Renovations underway throughout campus

By BEN HERBST

The College is currently in the midst of numerous renovation projects and improvements to existing buildings and structures. These projects are aimed at improving the overall student experience and creating a more dynamic and engaging campus environment.

In the case of the Alfond Athletic Complex, renovations are scheduled to be completed by late September. According to the renovations will include the expansion of the Colby Green to accommodate the new layout for the stadium. The project is expected to be completed by the end of the academic year.

Over the summer, renovations were completed at the Colby Student Union. The project included the replacement of the building's roof, updates to the interior, and the installation of new heating and cooling systems. The College received a grant from the National Science Foundation to fund the project.

In addition to these major projects, the College is also undertaking smaller-scale renovations across campus. These include the replacement of windows, the installation of new lighting fixtures, and the updating of HVAC systems.

The College is committed to ongoing improvements and will continue to invest in facilities to enhance the student experience and support the College's mission.

As a temporary addition to the class of 2009, first-year Joe McGee never planned on majoring in Colby this fall until a week ago. While hiking from one of the many Colby-provided trips to the Adirondacks, he never once looked around at the College buildings and courses and thought of himself as a Colby student. This fall, however, McGee has decided to pursue a major in Environmental Studies.

``When you look around at the College buildings and courses and think of yourself as a Colby student, you have a hard time deciding what to major in. But when you look around at Colby and see the work being done here, you can't help but feel inspired to make a change, to be a part of it. I've always been interested in the environment, but I never really knew how it all fit together until now.``

New point system for alcohol policy takes effect

As a result of nearly two years of discussion, the College has implemented a new point system for alcohol policy. The system is designed to be more effective in discouraging underage drinking and enforcing the existing policy.

``We believe that the new system is a significant improvement over the old. It is more flexible and better able to address the various situations that can arise. We are confident that it will help us to achieve our goals.``

In order to redesign office space that has been vacated by the alumni association, the College is currently undertaking a renovation of the Eustis Administration Building. The work includes the replacement of windows, the installation of new lighting fixtures, and the updating of HVAC systems.

``We are committed to providing a comfortable and functional environment for our staff and visitors. These renovations are an important step in achieving that goal.``

For decades the first few weeks of every fall, new students arrive on campus, knowing, if you were lucky, a friend or family member was waiting for you, someone who you'd talk to over time, a kid from your high school you considered to be your academic buddy or designee of a family friend.)

You'll be asked to do this, if you are lucky, and if you were lucky, meet a few people who you thought was the one to talk to.\[...\]

The real results of the "War on Terror."

This past Sunday marked the fourth anniversary of the September 11 terrorist attacks. Everyone—regardless of his or her political, social or religious background—should commemorate those who died four years ago, especially the heroic efforts of the service workers from the police and fire departments, I was just four blocks away, about a fifth of a mile, from the World Trade Center when it was hit, and certain images will permanently be embedded in my mind.

However, I believe that in the five years since that day, many official within the United States government have used 9/11 as a tool, which they use not only to vilify our civil liberties, but also to distract the memory of those who died on that day.

Since September 11 the administration began to focus on the possibility that the U.S. could, and most likely would, be attacked again. At our weakest moment President George W. Bush addressed the two wars engrossed in a "War on Terror," a battle with a multitude of enemies and the defining phrase, "You’re either with us or against us.

Suddenly anyone who would not permit the government to have full enemy combatants in prison indefinitely, even though in many cases the administrator lacks any criminal evidence. The government can detain virtually any American citizen if it wants they can refuse to relate to an individual with a multinational government. Further, they can deport foreign nationals who enter the U.S. from a country where torture is used. Early, the 1996 movie "The Fugitive" depicted a similar scenario: New York City under martial law and a fateful day can always come settle in Fiji/Samoa, where time collapses and expands. Hurricane Katrina and its lasting effect on the U.S.

By ELY BOOKMAN

I'm not from New Orleans, or even Louisiana. The drive to the city is almost eight hours from my home in Alias, Georgia, and I've never driven it. But I do know that Hurricane Katrina affected my home and the rest of the world. I feel for those who have been directly affected by the storm, but even for those who have been indirectly affected, the storm has left an indelible mark on our society.

Environmental consequences of Katrina: a reminder of nature's power

By ELIZABETH APPEL
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Among the many issues highlighted by Hurricane Katrina, one of the most interesting is the devastating effect of America's infrastructure.

In New Orleans, a lack of public safety and public service planning allowed the levee system to become hopelessly outdated. Federal agencies, most notably the Army Corps of Engineers, failed to assess the vulnerability of a levee system from one disaster to the next. Hurricane Katrina, devastating rainfall and heavy winds, proved the levees were not ready for a more severe storm. In a matter of days, the levee system failed, and New Orleans was flooded with hundreds of displaced residents. Many of them were never able to return to their homes. The world was horrified.

The area around New Orleans has always been vulnerable to storms of this magnitude, but as all believed the devastation was for another generation to worry about.

Consequences of the evacuation plans were fourfold, especially when it comes to helping the poor. One day after the storm hit, there were between 12,000 and 15,000 people stranded in the Superdome, where violence and looting were rampant. In addition, the levee system failed, and the city was flooded with hundreds of displaced residents. Many of them were never able to return to their homes.

The environmental effects of Katrina are cause for concern.

An economic appraisal of Katrina's effects: a growing deficit

By CHARLES WILSON
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

All of this underscores the foolishness of the Bush administration's policies. While we may be suffering from a recession today, it is all but certain that the recession will not be as severe as the recession that followed the dot-com bubble burst in 2000-2001. But the impact of these policies on the American economy is far more serious. The Bush administration's policies have created a fiscal cliff, which means that the government will have to make a choice between raising taxes or cutting spending. And the choice is not an easy one.

The deficit will grow to over $1 trillion this year. This is not an insignificant amount, and it will create long-term problems for the economy. The deficit will also make it more difficult for the government to address other issues, such as education, healthcare, and infrastructure.

The economic effects of Katrina are significant, and it is important that we understand the full scope of the problem. While the immediate effects of Katrina were devastating, the long-term effects will be just as significant. The United States needs to take steps to address the fiscal cliff and prevent a recession from occurring.

By CHARLES WILSON

Hurricane Katrina dealt a serious blow to the United States. Numerous people have lost their homes, many lost loved ones, and billions of dollars have been spent in relief efforts. The economic effects of Katrina have been devastating, and it will take years to recover.

Specifically, this year's federal budget deficit is expected to be over $1 trillion. This is a result of the glut of emergency spending, the war in Iraq, and the economic downturn. The government has responded with a stimulus package, which includes money for public works and infrastructure.

The collective damage that Katrina caused has been enormous, and it will take years to repair the damages. However, the economic effects of Katrina are significant, and it is important that we understand the full scope of the problem. While the immediate effects of Katrina were devastating, the long-term effects will be just as significant. The United States needs to take steps to address the fiscal cliff and prevent a recession from occurring.

Portland String Quartet celebrates its last year

By KRIS NIRAN

Let me begin by pointing out that a musical concert in itself is a performance of a musical composition, created mainly for entertainment, rather than serious thought-provoking, or even educational purposes. It is a multi-sensory experience, designed to evoke emotional responses, usually without the need for language.

The Portland String Quartet is one of the many musical groups that performs at least once a year in Portland, Maine. The ensemble is composed of four musicians who have been playing together for many years, and they are known for their high level of technical proficiency and their unique interpretative style.

Their repertoire includes works by many famous composers, such as Beethoven, Mozart, and Haydn, as well as contemporary compositions. The quartet is known for their ability to interpret the music in a fresh and innovative way, and they often incorporate elements of modern music into their performances.

Their concerts are always highly anticipated, and they draw a large audience from the Portland area and beyond. The next concert will take place next month, and it promises to be another exciting performance by this talented group of musicians.

If you are interested in attending, make sure to check their website for more information and to purchase tickets. The Portland String Quartet is a must-see for anyone who appreciates good music and wants to enjoy a night out with a difference.

SPOTLIGHT ON THE ARTS

Jani Jung 07

There’s a young man who has been working on a new piece of music that has been very challenging for him. He has spent many hours practicing and perfecting his performance, and he is now ready to share it with the world.

The music piece is titled “The Constant Gardener,” and it is a showcase of his skill and creativity. It is a piece that he has been working on for many months, and he is very excited to see it come to life.

The performance will take place on October 15, and it is sure to be a memorable evening for everyone who attends. So mark your calendars and come early to get a good seat. You won’t want to miss this talented young composer’s next big project.

From very early ages, he found a movie that interested him to study the style with story and purpose of the films that would evolve. He was fascinated with how the stories could be told through film, and he was eager to delve into the techniques used to create these stories.

He started by watching films and analyzing them, noting the different elements that made them work and what techniques were used to create the desired effect. He then practiced these techniques in his own films, experimenting with different styles and techniques until he found the ones that worked best for him.

Over time, he became known as one of the most influential filmmakers of his time, and his films continue to be studied and admired by filmmakers around the world. He is a true master of his craft, and his influence can be seen in the work of many filmmakers today.

In conclusion, the work of this young filmmaker is a testament to the power of film as a storytelling medium. His films continue to inspire and to be studied by filmmakers around the world, and his influence can be seen in the work of many of today’s greatest directors.

To see this young man’s work, be sure to visit the Portland Film Festival this month. The festival has a wide range of films on offer, and this young filmmaker is sure to be one of the highlights.

Do not miss this opportunity to see the future of film-making, and to see the work of a true master of the craft.

A place where art plays a vital role in helping the world understand itself is the Colby London Theater. Here at Colby, we get a chance to appreciate the arts in a way that we don’t see them in our everyday life. The Colby London Theater is a place where the arts come together, and it provides a unique opportunity for students to experience something new. It is a place where art can be appreciated in a different light, and it is an opportunity for us to explore new forms of expression and creativity.

The Colby London Theater has a variety of performances throughout the year, ranging from classical music to modern dance. Each performance offers a unique perspective on the arts, and it is an opportunity for us to learn more about the world and its diverse cultures. The theater is a place where art is appreciated in its truest form, and it is a place where we can experience something new.

Mules field hockey opens with tough loss to Tufts

By DAN SCHUMACHER CONTRIBUTING WRITER

The Colby field hockey team opened their season on Saturday with a tough loss to New England Small College Athletic Conference University of the small, but tenacious Mules defense. Daffy-Casha finished the game with five saves, many of which were great saving chances for the Mules defense. Despite the loss, Head Coach Amy Bowdoin said, “I do not think many schools put a lot of stock in these types of rankings. That said, it is positive to be acknowledged and to improve so dramatically from one year to the next.”

The rankings are calculated for all NCAA schools in division by averaging the U.S. News ranking, the U.S. Sports Academy’s ranking, and the National Collegiate Athletic Association’s (NACDA) ranking. The rankings were released in March of 2006, following the 2005 season.

Although Colby may have fallen four spots in the U.S. News ranking, which measures academic standing and athletic excellence into one score, Zibart said, “I think it was a huge jump from 22nd to 18th. We have an outstanding academic institution and we have a very competitive athletics program as well. Much of the credit goes to our student-athletes who participate, learn the finer points of their respective sports, and are able to maintain a high level and also to the coaches that work so hard to develop good athletes. We are very good at this.”

Colby also finished well against all schools in the New England Small College Athletic Association, which measures academic and athletic standing. The Mules had a tough game against Bates College, but Bowdoin said that the team’s performance was impressive with the skills and fitness of the girls, and they are developing well. It will take some time for the team to come together on the field but we are working in the right direction,” she said. The Mules’ next game will be against Nazareth College; Nazareth College is nothing but impressive. The returning team has a lot of stock in these types of rankings. This is the second year that the Colby jumps 11 spots in NCSA power ranking

Despite strong defense, the Mules were unable to put the ball in the net and hold off the Jumbos, who took a 3-0 lead with Captain Kyla Wagman '07, who net but were thwarted by goalkeeper Marilyn Duffy-

Colby jumps 11 spots in NCSSA power ranking

Although Colby may have fallen a rank in the U.S. News and World Report college rankings, the National Collegiate Scouting Association's (NCSSA) Collegiate Power Ranking of Colby is nothing but impressive. The rankings, which were released in August, placed the Mules at 11th in the NCSSA Division III rankings, which evaluates the strength of NCAA athletic programs. The rankings are based on a variety of factors, including win-loss percentage, strength of schedule, and overall team performance.

This is the second year that the rankings have been published. Athletic Director Anthony Zanetti states, "It is very exciting to see our team doing so well and to have our athletes acknowledged on a national level."

The rankings are calculated for all NCAA schools in each division by averaging the U.S. News ranking, the National Coral Athletic Conference's (CACC) ranking, and the National Athletic College's (NACDA) ranking, which evaluates the athletics programs of institutions while focusing on their academic performance.

Colby finished 19th in the CACC ranking, which evaluates the athletics programs of institutions while focusing on their academic performance. The rankings are then calculated for all NCAA schools in each division by averaging the U.S. News ranking, the National Coral Athletic Conference's (CACC) ranking, and the National Athletic College's (NACDA) ranking, which evaluates the athletics programs of institutions while focusing on their academic performance.

Patriots-Raiders, Texas-Oho State, Redskins-Bears: undefeated in a successful weekend of gambling

Laura Williamson ’07

Williamson connected flawlessly with the ball as she stroked a pass to the unmatched area of the goal into the back of the net. With less than 20 minutes remaining in the first half, Williamson connected her 23rd collegiate goal, which places her into a tie for third place on Colby’s all-time scoring list. Williamson is tied for fourth place on Colby’s all-time scoring list. The goal was her second on the season.

Initially, I think we were a little nervous. Tufts had some chances in the beginning, but then we slowly sorted it out.

The Bears-Redskins game meant a lot to many people, but I think it was the weight of the game against Tufts, not getting pressure on the ball in the middle of the field and working on closing the space between the defense and midfield in order to make the game effective. In the upcoming weeks, the Mules face tough competition on the field. We were a little nervous when we got Tufts in the back of the net, but we were able to establish ourselves within the tradition of the successful program.

The Mules will next take on Ursinus College in Buena, which does not upset against Husson since 1997. Husson players in watch will be seniors Chad Coffit and Mike Sullivan defensively. Senior quarterback Dave O’Donnell led a 5-3 record, but was still 1-0 in favor in the Mules.

Volleyball takes first in Colby Invite for third year in a row

By LAURA WILLIAMSON

The Colby women’s volleyball team, victorious in its 2005 season opener, were able to adjust to their opponents’ unfamiliar offensives and place themselves a win away from a guarantee they are able to come out on top,” said Captain Caitlin Adams ’09.

On Friday night, Colby took on the Gordon College Bluejays, easily defeating them 3-0 (30-16, 30-14, 30-16). Colby, who earned all-tournament honors, dominated the Bluejays and took their first out-of-season win.

In the second match, Friday night, rival Bowdoin College showed them that it was the Colby Bluebombers who claimed the Polar Bears (30-22, 30-12, 30-19). Both players and coaches appreciated the Colby-Vasa friendly atmosphere.

As Parent said, “Wow! Can you say our fans? Our fans were just incredible. It was the perfect match and we had it.”

It was an easy route to the Colby Classic title and a second place finish. Colby proved themselves to come out on top.

Colby continued to dominate as the University of Southern Maine 3-0 (30-20, 30-12, 30-02) and University of Maine at Farmington 3-0 (30-11, 30-15, 30-16). Against Southern Maine, Cleaver finished with nine kills and eight digs. Captain Megan DeCalv 06 also added six kills, while Meredith Lawler ’09 and Maena Daly ’08 both had six kills.

Golf gears up for three tournament weekend

By KATE VASCIONE

With cutthroat competition and a tourney on deck, the golf team traveled to the University of Maine at Farmington on September 10 and 11 to take part in the first tournament of the year, the University College Invitational. These events took place at three golf courses in the Farmington-Merrimack area of New Hampshire.

The golf team had the opportunity to compete in a turnamen...
