Colby Quarterly is a journal of analysis of and commentary upon subjects in the humanities, though its emphasis remains on literature written in English. We are interested in regional studies—Maine, New England, and Canadian history as well as literature. We frequently publish essays about authors represented in Colby's special collections—Thomas Hardy, Henry James, W. B. Yeats, Lady Gregory, James Joyce, Brian Friel, Seamus Heaney, and other Irish writers from 1880 to the present. Other concerns include Irish and American studies, contemporary drama, the relationships of art and literature, and the relationships among psychology, history, and literature.

We periodically publish special issues; recent titles include Varieties of Regionalism: Essays on Regional History and Literature; Women and Religion; Photography and the Life of the Mind; Irish Women Writers; Sarah Orne Jewett: A Writer for Our Time; Contemporary Irish Drama; Work and Subjectivity; American Popular Culture; Cinematic Shakespeare.

Manuscripts are welcome. They should be prepared in conformity with the MLA Style Sheet; unless accompanied by a self-addressed envelope and return postage, they will not be returned. All manuscripts and editorial communications should be directed to the editor; subscriptions and other matters to the business manager. The Colby Quarterly routinely grants permission to reprint articles, with acknowledgment, and maintains an archival coverage agreement for electronic reproduction with Bell and Howell Information and Learning.

Subscriptions: $15.00 per year. Single copies, $5.00.

Electronic copies of back issues may be procured at Bell & Howell, Information and Learning, P. O. Box 1346, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106-9866. We can supply most of the original issues, but not all. We no longer produce an annual index.
