Lapham Heads Student Government

Bev Lapham

Wayne Westbrook

Charlotte Clifton

Mike Flynn

Dick Lucier, outgoing president of Student Government, announced the results of the 1960 Student Government elections late Tuesday afternoon. Beverly Lapham, sweeping to a clear victory, was elected new president, while Wayne Westbrook captured the vice-presidency. Charlotte Clifton — in the closet contest of the election — became secretary, and Mike Flynn became treasurer.

The student body, 610 voters, overwhelmingly approved the proposed amendment to the Stu-G constitution which provided for giving the Social Chairman a voting position on the organization. Since Mike Flynn, the new treasurer, is this year's Social Chairman, the new amendment is not actually necessary this year.

On the third issue at stake in the elections, the loyalty oath, students voted their disapproval of it by a 2 to 1 majority. The Student Government will publicize the results of this referendum in hopes of influencing Congressional vote when the Kennedy bill, which provides for the abolition of the disclaimer affidavit, comes before the House and Senate within a few weeks.

Most of the new officers did not learn of their election until the early evening on Tuesday. They expressed their satisfaction with the voters' choice of two candidates from each party. Planning conferences together to work out party differences, they were glad of the opportunity to weld the two parties' approaches to Stu-G into one comprehensive attack on the problems facing the organization. They all felt that they were in fundamental agreement over the basic troubles lying in the present organization.

Bev Lapham stated that he intended to effect a few measures right away to improve the body's immediate workability. In that way he hopes to raise the prestige of the group in order to increase its potency. Such measures as improved attendance, possibly parliamentary procedure, and more consistent, effective origination and discussion of ideas within the group itself seem to be among his plans.

Vice-president Wayne Westbrook stated that he does not intend to

Gabrielson Speaker To Be Professor Rivlin

Professor Benjamin Rivlin of Brooklyn College will be the speaker at the next Gabrielson Lecture, to be held March 8 in Given Auditorium.

His subject, "France and the Eur-African Community," concerns African colonial policies, a topic in which he is not only versed but expert. An eminent researcher in the field, he has published numerous articles and two studies. The latter, The United Nations and the Italian Colonies and Self-Determination and Dependent Areas, were published by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

During the Second World War, he headed the African department of the OSS (Office of Strategic Services) in both Washington and Africa. His abiding interest in African and Middle Eastern problems led him to positions in the State Department and in the Trusteeship Council of the United Nations.

Mr. Rivlin's educational background has included matriculation at Brooklyn College and M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Harvard. During 1956 and 1957 he was a Fulbright Resident Scholar in France and North Africa.

Boardman Society Is Created for the Men Independents

Plans were unveiled recently for the formation of a Colby Independent Men's Association. It will be known as the George Dana Boardman Society, named in honor of a nineteenth century Colby graduate who distinguished himself in the field of missionary work. The purpose of the society shall be to "contribute actively to the intellectual and social opportunities" of non-fraternity students, "in order to enrich their college experience." The organization will be located in Champlin Hall where a new first floor lounge has already been promised.

All male students at Colby will be eligible for membership, although those affiliated with a fraternity and interested in joining must enter as non-voting members. The only restriction which will be placed on persons interested in joining the organization is that they meet their semester financial obligations which shall be determined by the society as a whole.

A seven man provisional executive committee made up of seven independents worked laboriously in drawing up a constitution which was submitted to prospective members and approved unanimously at a mass meeting held in Roberts Union. The constitution was approved Monday evening by the Student Government.

Samuel Reshevsky Will Give Lecture & Chess Exhibition

The Chess Club will be host this Sunday to International Grandmaster Samuel Reshevsky. This event is being sponsored by the Student Government and Roberts Union. The famous chessplayer will give a lecture and a simultaneous exhibition at 3 p.m. in the banquet hall of Roberts Union. Reshevsky was born in Ozorkow, Poland, November 26, 1911. He learned to play chess at five and at six was giving exhibitions all over Europe. In 1920 he arrived in the U.S. and traveled throughout the country performing as a chess prodigy, playing up to twenty opponents at a time. After taking ten years off in order to complete his schooling, he returned to chess in 1934 compiling an impressive record in American and International Chess Tournaments. He has won the U.S. Championship five times and was the victor in set matches from such great players as Najdorf, Gligoric, Lombardy and in 1955 a short match with the present World Champion Mikael Botvinnik of Russia.

Let's Get Organized!

The Independent Men have organized. By so doing they have given up part of their independence. It seems they "felt a need" and "organized" in order to do something about it. Good. What this campus needs is more organizations. . . . especially "Independent" organizations. One has to put the word in quotation marks now, for there are "Independents" and independents. I throw my lot in with the latter, for they, at least, have the moral honesty to practice what they preach. That is the wrong phrase, for they do not, thank God, preach. If one cannot see the advantages of remaining independent, then that is their problem. But, apparently that is lost now; everybody else on campus has an organization, therefore, the "Independent Men" must have one, too. Plans include everybody. . . . or will eventually. . . . women. . . . and fraternity men, although the latter will be "non-voting members." I can't imagine why. . . . Most anyone on campus will admit that most of the organizations are dying, but is it necessary to make the death quite so horrible? Could there not be a sort of re-grouping of forces; withdrawal to small groups consisting only of those who are most interested? This may come. . . . but the "Independent Men" will be right in there pitching (or shoveling) with the rest of the organizations. After all, if Stu-G in its new form is to re-distribute funds, support big weekends, and any number of equally vote-attracting projects, why shouldn't there be more organizations to be fed from the surplus? We could organize everyone on campus into some group or other. . . . there could even be a group for those who belong to no other group, and after all, we all have a life-time free membership guaranteed in the "Colby Family."

It seems slightly sad. One is tempted to try to define "independent" and nowhere does the word "organization" appear. Something has been lost. . . . or is there no such thing as a spirit of independence left anywhere on the campus? There are a few. . . . call them diehards if you will, who are still independent. . . . I salute them, as basically honest souls who have looked the situation over, thought about it and made the honest decision to go it alone. They are not alone. . . . but they are the few who are honestly so.

Closely akin to this is the new Stu-G situation. For the sake of keeping that organization alive, 610 people thought it worthwhile to bother to vote. The same 610 apparently split their ballots right down the middle, electing half of each platform. This shows some sign of intelligence, for the combination is the only one which will (1) keep Stu-G from going under, and (2) keep the campus from dying of apathy. They made promises they will undoubtedly not be able to keep, and plans which they will be unable to carry out. But, at the same time, they were elected by those 610 in good faith as being the people best suited for the job. Good luck to them. They will need it, for they have inherited a thankless job and an apathetic campus which is already dying from combination of over-organization and under-interest.

The Referendum question which was also voted on in Monday's trip to the polls raises a question or two of more serious nature. Title, section 1001 (f) of the NDEA was disapproved by a vote of two to one. . . . and it might be interesting to know why. . . . Why people voted the way they did, and why more did not think the issue important enough to even bother to vote. . . . Election of Stu-G is one thing, local, and while important on that level, certainly not as far-reaching as the implications of the NDEA which our faculty so intelligently voted to accept "with objections" or however it was phrased. One can hardly criticize the faculty for their action however, at least they voted.

Reviews of Religious Convocation

John Dixon

by Rosemary Blankenship

The all-college assembly February 23 featured Professor John W. Dixon Jr. as the principle speaker. His subject was "The Search for the Sacramental Form." He quoted the following lines from Archibald MacLeish's play "J.B.": "I would not sleep here if I could.

Except for the little green leaves in the wood

And the wind on the water."

As Prof. Dixon said, the first interpretation of the author's meaning is nature as nature. This he discards because it gives no answer. But as the artist sees it in "J.B.," it is concrete. This is the function of art because it takes a stand and looks at nature with reality. He said that when men use systems, as they do when writing or speaking, they try to explain nature with words. These systems fail because words change. However, an artist's conceptions never change with time.

Job saw beyond the green leaves. He saw God's hand. This is religious art because it shows the relation between God and man. But religious art doesn't bring the viewer into any personal experience with God. When art brings the spectator into the presence of God, it becomes sacramental. When Job became ashamed after defying God, the form became sacramental. An artist must be aware of God's order before he communicates the experience of God. God's role is to inspire man. Prof. Dixon said that a good example of sacramental art was the Coventry in England. The entrance to the new structure is through the bombed ruins of the old. On the altar of the old Cathedral is inscribed these words: "Father, forgive." And over the altar is written, "The glory of the Latter Temple shall be greater than that of the former Temple." As worshippers enter the new Cathedral, they pass from the old to the new. As he said, truly mind, heart, love and compassion are shown in the architecture of this cathedral. It

Clark Fitz-Gerald

by Carol Grosman

Sculptor Clark B. Fitz-Gerald presented his views about religious ideas and how they influence the forms in which he works during his Religious Convocation Lecture. The audience was quickly responsive to his witty comments interwoven with more serious ideas about life and his work, as conveyed with the sparkle of his warm personality.

Now residing in Castine, Maine, the former art professor explained the need for religious art pieces such as crosses and furnishings with sacred decoration, to be less of a commercial, standardized product. Infused with the spirit and character of the church in which it is to be used, the piece should be a personal, individualistic expression which will convey more to the denomination toward which it is focused than the too often relied upon traditional religious decorations. He felt it is his cause to strive for this meaning and quality in the modern religious work he designs for various churches. People must seek for and appreciate the "hand-madness of things" and "the human involvement." Too often, the product of "catalog-buying" are unquestionably accepted to serve religious art needs, whereas they may be far from adequate.

In coordinating the general character of the religious denomination and its particular congregation with the meanings conveyed by the desired furnishings, he noted the importance of materials. The congregation should feel "comfortable" with the materials used. In the steel center of Youngstown, Ohio, steel was a natural material for the artist to employ. Religious symbols familiar to the congregation are the basic subjects of much of his work. Colored slides of candelabras, choir screens and other pieces he has designed accompanied his talk.

was commented that while he told the story of Coventry, the audience seemed to pass through a real experience with God, sacramental in form.

Darby Betts

by Gail Longenecker

On Feb. 22 at 4:00 p.m., Dean Darby W. Betts-delivered the second lecture of the religious convocation, his topic being architecture and religion.

Dean Betts referred to architecture as the "Mother of the Arts," its primary disability lying in the fact that it cannot exist for its own sake. "It exists," he said, "to serve the needs of its client." Architecture must possess the qualities of firmness, commodity (it must be functional) and delight. By delight, he meant that architecture must be satisfying with respect to its proportions, color and harmony.

Instead of the term "church architecture," Dean Betts employs the phrase "architecture and the church." A church cannot be designed properly without an understanding of its theology and an understanding of the needs of its congregation.

Theology, put simply, is the relationship between God, man, and nature. It must be incorporated into a realistic sacrament before it can be understood. In the worship of the church, the entire process of the development of theology is reenacted. Dean Betts stressed the necessity of understanding these theological aspects of the church before attempting to understand the architecture which must be employed.

The problem becomes one of deciding how to deal with these theological considerations in a solid three dimensional form. The church's motif shows the "demand of God" to the outer world; the cross, the prophets, and the "Last Judgement" scene being three of the primary motifs employed. Church interiors served primarily as a representation of the Kingdom of God. Dean Betts believes that this representation must be properly enclosed. He is therefore against the use of plate glass windows disturbing the background of the altar of a church. The interior should look upon the world as it should be, not as it has been changed and corrupted by man. Not only in architecture, but in all the arts, there is more expressed than the mere physical forms to which we are accustomed.

The furniture in a church, in its forms and spatial arrangement should speak the language of the age. All of our modern churches are an architectural attempt to fulfill this requirement. A Gothic Church would be obsolete in the modern world because the Kingdom of God today carries different connotations than it did in the fourteenth century. A church altar should be simple so that nothing will detract from its meaning. Dean Betts referred to the various motifs and symbols found inside and the spiritual weaknesses of our age.

question was directed toward the feasibility of permitting Dean's List students to take a sixth course free of charge. Dean Strider stated that this was unsound. However, if any Dean's List student wishes to take a sixth course and shows a need for the necessary funds, he could probably receive help from the Financial Aid Committee.

Unlimited cutting was the third major question on the agenda. There were several supporting reasons suggested by students including a statement that college students have enough responsibility so that they don't need to be guided by a limited out system. Dean Strider agreed that, in principle, unlimited cutting was feasible. But both the faculty and students agreed that this rule would have to except freshmen and probation students.

Educational Committee Discusses January Plan

by Stewart Stearns

Last week, the Educational Policy Committee, headed by Dean Strider, met with students in an open discussion of the new January Plan, cutting changes, and other questions of policy. Although only a handful of interested students attended, the discussion did bring out some lingering doubts and also weaknesses of the January Plan.

Dean Strider started the meeting by outlining the basic reasons for the conception of the plan. Some time ago, he stated, the faculty complained that there is a lack of intellectual curiosity among Colby students and asked the Educational Policy Committee to explore the problem. Another problem causing the January Plan is the so-called "dead" period between Christmas vacation and first semester exams. A third problem at Colby, according to Dean Strider and the committee, is lack of opportunity of individual study for the student. The committee felt that the January Plan would meet the problem by providing a whole month for a student, uninterrupted by classes, exams, and other activities, to delve into a narrow field of research. Also, the plan would give this same month to half of the faculty so they could put in research in a special area of their field.

A number of valid questions were then raised by students concerning the basis of the plan. One student thought that the intellectual curiosity of students would not be affected by the individual research period of January since those students interested in doing independent study from those students who wouldn't normally do it. In fact, this approach seems to be one of the premises of the January Plan.

Another prevalent question among the students was that if at present juniors and seniors must study in cooperation with a faculty member who has studied in the same field, where will there be enough qualified members to be instructors during the research period in January?

Thirdly, one student reasoned that if one of the purposes of the new plan is to create individual research opportunities, the student would not really get these opportunities until the junior and senior years. (In January, the freshmen and sophomores would follow a more or less general course of research.) Then, the course of study is less defined for freshmen and sophomores than for juniors and seniors.

Since the January Plan is now only at the advanced theory stage, such student questions as number of courses per student and exact dates of the first semester could not be answered at this time. The specific details will not be ironed out for some time to come.

Aside from the January Plan, a

Raeburn Painting

The Raeburn painting, recent addition to Colby's growing art collection, is perhaps the most valuable piece of art ever acquired by the college.

According to Dr. James Carpenter of the Art Department, this portrait of the Scottish noblewoman Mr. Austin of Kilspindie, is a "superb example of eighteenth century portraiture." It remained in the family collection until 1884, and since then has been exhibited in the Scottish Royal Academy, in London, in the Rhode Island School of Design in Providence, and at the World's Fair in 1940.

Sir Henry Raeburn, the artist, was a famous Scottish portraitist who ranks with artists such as Reynolds, Hogarth, and Gainsborough. He is one of the finest painters Britain has produced. He spent most of his life in Edinburgh and devoted himself entirely to portraiture. Raeburn painted every eminent Edinburgh man of his day, including such famous personages as Jeffrey, Stewart, Erskins, and Sir Walter Scott. His characterizations are complete and depend on the pose and gesture of the subject to fulfill the expressions given in the countenance.

Raeburn paintings are in widespread circulation today. Some may be found in New York, at the Public Library or the Metropolitan Museum of Art, at the Art Museum in Worcester, Massachusetts, at European galleries, and in many private collections, including that of J. P. Morgan.

The painting is in the gallery of the Bixler Art and Music Center opened last fall and dedicated in honor of President J. Seelye Bixler.

Colby To Be Host On April 7 - 9 For 10th Band Festival

Colby will be host to the tenth annual New England Intercollegiate Band Festival on April 7, 8 and 9. The Festival, which has been held in Massachusetts for the past nine years, will be held on the Mayflower Hill Campus this year because of Dr. Comperetti's active interest in the event and the recent completion of our Music and Arts Center, the Bixler Building.

There will be two dress rehearsals on Saturday afternoon at 2 p.m. with a concert that evening at 7:30. The guest conductor will be George Seuffert, Director of the Fordham University Symphonic Band.

All the New England States will be sending representatives. Band members will be coming from Dartmouth, University of New Hampshire, Norwich University, Bowdoin, Bates, University of Maine, University of Rhode Island, Trinity, University of Connecticut, Tufts, University of Massachusetts, and Boston College. Some other New England schools which may send representatives have not yet sent definite replies.

Former Dean Gave Averill Lecture On Political Situation

Miss Pauline Tompkins, a former Dean of Women at Colby who has returned from a two-year stay in the Pacific, delivered a lecture last Thursday in Lovejoy on the universities of Australia and New Zealand and on the political situation in Formosa.

She emphasized that the major stress in Australian universities is on the intellectual. The student begins his major as soon as he enters a uni-and studies only in his field. Since it is felt that one should obtain a great deal of depth in one area, all survey courses are regarded with horror. All Australian universities have the same type of administration, the same curriculum and much higher admissions standards than those of the United States. The percentage of the population that receives higher education is much smaller than in America.

Miss Tompkins taught political science at the university in Taiwan, Formosa for a year. There she had ample opportunity to study the political situation of the Chinese Nationalists. Formosa has what might be called a guided democracy. Chiang Kai Shek is so firmly established in his position that it would be impossible for anyone else to assume his post. The people of Formosa enjoy a greater amount of freedom than the Koreans, but not as much as the westerners. Miss Tompkins explained the difficulty of the position of the United States in this area, complicated by the fact that this country remains true to principle in not recognizing Red China, although it is one of the most rapidly growing powers. After the lecture, the American Association of University Women, of which Miss Tompkins is a member, sponsored a reception in the Faculty Lounge.

New Italian Arts Exhibited March 8

An exhibition of sculpture and painting by two of Italy's foremost contemporary artists will open at Colby on March 8 in the Bixler Art and Music Center. This exhibition is prior to a showing in New York City.

The paintings are by Giorgio Morandi and the sculpture, in bronze, is by Giacomo Manzù. The pair are credited with leading a revival of artistic activity in modern Italy.

This exhibition, provided through the courtesy of the World House Galleries, will continue at the gallery through March 20.

The C. Philip Christie Squadron of the Arnold Air Society at Colby has announced the selection of candidates for the coveted honor of Queen of the Military Ball to be held March 12, 1960, at the Women's Union, Colby College.

The following five co-eds have been chosen:

Miss Sally Proctor, class of '63, is from Bronxville, New York, and is a member of Delta Delta Delta.

Miss Shirley Kelley, class of '63, is from East Northfield, Mass., and is a member of Chi Omega.

Miss Gail Smith, class of '62, is from Melrose, Mass., and is a member of Delta Delta Delta.

Miss Sandy Nolet, class of '61, is from Methuen, Mass., and is a member of Chi Omega.

Miss Maren Stoll, class of '60, is from East Pembroke, Mass., and sings with the popular Colbyettes.

The Ball having been scheduled for next week, work is in full swing and the advanced cadets are working with volunteer basic cadets to make this particular dance the finest on campus. The motif of the dance will be Oriental, to suggest the beauty of cultural traditions of our Far Eastern continents.

Non-APROTC students are especially encouraged to attend, since the price will be the lowest of any big dance on campus: $2.50 per couple.

MULE KICKS

by Elliot Woocher

The time has come when, despite the snow on the ground, spring beacons in the distance and the sound of baseball echoes in the field-house in the afternoons. Winter is fast passing and with it winter sports. No more will Alford Arena be filled with "1...2...3...4... we want more" shouted from the voices of jocular Colby fans after the White Mules have notched another score on their way to victory. This is not to say, however, that the Mules have played their last game of the season; it only means they have played their last scheduled home game. There is still a chance Jack Kelley's fine team will take the ice again (at least once more) against one of the East's best teams. More about this later, but first let's take a brief look at the best hockey season a Colby team has ever had.

Before the season started, many on Mayflower Hill, in view of the rough schedule and the inexperience of the young team, believed that if the Mules could win half their games the season should be considered a successful one. This was not a pessimistic view, considering the fact that many of the players who brought a winning team to Colby last year had been lost through graduation, and over half of last year's great freshman team had been lost in the scholastic struggle. The team surprised everybody including coach Kelley, however, and developed very fast to become the best small college sextet in the East, and a team which could hold its own against the best of the larger schools. This is borne out by their 16-7 record (12 wins in their last 14 games) which includes victories over the two other leading small college clubs, Middlebury and Hamilton, and wins over large schools such as Harvard, Army, Brown, and Providence. The teams which defeated the Mules are R.P.I., B.U., B.C., Dartmouth and Toronto. Of these losses most were close games which could have gone either way.

It is hard to say what has been the "highpoint" of a season which has seen 16 victories, but in this reporter's eyes the Harvard victory must rank very near the top. Coming on home ice early in the season and after a bitter loss to Dartmouth, it certainly must have picked up the team's spirit and given them the confidence they needed. On the other side of the fence, I consider the toughest defeat to be the B.U. game played over Winter Carnival. In this game the Mules outplayed the Terriers but were thwarted by a tremendous performance by B.U. goalie Barry Urdansko. A victory in this game would have helped Colby's NCAA tournament hopes very much.

With this brief retrospective glance, let's now turn our attention to the present and the future. Right now uppermost in the minds of all Colby hockey fans is the question of the Mules chances of getting an invitation to the NCAA Eastern Regional Tournament to be held in Boston around the middle of this month. Four teams from the East receive bids, and of these four, two eventually represent the East in the National Championships. The teams will probably be chosen within the next week. This is the way the picture looks from here.

There appear to be about seven teams who will get serious consideration. They are St. Lawrence, B. U., B. C., Harvard, Colby, Clarkson, and R. P. I. Three other teams Dartmouth, Providence and Army, may receive some backing but from here their chances seem slim. Of the first seven teams I have mentioned I believe St. Lawrence, R. P. I. and B. U. will probably receive berths. That leaves the number four spot open. Of the remaining four teams of the first seven, Clarkson I believe has the weakest chance. In fact their consideration stems mainly from their past reputation, for they have had one of their worst seasons this year. This narrows it down to Harvard, Colby and B. C. Choosing from these three teams on the basis of record or how they have fared against each other is very difficult. For example, Colby has defeated Harvard while B. C. has defeated Colby and Harvard has beaten B. C. Now if this isn't confusing enough, add to it the fact that Northeastern has beaten B.C. while Colby has drubbed Northeastern; Providence has defeated Harvard and lost a close one to B. C. while Colby soundly defeated Providence; and Dartmouth has beaten Colby while Harvard defeated Dartmouth. You see the picture is very confusing. If I had to make the choice, however, I'd choose Colby on the strength of their defeat of Harvard and because B.C. and Harvard have been losing to teams which Colby has recently been beating. But of course I'm prejudiced. Who the selection committee's choice will be we'll find out very soon.

Whether Colby makes the tournament or not, it has been a wonderful season for coach Kelley and the team. Best of all the future

Kelley Drops His Membership As A Tourney Selector

In an exclusive interview with the Echo sports department Monday night, hockey coach Jack Kelley announced that he would resign his position as a member of the NCAA selection committee which was formed earlier this year to select four teams to play in a round-robin tournament which would select two teams to play in the national playoffs. Coach Kelley said that the impetus for his resignation was the point which we have been harping on for some time: the lack of recognition. Kelley felt that his position on the committee was rather delicate in that he wants all the recognition possible for his club. He felt that the committee might find his opinions biased, and therefore it was best that he resign. We know that Coach Kelley is doing what he thinks best for the team, and we appreciate his eagerness to see the team reap the benefits, they deserve.

We of the Echo sports department would like to extend to Jack Kelley and the teams our hardest congratulations for a job well done. You have represented Colby in the finest fashion, and you may be extremely proud of your efforts. We hope that the season hasn't come to a close as yet, and we will be waiting anxiously to hear from the NCAA selection committee.

CORRECTION

Last week's Echo inadvertently omitted Alpha Tau Omega from the list of standing of first semester's Intramural Basketball League. Their record was 7 wins, 3 losses giving them a tie for third place.

looks even brighter. This year's team is made up of mostly sophomores and juniors and will lose only four seniors: Jock Knowles, Hank Van Beaver, Pete MacFarland, and Jim Fox. These four have performed ably this season and will be missed next year. For replacements, however, there is some fine talent coming up from the freshman team, and also we hear that some of last year's freshman players who had scholastic difficulties will be returning. Add these players to this year's sophomores and juniors who will most likely improve after having a year's experience together, and you have a "whale" of a team (no disrespect to our sacred Mule intended). There is no doubt from here that next year the rafters of Alford Arena will ring many times with the sounds of 1...2...3...4... we want more."

Cagers Gain 2nd Place In State Competition

The Colby basketball team salvaged second place in the State Series with wins over Bowdoin and Bates this past week. The Mules bombed Bowdoin 78-48, with a powerful barrage of baskets and air-tight defense. Then, playing spotty but sometimes brilliant ball, they downed the Bobcats 72-64.

The Bowdoin game saw the Mules play one of the best home games of the season as they completely dominated the Polar Bears. The Mules were again led by the fine playing of Ed Marchetti who added 20 more points to his State Series scoring lead. Other men who were outstanding for Colby were Charlie Swenson and Leon Nelson. Swenson had his hottest shooting night of the season as he connected on 8 of 9 shots from the floor, winding up the game with 17 points.

In the game with the Bobcats from Lewiston the Mules didn't play quite as well, but still were in command most of the way. The Batesmen did throw a scare at Lee Williams and his crew when they came back from a 11 point deficit to within 4 points late in the second half. Colby thwarted their bid, however, and again pulled comfortably ahead.

In the first half the Colby attack was led by sophomore guard Dennis Kinne, who hit on soft jump shots from around the foul line against the loose zone defense thrown up by Bates. Kinne was helped by Dave Thaxter and forward Charlie Swenson as the Mules took a 29-18 lead at halftime.

In the second half both teams traded baskets as the shooting improved. Bates was paced by guards Scott Brown and Pete Fisk while Colby was led by Dave Berquist and co-captains Nelson and Marchetti. Ed, who had only 2 points in the first half, started to hit when the going got rough, and ended the game with a total of 14 points. Leon, scored on two of his beautiful driving underhand layups in which he seems to defy gravity by staying in the air so long. Berquist came off the bench and kept Colby's lead intact by quickly hitting on three of four soft jump shots.

The win gave Colby a 4-4 record in State Series play. The Mules will finish their season in a game against Maine when this issue comes out.

Women's Ski Team Past Rink Greats Competed In Meet Meet Mules In A Hockey Attraction

Five Colby women competed in a ski meet at Middlebury, Vermont on February 25 and 26. The meet was part of the festivities at Middlebury College's Winter Carnival. The five girls that attended were: Sally Case, Jean Eielson, Lee Holcombe, Sue Parmalee, and Ginny Murphy. The Misses Parmalee and Murphy acted as managers for the team while the other three participated in the races. Since this was the girls' first competition, they expected nothing spectacular, but did amazingly well. The competition, consisted of Class A and Class B races, some of which will probably be in next year's Olympics.

Other schools taking part in the meet were, Middlebury, which took first place, University of Vermont, University of New Hampshire, McGill Colby Junior, and Skidmore. The first race was downhill on Thursday afternoon, February 25. In this race Lee Holcombe placed seventeenth and Jean Eielson eighteenth. The official results are not yet in from the slalom race on Friday morning, but it is quite certain that Jean Eielson, placed second and that Jean Eielson placed seventeenth and Sally Case nineteenth. Lee Holcombe would have finished twenty-first, but was disqualified at the gate.

The girls are to be commended on their fine job. Sally Case had raced only once before and this was the first racing experience for the other two, so we can see that with practice, Colby will have an excellent Ski team.

This Friday, the team will compete in Stowe, Vermont, as guests of the University of Vermont. The same schools will probably take part and Colby has high hopes for good results.

This Saturday at Alford Arena one of the world's great hockey games will take place. The event is known as the Alumni hockey game, and features the stars of the past as well as this year's team.

The Alumni will be coached by Mr. Bryant and Ron Leimieux. Some of the former Colby players who will be returning to the ice are forwards Dick Morrison, Howie Cates, Skelter Magathlin, Charley Morrissey, Iggy Weiner, Dan Hall, Bob Johnson and Joe Wallace; and defensemen Jim Fox, Don Cote, Guy Vigue, and Bernie Lalaiberte. The goalie for the alumni will be Don Williamson.

This is the first time the game is being played in two years. Past Alumni games have been close contests although the varsity will be favored, but upsets have been known to happen! It should prove to be lots of fun to watch. Game time is 3:30.

Mule Frosh Five Gains Eighth Win

Colby's freshmen basketball team gained their eighth victory of the season as they defeated Bridgton Academy 76-55 at Wadsworth Fieldhouse. The baby Mules record now stands at 8-7, but they have finished strong, winning five of their last seven contests.

The Frosh Mules roled to a 41-27 half time lead and coasted home in the second half. The Colby attack was well balanced as five men hit in double figures, John Novak led with 22 points while Vin Pero provided most of Bridgton's scoring with 26 points tallied.

Chilean Students Leave After Brief Visit Here

by Brenda Lewison

Our eleven Chilean guests left Tuesday, March 1 after a two-week visit here at Colby. It was a very wonderful experience for all of us who had the opportunity to really get to know them, to talk with them, and to like them.

The Chileans were interested to see our educational system at work. When a student graduates from a Chilean high school he has a degree called the Higher Certificate of Education and has studied Spanish, French, English, algebra, geometry, physics, chemistry, political science, civics, philosophy, history, geography, and literature. The purpose of a Chilean high school is to give the pupil a general culture with knowledge in a large number of fields; this assures that those who do not go on to college will have a wide scope of information, and that those who do continue have a good background.

The Chileans were pleased to see that here in the United States even the small towns have "wonderful, modern schools." In Chile every town does have its own school but they are not comparable to those here, and the families which can afford it send their children to boarding schools until college.

Forty percent of the students who graduate from high school enter the universities, if they pass their entrance exams; and there, for the first time, they enjoy the merits of coeducation. Now the serious work begins and everyone must decide immediately what he wants to do after graduation, because in Chilean universities students take only courses in their major field.

In contrast to Colby and many American schools, the majority of in that it utilizes four trumpets, four saxophones, piano, string bass, drums, and Eddie's trombone out front. The dance style is distinctive due to the band's use of Madden's original arrangements.

All of the candidates approach their new posts with a clear vision of their jobs as being directly responsible to the student body. It is as though they conceive Stu-G to be not a government over the students, but a students' government.

CHILEAN STUDENTS

university students live at home rather than in dormitories on the campus. Perhaps the most startling difference of all is that summer vacation in Chile begins after exams in December and ends between the middle of March and April first. During this time the students recover from their busy year and their December final exams which are the only ones of the year.

The most common course for boys to study is engineering, for which they must study six years; the girls often prepare for teaching.

The common impression of the Chileans concerning Colby was good. The girls were especially impressed with the art and music departments, and the fact that right here on campus we can see famous works of art.

"Here you have everything you want; skating, skiing, a library with all wonderful books, the Spa for bridge, washing machines in the dormitories, an infirmary with a doctor every day, and even a chapel." They commented on the friendliness of everyone and said that at dinner when everyone was together it was "like a party." To make the campus complete we even have "pretty scenery."

One of the more enjoyable events of the last two weeks was Wednesday night, February 24, when the Chileans told a little about themselves and then answered questions which Colby students asked about almost every conceivable topic. Afterwards they put on a very enjoyable program of singing with guitar accompaniment and then Chilean dances.

Three Rakes from the elite society of 17th century London, (Dick Hilton, Bev Lapham, and Frank Stephenson) rehearse their parts for "The Country Wife" to be produced by Powder and Wig, March 11 and 12.
