Rev. Alexander Henderson And Rabbi Levi Olan--Two Leaders Of "Bull Session"

Fraternity Embassy To Take Place February
28 - March 2

With the announcement of the men coming to the Fraternity Embassy February 28th to March 2nd, interest is fast rising among the fraternities in anticipation of the "glorified bullsessions." This novel plan sponsored by the "Y" and Religion department has enlisted the services of some of the outstanding men of New England. Father Harold Lemoine, Assistant at the Church of the Transfiguration, The Little Church Around the Corner, of New York City; Professor Melvin Deems of the Bangor Theological Seminary, Bangor, Me.; Dr. Philip Guiles, Professor of Pastoral Psychology at Andover-Newton Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass., were among the leaders discussed in previous issues of the ECHO.

Miss Alice Pattee Discusses Poetry

At the Arts Club meeting, held last Thursday afternoon from 4-5:30 in the Alumnae Building, Miss Alice M. Pattee was the speaker. The formal part of the meeting was preceded by a social half-hour during which the members toasted marshmallows and sipped hot chocolate. The atmosphere thus created was one that was quite conducive to the thoughtful mood to the remainder of the hour.

Miss Pattee's subject was "The Great Love Themes in Poetry." As her time was limited, she picked four which are especially famous. These were selections from The Coming of Arthur by Tennyson, from Tristram by Edward Arlington Robinson, from Dante's Inferno, and as a climax, the high-spots of Dante's great sonnet.

World Problems Summarized By Betty Mansfield

Advises Against Boycotting
Of Japan

"We've seen all this before—this is where we came in. Let's get going," was the challenge that Betty Mansfield, Field Secretary of the Student Peace Campaign, placed before Colby students at the Forum Sunday night. She emphasized the similarity of present world conditions with those preceding the World War, and stated that the work of students must be to spread peace information.

Miss Mansfield, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania in the class of 1937, is representing the Friends Peace Service in a tour of thirty New England colleges. In her talk with Colby students, she presented a summary of present world conditions, explained the policies of neutrality and of collective security, and pointed out the extent of the prevalent war propaganda. "Think, or perish," she said, quoting Van Loon. "It would be tragic," Miss Mans-

College Holiday Ball In Search Of Name

Plans are already underway for the big College Holiday Ball to be held in the Alumnae Building on Friday, April 22. The occasion will be the annual College Holiday week-end with a big celebration on Thursday night, the dance on Friday, and on Saturday there will be a track meet, a baseball game and the chasers in the evening.

Last year the ball was called the Blue and Gray Swing, but this year the hop will be known by a different name and the submitter of this new name will get a free bid to the ball. Write your proposed name for the

Now Fulfilling An Engage- ment In Dallas, Texas

College Holiday—that period of complete relaxation and enjoyment—will again take a prominent place in our diary. This year the festivities begin April 21st and conclude the 23rd. This three day week-end of hilarity which was inaugurated last year and proved such a great success is a permanent feature, if present indications are reliable. Not only was the music of Claude Hopkins and his orchestra enjoyed by all, but the second great queen of the year was presented in the person of the crowned head of College Holiday.

This year's program is still partly a secret but we are able to state at this time that the superlative rhythms of Mal Hallett and his orchestra will

Glee Club To Make Local Appearance

The combined Glee Clubs under the very able direction of Mr. John W. Thomas will make their first local appearance Friday evening, February eighteenth at eight o'clock in the Alumnae Building.

The Clubs have already given several concerts this year, included among which are the broadcast over station WCSH, Portland, and a concert at Brunswick with the Bowdoin and Westbrook Junior-College Clubs.

Great variety will be heard on Friday evening's program. There will be selections offered by the Class of '40 Quartet, by the Women's Quartet, by the choir and by John Daggett, solo-

Exhibition Of Lincoln Prints Collection Opens At Library

Presented To Colby By The Family Of The Late G. F. Terry

Myra Whittaker Coming To Colby

Colby is welcoming back to its campus this week-end Miss Myra Whittaker, for two years a most indispensable member of our faculty.

Miss Whittaker who is now employed as field secretary for the Baptist Institute for Christian Workers in Philadelphia is making a tour of New England youth conferences this week and plans to spend Saturday, Sunday and Monday in Waterville as the guest of the churches as well as the college.

Upon her graduation from Colby in 1935 Miss Whittaker was asked to become student councillor in which position she acted as adviser to the Y. W. C. A. and Forum, and served as a link between the college and the local churches. As a result of her able and enthusiastic services, many students became affiliated members of the churches and the bond between the college and the churches was strengthened. One of the most important factors in increasing that feeling of fellowship was the founding by Miss Whittaker and a group of other students of the Student Forum, which meets every Sunday night in one of the local churches. This Sunday night Miss Whittaker will address the Forum on a topic in keeping with the World Federation Day of Prayer.

Contains Earliest And Last Portraits Made Of Lincoln

The Colby College Library opened recently to the public and students an exhibition of nearly one hundred likenesses of Lincoln to commemorate the birthday of this great American President.

This rare and interesting collection containing copies from famous photographs, portraits, engravings and sculpture of Lincoln's life has just been given to the College by the family of Mr. G. F. Terry of Waterville who spent a life-time in assembling the pictures and sculptures of Lincoln from many sources. The prints are of all sizes and types, including large steel engravings, facsimiles of wood cuts from old magazines, photographs by Brady and others, and copies of painted portraits.

I. R. C. Delegates Deliver Reports

Reports from the three Colby delegates to the I. R. C. conference at Colby Junior College were given at the International Relations Club meeting on Feb. 11. The meeting was held in the social room of the Alumnae Building, which gave a delightfully informal touch to the proceedings. The three delegates were Francis Prescott, Charles Russ, and Charles Dolan.

Francis Prescott, president of the Club, opened the meeting by summing up the two speeches that were delivered to the conference as a whole. The first of these was on the European Crisis and the second on the Tragedy of Spain. He then described how each delegate attended a separate round table discussion; the meeting was then turned over to Charlie Russ, who read Charles Dolan's report on the work of his table on the subject Europe and International Security. At the end of the discussions of this table a vote had been taken on many of the important questions, the results of this vote seeming to emphasize particularly the importance of reciprocal trade treaties.

Francis Prescott then spoke about his round table which had the interesting subject of the British Foreign Policy. The gist of that discussion seemed to be that Britain's vacillating policy had been due to her unarmed condition, but that with the present

Classical Club See Slides On Greece

Dr. Finch presented several new slides on Greek architecture at the Classical Club meeting on February 8. These slides were of a particularly fine caliber and were entirely new to the club, several of them being new to Dr. Finch himself. Miss Mary Marshall and Rev. John Brush's snapshots, made on their respective trips to Greece recently, were used as originals of some of the slides.

American architecture based on ancient models was also revealed in Dr. Finch's slides, who correlated the ancient with the modern in a most interesting way.

After the program a short business meeting was held, followed by an entertainment.

Mules Barely Beat Williams

Showing a complete reversal of form from the two previous evenings, the Colby varsity basketball team won a thrilling contest at Williams 37-36. When the gun ending the game went off, the ball was in the air, shot by Batten of Williams, but though it touched the hoop, it failed to go through for the two points that might have changed the verdict.

Bus Burrill, Mule forward, was the big gun in the Colby attack, and it was he who put on steam and shot Colby to the front again in the final ten minutes. The count remained 35-36 for nearly five minutes; then Burrill hit the draperies with the telling shot to put Colby in the fore.

Jeffs Tounce White Mulers

After trailing at the half 15-10, the Amherst quintet staged their customary last period drive to overtake the Colby Mules 43-28. Captain Fred Schweizer of the Jeffs appropriately copped the scoring honors for the evening by ringing up five baskets and three fouls for 13 points. Burrill, star right forward, sank three baskets to lead the Mules in scoring. Five of his six points came in the first quarter, enabling the Mules to keep up with Amherst.

During the first half, Burrill, Malins, and Spina put Colby out to a temporary lead by some very pretty shooting. However, Amherst scored five straight baskets as the second period got under way, and from then on, Colby fought a losing game.

Mules Swamped By Jumbo Five

A strong Tufts basketball team brushed aside a closing-minute scoring splurge by Colby's Victor Malins, overwhelming the Colby quintet 46-25.

After a second half barrage of 14 points in ten minutes, Tufts relaxed, only to see the speedy Malins, high scorer for the Mules, cage three consecutive baskets before the final whistle.

Tufts, however, seemed in command throughout, taking an early lead and holding a half-time edge of 20-12 through accurate shooting by Weldon and Varney.

SPORTOGRAPHS

By Dwight Sargent

In the biggest athletic week of the college year Colby teams have engaged in thirteen contests and have been victorious in two. One would be accused of being superstitious if one were to say that the number thirteen had anything to do with all this bad luck so we won't say anything about the number thirteen. One of the Colby wins was that one point victory over Williams by the basketball squad. The boys did well to win one game against four very good basketball squads. It was "Bus" Burrill again that popped the winning basket in the Williams game. Bill Webber did the same thing in the Bates game the other night.

If anybody is going to pick an All-Maine basketball squad this year they would do well to include Burrill in their line-up. The other victory in thirteen contests was the frosh track win over South Portland. Here again we have one man shining forth as the outstanding performer. Johnnie Daggett was the one man wonder of the meet scoring four first places for a total of twenty points. Daggett also won the relay for the frosh by out running the South Portland anchor man. Vic Malins was the high scorer in the Tufts game and turned in creditable performances in the other games.

Roundy's best basketball combinations are composed entirely of juniors and sophomores. It makes us look to next year when victories will be as common as girls studying their French lessons while eating in restaurants, but not quite so out of order. . . Paul Merrick is the captain of the Colby track team but has been out of competition this winter because of an operation. He was sadly missed by the Colby team at the B. A. A. games. Paul is the only real quarter miler in college.

Every winter sports loving Colbyite should have read Bob Anthony's editorial in last week's ECHO. It does seem a waste of talent and opportunity that Colby doesn't support a winter sports team. We've got everything but the official sponsoring and backing, and with a little united student agitation something might be done, Colby without a winter sports team is like the man who lived by a lake all his life and never went swimming. We've got the car and now all we need is some gas.

The Colby basketball floor was the scene of Waterville defeating the state champions Winslow team. Some of the Waterville people didn't seem to have any sporting blood as they wouldn't take two to one odds on their team, but it's just one of those unpredictable things. . . The way to arrange an ideal winter carnival for Colby in 1939 would be to start in on Thursday night with a double header basketball game in the Field House, then follow with a hockey game on Friday afternoon, and on Saturday have the ski meet in the forenoon and a Maine collegiate ski jumping contest in the afternoon. (Provided of course that a ski jump is erected in another year). Such a set up would really give the Colby Winter Carnival the pep and significance which it deserves.

Hope you saw the picture of the winning snow sculpturing entrant of the Dartmouth winter carnival. It was a fine piece of statuary but it wasn't really much better than the D. K. E. lion as far as actual artistry is concerned. The Dartmouth queen didn't beat Louise Weeks for looks either, so the Lewiston Journal wasn't too far off after all when it said that the Colby carnival would rival that of Dartmouth. But who are we to quibble?

If you want to get the straight of the thing ask Jay Cochrane about the sprint heat at the Boston Games in which he ran against World's Champion Benjamin Washington Johnson. Jay didn't win the heat but he claims

Frosh Lose To Presque Isle

The freshmen dropped their third game in as many starts at Presque Isle high school last Wednesday evening, 30-28.

The winners, leaders in the Aroostook county league, started off the battle strong, but weakened later in the third period and the yearlings climbed within striking distance for the first time during the game.

At the close of the first period Presque Isle held a 10-3 advantage and a 19-10 advantage at the half, but the Frosh cut this down tremendously in the next session as Gil Peters tossed in baskets from all angles of the floor. At the end of the third period the score was Presque Isle, 22, Colby, 20.

The McCoy coached youngsters matched the winners basket for basket in the fourth period, but this was all they did and they just could not overtake them for the two point lead.

Mules Lose Fourth Game By 5 Points

Playing its fourth game in successive nights, the Colby varsity squad went down to defeat Friday night, 33-28 before a fast finishing New Hampshire five. Both teams were on even terms midway through the second half, but the Wildcats went into a short lead at this point and were never headed from then on.

New Hampshire jumped into the lead early in the game, running out to a 6-3 lead. At this point Colby started to come back, and with Burrill and Dobbins leading the attack, they pushed out to a 13-11 lead at the half.

For the first few minutes of the second half both teams fought on even terms with neither having any advantage, and Colby holding on to its scant lead. But the Wildcats, paced by Dunn and Hanson, tied up the ball game midway through the second half, and went on to win from here.

Frosh Fall Before Stearns High School

The freshman hoopsters lost their first invasion of a four game schedule through the north at Stearns High last Monday evening, 33-20.

It was the first time this season that the entire five had looked so bad in the same game. Gil Peters, who usually fails to tally anything less than points in the double figures, was held at bay through the contest.

Despite the fact that the Freshmen held an 8-6 advantage at the end of the first period, the Stearns team opened up in the next quarter and left the floor at half time with a two point advantage. The score was Stearns, 14, Freshmen 12.

From here on it was all the home towners until the end of the game. At the close of the three quarter mark, Stearns held a six point margin and a 21-15 lead. In the last period the winners strengthened their lead.

Every man on the winning team scored at least two or more points to help contribute to the victory. Gruber was outstanding for the vanquished.

Hockey Team Drops Two Games On Trip

The Mule sextet, which was unable to face New Hampshire and Williams on its recent trip because of warm weather, met Boston College and Brown at the Boston Arena and Providence Arena and lost 6-3 and 5-4 respectively.

The defeat from Boston College came as a great surprise since Colby was highly favored after its great tie game with the fast Boston University outfit. The B. C. team was paced by its second line of Flynn, Janusus, and Prior, which accounted for five of the six goals. B. C. opened the scoring at 11:56 of the first period when Flynn dented the draperies on an assist from Janusus. However, Leo Lemieux came right back for Colby to tie the score six minutes later. The period ended with the score deadlocked at 1-1. Whereas the first period had been slow, the second period speeded up considerably as B. C. scored three times and Colby twice. The Eagles' second line tallied twice within the first three minutes before Fortin could score for Colby unassisted. Davis, the B. C. left-winger, countered half-way through the period for the Heightsmen's fourth goal, but Fortin again scored on an assist from Captain McGee in 19:09 to bring Colby within one goal of a tie. In the final period Colby was unable to score as the Eagles tallied twice more. The outstanding man on the ice throughout the whole game was Ray Fortin, the frosh center-ice man.

On the following night the Mules met Brown at Providence in a game which resulted in a heart-breaking 5-4 loss for Colby. The Mules led 4-1 entering the last period, but when the twenty minutes were up, the Bruins had scored four goals and achieved a hard fought victory. This game was very speedy throughout, much unlike the game the preceding night. Brown got the jump as Welch scored on an assist from White in 3:22. However, eight minutes later Tony Bolduc knotted the count as he golfed a perfect pass from Lemieux into the net. The second period was all Colby as three goals were scored by Lemieux on an assist from Fortin in 9:39, by Fortin unassisted in 18:09, and by Bolduc only twenty-five seconds later, again assisted by Fortin. The third period, however, turned out to be a different story. The Brown team pounded away in earnest as it scored the four goals which brought it the victory. The winning goal was scored with just fifty seconds left to play. Even though the Mules were defeated, they played brilliant hockey throughout as they bowed to a numerically superior Bruin squad.

Houlton Noses Out Frosh By A Basket

In a speedy fourth period, Houlton High School outscored the Colby freshmen, last Tuesday night, winning the game 35-33. It was the second game of a road trip for the Frosh and their second defeat.

The Frosh spotted the shire towners 11 points at half-time tying the score at the three-quarters mark, but losing out in the final hectic period.

Ricker Too Fast For Freshmen

Ricker Classical Institute made it two straight this season over the Colby freshmen, beating them last Thursday night 42-33.

The Frosh were outplayed from start to finish, with Ricker offering a very strong attack. Everyone of Ricker's regulars scored at least twice. Bud Beach with 12 points was the Frosh's best player.

This game ended the freshman tour in Aroostook, and the young Mules failed to win one game of the four played during this tour.

Colby Participates In B. A. A. Games

Coach Cy Perkins took eight of his star track men on a journey to Boston to compete in the Boston Athletic Association games held there last Saturday. Here the Colby tracksters met with the finest in New England amateur track.

The Frosh mile relay team ran against the crack squads of New Hampshire and Northeastern University. Jerry Cochrane of Colby picked up an early lead in the mile relay as he drew away from the other two runners in a flashing start. He had to slacken off in the final stage of his run and the New Hampshire man in a brilliant sprint overtook Cochrane, who started Powers in second place. Powers found the competition a little too steep in the second round and dropped back to third as he started Goffin. Goffin was unable to close the gap. Bubar, the anchor man, put up a gallant scrap but the speedy New Hampshire and Northeastern stars did not give him a chance in the final round. New Hampshire took first place in this event, with Northeastern second. The Frosh team received medals for this race.

The Varsity mile relay team followed in a performance that closely matched that given by the yearling squad in placement. Dwight Sargent, fast sprinting junior, easily led the Massachusetts State man, but was unable to beat out the long-legged speedster from Tufts. Cole started in second place and ran a strong race but started Mac Stevens in third place. Stevens trailed his opponents and also left Don Gardner at the end of the line. The game sophomore star did a good job of running off the last part of the mile and was on the heels of the other two men as they broke the tape. Tufts took first honors in this relay, with Massachusetts State at second.

Jerry Cochrane ran in the 50 yard dash but was unable to place. This might have been due to the fact that he ran in the same heat that included such stars as mighty Ben Johnson of Columbia, undefeated this season and a world champion. It was good experience for Cochrane. Johnson won this race by turning on the heat in the final sprint to come in six inches ahead of Perrin Walker of the New York A. C., with a time of 5:5 seconds.

Colby To Meet Bates In Track

Colby's indoor track season will get underway this week-end when the Blue and Gray speedsters and strong men tangle with Bates in their first dual meet of the season.

The weight events will be run off in Lewiston, Friday. The basketball court which occupies a good deal of the available floor space in the Colby Field House forced the shifting of the weight events to the Bates home ground. The running events will be held in the Colby Field House, as will the jumping events, on Saturday afternoon. The freshman teams of both colleges will also meet both Friday and Saturday.

Coach Cy Perkins is depending on Carl Hodges and Frank Baker to gar-

Mules To Meet Northeastern

Colby's varsity hockey squad will officially conclude its season on the Front Street Arena tomorrow afternoon when the Mule pucksters seek to avenge an early season defeat suffered a month ago at the hands of Northeastern University. At that time the Huskies turned back the Milleltsmen 5-4 in an overtime tussle but the recent addition of a quintet of freshmen skaters should rank the Colby sextet as the favorite to reverse the January decision.

Northeastern brings to the Mule-town a heavy, hard-checking team. In Johnny Byrne, husky winger, the Huskies possess the leading offensive threat in the New England Intercollegiate Hockey League for the Boston boy ranks ahead of all of the league's scorers including Gerry Derosiers of Boston University and Russ Martin of New Hampshire. Likewise the Massachusetts team is strong defensively for Karol Krystan, its captain, was the outstanding goalie ner points for the Mule team in the weight events. These two, with Maynard Levin and big Dick Lovejoy also as potential scorers, will compete in the 35 pound weight and discus events. Hodges, Allen and Phil Upvall will be entered in the shot.

Bob Neumer is likely to be the most powerful threat to Bobcat scorers in the jumping events. He will be counted on to score for the Mule in the broad jump. Neumer and Wendell Anderson will compete in the high jump while Marcus Oladell and Don Thompson will vie with Neumer and Bates tracksters for top honors in the pole vault.

Seasoned performers will carry the Colby colors in the running events. Paul Kittredge, Dwight Sargent and Archie Follett are due to compete in the 40 yard dash and the 300 yard dash. Kittredge is likely to score in the short dash while speedy Dwight Sargent looks like Colby's best bet in the 300.

Don Gardner, sophomore star and anchor man on the varsity relay team, may come through in the 600 yard race. Lefty Cole, who is shaping up as a fine track man in spite of lack of experience, may also place in this race. Cole will also run in the 1000 yard run. Floyd Fitts, Mac Stevens and Allan Brown will also vie for honors in this race.

Phil Charbonneau and Elliot Drisko, veteran Mule tracksters, are conceded a strong chance to capture honors in the two mile race. Jim Chase and Clarence Fernald will race over the mile route.

in New England a year ago.

Working with Byrne on the visitors' forward line will be diminutive Joe Gagnon and Jack McCarthy while the speedy Ray Johnson, Griffin and Motherall will combine on a second wave. Sessler and Milner will care for the defensive posts.

No changes are expected in the Colby line-up for season's final encounter. Ray Fortin, Leo Lemieux and Tony Bolduc, speedy freshman trio whose showings in Boston and Providence last week greatly impressed college hockey followers in both cities, will answer the opening whistle in the forward positions and will be spelled by Captain Bob McGee, Warren Davenport and Gordon Jones. Norm Walker and Bud Hooper, senior defensemen, will play in front of MacIntosh, yearling goalie.

On Saturday, a combined junior varsity and freshman team will journey to Hebron Academy to face the undefeated and powerful Big Green sextet. A year ago the preparatory school team took the measure of a similar Colby outfit and the Arthur coached charges will again rank as heavy favorites to turn back the Mules.

"RADIO CITY REVELS" ARRAY OF FUNSTERS, VOCALISTS, DANCERS

Five of Hollywood's foremost funsters, its newest singing sensation, and its latest dancing "find," have principal roles in RKO Radio's new musical offering, "Radio City Revels," opening Saturday at the State Theatre.

The quintette of mirth-makers includes Bob Burns, Jack Oakie, Milton Berle, Victor Moore and Helen Broderick, all of whom have won wide fame in purveying comedy to screen fans and radio listeners. The singing star is Kenny Baker, who has zoomed into popularity in recent films, notably the "Goldwyn Follies," while the dancing discovery is Ann Miller, the sparkling little brunette who was Ginger Rogers' dancing partner in "Stage Door." Hal Kemp and his orchestra, and Jane Froman, singing star, are also featured along with Buster West and Melissa Mason, dancing eccentrics.

Baker and Miss Miller have the romantic leads in the new film, with Burns and Miss Broderick in a comedy romance. An ingenious plot weaves laughs and action and catchy song numbers into a delightful piece of screen entertainment. Herb Magidson and Allie Wrubel wrote the tunes for the production by Edward Kaufman, which was directed by Ben Stollhoff.

You'll Like Colby

By TOM BRENNER

Every time we get a letter with "Colby College" on the envelope we hide under the bed, trying to get up courage enough to open it. The letter is always from the Dean, and he wants us to come over and chat "at our earliest convenience."

Furiously we think over what we have been doing, and oddly enough we can think of any number of things the Dean might like to see us about. By the time we finally get over to the Dean's Den we are sure that not only was our past week an indiscretion, but that our whole life is a ghastly mistake.

So we felt pretty good the other day when we glanced in the Dean's Den and saw President Johnson in there, seated right there on the edge of that chair in front of the Dean's Desk, explaining something in what we gathered to be a hysterical tone. We know well enough how you felt, President Johnson! But we'd like to know what you've been up to, so we can steer clear.

Now it can be told: Lincoln was undersexed. We didn't want to say anything about it until we were sure that Professor Griffiths had told both the men's and women's divisions, separately, but now it can be told without even one pretty blush.

It makes us feel awful to think that we've been going our way (and what a way we've been going!) eating, sleeping, and cutting classes just as if nothing were amiss, and all the time, Lincoln was undersexed.

Maybe we didn't get it straight, but it seems that Lincoln was that way because a little girl told him to change the part in his hair, and he did. Never change the part in your hair for little girls, people.

Two people were walking down the street the other day, as is the custom in Waterville. It's a cinch if they weren't going to Parks' they were going to Verzon's or the Puritan.

One of them said, "Did you see those jackasses they have up there built out of snow?"

"No," said the other one, slipping and falling. "It's probably a Colby White Mule you saw, anyway."

"Yeah, I guess it was a white mule, then," said the first one, picking his partner up.

"Say," said the second one, feeling the hurt place, "where is this Colby, anyway?"

"It's up there."
"You mean up by where we live?"
"Yeah, sure."

Where, but in Maine, would we see baby carriages with detachable runners on them, for going on snow? We suppose they put pontoons on in the spring?

Down at the radio station Monday night Professor Wilkinson put a lot of fire and democracy in his speech. He was just a little bit disturbed when he found out it was only dress rehearsal he had done it for.

The old print of Colby in last week's ECHO (called Colby As Of Yore) is almost identical with Colby as of now, but not quite. The old print shows a horse and buggy ripping past the college, and the horse and buggy is not like Colby of today. In this enlightened age in Maine, the horse would have on, not the old-fashioned breeching harness, but a light, swanky chain-harness.

Ye Gladiator Column

Dear Gladiator:

We're so sorry to drag out the ole skeleton again—Reading Knowledge Requirements—that's right. But so many "afflicted persons" have been weeping on your broad sympathetic shoulder, we're sure our little contribution won't be an imposition. Any way, please take it all only at face value.

Here at last, is our opinion on the subject—of course we're Modern Language Majors—"cela va sans dire." Let us assure you that as a race, we language majors do not consider ourselves demi-gods or Phi Betes or anything such; we still plead the case of the "great general average." But I ask you, gentle Gladiator, have you ever received any such plaintive documents on the subject of Science requirements or History requirements or any requirements but that perfectly dreadful, unsurmountable Modern Language test?

We "herein admit" that it may be exceedingly tiresome to these oppressed, self-styled "esprits de geometrie" (mathematical minds) to be compelled to undergo this test-torture, but do these poor martyrs ever consider the converse of their lament?

In our humble opinion it is quite as annoying to our "esprits de finesse" (intuitive minds) to be required to muddle through two or more science courses (please don't forget the labs) a field that is generally on the very edge of our ability of conception.

But, Mr. Gladiator old top, you must give in to the fact that we have muddled through all these inconceivable formulae, bacteria, and dinosaurs. May we meekly point out however, that although with some few of us the problem may be so hopeless that we solve it only by memorizing temporarily a lot of incomprehensible facts; nevertheless, Mr. Gladiator, we all do agree that it does require some reasoning power, some little ability and effort to understand things outside the realm of our immediate interests. But—the bare essentials now necessary to skim by the reading Knowledge Exam hardly require any such mental gymnastics as reasoning or rule memorizing. Now let's assume that we all (supposedly) speak English and therefore (supposedly) have a knowledge of sorts, of this most difficult language. With this fundamental grammar basis and the foreign vocabulary which can be absorbed through continual exposure to the subject, in courses with the O's as the first number (of which there is by the way, a surprising lack in Science and Math), couldn't anyone, well almost anyone who has an I. Q. high enough to credit his being in college, eke out this so-called unattainable "O" average? Do keep in mind, Mr. Gladiator, that throughout this outburst we Language Majors definitely are not trying to get out of any of our requirements. Indeed quite on the contrary we feel amply repaid for our headaches and confusion by having received an idea (however strange it may seem) of what the other half, the "esprit de geometrie" enjoys.

All this babbling has brought us inevitably to the question of—what is the object of a college B. A. degree anyhow?—Conceding the inviolability and sacredness of a major subject (especially a science major), the object still is not to turn out a specialized technician, but rather to produce a well rounded individual with a broad cultural basis; in other words a social individual well equipped to understand all his fellow associates no matter what life career they may have chosen.

In closing, Mr. Gladiator, may I ask, "Is it true, after all, that we Modern Language Majors get a so much better break than anyone else? In all events, although we emphatically approve of all sensible progressive ideas of education, we will fight tooth and claw to prevent any system from turning out cogs with one use only.

Anon.

I. R. C. Receives Set Of Books

The following books have been received by the International Relations Club from the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

The Defence of the Empire, by Sir Norman Angell.

International Relations Club members are familiar with Sir Norman Angell's views and the clarity with which he presents them. In this, his latest book, he discusses what he considers the failure of the recent foreign policy of the British Empire and makes constructive suggestions for the future. This book should offer challenging material for Club discussions, especially if considered in conjunction with "The Empire in the World," by Sir Arthur Willert, et al, sent in the fall instalment. What do you think, for instance, of the proposal "not to deny the Havenots any rights which we claim for ourselves but to compel them to respect rights indispensable to ourselves which are offered equally to them" (page 190) or of the statement that "the real question is not whether the Versailles Treaty is just or unjust, whether it needs revision or not, but whether Germany is to be the sole judge of the nature of the revision?" (page 76). Look for more of these provocative statements. The book is full of them.

Reciprocity, by William S. Culbertson.

Here you have a "nonpartisan approach to commercial policy" (page vii) written by an outstanding authority on foreign trade, who is well qualified through training and practical experience as Vice-Chairman of the United States Tariff Commission to present the subject clearly and in not too technical a form. The author reviews in detail the reciprocal trade agreements program, but goes far beyond this special question discussing the economic development of the United States, and the expansion of our economic frontiers in foreign countries. He places great emphasis upon our need of policies that harmonize with and advance American economic interests at home and abroad and encourage an enlarged foreign trade. Do you agree with him? If so, why? What bearing does this policy have upon international peace?

Murray Butler.

This book contains the latest essays and speeches by Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. It derives its title from Chapter Seven in which are also to be found the addresses made in a world-wide broadcast on November 11, 1934, by distinguished statesmen of five foreign countries. The author states in the preface in further explanation of the title: "Outstanding is the historic fact that the building of the government of the United States one hundred and fifty years ago and the final organization of the British Commonwealth of Nations by the terms of the Statute of Westminster in 1931, point the way to the building of a government for an organized Family of Nations. . . There is no real answer to the arguments for international understanding and international cooperation. The self-interest of every individual nation is, in reality, bound up with them and sooner or later this self-interest must assert itself and demand recognition and satisfaction." (page xii-xiii).

May I suggest that these notes be read at the next meeting of your Club and that the books themselves be especially displayed. It might be helpful to post the cover jackets on the bulletin board with an announcement of these additions to the Club library, or they could be reviewed in your campus paper. The more widely they are used and read, the better!

Sincerely yours,

Amy Heminway Jones,
Division Assistant in charge of the International Relations Clubs.

Not Answered Yet . . .

The interest aroused by our editorial on Winter Sports last week really amazed us. More than that, it made us feel much less like fanatics and radicals attempting to achieve something which to our mind seems important, but which we feared might appear trivial to others. It would now appear that the question, "Why has Colby failed to sponsor a Winter Sports team?" has already been asked by many students and by some faculty members as well.

That question, however, still remains unanswered.

But the inconsistencies continue to pile up. We find that Bates, Bowdoin, and Maine all have varsity Winter Sports teams and regular coaches. Meets among these colleges have been planned, some have already been held, and only the conservatism of Colby stands in the way of a state Winter Sports meet. Does it not seem logical that our college, located next door to the best skiing facilities in the state, should be the college in the state to turn its official attention to skiing?

Still a further perplexity is the question of values. Presumably, a well rounded athletics program is one which gives the greatest value that athletics has to offer to the greatest number of students; yet, here at Colby right now we see a program which sponsors Hockey, which trains about 25 men; Basketball, which trains about 25 more; but which excludes Winter Sports. The value of both Hockey and Basketball is very great—no one can deny that. How much more valuable, from the standpoint of benefits received, would a winter sports program be, a program which through its varsity and freshman teams, its organized intramural activity, and the instruction of recreational skiers, both men and women, by a capable coach would affect a large section of the whole student body?

Remember, however, that these facts do not answer our question. The plain fact is that Colby still lacks a winter sports program. Perhaps you can find out why.

R. N. A.

On The Languages . . .

So far we have based our argument against the Modern Reading Knowledge requirements on two things, namely, the factor of individual differences and educational waste. Now we shall examine it from the standpoint of its contribution to culture. Although the study of the language itself is conducive toward a well rounded education, the reading knowledge examination tends to detract from it. Not only is the student robbed from taking courses in other subjects, but also other courses are robbed of the student's time. In other words, a student having trouble in passing the examination has to take additional courses in the language, which prevents him from taking some other subject that might be of cultural value; in studying the language more time is given in preparation, even to the extent of borrowing time from other studies. The latter situation is not as bad as the former, for in the one case there is an addition to culture, even under adverse conditions, while in the other there is a subtraction.

At the end of two years of study of a modern language the cultural value can be increased considerably by the substitution of closely allied courses in place of a reading knowledge examination. These courses would be translations by authoritative writers in the respective language. Where the student could only do five or ten pages for an assignment he could now do fifty or a hundred. In this way a better and more inclusive knowledge can be obtained about the customs, history, and writers of that country.

In conclusion we feel that enough has been said against the Modern Reading Knowledge requirement; it is only fair that something be said on the other side of the argument. Therefore, space will be provided for anyone wishing to write.

The editor would appreciate being notified a few days in advance.

REV. ALEXANDER HENDERSON

Mass., Rabbi Levi A. Olan will come to Colby to help in the discussion of the Fraternity Embassy. Rabbi Olan was graduated from the University of Cincinnati, in 1925. After study at the Hebrew Union College he was graduated from there in 1929. Rabbi Olan has been at Temple Emanuel since his graduation from college. The Rabbi being a young man, has the interests of the youth at heart, and has been a much sought-for speaker at various youth gatherings in New England. He was here at Colby last year when on a speaking tour for the Emergency Peace Campaign. Rabbi Olan is considered a leading Hebrew leader of this part of the country.

Alexander Henderson

Rev. Alexander Henderson was born in Aberdeen, Scotland, and educated in the Central High School there. He was graduated from Andover-Newton Theological Seminary in 1918 and from Bowdoin College in 1920. He was Director of Religious Education for United Baptist Convention of Maine from 1920-1923. At present Dr. Henderson is pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, Lowell, Mass. He is a strong worker among young people's groups and leader of Men's Fellowship Class, which is one of the largest brotherhoods in New England. Last summer Dr. Henderson participated in a Seminar Tour through Europe with Sherwood Eddy. Dr. Henderson's experience and interest in young people, make him well qualified to head one discussion group in the Fraternity Embassy.

be a greater step toward the best in modern music. Mal Hallett who is now playing in Dallas, Texas, to the usual enthusiastic audiences, will swing the baton on the stage of the Alumnae Building on April 22nd. Universally acclaimed by college students and the editors of Collegiana as the greatest "prom" band in the country today, Mal will introduce smooth rhythms not heard in these parts for some time. You may have seen the Hallett outfit in Warner Brothers shorts, or at the Hotel Commodore in New York City during their recent engagement there. Or you may have heard them over the Mutual Networks three times a week, or on the diskings boards. Wherever it was you must remember the smooth rhythms of one of the top ten bands in the country today.

Last summer the floors rocked to the applause when Mal Hallett appeared at The Pier in Old Orchard, the "Met" in Boston or at other popular dance salons in New England. When you last heard Mal, Jerry Perkins and Teddy Grace were doing the vocal honors. Recently, however, the aggregation have presented a new singer in place of Miss Grace, in the person of a beautiful blonde whose voice is only surpassed by her beauty. You will want to be at the College Holiday to see and hear this new Helion of Joy with the better Hallett Orchestra.

Mal Hallett is noted for his danceable music, and repeat appearances are his characteristics. Asbury Park Casino, Steel Pier, Atlantic City, and the Coconut Grove of the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles to name only a few, are the high spots on his coast-to-coast tours in recent months.

To those of the student body who were not here last year it might be well to include here a word of friendly advice and warning—make your dates early (now) for the College Holiday, April 21st, 22nd and 23rd, and be sure to hear Mal Hallett and his Orchestra when he plays at the College Holiday "prom." (Fellows: call Circle 6-1345 New York City to contact the blonde beauty—or see her at the "prom"). Incidentally, dancing will be 9:00 to 2:00 A. M.

rearmament program she soon would meet force with force. Charles Russ took over again and delivered a report on his own table's subject; the situation in the Far East. In this report he emphasized the importance and lack of information of the ordinary Japanese toward the war. His table had decided against the national use of boycotting as it merely destroys our own trade and builds up a legacy of hostility. They did however suggest the individual boycotting of Japanese goods.

Each report was followed by questions and discussions, which were the more heated for the informality of the occasion.

EXHIBITION OF LINCOLN

A study of the collection has been made by Professor T. M. Griffiths, of the Department of History, who states that it includes copies of both the earliest and last portraits taken from life of President Lincoln. In an account prepared for the press, Professor Griffiths states that the earliest portrait is from a daguerreotype which was made by Shepherd in 1846 when Lincoln was in the Illinois State Legislature; while the last portrait taken of Lincoln was painted by Wilson and was in the process of being made when the President was assassinated—it was completed following his death.

This new Lincoln Collection now on exhibition at the College Library also includes the three likenesses which were chosen as best by the family. Lincoln himself preferred the photograph by Hessler, and consequently used it extensively for campaign purposes. His son, however, preferred the photograph taken by Brady; while Mrs. Lincoln believed that the one taken by Fassett in Chicago in 1859 to be the best of her husband.

Besides the many portraits, the collection includes a set of eleven photostatic copies of wood engravings of historical events in which Lincoln played an important role. These reproductions were taken from illustrations in Harper's Magazine, the noted pictorial periodical of the Civil War era. This series includes views of President Lincoln reviewing troops, receiving Prince Napoleon, addressing a throng from the Astor House balcony, commissioning General Grant, taking his second oath of office, and so on, ending with artists' conceptions of the act of assassination and his funeral service.

One of the outstanding items in the whole collection is a cast from Lincoln's life mask made in 1860 by Leonard W. Volk. The cast is mounted on a carved oak plaque and bears a certificate of authenticity signed by Douglass Volk, the sculptor's son. The story of the taking of this cast was published by Volk in a magazine article twenty-one years later. The cast at Colby was taken directly from this mold and impresses the viewer as depicting the real Lincoln not some artist's conception of him. In two lines quoted from some poet, Professor Griffiths aptly described the mask:

"The mask doth keep the very form and mold
Of our great martyr's face."

Many actors both on the stage and screen have often impersonated the great Civil War President, thus retaining Lincoln's hold on the imagination of the American people. Included in this Terry Collection now on exhibit on the East Side of the Library are several recent photographs of two actors, Chapin and Ince, who realistically impersonated President Lincoln.

Many pages of the eventful Civil War period history seem to unfold as one examines these numerous Lincoln prints as they stand on exhibition in the Library. One can see with his own eyes pictured the life of Lincoln, noting the changes in his appearance and surroundings, from his early youth to the time of his assassination. Those Colby students, alumni and citizens of Waterville who are interested in this excellent and rare collection that portrays the life of one of America's greatest Presidents, will want to examine for themselves now this recently acquired gift, the Lincoln Prints.

ious people who knew him. For example Masters in his book called "Lincoln the Man" found him reticent, secretive, and cold.

Lincoln as seen by two artists who once did his portrait, would appear to be two men. Brown thought him to be kind and sociable as well as popular among the people. He further added, "Lincoln is supposed to be homely, but I don't think so." The other artist called him a long-necker, gloomy figure with indescribable eyes.

Professor Griffiths finished by mentioning the items on display in the library, and by showing some of the most noteworthy pictures made of Lincoln.

field said, if the American peace movement, with all the years of growth behind it, should fail to make its opinion strongly felt in a crisis." She stated her conviction that neutrality is the best policy in the present situation. Miss Mansfield also gave the reasons for her belief that a boycott of Japan would do more harm than good.

"Read with question marks in your mind," she urged, in warning against the acceptance of propaganda. "The way to combat war is by using our three old friends, education, organization, and legislation."

ist. The concert will serve to give the student body and the people of Waterville an idea of the splendid work which the Glee Clubs are doing this year, and will show them the sort of program which the Clubs have been preparing for some time to deliver on their coming Boston-Hartford trip. At that time they will deliver at least two concerts before Alumni bodies of these cities.

Following the concert, there will be a couple hours or more of dancing to the music of Jerry Cram and his orchestra.

Tickets for this concert and dance are now available and may be secured from any member of either the Men's or Women's Glee Clubs.

Phi Mus Hold Annual Semi-Formal Dance

On Saturday evening Beta Beta chapter of Phi Mu held its annual semiformal dance in the Alumnae Building. The gym was decorated in a very modernistic manner with touches of surrealism here and there.

The patrons and patronesses for the dance were Miss Virginia Swallow, Mr. Norman Palmer and Mr. and Mrs. Willard Gilmore. The dance committee consisted of Ellen Fitch, Donna deRochemont and Margaret Anne Whalen; Jerry Cram's orchestra furnished the music for the affair.

MISS ALICE PATTEE

sequence, Vita Nuova. Through the medium of Miss Pattee's sympathetic voice, one could vividly see Guinevere and King Arthur pass before the imagination; one could suffer with the fair Iseult the anguish of her love for Tristram; one could see, with Dante and Virgil, the lovers, Francesca and Paulo, wandering through Hell; and lastly, one could share Dante's noble love for Beatrice as set forth in the Vita Nuova. These are examples of the greater love themes in poetry, not the frilly little lyrics one is apt to think of in connection with the phrase, "love poems," and Miss Pattee cleverly showed the intensity of feeling that is present in all such nobler romantic poetry.

It was announced by the president, Martha Bessom, that students, for the remainder of the semester, could, for the small fee of twenty-five cents, join the Federation of Arts, which has been formed here by the faculty, and thus attend the remaining lectures. Also, it was announced that at the next meeting Margery Smith would give a reading of The Dark Lady of the Sonnets.
