cooperation with the department.

But as it goes:
The tumult and the shouting dies,
The students from the "profs" depart.
Meanwhile seniors frantically revamp their second semester schedule, a few of the less fortunate members of the class grudgingly resign themselves to the necessity of joining the class of 1930, and underclassmen are moved to ponder long and deeply about majors, minors, "snap" courses, and "T's". Thus our classroom life moves on and we look forward to see what the second semester will bring forth.

Sincerely,
Junius.

Dear Gladiator:

The girls of the Glee Club are grateful to those of the college who supported them at their concert last week. However, we noticed how little support they received from the men's division.

Dr. Johnson, in his address to the women, spoke of the splendid example of loyalty to Colby which they had set for the men. Perhaps the men fear to follow Dr. Johnson's advice, although it would hardly be beneath their dignity as Colby men to attend a Colby production.

Sincerely yours,
A. S. Wino.

Phi Delta Theta defeated Kappa Delta Rho 33 to 26 in a close game played Saturday afternoon. Through the whole game the two teams were almost tied in total number of points and at one time the game seemed to belong to the Kappa Deltas. However the Phi Deltas recovered sufficiently to win through the excellent playing of Arnold who tallied 16 points.

Wisnoski played his usual stellar game for the Non-Frats running up a total of 17 points while Arber of the Zetes succeeded in bettering all his former records and tallied 20 points.

D. U.—D. K. E.

Delta Upsilon defeated Delta Kappa Epsilon in a hard fought basketball game played Friday afternoon by the score of 37 to 10. The D. U. team did not hold to its usual standard and had considerable difficulty in beating out their hard working opponents. The Dekes showed a greatly improved team and it was not until late in the game that the D. U.'s managed to add up a long series of baskets. Thornton and Taylor of the winners each accounted for 10 points and Good was high man of the Dekes with six points.

COLBY HOCKEY TEAM BEATEN BY BOWDOIN

The Blue and Gray hockey team went down to defeat at Brunswick Tuesday afternoon after battling the Polar Bears on even terms for two periods by a 2 to 1 score. The result of the game assures Bowdoin first place in the State series hockey race. About the middle of the first period Bowdoin scored when Tiemer took a pass from Rose. Lovett evened the count in the early minutes of the third period when he shot home a goal from scrimmage.

The two teams battled furiously to break the tie in the closing minutes. With but one minute to play Bowdoin came down the ice and Irvine smothered the shot. There followed a scrimmage in front of the cage and as Referee French blew the whistle Dyer threw the puck in the cage. A long argument followed but the goal was allowed to count. Colby was unable to score in the last minute of play.

Lovett, Scott, and Carlson played a good game for the Blue and Gray invaders while Dyer and Tiemer starred for Bowdoin.

Hockey Team To Meet Bates Tuesday

The Colby hockey team is scheduled to meet Bates on the college rink Tuesday, in the final home game of the season. Colby and Bates battled to a 2 to 2 tie in the only game of the season between the two teams and the playoff will have an important effect upon the final standing of the clubs in the State series race. The Blue and Gray blade artists have two more games yet to play, one with Bowdoin at Brunswick and one with Bates at Lewiston. Both of those games were scheduled to be played before the mid-year examinations but were postponed because of the illness of several members of the Colby team.

The recent road trip was broken up by a trick of the weatherman who destroyed the ice on the rinks at Williams and the University of New Hampshire. The team got in but one game, that with Massachusetts Agricultural College. The fast skating Aggie aggregation won a 2 to 0 decision over the Blue and Gray in a game which was somewhat marred by the poor ice on the Amherst rink.

JUNIOR GIRLS' DANCE HELD ON SATURDAY

First Social Affair to be Held in New Building

The Junior Girls' Dance, held on the evening of Saturday, Feb. 9, although not the formal opening of the women's recreation building, was the first social affair to be held there, and proved to be a very enjoyable affair.

Dancing was enjoyed in the gymnasium while those who preferred played cards in the adjoining reception room. The gymnasium was decorated with red hearts. The dance orders were in the form of valentines, and the refreshments of ice cream and heart-shaped cakes, which were served during intermission, also carried out the valentine idea.

The patrons and patronesses were: Miss Corinne B. Van Norman, Miss Sarah W. Partrick, and Prof. and Mrs. George F. Farmer.

Barbara Libby, of Albion, acted as general chairman. Muriel Farnum of Wilton, was chairman of the music committee; Helen Paul of Fort Fairfield, decoration committee; Jean Macdonald of Waterville, dance order committee; and Lucille Whitcomb of Farmington, refreshment committee.

Music was furnished by Manson's orchestra, of Gardiner.

D. U. FRATERNITY TO INITIATE ELEVEN MEN

The following neophytes will be initiated: Fulton E. Daniels, '32, of Millinocket; Geo. E. Bagnall, '32, of Houlton; Britain Webster, '32, of Lexington, Mass.; Ralph R. Sudd, '32, of Hartford, Conn.; Richard G. Kendall, '32, of Gardiner; Kenneth F. Sawyer, '32, of East Millinocket; Eyerard B. Grindall, '32, of Winslow; John A. Herd, '32, of Winslow; Wilbur G. ## Health League Sends Delegates to N. H. State

Colby, Bates, Wellesley, Radcliffe, Boston University, and the University of Maine were represented at New England's first Play Day sponsored by the Women's Athletic Association of the University of New Hampshire. Colby was represented by Alice W. Paul, '29, of Fort Fairfield, president of the Health League, and Marjory H. Dearborn, '31, Sophomore Health Leader.

The purpose of the Play Day was to give everyone an opportunity to join in all the sports and play for the enjoyment of the game, putting all competition aside. Four teams were formed, every college being represented on each team. A fifth team was composed of athletic instructors. A series of games were played among the four teams. The final winners played the instructors. Volleyball, basketball, soccer, stunts, and folk dances were outstanding since all winter sports had been cancelled on account of weather conditions. A banquet at the university dining hall concluded the activities. It is hoped that this Play Day will be made an annual affair among the women's athletic associations in New England colleges.

DR. HERRICK SPEAKS.

thing so necessary to successful leadership.

He said that the problem before many colleges today is how they can become smaller without losing their greatness. Colby, he added, is not so small as it used to be, but it is still small enough to be able to offer the student that closeness of contact with the faculty so valuable in a college education. It offers companionship not attainable in a larger college. Recalling the close contact the late President Arthur J. Roberts enjoyed with the boys of the college, the speaker said that Colby has always been a place where a man of moderate means but unbounded energy could be sure of getting an education. Dr. Herrick called attention to the increasing influence of business in our college today. "Nevertheless," he added, "I am confident that a college still exists for the sake of culture and for character. That is what we are here for." He added that the important item facing the students is a larger interest in straight thinking. In conclusion, he said that, sooner or later in after life every one will find himself face to face with trouble of some kind or other. If he has not acquired from his college education that something that makes trouble easier to bear, because of rational thinking, then he has missed the most valuable part of his education.

knowledge of planning a course from their weekly conferences with the heads of the departments. The student undergraduates gain through the advantage of the small classroom and the personal relationship with the instructor. The system has passed the stages of experimentation and has been so successful in all its purposes that it has been adopted as an institution. After the talk given by Mr. Breckenridge the meeting was open for discussion upon the good and bad points of the system, and of its possible adoption at Colby.

VESPER SERVICE IS CONDUCTED BY "Y"

Dr. Everett Herrick Gives Talk on The Present Age

Dr. Everett C. Herrick, president of Newton Theological Seminary, Newton, Mass., was the speaker at a vesper service conducted by the combined Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations in the college chapel at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

The service, which was attended by nearly one hundred students and friends of the college, was led by Professor Clarence H. White. A vocal solo was rendered by Miss Janet Locke, '31, of Berlin, N. H., assisted at the piano by Miss Eunice Foye, '31, of Boston, Mass. Prayer was offered by Rev. William A. Smith, pastor of the First Congregational church of Temple street, after which Professor White introduced Dr. Herrick.

Dr. Herrick took for his subject the thought that "our age is characterized, or differentiated, from the others by a spirit of expectancy rather than one of reminiscence." He stated that, as great things are still being discovered and expected in the scientific world, so may we, in a religious sense, stand in a spirit of reverence and awe before the things that have been revealed to us, and in a spirit of expectancy as to what is to come in the future. He added that in such an age as our own, characterized as it is by the rapid development of the machine, we must take care to catch up with the age spiritually. We must free our souls from machinery. The great question facing us tomorrow is whether we are going to make machinery our master or our servant.

PIONEER OF COLBY WOMEN STUDENTS

This gloomy comment and prophecy appeared in the "Oracle," the year book published by the students of Colby College, Waterville, Maine, and was read and approved by the young men of the class of 1871: "Shall young ladies be admitted to our colleges on the same terms as young men or shall they not?" has been the question. The voice of Colby at the last meeting of the Trustees was: "They shall!" However we may regard the admission of young ladies to the privileges of the institution, it still remains a fact that they are admitted, and all can do nothing better than accept the situation. One young woman has entered the class of '75. The prospect is that there will be four or five more at least."

MARY LOW CARVER

Though Colby opened her doors to women four years earlier than either Smith or Wellesley Colleges, for two years there was but one woman student at this Maine institution. This daring young woman was Mary Caffrey Low, born in Waterville, Me., and educated in the public schools and Coburn Classical Institute of Waterville.

Up to the time she entered college, there seemed to be no place in New England where young women might be trained for the teaching profession. With studies for women still in the experimental stage, there was no good reason for young women competing with young men.

Mary Caffrey Low was determined that she would take advantage of all of the opportunities that came her way and so she sought a college education. Although she was condemned and criticized by many for her unconventional venture, she courageously remained, working diligently on her studies.

Few men could compete with her scholastically. It seemed as though Mary Low instinctively knew that she was on trial and she must succeed. She asked no favors from her fellow students. There was no change in the requirements of the curriculum and she not only attended classes and recited with the men, but contended for the same honors.

As a result, this courageous young woman, gifted with unusual beauty, and of dignified mien, was, at the end of her four years, the highest ranking student in her class, of which she was the only woman graduate. She was a member of the Phi Beta Kappa honor society, and during her Junior year, class prophetess.

By entering Colby College, Mary Caffrey Low blazed the path for others, and two years after her entrance, four other young ladies were enrolled. Drawn together by the desire for close companionship which naturally followed this isolation, these five young ladies formed a club which they first called "Hokolophuman," and which later became the Sigma Kappa Sorority. This sorority has forty-eight chapters now throughout the United States.

Throughout her college days, Mary Caffrey Low was treated with deference and respect by her fellow-students. They admired her for her spirit, intellect, and personal charm. One classmate on his return home from a class reunion paid her the following tribute: "As for the lady of our class, we agreed that she is equal to the finest in the land."

In the year 1921, Mary Low Carver was present at the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Admission of Women to Colby College, and delivered an address. Judge Leslie Cornish, then president of the Board of Trustees, who presided over the exercises, said in introducing Mary Low Carver:

"Fifty years ago, a boy and girl presented themselves to take the prize entrance examinations at Colby. On this occasion, the boy who took the second prize takes pleasure in presenting as the sponsor of the evening 'the girl' who won the first prize."

In 1910, a final honor was bestowed upon Mary Low Carver when the degree of Doctor of Literature was conferred upon her. She died in 1927. Her memory will live forever in the hearts of Colby women and she will always be remembered as a pioneer among college women.

Y. W. C. A. HEAR TALK ON LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Mrs. Robert Owen Addresses Assembly of Colby Women

The members of the Y. W. C. A. were very fortunate this week in having for a speaker Mrs. Robert Owen of Oak Grove, an alumna of Colby. Mrs. Owen chose as her topic the League of Nations, a subject on which she is particularly well qualified to speak from her personal study of the League at Geneva. During the summer of 1927, Mrs. Owen went abroad for the particular purpose of serving as a hostess at one of the international centers at Geneva. While there she took courses at the University and studied the League of Nations.

After being introduced by Miss Carolyn Herrick, Mrs. Owen announced that her talk would be of a factual nature, but the information which she gave proved to be very interesting as well as instructive.

After a brief history of the League, Mrs. Owen explained in a very clear way its organization. She described the three branches: the Assembly, the Council, and the Secretariat; and also the so-called "Wings" of the League; the International Labor Organization and the Permanent Court of International Justice. Throughout her talk, Mrs. Owen frequently referred to the part of women in the work of the League. She mentioned the fact that the important position of head of the Social Service Section of the Secretariat is held by a woman, Lady Rachel Crowley of England. Moreover, in the office of the International Labor Organization, there are one hundred and fifty women workers in comparison with only one hundred and eighty-eight men.

Mrs. Owen emphasized the point that the work of the League is not solely to make treaties but has a very broad scope, limiting its interest from nothing that will benefit the world at large. The importance which is attached to the League in Europe, she illustrated by the fact all school teachers on its organization, shop-girls can speak fluently on the subject, and even little children know more about it than the average American.

In answer to the typical American question, "How much does the League cost?" Mrs. Owen gave interesting statistics to show the relatively small cost of its operation, and the just way in which this cost is divided among the countries in proportion to their population, resources and distributed wealth.

In dealing with the question of the relation of the United States to the League, Mrs. Owen stated in the last six years, this country has had official representatives in over fifty conferences, and the only activities of the League in which the United States has no representation are the meetings of the Assembly and Council, The Mandates Commission, and the Administrative-Minorities Section.

In conclusion, Mrs. Owen gave the principle of the general educational value of such an organization as the League in the words of "Stat" Wilson: "To fit a life to its personal relations and its world environment is true education."

Deputation Team Visits Farmington

The Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. groups of the college were jointly represented by a deputation team which visited the churches of Farmington last Sunday. The team was composed of Neal D. Y.; Ruth E. Ramsdell, '32, of Charleston; and Mary E. Allen, '30, of Houlton, of the women's division.

On Saturday evening a social was held conducted by Garabedian. The morning services Sunday at the three churches were led by the team splitting into three groups, Bousfield and Miss MacDougall, at the Baptist; Garabedian and Miss Ramsdell, at the Methodist and Morrow and Miss Allen, at the Congregational.

INC. DEPARTMENT STORES
"quality—always at a saving"

Once upon a time the up-and-coming young man bought his new suit in the Hardware Department and it was guaranteed to wear.

Today he buys it at our store. We've improved the fit considerably, and it wears almost as long.
