THE CITY GOVERNMENT.

The city solicitor was instructed to secure whatever aid the laws allowed to the city in its efforts to recover the taxes due on the Lookwood property.

Mr. Davis was the third speaker and concluded by expressing the hope that the city would be able to recover the taxes due on the property.

Mr. Davis said that he had been present at the last meeting and that he had heard the arguments presented.

He believed that the city would be able to recover the taxes due on the property.

The meeting adjourned.

Casting a vote for the adoption of the resolution to recover the taxes due on the Lookwood property, the motion was carried by a large majority.

The next speaker was Mr. Thompson, who stated that he had heard the arguments presented and that he was in favor of the resolution.

He believed that the city would be able to recover the taxes due on the property.

The meeting adjourned.

Casting a vote for the adoption of the resolution to recover the taxes due on the property, the motion was carried by a large majority.
TOM AND JERRY.

Old time enemies of the home, they are now being advertised as a new form of non-alcoholic amusements. The "T & J" theaters, as they are called, have become the "Greater city" she is memory for faces. One night during the opening week, Tom and Jerry were watching a movie. The lights went down, and the audience settled in to enjoy the show. Suddenly, there was a commotion outside. It was a group of underdressed performers who appeared to be giggling and dancing.

"What's going on?" asked Tom.

"Oh, it's just the understudies," Jerry replied. "They're always up to something."

Tom and Jerry were both familiar with the theater life. They had both been performers in their time, and they knew the ups and downs of the profession. Sometimes, the life could be exhausting, but other times, it was a source of joy.

"I remember those days," Tom said. "The days when we were young and full of promise."

"Yeah," Jerry agreed. "Those were the days."

As the movie ended, the audience burst into applause. Tom and Jerry were both grateful for the opportunity to be part of something so vibrant and alive.

"I'm just glad we're not playing in those theaters anymore," Tom said.

"Me too," Jerry replied. "Those places were never any good for us."

The two cats settled back into their seats, ready to enjoy the rest of the movie. They were grateful for the opportunity to be part of something so important, and they knew that, no matter what happened, they would always have each other to depend on.

the look of the slip upon the paper offered him: it was agitation in it, too; an agitation whose expression, was at least surcharged with anxiety.

The coroner pressed the slip upon the paper and began to read:

"Look at it carefully," he continued. "The handwriting shows a hurry and an incoherence. It was feelingly uttered, and several sentences were written in a hurried manner."

The coroner paused and then went on:

"Then when this impetuosity had possessed the writer, perhaps he hesitated. As this was in the highest degree consistent with the appearance of looking for some token of the quarrel then pending between his wife and Mr. Jeffrey.

The coroner laid down the book, closed the upper drawer and with very much deliberation shut and locked the bureau. Mr. Jeffrey's use, Loretta experienced the slightest injury made to her fingers."

The coroner pressed the girl to continue, as if conscious that no one would be satisfied with a mere repetition, "Is there no way you can make it stop?"

Mr. Jeffrey's hand was very strong. Would she—would I—be apt to speak of my young wife with bit-..."
