Herb DeVeber Wins Condon Medal

Arne Lindberg Elected As Class Marshal

Herbert W. DeVeber, of Newburyport, Mass., was elected to receive the Condon medal at a joint assembly of the senior men and women Tuesday morning. At the same time Arne O. Lindberg, of Stockholm, Me., was chosen to act as Class Marshal at the commencement exercises.

The Condon medal is awarded yearly to that member of the senior class who, in the eyes of his classmates, displays to the utmost of his ability the qualities of a good college citizen. DeVeber is a worthy recipient of the medal. He has been active in athletics for four years, is a member of honorary and professional societies, and this year has acted as President of the Student Council and Senior class.

Arne Lindberg was a member of his freshman track team, is Secretary-Treasurer of the Senior class, and was recently made a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Seven Colby Delegates At Bangor Conference

Seven delegates from Colby attended the Student Volunteer Conference at Bangor Theological Seminary this week-end, a conference which may be memorable in the history of campus religious enterprises. The unexpected development came from a suggestion by a student delegate, which will probably lead to the forming of a Maine unit of the New England Student Christian Movement, and to a certain extent a reorganization and increased cooperation between the organizations of the other Maine colleges and normal schools. Serious consideration and planning is being carried on now concerning the various relationships of the proposed project.

The main program of the Convention included several lectures by Professor M. Bradshaw, based on his world tour of last year, in which he gave his impressions of the "Wise men of the East" including such leaders as Kagawa and Ghandi; he also spoke of the different phases, both of beauty and sordidness, of Buddhism and Hinduism; another lecture was built around a set of beautiful colored lantern slides of foreign scenes. He spoke particularly of the heroism and true spirit of service he observed among the Christian missionaries.

The lively discussion, and the opportunities for acquaintance with students and counselors of other colleges in Maine, and the thought provoking addresses, made the conference very worth the effort of going during a busy season of campus activity. The Colby delegates were: Mildred Colwell, Jean Cobb, Ruth Yeaton, Irene Rockwood, Alice Manley, and Myra Whittaker.

NOTICE

There will be a meeting of the nominating committee for the officers of the Sophomore class of the men's division of next year in the Economics Room, Recitation Hall, Friday, May 1, 1936, at one o'clock.

Montgomery Contest Takes Place Friday

About a hundred representatives from 52 high schools in Maine, New Hampshire and Massachusetts will gather at Colby this Friday afternoon and evening for the 27th annual holding of the Montgomery Prize Speaking Contest.

Preceding a meeting of coaches and contestants in the chapel at 10:30 Friday morning, the guests will attend the morning assembly. At noon all will gather at the Ware Parlors for a luncheon served by the Alliance of the Unitarian Church.

Preliminary contests judged by 30 members of the Public Speaking department will be held at two o'clock in the afternoon. Contestants give declamations not more than six minutes in length. Three or more of the best speakers from each of these groups will be selected for the finals at 7:45 in the evening. However, no announcement will be made of the finalists until they are called on Friday night. President Franklin W. Johnson will preside over these exercises.

A banquet for contestants and judges followed by a program of after dinner speaking precedes the finals. This will also be served by the Alliance of the Unitarian Church at the Ware Parlors.

While here the high school speakers will be entertained at fraternity houses. The general committee of undergraduates who are in charge of entertainment arrangements are as follows:

Harold W. Hickey, '36, Chairman, R. B. Moore, '36, J. E. Glover, '37, H. W. Wolff, '36, L. J. Hartt, '36, R. I. Gammon, '37, E. H. Shuman, '38, B. C. Stallard, '37, M. G. Ryan, '37.

Mrs. Donald Wright Here Next Monday

On next Monday at a voluntary assembly in Chapel, members of the women's division will have the opportunity of hearing Mrs. Donald Wright of the New England Student Christian Movement and executive of the Y. W. C. A. Mrs. Wright, who was at Colby earlier this year to discuss plans for the coming Maqua conference, is now coming to present the importance of this conference to the entire student group.

Held annually for one week in June and open to girls from any of the colleges and normal schools in the northern part of New England, this year's Y. W. C. A. get-together will take place at an especially beautiful site on Lake Winnepesaukee, N. H.

Since Colby Y. W. C. A. has in the past been responsible for some of the most prominent delegations at these meetings, it urges Colby girls this year to take advantage of the chance to hear Mrs. Wright on Monday. Many Colby students have regarded their experience at Maqua as among the most memorable events in their college career.

Since it is possible for the Y. W. C. A. budget to offer help to a limited number of students in bearing the expense of this conference, it is suggested that girls interested in attending get in touch with Iola Chase as soon after Monday as possible.

Prof. Warren Speaks In Men's Assembly

In his address to the men's assembly on Friday, April 24, Professor Elmer Warren, Director of the Personnel Bureau, explained that letter men and "good" fellows are desirable characters but that today big business respects brains and big business expects you to give all you have.

He continued by saying that college personnel work has over thirty recognized principals and functions, but two of them, vocational guidance and placement, are of interest to the individual. Vocational guidance has been overcome in the past but today some sane work is being carried out. However, the real decision is the product of logical and mature thinking of the individual concerned; all the college official can do is suggest sources of reliable information concerning work, and requirements for success in it. As for placement, all the third person can do is facilitate the meeting of employer and employee.

The speaker continued by saying that there are many desirable qualities for a job seeker to possess. Good health, good physique, good voice, vigor, charm of manner, general poise, good character, and helpful attitude are some of them.

"Character is, of course, the most vital quality to be desired. This includes not only academic honesty and faithfulness but innate loyalty in little things and enthusiastic interest in the job at hand. It also includes purpose behind action; readiness to accept responsibility and carry it through; spontaneous action in matters of cooperation; in a word, thoroughly dependable, with an optimistic, helpful attitude," said Professor Warren.

He explained that one should master the art of applying for a job, that is, selling ones' mind to an employer. This takes considerable preparation and this preparation will put one in a selected class and give him a job better suited to his tastes and abilities.

"Be ready for your opportunity when it comes," concluded Mr. Warren, "few people think of this."

Professor Colgan Gives Radio Talk

Professor E. J. Colgan recently delivered a radio address over the Augusta station. The text of the address, entitled "Mental Health of the School Child," follows:

As soon as we begin to consider the influence of education on the child, we learn that formal training in the school is not our only concern. The child does not begin his existence in the school, nor does his education begin there. Ordinarily, his history begins in the family,—in fact, it begins in a family whose origin is lost in the mists of an ancient morning. This latest arrival of our species carries in himself the accumulated heritage of our race on the biological side, and is born into another heritage of social institutions and customs and manners which he must learn to use, to which he must learn to adapt himself, and which, we hope, he will help to improve. Springing from the fam-

Mules Picked To Win Crown For Fourth Time

Wadsworth Is Praised For Athletic Support

(Second in a series of articles on leading Alumni supporters.)

What Colby athlete doesn't know "Mr. Wadsworth?" Can you name many in the past that haven't known this man who is unquestionably as loyal a rooter as any college ever had? Year in and year out he has stuck with Colby and her athletic teams, win or lose. Year after year he has appeared at most of the athletic contests that Colby has competed in, sometimes going back to his home in Winthrop Center a disappointed man, but always seeing some good in the boys and looking forward to better things the next time the occasion should arise for his presence.

The above paragraph is a good description of Hon. Herbert E. Wadsworth, former Chairman of the Board of Trustees, and a man who is interested in the "New Campus for Old Colby" project as much as he has been interested in everything else during his connection with the college, both as an undergraduate and as an Alumnus.

I have no doubt but that when the construction of the new buildings gets underway that he will be found up there more than once a week looking over what he has wanted to see for a number of years—a bigger and better Colby. Mr. Wadsworth likes boys, and enjoys nothing quite as much as seeing them, having fun in recreational activity.

His hobby is athletics, and he happily admits that it will always be his pet amusement. Mr. Wadsworth is not one of these men whose words speak louder than his actions. His loyalty to Colby is active as a man who is willing to do his share to keep his Alma Mater going. He is the exact opposite from that type of Alumnus whose loyalty is on his tongue alone.

Last year he said he experienced the happiest moment of his life when he was awarded the Colby "C" at the athletic assembly. No one ever deserved a letter any more than he. Many Colby athletes of the past can recall those generous football, baseball, and hockey banquets that Mr. Wadsworth so graciously provided for

LEAP YEAR CO-ED WEEK

The rumor is prevalent about the campus that the week from May 10 to May 16 will be "leap year co-ed week." During this period Colby's sweetest are supposed to do all the calling for dates, and out of courtesy to their superior companions, they are supposed to offer to carry the men's books at the slightest provocation. 'Tis rumored that the girls will be asked to call for the boys at the houses on the evening of the freshman dance, which is to be held May 16.

All you lassies who have been seeing someone else go out with the boy of your dreams will now be able to step in and right the situation before it is too late. Perhaps the boys will stand for "dutch treats," so remember girls—May 10 to 16.

Experienced Pitchers Are Lacking To Roundymen

The State Series diamond play will get in swing Thursday afternoon when Dave Morey brings his formidable Bates Bobcats here for the opener. Last spring Colby lost the initial series contest to the Moreymen by a 7-4 score, but it doesn't look as though they will be able to do much this year due to lack of pitching.

Bernie Marcus, who knocked out two long homers in his debut here two years ago, will bear watching as will Stan Bergeron, who has played ball in the Cape Cod League for several summers. Marcus is a distance hitter, but hasn't found his eye yet this year. Bergeron is reputed to be just about the class as far as college first basemen go. He fields like a big timer and hits with the best in the college league.

In the Bates outfield with Marcus will be Johnson, a slugger from Hallowell, and Bill Dunlevy, former Kents Hill star. Bill Callahan, nephew of Bill Carrigan, will be on second; Stan Sherman at short; with either Bud Morin or Joe Pignone at the "hot corner." The veteran Ronny Gillis will do the catching.

Coach Morey has been working overtime trying to uncover a couple of starting pitchers. Bob Fish, Hal Malone, Don Webster, Bob Darling, and Cap Atherton constitute the Bates flinging nucleus. Malone is a freshman and has looked good in his work to date, but he hasn't very good control. Webster, a former Edward Little high pitcher, seems to have what it takes, but needs seasoning. He is the third Red Eddie to pitch for a Maine college against Colby this year as Reidman of Maine and White of Bowdoin are numbered as Alumni

Prizes Won In Hamlin Contest

Violet Hamilton and John Chaenaty won first prizes in the annual Hamlin Prize Contest, oldest of Colby's public speaking contests, held in the chapel April 22. Mary Crowley and Nathaniel Guptill took second places.

Ten members of the class of 1939, six from the women's division and four from the men's, took part in the contest. Prizes of ten dollars and five dollars were awarded the winners in each division. Amy Thompson, '36, presided, and members of the public speaking classes acted as a board of judges. Miss Thompson and Harold Hickey trained the speakers.

Miss Hamilton gave a selection from the play "Dust of the Road," and Mr. Chaenaty delivered Cartor Glass' recent Senate speech defending Woodrow Wilson from the attacks of Senator Nye in a Senate probe. Miss Crowley's reading was "The Magic of an Hour" by Bomanete and Mr. Guptill spoke "Immortality" by Taylor.

The other contestants were Ernestine Wilson, Alma Moses, Rhoda Wein, Alyson Hooper, James Williams, and Wilson Piper.

Tennis And Golf Teams Invade Other States

Tennis Sextet Out To Better Last Record

Colby's tennis team left Waterville on Tuesday afternoon for its invasion of Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Poor weather conditions have made it impossible for the Blue and Gray racket wielders to do much outdoor work, and this lack of practice is expected to hamper their play in the opening matches.

This afternoon the Mules played the Brown University team at Providence. Tomorrow the Colby boys face Tufts at Medford, and on Friday will oppose the Rhode Island State court stars at Kingston, R. I. The experience gained during this trip should do much to prepare the Colby team for the state intercollegiate matches which begin soon.

Those who made the trip are Jim Ross, Izzy Rothblatt, Dick Currier, Pete Allen, Fred Demers and Leo Seltzer.

Golf Aggregation Shows Four Veterans

Four of Colby's veteran golfers set out for Boston yesterday, where they will play matches with Brown University, Tufts, M. I. T., and Boston College on successive days, April 29, 30, May 1, 2, respectively.

The team members are Bob William, Noyes Ervin, John Reynolds and Ernest Roderick. All four men have played varsity golf for four years and have been instrumental in twice winning the Maine state championship.

The above mentioned men were selected after a qualifying 36 hole round had been played at the Waterville Country Club.

The scores were as follows:

Ervin, 84-80-164.
William, 85-79-164.
Reynolds, 81-87-168.
Roderick, 86-84-170.
Gregory, 85-86-171.
Thompson, 89-87-176.

Gregory and Thompson will fill out the fifth and sixth places for the state matches.

Blue And Gray Meet Northeastern Sat.

Many Outstanding Runners On Husky Team

Mule track followers will be given their one and only chance of the season to see the Colby track team in action on Saturday afternoon when the strong band of Northeastern-spiked shoe artists will be entertained. The Huskies from Huntington Avenue have one of the strongest teams in New England and made an excellent showing in the Greater Boston Intercollegiate last Saturday.

They have a couple of fine sprinters, two excellent hurdlers in Allan Hakanson and Ray Henderson; a first class quarter miler in Dick Ellis; a worthy distance rival for Cliff Veysey in Bill Johnston.

Cecil Daggett and Bob Turbyne will have their troubles winning the dash events. Cecil should do 10 1-5 for the 100 Saturday; while Turbyne hopes to do the 220 in 22 flat, which will be approaching George Mittledorf's State Meet record.

Paul Merrick will have to be content to place in the quarter when he faces the flying feet of Ellis. This boy has done the 440 in 49 seconds, and may approach this mark Saturday.

Johnston will probably press Veysey in both the mile and two mile. He has done the mile in 4.30 and the longer distance in 9.50. He has a terrific sprint, and unless Cliff can hold him off, there is apt to be a surprise.

Hakanson and Henderson are two of the foremost timber toppers in the East and both will make outstanding bids for places on the Olympic Team. The blond Hakanson is a football star with worlds of speed. Henderson is a former state champion.

Sol Fuller is in good shape and will be out to prove that the dopesters are incorrect in predicting victories for these two visiting bar climbers. So looks good and should break the Colby high hurdle record of 15 4-5 before the year is over. In the lows he has done 25 1-5.

Kern LaFleur, Whit Wright, Normie Walker, and Bob Neumer will score in the weights; while Oladell, Stan Washuk, Howie Brackett, and Wendell Anderson have chances to score in the jumping events.

Jim Sandler, captain of the Northeastern team, will compete in the high jump and broad jump. He is the Jewish Olympic Champion in the high jump, and should set up a new Seaverns' Field record as he has done 6.4. In the broad jump he is good for 23.6 when he is right.

COLBY OPENS SERIES (Continued from page 1)

of the school where Ralph Peabody is coaching at the present time.

Coch Rounly will probably select Laurel Hersey, a big freshman left-hander, to try to win the first Series contest. Hersey has won favor in the hearts of the Colby fans by his unassuming attitude and hard work. He is one of the most modest boys ever to win a varsity position in his freshman year. Laurel has all it takes to be a winner this year and we are picking him to set the Bobcats on their heads in the opener. Herby DeVeber, Ed Cleveland, and "Lefty" Cole will be ready to step out on the mound if needed.

The infield will have Jack Sheehan at first, Charlie Geer at second, Rum Lemieux, short; and either Don Maxim or Larry Haynes at the third sack. Ray Farnham, Maynard Irish, Val Duff, Doc Rancourt, and Art Hannigan will see service in the outfield.

Art Brown will be behind the bat doing his usual dependable piece of work. Art has shown that he is going to be a hitter this spring, and don't be surprised to see him compile a comparatively healthy batting mark before the year is over.

Probable batting orders:

Colby Bates
Lemieux, ss ----- 2b, Callahan
Duff, cf ----- cf, Marcus
Sheehan, 1b ----- 1b, Bergeron

Blue And Gray Tracksters Seize Win Over Vermont

Veysey Takes One And Two Mile Events Easily

Colby's track team defeated Vermont 75 2-3 to 66 1-3 in a close meet at Burlington, Saturday. The result of this meet came as something of a surprise to the Colby followers as the Mules were supposed to be many points weaker than they have ever been before.

Cliff Veysey re-established the fact that he is his old self again when he won the mile and two mile races with comparative ease. He was clocked in 4.31 and a fraction for the shorter race; while his time for the two mile was just over ten minutes. Herby DeVeber used good judgment to take second honors in both of these races.

In the sprints Cecil Daggett and Bob Turbyne did a good job to take the two first scoring places in each event. Kern LaFleur scored heavily in the weights; while Normie Walker, the sophomore football star of last fall, came through with a good heave in the shot for second place. Sol Fuller, Whit Wright, and Stan Washuk were the other first place winners. It was the broad jumping of Washuk and Brackett that gave Colby the meet.

The summary:

Broad jump—Won by Washuk (C); 2nd, Brackett (C); 3rd Trudeau (V). Distance, 20 ft. 2 in.

120 high hurdles—Won by Fuller (C); 2nd, Trudeau (V); 3rd, Connor (V). Time, 16.2.

First Section Of Booklet Appears In This Issue

This is one section of a forthcoming booklet for secondary school students to be issued under the auspices of the Personnel Bureau outlining the opportunities in and suggested preparation for various occupations which are open to college trained men and women. The material is being compiled by Joseph C. Smith who is submitting it for publication in the ECHO in this preliminary form hoping that it may stimulate suggestions and criticism. Other vocations will be taken up in succeeding issues.—Editor.

LAW

The profession of law is basically the regulation of relationships between people, individually or in groups. Personal freedom is only possible under some system of rules and regulations, and the law is the system which has been worked out through centuries of trial and error to insure this liberty. The courts apply the law and the lawyers are the agents of the courts in administering justice. Thus, in its broader sense, the legal profession has a high duty to perform in society, and no one should take up law who does not conceive of his career on such terms.

It should be understood that this is probably the most overcrowded of the professional fields today. It has been estimated that twice as many lawyers are entering the profession each year as can be absorbed to advantage. Nevertheless, anyone who has the ability to do better than average work in a high grade law school is practically assured of a good position and a remunerative career. While a mediocre lawyer has a hard time to eke out an honest living, the upper ranks are rewarded with financial wealth and social prestige. A judgeship offers one of the most dignified and highly respected positions in society. In passing, it is interesting to note that for nearly half a century, the Supreme Judicial Court of Maine has not been without from one to three Colby graduates on its bench.

As in all professions, the practice of law is tending to be highly specialized, although there are opportunities, especially in the smaller cities and towns for the "general practitioner." Most lawyers will find themselves better suited either for court practice or for office practice. Court practice will consist of pleading of cases, either criminal or civil, and requires a command of oral expression and intimate knowledge of human nature, as well as legal acumen. Office practice is made up of legal work not connected with litigation, such as drawing contracts, deeds, wills, papers of incorporation, and the like as well as advising clients on the legal aspects of their personal or business matters. There are corporation lawyers, real estate lawyers, constitutional lawyers, maritime lawyers, patent lawyers, and so on, indicating special fields in which one may become especially well versed and therefore called upon for expert counsel. While women lawyers are distinctly in the minority, sex is no bar to a successful career in the legal field.

The law is often regarded as a stepping stone into some other career, notably politics. Many employers have a high regard for a law school training as a foundation even for positions which are non-legal in character. Sometimes a council for some corporation becomes so valuable to that organization that he steps out of private practice into an executive position. The practice of law often leaves room for side-lines, such as dealing in real estate. Like the practice of medicine, although primarily an individual career, there are many salaried positions for capable lawyers such as positions with banking houses, trust companies, insurance companies, industrial concerns, municipal, state and government departments.

Before one can practice law, he must have passed the bar examinations in the state in which he intends to practice. These examinations in many states are becoming increasingly difficult, and although it is theoretically possible to pass without any formal legal education, it is hardly advisable for most individuals to make the attempt. A three-years' law school course is the normal preparation.

So far as the better law schools are concerned, the course is extremely rigorous and designed to weed out those of only average ability. Two years of college work is the minimum requirement for all reputable law schools, and for entrance into any of the "big five," a college degree is necessary.

Law schools do not prescribe any specific courses that have to be taken as undergraduate work. Experience shows that the subject matter of practically any college course will prove useful to a lawyer at some time during his career. However, pre-law students are apt to select either history or economics as their major field, and those who go to law school usually report that they received the most benefit from the following courses at Colby: English constitutional history, because it makes clear the development of Anglo-Saxon common law; American history, because it provides the background for our own law; argumentation and debate, because it gives practice both in close reasoning and in effective speaking in public; all English courses, because they train one's appreciation of the niceties of language. The mental discipline of higher mathematics and physics are also advised by many law schools deans. Other courses which offer valuable subject matter for future lawyers are: political science (both American and European), economics, sociology, psychology, ethics, corporation finance. A high school secretarial course is apt to prove very useful for a young lawyer. It will be of distinct advantage to enter college with four years of Latin and continue the subject for one or two years, since this language, and the Roman culture which it reflects, contains the roots of modern jurisprudence.

However, the best possible preparation for law school does not lie so much in what courses you take as how you go about your undergraduate work. It is absolutely essential that you learn how to study. You must develop skill in taking lecture notes. You must learn the technique of assimilating masses of information, sifting out the important facts and pigeon-holing them in your mind for future use. You must get practice in close reasoning and precision in thinking. You must be able to "cram" large numbers of facts into your mind at short notice. None of these things can be learned directly, none are taught by any professor, but all can be obtained as by-products of a liberal arts college course diligently and conscientiously pursued.

THE CLINK

Tonight's the night; the time is right;
Let's all be off to town.
A sip from good old Bacchus' cup
Would cause nary a frown.
Gay men are we, and full of glee,
As glass on glass we quaff.

This "Cracker Club" reunion
Would make our parents scoff.

Midst tinkling of the glasses,
And the gargling of the Ale,
Is heard a low, metallic voice
From mouth of face so pale.

"Let's off to the race all men of my gender.

"Tis well to be gay tonight,
For tomorrow in the Chemical Lab,
A Bluebook will heave in sight."

"Old Tom, you speak well," quote
Vatican Jack,

With a twinkle in his eye.
"Let it be either Castle or Armory
You know how the time does fly."

So off they went, a jolly group,
Each one a real "Jim Dandy,"
Little caring that inside the hall
Stood Waterville's finest handy.

"These college boys give me a pain,"
Said he with a caustic wink.
I think I'll mosey around a bit,
And get one of them for the Clink.

At that very moment came through the door

The finest specimen of youth.
Broad of shoulder and tan of skin,
A gentleman forsooth.

He forgot to pay the ticket man

As he stood there by the door.
And when the custodian of the club
came up,
Our gentleman almost fell through the floor.

Then up spake one of his fifteen chums:

"Oh, put us all in the Clink.
We wont mind the foul smelling air
If you give us but a drop to drink."

"You guys are smart," the flatfoot said

As he turned the lock with his leaden keys,
And pushed the inebriates into the coop,
Where they were packed as close as a hive of bees.

Now each Friday night when the time
is right

The officer smiles with a caustic wink.

For he knows this is the night
He'll refill the damp-walled Clink.

There's a moral to this poem, me lads,
When the nights are as black as ink,

Stay clear of good old Front Street
way

Or you'll wind up in the Clink.

Colby Leads Again . . .

A few weeks ago, we commented on the fact that Colby College has led the way in several fields of endeavor, citing the extra-curricular survey and the intramural sports program as examples. Since that time, other instances of Colby's progressiveness have been called to our attention.

Surprising to many of us is the news that Yale University is considering the advisability of changing its requirements for membership election to the Phi Beta Kappa Society. If an amendment soon to be introduced to the chapter is passed, high scholarship ratings will no longer be the sole requirement in the election at the end of the senior year. The type and difficulty of courses taken by a student and his improvement or decline in his four years also would be considered. The proposed amendment provides that "all seniors who are among the highest 12½ per cent of the class and have not yet been elected shall be considered, and from this group shall be elected by a three-quarter vote of the undergraduate chapter that number of seniors which shall bring the total number to 10 per cent of the class."

The plan is meeting with some objection from Dean Clarence W. Mendell. The important point for us to consider, however, is that whether or not the proposed plan is adopted, it is exactly the plan which the Colby Phi Beta Kappa chapter adopted last year. Of course, the Yale authorities in all probability did not have in mind the Colby plan, but Colby has led the way.

We learn also that Bowdoin College is establishing a placement Bureau similar to that of the Colby administration, while no less an institution than Harvard is advocating the dropping of Latin as a requirement for the Bachelor of Arts degree.

We do not pretend to implicate that these colleges have made changes because Colby has done so. We do firmly say, however, that the word "Dirigo" which appears on the emblem of this state might well be emblazoned upon the Colby seal. Again we say, "Colby marches on!"

Demers Will Head
Next Year's Oracle

Frederick Demers, '37, was elected editor-in-chief of the 1937 Oracle at a meeting of the 1936 board held yesterday. Demers served as assistant editor this year. Robert Hussey, '37, was reelected business manager, Barbara Hutcheon, '37, women's editor, and Roger Tilley, managing editor.

The elections were held earlier this year than is customary since the present board is ready to retire and it is desired to give the new board an opportunity to start immediately on the Oracle for 1937.

Members of the 1936 board who are retiring are, James Coyne, '36, editor-in-chief, Dorothy Gould, '36, women's editor, Frederick Banzi, '36, managing editor, and Gerald Ryan, '37, John Rideout, '36, and Lucille Pinette, '37, associate editors.

All of the copy for the 1936 Oracle is in the printer's hands and delivery will be made on May 22. Several new features are incorporated in the book. The opening section and division pages will be printed in three colors, blue, gold, and black. The title page spread in the opening section depicts a panorama of the present campus, in blue and black, against the skyline of the projected new campus in gold. Three separate plates were carefully made to insure perfect register of the three solid colors. The campus views were made from bas-relief photographs, a comparatively new development in photography.

The usual feature section has been eliminated this year and replaced by a pictorial section made up of six bled-off pages of snapshots of the kaleidoscopic scenes of a college year. Class lists have been removed from the body of the book and placed on alternate pages of the advertising section together with a biographical directory of the faculty. The book has been dedicated to a prominent alumni and the editors were able to include an obituary and photograph of the late Dr. Perkins.

The cover selected is of dark blue fabricoid with the words, 1936 Oracle, stamped on in a lighter tone of blue, and the backing stamped with gold letters and rules.

Professor Strong
At Forum

Without so much as the aid of a mirror, Professor Everett F. Strong on Sunday evening at Fellowship Forum enabled a group of college students to take a look at themselves. Choosing not his beloved music as a subject as had been expected, but, rather, following up a chapel talk on the sense of values, Professor Strong suggested that students seriously consider the aims of American education.

With his background of European experience, he sketched in the surprise with which foreign students usually regard our colleges. In Europe, schools aim definitely at the cultivation of the intellect, and that alone. Here our system broadly attempts the development of personality and the relating of that to society. It is, to Professor Strong's mind, at times difficult to observe the carrying out of that aim in the American college.

Mentioning specific instances, Professor Strong suggested that the Colby student could well pay more attention to language, voice, dress, and manners. Tennis he had always considered as one of the most gentlemanly of sports, and an attractive game to watch. But "spindle-shanks and hairy torso" do not make it a pretty game on the Colby campus.

Over-organization, to Professor Strong, may at times hinder the development of personality. In his opinion fraternities and sororities might be more beneficial if they did not aim too much at standardization. They should seek persons with real originality to get the contribution of their genius.

Professor Strong ended his talk with a plea for better support of such cultural activities as concerts and dramatics. He believes that there is a real thrill in the interplay of personality that can never result from the hearing of canned music or the viewing of shadows upon a silver screen.

PROFESSOR COLGAN

ily, it is in the family, as a member of it, that the child ordinarily makes his first contacts with our world.

There is general agreement among educators and psychologists that the pre-school years, when he is practically under the sole control and influence of the home, are profoundly important years in the life of the child. Then are laid the basal habits of conduct, of character, and of personality. It is then and during the first two or three years of school life that the fundamental emotional life is determined, that parents and teachers most profoundly affect the child and determine in most positive manner the quality of his life throughout all his adult years.

Evidently, to achieve the development of the whole child, as its often declared aim, the school not only must cooperate with the home, it must also interest itself very actively in the home life of each child. The school cannot begin on an isolated plateau to which it lifts its pupils in some miraculous elevator when they come to the school playground and the classroom. School and home mutually cooperate in a common endeavor to prepare children for the opportunities and responsibilities of adult life. Without underestimating the significance of the child's life here and now, we are obliged to recognize that homes and schools exist as preparatory institutions; their work is based on the assumption that children do grow up and must be prepared to meet the inescapable demands of adult society. This means that, however much they may differ in other respects, the home and school are one in the attempt to socialize the child.

We say that home and school must cooperate in the development of the whole child. We need to ask: Cooperate for what? to what end? Our goal needs definition. We may say that teachers and parents must cooperate to prepare the child to be healthy in body and mind, to become a citizen, to earn a living, to form good habits, to learn good manners, to develop special talents, to prepare for marriage and parenthood, to serve his fellows, to be reverent, to be happy.

Phi Delts Cop Volley Ball Title From K D R

The Phi Delt's powerful volley ball squad swept through their schedule with but one defeat, and thoroughly trounced their nearest rivals, the K. D. R.'s in the final play-off and clinched the 1936 championship. They suffered their only defeat on an off day at the hands of an aggressive Zete sextet.

The champions boasted of a tall, smoothly working team that is almost unbeatable. Their outstanding players were Tarbell, Kammandel, Clark, Bonner, Magee, and Deans. In the play-off between the Phi Delts and K. D. R.'s, the latter were smothered in two straight games, twenty-one to fifteen, and twenty-one to one.

The second place K. D. R.'s, led by Kyle, Stinneford, and Combella, were defeated only by the league leaders. The Zetes took third place with only two adverse scores. The fine play of Dick Hopkins also kept the D. U.'s in the first division.

Colby Nine Wins From Bowdoin

In the second exhibition game of the season on Seaverns Field Saturday afternoon, two husky freshman pitchers, Ed Cleveland and "Lop" Hersey, pitched Coach Eddie Roundy's Mules to a 4-0 decision over the highly touted Bowdoin nine.

Cleveland started in the box and allowed only three bingles in the five innings of shut-out ball that he pitched. The big Houlton right hander has worlds of speed and his control of that fast underhand delivery Saturday was all that could be asked for a cold day. Hersey pitched his usual steady brand of ball. "Lop" seems to be getting his body behind his pitches more than he formerly did and this is bound to increase his speed, which is plenty good as it is.

In the third Art Brown opened up with a "Texas Leaguer" for a single. Maynard Irish, first year center fielder, then worked Bud White, former Edward Little pitcher, for a free ticket. It was then up to Jack Sheehan, and Jack wiped the Prom dust out of his eyes long enough to slap a triple to deep right field. Two runs came across the plate.

The other two were scored in the fourth. "Doc" Rancourt and Don Maxim, two more freshman finds, layed down neat bunts for safeties. "Doc" got all the way around to third on an infield out with Maxim pulling up at second. A balk by pitcher White put Rancourt across the plate; while Maxim scored later on two flies to the outfield.

Wilbur Manter, brother of Colby's one and only Ellie, seemed to have more "stuff" than any of the Bowdoin pitchers, and he is the man Colby will have to beat to take this State Series. He has a fast one and about the best curve in the state.

SPLASHING IN SPORT

By RUSS BLANCHARD

Sun-shod Seaverns Field will be the scene of the opening of the State Series of 1936 tomorrow afternoon as Colby's White Mules, defending champions, entertain the bounding Bates Bobcat. Victorious in their pair of pre-season exhibitions with Bowdoin and Maine, the men of Roundy officially open the state competition with excellent chances of garnering their third straight win of the year. "Ed" Cleveland, blonde fastball artist, "Lop" Hersey, ace Mule southpaw, and "Lefty" Cole, also a southpaw fastball hurler, are the likely candidates for the pitching nomination in the Bates opener. Behind the pitching choice of Roundy will be the sparkling Sheehan, Geer, Lemieux and Maxim infield. "Art" Brown will do the catching and from Farnham, Duff, Irish, Hannigan, Rancourt and Caddoo will be chosen the outfield trio.

Who will win the State Series? Well, I frankly don't know (for sure) but upon the authority of a defending Colby squad, I pick the Mules to retain their honors. In fairness, however, let us briefly consider the potentialities of Bates, Bowdoin and Maine.

Bates, third a year ago, apparently lacks a pitching balance to go much higher this season. In "Stan" Bergeron the Bobcats have one of the state's outstanding players and Johnson, Marcus and Dunleavy all possess a world of natural ability. Yet upon the broad shoulders of "Bob" Darling rests the burden of pitching the Lewiston college to the top. It seems impossible that Darling, even though one of Maine's best college hurlers, will be able to tame state batters to the extent of a title for the Garnet.

Bowdoin, playing its best ball, could cause a good deal of trouble for in "Will" Manter the Polar Bears have an ace. The play of the Polar aggregation here last week indicated, however, that a lack of steady support and of a scoring punch will prevent their finishing at the top. Gentry, Shaw and Rutherford are all capable Black and White performers and will bear watching as the year progresses. It is then to the University of Maine, under "Bill" Kenyon, that Colby can look for her most strenuous opposition. The Orono nine, supporting the pitching of a pair of her ace twirlers, Kilgore and Green, will be the team for the Mules to beat for the championship. The play of "Milt" McBride, whose work at short a year ago stamped him as one of the best ballplayers in this state, will be sorely missed by the Black Bears but they will, nevertheless, be dangerous.

Colby golf and tennis teams visit southern New England this week to participate in a portion of the best schedule that either has enjoyed in recent history. The varsity golfers, Roderick, William, Ervin and Reynolds, meet Brown, Tufts, Boston College and M. I. T. on successive days while the tennis team faces Brown, Tufts and Rhode Island State. Both squads, full of confidence, should turn in credible showings as wearers of the Blue and Gray and despite the greater experience of the opposition, the results should be worthy of the Colby representatives.

Northeastern's track team comes to town on Saturday and with it comes Raymond Henderson, star hurdler of the Huskies, who only last week-end distinguished himself by winning the 200 meter low hurdle event in the Greater Boston Intercollegiate held at Cambridge. In addition there will be Allan Hakanson, another capable hurdler, who also conquered a select field last week in the 110 meter high hurdles. Arthur Johnson will be the Northeastern color-bearer in the distance events and

the SANTA MARIA
Columbus' Flag Ship

*the ship that brought Columbus to America
..and tobacco
to the world*

*.. and now
throughout the world
smokers are saying
They Satisfy*

History tells us that when Christopher Columbus' sailors took tobacco back home with them everybody hailed it as one of the first new pleasures in years.

Today tobacco gives more pleasure to more people than ever before.

Many different claims are made for tobacco, but most everybody agrees on this . . .

Smoking is a pleasure and the cigarette is the mildest and purest form in which that pleasure can be enjoyed.
