The Complete, Full (and Truthful — So Help Me Jessapeth) Version of the Matter Is...

I threw you out
Out into the street
That is
And for J.C.'s sake
Who wouldn't
Didya not deserve it?
Truly warrant
Suck?
On our honeymoon
While I slept
You went through
My suitcase
Did you not?
Yes.
You certainly did

after 3 visits from Paula plus one phone call to her (or is it?)

And you removed Therefrom
The medical aids
The psychological crutches
The rubber items
Reinforced
Form fitting
With belts
And cut them up
Into small
Small
Pieces, no less
Then back to what
Was to be our home
Home Sweet Home
You made disappear
(Though none knows how)
An Art Object
On my/our porch
Made for me
Given to me
By the daughter
Of one of your Own sisters
The disfellowshiped
One
The daughter that is
Not the sister
Made it disappear

the only words
I have
For it took me
three months
at least that long
To find
To notice
It was gone
The gift,
The art gift
In fine Craft
Or cord
Knotted with Care.
How could you?
How did you do it?
Next came the books
the soft cover ones
Paper lids
You'd say they are gone
Too!
Where?
Oh where?
And how?
What did you use?
A meat grinder?
Chopper?
Cu ax?
A shredder?

Just to find the stuff
To get the tearables
Into your hands
And when do you do this?
When I'm asleep?
Dorortown?
Queasy?
At what hour are you
at your ~~fist~~ right-to-left best destructive at highest efficiency?
Sixty six thousand bits
a minute
for paperbacks
and hard cover
But higher, much higher
For fragiles.
like photos
And letters.
What's the scoop on
all this anyway?
Who + what do you
hate, besides me?

Oh manuscript, Oh manuscript
Those containers in sheet form of ideas
Born of strife misery and ordure what living, tension, strain, being what experiencing, doing, feeling, knowing what, what' thy birth shell-form now Rejuvenated later, some a thousand Times dead, a million times born
And still not right, right, right!
Those virgin scraps need reworking
Fulfilling, but how, in what way and when?
Better, perhaps to let lie, lie fallow
Rest at ease another round or two
Even three, if by a round, one means
Any lapse of three weeks to three Years & quiet, undisturbed self distillation
To be revived without plan for reading
Aloud into a Mirror, the side of the nearest road
Or even at the next festival, the poets picnic
By the sea or under the arches as the case
Decides each year by the committee in charge

How innocent you are lying there leaf on leaf
Some edge bent
Others dull flat
In silent white
Silent
Until the words
Sprite
Rise up
Flood the decks
In spill over
To say their piece.
Manuscript, say your part
Express it.
Spit it all out
The meaning
The essence
The image
The core
Word on word
Til the paragraph
Builds, carrys
Floats
Is energized even
As in Chanting perhaps,
But certainly directed
Laid out in chant form
With an end in view

BOOKS BY BERN PORTER: So much is out-of-print, or a one-of-a-kind item. The most substantial collections of his work are at the libraries of UCLA (Los Angeles) & Colby College (Waterville, Me.). A biography of Bern by poet James Schevill, THE ROARING MARKET AND THE SILENT TOMB, published in 1957, is out-of-print, but worth the search. The June, 1970 issue of the COLBY LIBRARY QUARTERLY is entirely dedicated to articles about Bern (also out-of-print, also worth the search). Margaret Dunbar, among others, is especially fond of his brilliant 1969 master plan for Knox County, Maine — so brilliant, in fact, that most copies of it were suppressed by the powers-that-be (as we said, keep searching).

My 70th — to L. M. P.

I saw you as you crossed the block.
At that distance your hair was reworked
Done over as they say, and wrongly,
Supposing Nature could not, never had Done it much much better these many centuries
For all women including you and yours.
There seemed to be a blotch of red about
A brisk walk certainly. a business like bent.
And a light swinging bag
Perhaps light and swinging because there
Was nothing in it.
And there you were
And there was I
Seeing you.
You not seeing me.
Me remembering, the while those times
You used to bring me to the bus
Wait until it departed (Was it there a terrible and very loud word spoke once in the depot with several ~~people~~ looking it all in? —
Yes I think there was and a head-ache type thing from all the previous, tensions and cringing's on.)
Past the rivers the bus goes
The one below Thomaston
Winding toward me. placid
And still in imperceptable motion

Rivers fascinate me, I
This one has as much as most
The stretches below Frankfurt
On the right going north
Spurts abound just above
Its surfaces
I feel them Reichian.
Excited I see a new one

A hula Poem

I don't have anything todo with you anymore.
that is anymore I don't
If you come over be sure to call me up first (cause I don't have anything todo with you anymore)
When you are here I'm the host and you are only the guest
(cause it's all no more anymore)
I surely don't have anything to do with you anymore.

o o o o o

When the dentist of mine drilled, filled, cleaned my teeth, uppers and lowers, you didn't pay him
(I don't have anything to do with you anymore)
When my under-body-spray-for-rust man treated the bottom sides of my dear four door car you didn't pay him nothing at all

(I don't have anything to do with you anymore)

When the rent came due on my little big nest at the Birches you didn't pay it.

(I don't have anything to do with you anymore)

When the yard goods shop had a sale you didn't buy any.

(as I said, its no more any more)

When I showed you the washer-dryer set I wanted, you walked away.

(sure is no more any more)

When you didn't pay two hundred dollars more for our wedding ring I didn't like it so very much.

When you didn't you didn't
And you didn't didn't, didn't you?
So I don't have anything to do with you anymore
With you anymore.

Crimewatch

These major crimes were reported last night and early today in San Francisco. The facts come from initial police reports and are sketchy:

ROBBERY — Two gunmen robbed a man of $800 as he walked out of a bank at Turk and Market streets at 4 p.m.

ROBBERY — When a man answered his bell at 6:30 p.m. in the 500 block of Ellington Avenue, two men said they were police officers. After he admitted them, they overpowered and handcuffed him, ransacked his house and took $500.

BOMB THREAT — At 6:32 p.m. the suspect threatened to detonate explosives in the 600 block of Divisadero Street, after he released his wife and children, unless certain demands were met. But he surrendered in return for a TV interview. Police found no explosives.

ROBBERY — Two gunmen robbed a tavern at 8:45 p.m. in the 3000 block of 20th Street after ordering patrons to the rear and tying them.

ROBBERY/ASSAULT — Two fares robbed a cab driver of $110 at 1:15 a.m. after striking him on the head with a bottle at Mission and Leo streets.

A Preliminary Note On the E-Haldeman Julius-Henry Miller Relation

Strasbourg
July 1961

The literary heirs of the Miller Collection and Estate having for the present not granted permission to quote and employ specifically the many exchanges between E-HJ and HM, ① I am obliged until such time as they ~~are~~ will hopefully relent to sketch only lightly the general tenure of their Rapport as I knew of it during the 1948-1950 years of my closest and most active association with Miller as his publisher, extending throughout both later work with HM and earlier personal exchanges of my own with E-HJ, the men involved being wholly unaware. So far as I know, of any intermediary action on my part, if indeed there was such.

Miller possessed an early

~~out~~ pioneering genius, forerunners of higher creativity than the norm, seekers of the novel in variant, spiritually and philosophically. Wide reading ~~on Miller's part~~ heightened the Miller perception, balanced by ~~with~~ boundless inquisitiveness;
with ~~the~~ piercing eye and high pitched olefactor letting him to E-H.S. but more correctly, since the latter was equally equipped on ~~the~~ identical sensory ~~planes~~ vectors, they were directed one to the other in frank confrontation, with

of the other. Thus H. M. could on 12/23/48 write from ~~Big Sur~~ in deep reference to "with sincere homage for his services in the cause of literature" while presenting E.H-J a first edition copy of the Happy Rock a compendium by some thirty writers from four countries under my egoqis praising and evaluating the work of Miller, the donor. This notation on the front end paper holding saluted the masters of Gerard Kansas" and "Big Sur" as befittingly they were. Out of this exchange grew both the purchase of more copies than commonly so of Miller titles for the Kan by E-HJ and the incantation of his writing an essay on Miller in the manner of the HR collection should another edition or even a new volume be forthcoming futurewise. Whether HM proposed this or the suggestion by title kindly lent books

Dear Mr. Porter:

Thank you for your letter of last week, and the copy of your book, which I'll return under separate cover.

I enjoyed reading through the book, and although it is a nice effort, neither Phil nor I feel it has much in the way of commercial possibilities.

AFTER THE FALL PEAR

By Diana Bowley
District Correspondent

GREENVILLE — For years, the Lily Bay dump site north of Greenville on Moosehead Lake has been a prime feeding spot for American black bears. With all the attention the bears receive at the dump, including food handouts, some become quite tame.

When a mother and her four cubs began to frequent the dump several weeks ago, game wardens feared someone might get hurt should the animals become upset. So Game Warden Glen Perkins and Dr. George Mattula, head of the Bear Project at the University of Maine at Orono, tranquilized the 200-pound mother bear and captured the four clubs. After being tagged and tatooed, the mammals were transported more than 75 miles away to a secluded area in Aroostook County where Mattula could study them.

Last week, after a month's absence, the family of five had made its way through the woods and returned to the Greenville area, finding themselves back in civilization and back in danger. Shortly after bear season opened on Oct. 1, hunters shot and killed three of the cubs. Identified by the tattoos, the cubs were tagged at a Greenville bear tagging station Oct. 5 by hunters from Wells and North Berwick.

"No tooth available, too young" was the notation on the envelope at the tagging station.

Residents in the area are upset over the incident. Two tagging station owners had mixed feelings. Gerry Gartley said, "I wouldn't do a thing like that."

He said that two years ago hunters brought two bears in a milk crate to be tagged. He also commented that more than 100 people were at the dump one night last summer to watch and feed the bears. He said people referred to the littlest bear as "the runt."

Railroad station at McAdam, N.B.

He was a good little man

'There are some like that, but not many. We'll miss him.'

By David Platt
Of the NEWS Staff

Physically, he was a small man — not much over 5 feet 6 inches, perhaps 150 pounds. Before he retired some years ago, he worked with horses in the woods. "He was a good little man," recalls one friend. "There are some like that, but not many. We'll miss him."

As the letter from a friend attests, William Fortin had many friends.

Two weeks ago, William Fortin dropped dead on the street in Van Buren at the age of 81. But no obituary appeared in the next morning's paper because no one came forward to pay for it. Four hundred people showed up for his funeral at St. Bruno's Catholic Church anyway.

But an ordinary newspaper obit wouldn't have done William Fortin justice, because he wasn't an ordinary man.

"Just about every day of the week he was out there on the road, walking from this house to that house, doing little favors for people," says his pastor, the Rev. Omer St. Onge. "In season, he'd purchase fresh corn where he could get it and take it here and there — he'd take a taxi across to St. Leonard's (in New Brunswick) and buy turnips. He'd bring them to families he thought needed help. He always was doing things like that."

At the funeral, Father St. Onge invited everyone who'd ever been done a good turn by Fortin to come forward, touch his casket and say thanks. Just about everyone did.

Wilmer Saucier's memories of Fortin go back further than Father St. Onge's. Fortin worked for Saucier in the 1950s, helping with horses used by Great Northern Paper Co. and Pinkham Lumber woods crews. "He'd go out at 3 a. m. and harness up others' horses for them, just to be helpful — I remember he got a little sore at me when I told him not to do that, but he never held a grudge."

In later years, Saucier remembers Fortin's habitual walks around Van Buren. "I used to see him and we'd talk. He was sincere, he wouldn't harm anybody, and he was the same way with the horses."

FAREWELL, WILLIAM...On Nov. 5, 1981, William Fortin, age 81, of Van Buren, died on the street. He was on his way to McDonald's. His name did not appear in the obituaries (because no one came forward to pay for it to be printed). He was a World War II veteran, and having served his country, he spent his entire life serving his fellow man. Whatever he had, he shared with everyone. He was small and frail, but continually smiled, spoke pleasantly — spent his last years doing errands and spending the little money he had on anyone that he could help. This man was a true Christian, he really loved all his brethren! Everyone in town knew him, yet few knew much about him. He had several sisters and a brother living somewhere else. At his funeral, his pastor, Father St. Onge, asked all who had ever received a kindness from him to come forward to touch his coffin and say, "thank you, William." Ninety-nine percent of those attending (and there were many) came forward. This is being sent to the Bangor Daily News (in the hope they will print something about him) to let his many friends in the logging industry know of his dying. William worked for many years for Pinkham Lumber and Great Northern. Since his death, everyone I have met has his own private story to tell about William. Farewell, William, all who knew you will miss you — may you rest in peace.
Just sign me a friend, not my name.

A bachelor, Fortin was drafted when he was 39. He serve in World War II.

On Nov. 5, Fortin was on his way to McDonald's in Van Buren when he died. The restaurant was one of his favorite spots — he took friends there regularly and bought them meals. "I'll never forget him," says Pauline Martin, who used to serve him there in the mornings. "He was a pot of gold."

McDonald's has ordered a plaque in his memory. "Dedicated to Mr. William Fortin," it will read, "from the crew and management team of McDonald's."

Fortin's best monument, however, will be people's fon memories. "He was a simple, plain, ordinary little man, ' says Father St. Onge. "We're going to miss him."

'No money'

'Tablecloth crisis' befalls White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House has "a terrible tablecloth crisis" and has no money to purchase new ones, says Muffie Brandon, the social secretary.

To make matters worse, Mrs. Brandon said, "One set of tablecloths, to my complete and utter horror, went out to the dry cleaner and shrunk."

On another occasion, she added, "I saw a little rip in a beautiful linen overlay" and was forced to take needle and thread to the tablecloth just before Nancy Reagan's luncheon guests arrived.

"There is not a limitless supply of decorator linens" at the White House, the social secretary said, adding she had just six different changes of cloths to chose from.

Mrs. Brandon, who plans and oversees all social events at the White House, said in a recent telephone interview with The Associated Press that there was no money to buy new table linens, even though Mrs. Reagan recently raised more than $822,000 in tax-deductible contributions to refurbish the White House.

"One set of tablecloths, to my complete and utter horror, went out to the dry cleaner and shrunk."

— Muffie Brandon, White House social secretary

"We don't have any money," Mrs. Brandon said.

Most of the money in the fund — $730,000 — was spent on redecorating the Reagans' living quarters on the second and third floors.

In addition, there was a separate donation of more than $209,000 from the non-profit Knapp Foundation that enabled the first lady to purchase new china bordered in red, her favorite color.

Sheila Tate, the first lady's press secretary, said Mrs. Reagan has no plans to purchase new silver because the existing flatware will go nicely with the china.

Mrs. Brandon said she tries to make the best of the tablecloth situation by varying the look as much as possible with candles, centerpieces, and overlays in contrasting colors.

For example, she said, she found "old lace overlays up in the attic" that can be used atop the tablecloths.

Most of the tablecloths, used on round tables at formal banquets honoring visiting heads of state as well as at less formal occasions, are either linen or heavy cotton, Mrs. Brandon said.

Red is represented in the inventory, as are several pastel colors for spring and summer.

But Mrs. Brandon said that being limited to six different changes of tablecloths presents a problem for a presidential family which enjoys entertaining.

"It's hard when you have a state visitor each month," she said, worrying aloud that people will begin to notice the repetition.

"We can do it, but you have to be very imaginative," she said.

from Talking Poetics from Naropa Institute
Vol 2. / Jerome Rothenberg

"The new poetry looked a little but like that (1920, 1930 mags like Transition or the Dada book by Robert Motherwell) because in fact it came in something like a straight line from that earlier epoch of experimentation. And it changed, it really changed our whole notion of what a poem could look like. So that you can get faked out, you can open a book. Some of the found poetry of Bern Porter is like this — you can open a book and see things there that look like poems, but they're laundry lists, or they're cut-up bits of ads, or pages of mail-order catalogues. Whatever But in some way they become poems, too, particularly say, the way a really good found-poet like Bern Porter utilizes them."

Strait of Magellan

In addition to its engineering marvels, the Panama Canal also presents a complete cross-section of the American tropics—from open savannah land, virgin rain forest and scrubby hill country to freshwater lakes and mangrove swamps. If you look and listen, you can see a fascinating treasury of natural life. Brilliant flowers dot the area. Howler or capuchin monkeys band in the treetops at Barro Colorado; alligators and deer may be seen at the water's edge. Many-hued butterflies and

STRAIT OF MAGELLAN

When your Delta Cruiseliner takes you around the tip of South America, through the Strait of Magellan, you will be surrounded by incredible beauty. Even Norway's fjords and Alaska's Inside Passage may seem dwarfed by comparison with the dazzling sights before you. As Sir Francis Drake said in 1578, you will find "many turnings . . . In this Strait there be many fair harbours . . . The land on both sides is very huge and mountainous and wonderful to look upon for their height . . . These mountains are covered with snow; the trees . . . are green continually . . ." Here are sapphire waters, emerald isles, misty waterfalls, majestic glaciers and the diamond-like sparkle of lofty snow-capped peaks. On your right is Chile; on your left, Tierra del Fuego, "land of fire," so named for its many Indian bonfires. The part of Tierra del Fuego visible to you belongs to Chile, including Punta Arenas — the world's southernmost city — with a population over 44,500 and a large sheep-raising industry. The area's tallest mountain is Sarmiento, which rises 7,546 feet. Another major mountain is Mt. Darwin, named after Charles Darwin when he visited the area aboard the Beagle, in the 1830's.

You will enter the Strait of Magellan at 52°25′ South Latitude 68°25′ West Longitude and will cruise for approximately one and a half days between the tip of South America and Tierra del Fuego. When you exit the Strait at 52°50′ South Latitude 73°50′ West Longitude, you will turn northward and navigate through the Smyth Channel and fabled Patagonian Channels. Upon passing through the Trinidad Channel, your Delta cruise liner will emerge into the Pacific Ocean. At that point, you will be at 49°55′ South Latitude 75°54′ West Longitude and you will have traveled through a scenic wonderland of more than 500 miles since leaving the Atlantic Ocean.

There at the "bottom of the world," the "alpine" atmosphere is naturally on the cool side. But no matter. If you wish, you can enjoy it all through the large picture windows which surround you aboard ship.

TO MY NATIVE CITY

Noble hideout of my ancestors; nothing
There be like evoking, crossing narrow streets
The era of cross and cutlass, of the smoking lamps and sulphur matches

For tis gone, walled city, thy age of stirring tales
The caravel fleet is gone forever from thy bay....
No longer does the oil come in leathern flasks.

Thow wert heroic in the colonial years
When thy sons, skylor eagles, were not a flock of swifts.

But today, filled with musty disarray
Well may thou inspire that affection
Which one has for his old shoes.

ROME (AP) — Police investigating the kidnapping of U. S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier on Saturday arrested a fugitive suspected leader of the Red Brigades and 10 others believed to be members of the terrorist organization, authorities said.

The arrests came during dawn raids on three hide-outs located on the outskirt of Rome, police said.

Police identified the chief suspect as Giovanni Senzani, 42, a professor of criminology at Florence University who was charged in connection with the kidnapping of an

The Amazon River is 4,087 miles long, starting in Peru, South of Cuzco, all the way to the Atlantic Ocean in Brazil. Effects Observed at Sea

Sea like a mirror.

Ripples with the appearance of scales. No foam crests.

Small waves with crests of a glassy appearance.

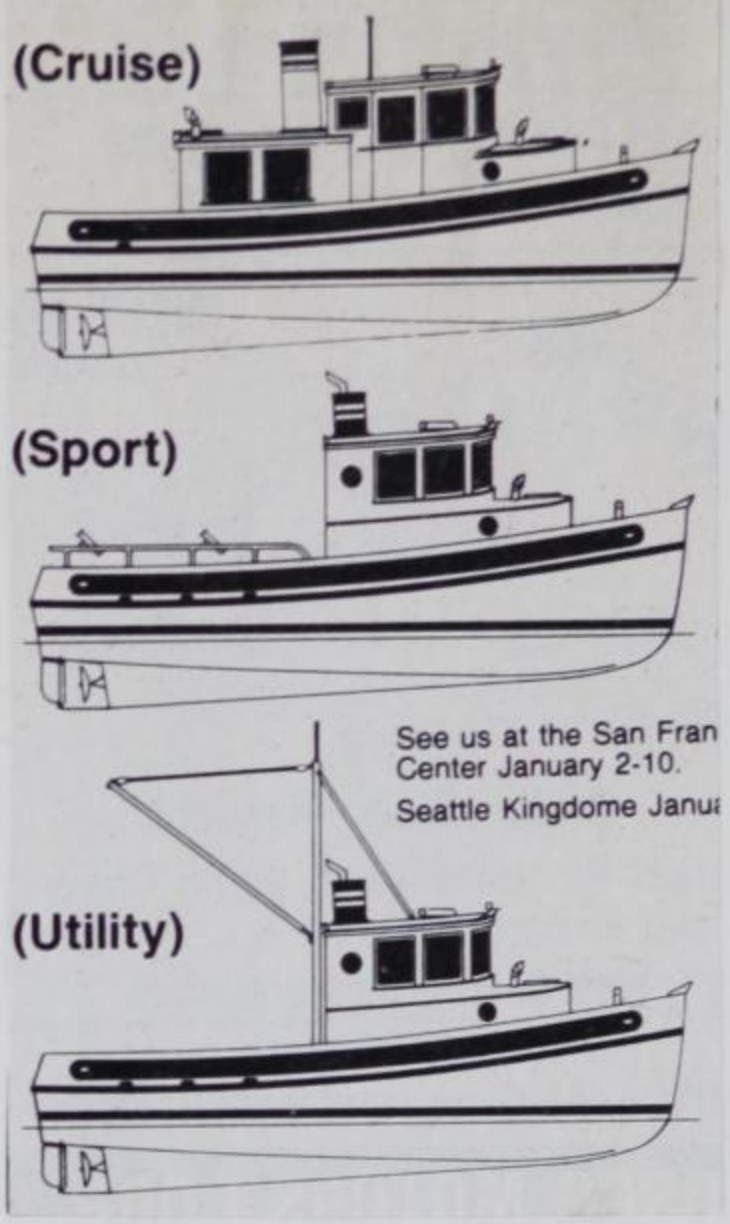
Larger waves, crests begin to break, scattered whitecaps.

Small waves becoming longer, many whitecaps.

Moderate waves taking longer, foam - many whitecaps, some spray.

Larger waves forming whitecaps everywhere - more spray.

Sea heaps up - white foam from breaking waves begins to be blown in streaks.



Moderate high waves of greater length. Edges of crests begin to be blown in spindrift. Foam blown in well marked streaks.

High waves - sea begins to roll, dense streaks of foam. Spray may reduce visibility.

Very high waves with overhanging crests. Sea takes on a white appearance as foam is blown in very dense streaks. Rolling is heavy and visibility reduced.

Exceptionally high waves, sea covered with white foam patches. Visibility still more reduced.

Air is filled with foam, sea completely white with driving spray. Visibility greatly reduced.

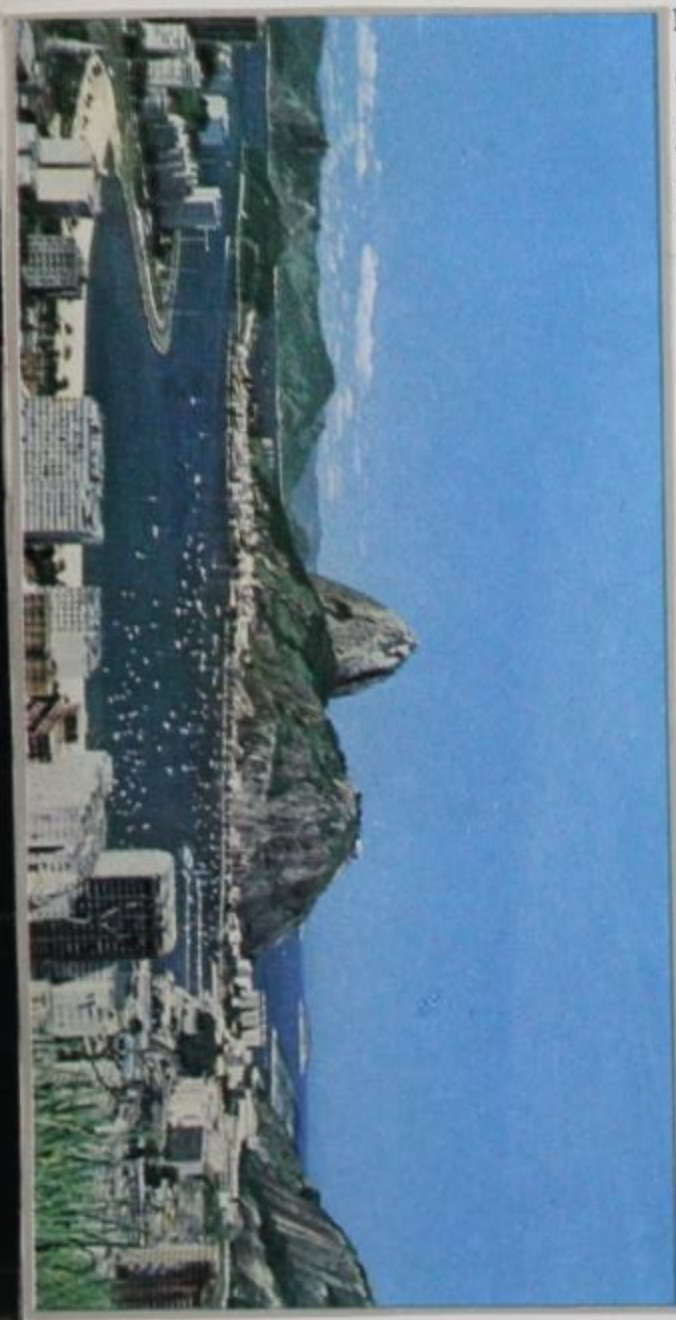
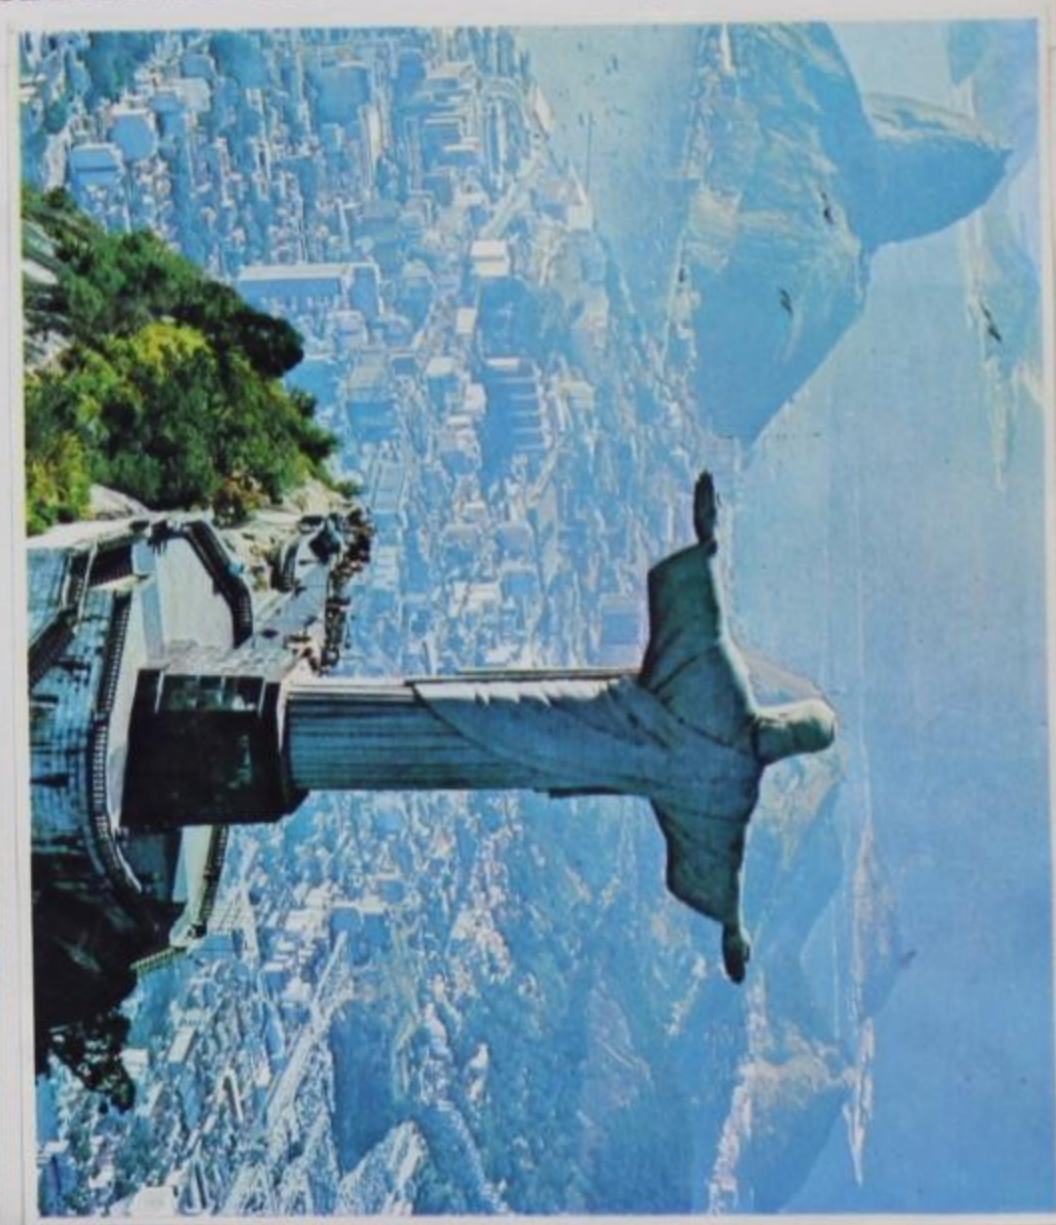
The glitter of gemstones has had an almost hypnotic effect over mankind since earliest times. Magical powers were once attributed to previous stones. Powdered jade was prescribed against kidney disease. Aquamarines were said to restore failing marriages, and a dash of powdered aquamarine taken with water was supposed to cure laziness. Emeralds could guarantee safe childbirth and improve failing eyesight. Topaz was reputed to be able to ward off night-mares and dispel worry. Amethyst is derived from the Greek, meaning "not drunken" and the gem was special protection against the evils of stong drink. But the real value of gemstones lies in their inherent, rather than mystical, properties - their beauty, color, rarity, brilliance and durability.





SANTOS, BRAZIL

Santos, about 200 miles southwest of Rio de Janeiro, is the natural gateway for the foreign commerce of the thriving state of Sao Paulo. Over 40% by value of all Brazilian imports and about half the total exports pass through Santos, the busiest port in all Brazil, handling 25% of the shipping traffic.

The port is three miles from the open sea and is approached by the winding Santos Channel; at its mouth is a picturesque old fort (1709) complete with bartizans and a miniature chapel. Winding up the channel there are views of palm-dotted flat shores and irregular hills in the background. Sao Paulo city is reached by traversing these hills - there are fine views of Santos during this journey. The plain upon which Santos, a city of 350,000, stands is an island which can be circumnavigated by small boats. The extensive wharves are very active. The city has been improved in recent years by modern buildings, wide, tree-lined streets, and wealthy suburbs... outward signs of the prosperity of its inhabitants.

ARGENTINA

The romantic picture of Argentina as the land of the colorful gaucho, riding the pampas, herding cattle and singing ballads by the campfire is no longer typical of this vast and varied country. The gaucho still has his place, as the cattle industry remains prominent in the country's economy and Argentine beef is still among the best in the world. But Argentina is much more than this.

This vast country, whose area would cover 30% of Europe, extends some 2,300 miles from tropical jungle in the north to the icy reaches of the Antarctic in the south and 900 miles from the sandy coast of the Atlantic on the east to the lofty peaks of the Andes in the west. The varied geography of the country offers many areas of rare scenic beauty, especially the mighty Iguassu Falls and the southern lake region.

Argentina is not only a land of wide-open spaces and natural beauty, but also of lovely towns and cities. The cosmopolitan capital of Buenos Aires is famous for its spacious parks and boulevards, smart shops, theatres and nightclubs and bustling port and commercial district. Despite the monumental grandeur of its cathedral, capital and presidential residence, Buenos Aires has retained much of its colonial atmosphere in the Spanish-inspired homes and mansions. Outside of the metropolitan area are the provincial centers of Cordoba, Mendoza, Tucuman and Salta, once small villages which have developed into sizeable cities of commercial, as well as historical importance. There are also many charming resort areas such as the beaches of Mar del Plata and the lakes and peaks near Bariloche.

Argentinians are gracious hosts, dignified but cordial, and genuinely concerned that the visitor will enjoy his stay. Language need present no difficulty - there is always someone in the hotels, shops and restaurants who speaks English.

CHILE

CHILE, a long narrow rihbon of land extending for 2,650 miles between the giant walls of the Andes on the east and the Pacific Ocean on the west, is no wider than 220 miles, with an average of 110 miles. The central Andean chain, which separates Chile from Argentina and Bolivia, is second only to the Himalayas in height, with peaks (20 in all) rising more than 20,000 feet.

Because of the geographical gradations the country has all varieties of soil and climate. The northern zone is a desert with an abundance of mineral wealth. Farther south the soil is fertile, especially in the valleys, but great tracts of land are barren for most of the year. In the fertile central zones are extensive farms and vineyards and the only cities of substantial size. Below this central valley are hundreds miles of green fields, forest, rivers, and lakes. Within this region lies the lovely Chilean Lake District with verdant farms and timberland. Farther south is a sparsely populated, virtually unexplored area, a cold and stormy land of mountains, glaciers, fjords, islands and wild forest. In the vicinity of Punta Arenas, the southern most city, extensive sheep farming is important.

For almost the entire length of the 2,900 mile coastline there are numerous beautiful beaches dotted with resort hotels. The most popular is the resort Vina del Mar, world famous for its casino and other resort facilities. The southern Chilean Lake District, known as the Switzerland of America, is one of the most beautiful and awe-inspiring regions in the world; it is considered a highlight of travel to South America.

Cuzco means "navel" and it was, to the Incas a sacred place, centre of their Empire and also, they believed, of the world. In 1532, after the Spanish Conquest, the city was remodelled and temples and palaces were constructed on the Inca ruins. The city is a synthesis of the Inca and Spanish civilizations, the hotel an excellent example.

Miller applauds all these calling Dolbere Thoreau, unable to fit into the world yet ahead of society obliging it to catch up, living now with the object of some day being free. The while attesting one's greatest security is to be loved. "Love is the only protection: all other kinds lead to war."

But Dolbere is imprisoned, his publishers have no word, and his messages, is left to hearsay to propagate. Let man be a thinker of the world.

Throughout the years Henry was beset. Letters overburdened by the manuscripts of writers awaiting in line for acceptance if not our publishers read them by Henry. Many lived with him for short periods, served him in menial jobs the while household as what they considered "another's apprenticeship" to observe the master in action, Dolbelizing in an unending stream; tipping out/in endless sheets - twenty page letters + essays of revenge and uplift, descriptions of odd balls, hymns to love, pages of adoration for the primal and acts relating thereto.

"George Dolbere in Quest provides an ultimate of the inward exploring man, bursting into fulfillment against society's grain, Miller type-style, this time astride the waves in a 32 foot boat, New Zealand bound. Five years out of Germany, wife and four children left behind. A passport "outside nationality as world citizen and friend of all peoples" requires "my own ship, my own flag as a badge of good fellowship between nations". Says Dolbere and "not trying is not moving which is equal to living death. But death is the penalty of sin: therefore not moving is sin..."

"With a heart full of love, love for man, for the world.

While these men did succeed as dear household members without necessarily full blessing beyond suggestion and example for these women writers like Mary Guggenheim, Caroline Dalton — others found much better — their manuscripts were read, marginal notes made & with in many cases introductions written, both a testament the master approved and yet another encouragement for writing Henry had been fulfilled. Henry not only liked to write. he literally did not feel well unless he was doing it. and

For Carolina he not only found a title from (who where There is Love the River Goes) the work itself, but wrote music for a female voice and encouragement to carry on.

The same sharing publication and encouragement came also to practitioners of art, among them Jean Varda and Knud Merrild. Henry probably had more affinity for artists than for writers because he himself tried desperately to be one. Early on his arrival in the U.S. both in Brooklyn Hamm and for Paris in Dalton Rodan.

The idea of a bottle with a message in it being tossed about on the seas until it's washed up on to some far distant shore brings thoughts of mystery, romance and adventure. Where did the bottle come from ? Who sent it ? What dire circumstances caused it to be cast adrift ? What mysterious river in the ocean carried it to the beach ?

Bottles travel at different speeds. One may drift only a mile in a month; another, caught in a swift current, can race along at 100 miles a day. But on the average the speed of a bottle in the water is half-a-mile an hour.

Studies made using drift or message bottles can tell us many things. For fishermen, exact knowledge of currents can be almost literally pure gold because of the increase in fishing hauls. American scientists, for example, use bottles to tip off New England fishermen as to where and when they can find cod and haddock. The eggs of these fish float on the surface, and bottles are cast among them as telltale floating markers. If the bottles move far out to sea, then presumably the eggs do, too.

The most important bottle messages are those sent to help scientists chart the currents and drifts of the seas. These were first recorded many years before Christ was born by Theophrastus, a Greek philosopher. He floated bottles in the Mediterranean to study currents.

Centuries later, Benjamin Franklin, threw bottles in to the Atlantic Ocean. They contained his name and address, and asked the finders to tell him where and when the bottles were found. By gathering this information, Franklin was able to chart the speed and direction of the Gulf Stream. His original chart is little changed today.

FROM THE NAVIGATION BRIDGE:

Our Navigator - Second Officer John McNally - advises that we will be close on Cocos Island around 6:30 this morning..... and should be abeam at 6:49. Cocos is approximately 4 miles by 2 miles in size. This island is barren, rugged, uninhabited rock, and lies some 320 kilometers off the Peninsula of Osa, in the South. Arrangements for reaching it by chartered boat must be made in Puntarenas, Costa Rica, after a permit has been got from the Costa Rican Government. It was at one time a refuge for pirates, who are supposed to have buried the treasures of Lima, Peru there, though none has been found by the 500 or so expeditions which have sought it. Treasure seekers make an initial cash payment, agree to share any treasure found with the Government, and are supervised by Costa Rican police. The offshore waters are a fisherman's paradise, for they abound in fish of all kinds.

Pour les trois cents passagers d'un Boeing...

MIRACLE EN PLEIN CIEL

Pendant près de cinq minutes, les trois cent huit passagers d'un Boeing 747 de la compagnie « United Airlines » ont frôlé une mort horrible : s'abimer dans l'océan Pacifique, avec l'avion dont les quatre moteurs étaient mystérieusement tombés en panne. Seuls les seize membres de l'équipage encourageaient, avec angoisse, le pilote de l'appareil qui, par tous les moyens, s'efforçait de remettre les réacteurs en route.

Finalement, alors que tout semblait perdu, un moteur, puis les trois autres, recommencèrent à fonctionner et les passagers, ignorants, atterrirent normalement à Honolulu (îles Hawaï), alors qu'ils étaient partis, quelques heures plus tôt, de San Francisco.

Selon un porte-parole du bureau national pour la sécurité des transports américains (N.T.S.B.) et l'administration fédérale de l'aviation (F.A.A.), les moteurs du 747 ont été inspectés et aucune panne, ni déficience, n'ont été découvertes. « L'avion est de nouveau utilisé », a affirmé M. Dunbar.

La compagnie a indiqué, d'autre part, que le moteur numéro un s'était brusquement arrêté, et sans raison apparente. Le pilote tentait vainement de le remettre en route quand les trois autres firent de même. L'avion est alors lentement descendu de 13 000 mètres à 9 000 mètres, sans que les passagers s'en aperçoivent.

Le pilote a pu remettre le premier moteur en marche, puis les trois derniers, et l'atterrissage s'est effectué sans problème.

Pour la compagnie, il était possible d'atterrir sans incident avec un seul des réacteurs. L'enquête se poursuit, mais les responsables estiment qu'un tel « incident » est extrêmement rare et qu'il ne s'agissait pas, en l'occurrence, d'une erreur humaine.

Un pilote français, membre de la Fédération nationale des pilotes de ligne (F.N.P.L.) ne voit que deux explications possibles, au vu du peu d'éléments dont il dispose :

— « Si l'avion se trouvait dans les nuages chargés d'une eau en surfusion (en-dessous de 0° et en suspension), l'impact provoqué par l'avion a pu entraîner une congélation sur les surfaces, les bords d'attaque et les entrées d'air des moteurs. Dans ce cas, ces derniers se sont enrayés... D'autre part, il peut s'agir d'une panne de réchauffement du carburant... Par temps froid, le moteur de votre voiture diesel s'arrête parce qu'il y a des paillettes de glace dans le gas-oil... C'est la même chose dans le ciel, si le système de réchauffement connaît une défaillance. »

Dans tous les cas, le pilote a fait preuve d'un sang froid extraordinaire. Mais, comme l'explique ce membre de la F.N.P.L. :

— « Tous les pilotes de ligne, à l'entraînement, apprenent à piloter avec les moteurs réduits, pour simuler la panne. Mais on ne va pas jusqu'à couper les gaz. »

Th. de C.

Les quatre moteurs se sont arrêtés durant cinq minutes à 13 000 mètres d'altitude au-dessus du Pacifique

Gala Dali, 89, dies at castle

New York Times

MADRID — Gala Dali, the wife and muse of the surrealist painter Salvador Dali for more than 50 years, died Thursday in her 12th-century castle in northeastern Catalonia. She was believed to be 89 years old.

Exalted by Dali in numerous paintings and innumerable declarations to the press, the Russian-born woman exercised a powerful influence on the artist's life and work, and, with an iron will, urged him toward fame and wealth.

Elena Deluvina Diakanoff, as she was born in Kazan, first met Dali in 1929 at Cadaques on the Costa Brava when she was married to the French poet Paul Eluard. Fascinated by Dali, she left Eluard, and the new couple remained together thereafter; they never had children.

Dali frequently painted his wife and at times signed his oils with the names "Dali-Gala" in intertwined script.

A statement issued by the painter's household said she died in her castle at Pubol — a gift from her husband — "with the constant love and attention of Dali." It said that the painter had first informed King Juan Carlos and Queen Sofia, who visited the Dalis last summer at their Costa Brava home in Port Lligat, "as a proof of his love for Catalonia and for Spain."

The 78-year-old artist, the statement said, "gives emotional thanks for all the demonstrations of sympathy and affection he is receiving from friends and admirers from all over the world and, very especially, the attention that he is receiving from the professionals in the communications media in these difficult moments for him now that Gala is immortal history."

Maine native is honored for doughnut

QUINCY, Mass. (UPI) — Like others who have made enormous contributions to mankind but were not appreciated in their lifetime, honor has finally been given to the man who created the doughnut.

Capt. Hanson Crocket Gregory is purported to be the first person to put a hole in fried dough. His claim is disputed, however, by more than a baker's dozen of other would-be inventors and many of his contemporaries.

Nevertheless, students and local officials came to the Snug Harbor Sailors' Cemetery Thursday to honor Gregory, who died over 60 years ago.

Students from the Snug Harbor Elementary School, city officials and representatives from the Randolph-based Dunkin' Donuts Corp. of America ignored the doubters and gathered at Gregory's grave with poems and essays.

They also unveiled a new tombstone adorned by a doughnut and an anchor.

Gregory claimed to cut a hole through one of his mother's fried cakes in their Camden, Maine, home in 1847.

Folklore has it he was unhappy with the soggy insides of the cakes. So he pushed a fork through a dough ball, tossed it into hot oil and produced a uniformly cooked product superior to his mother's.

So word spread and soon the delicacy was being enjoyed throughout Maine and the rest of New England.

J. Vincent Smyth, superintendent of the city's cemetery department, recalled hearing that the man who the National Bakers' Association considered the doughnut daddy was buried in the community. After poring over old records Smyth discovered the grave had no tombstone or marker.

He enlisted the support of teacher and history buff Harold Crowley and Ronald Rosenberg of Dunkin' Donuts. Rosenberg agreed to pay the cost of a tombstone because "we owe an enormous debt of gratitude to Gregory."

Star Of Progress Gives Up Charter

By Beverly Ludden

After 108 years the Star of Progress Grange of Jackson has decided to give up its charter. Those who wish may join the Harvest Home Grange in Brooks.

At this time there are 30 members. There are three 60-year and over members, Jeff and Florence Eldridge and Florence Stevens. Twenty-five-year and over members are Madeline and Earl Dodge, Beverly Ludden, Lulie Bickford, Marie Tucker, Avis Bailey and Harold Morse.

The present officers are Master, Madelene Dodge; Overseer, Jolene Jeans; Lecturer, Cheryl Moore; Chaplain, Lucy Lavway; Secretary, Lulie Bickford; Treasurer, Florence Stevens; Steward, Bruce Jeans; Assistant Steward, Jack Haley; Lady Assistant Steward, Diane Haley; Gatekeeper, Jeff Eldridge; Ceres, Theo Stacey; Pomona, Beverly Ludden; Flora, Sybil Lavway and Executive Committee, Theo Stacey, Jack Haley and Jeff Eldridge.

History

The first meeting was held in 1874 in a hall near John Dodge's. After getting organized they voted to build a new hall. A Grange store was run for ten years to pay off the debt.

The store was sold and the money was saved. Later a stable and dining room were built. Then a stove, tables, chairs and dishes were bought. A toilet was built over the stable and later a piano was bought and hardwood floors were installed in the hall.

The hall burned in 1931. The Grange then bought the Turner Center Creamery building and converted it into a Grange Hall. It was dedicated on June 23, 1932. There was a small kitchen and dining room on the first floor and a large hall on the second. In order to earn money the grange started holding fairs. The first was on Oct. 15, 1932 and realized a profit of $40.32.

Beginning Sept. 8, 1934 the first Labor Day Fair was held and the 50th Labor Day Fair was held last year.

In 1954 the Grange Hall burned again. A new hall was built in 1955 with donations. Costs were met with the proceeds of dances run for several years by Kid and Florence Eldridge and Gertrude Nason.

In 1979 the grange voted to sell the hall to the town and a board of directors was formed including Madeline Dodge, Beverly Ludden, Bruce Jeans, Theo Stacey, Diane Haley, Cleve McLaughlin and Myrtie Ricker. The building became the Jackson Community Center.

At a recent grange meeting it was decided to donate $500 to the Jackson Community Hall, the Arthur Jewell Community Health Center, the Jackson Congregational Church and Mt. View High School's loan program, allowing a Jackson young person going on to school to borrow up to $100 a year, to be paid back after his education is completed.

The balance will go to the Harvest Home Grange treasury in Brooks.

& the hula-Bora thing - there having really been little else on my mind for days, mainly because of a visit/phone exchange before leaving Belfast.
However it was the following has been around in sheet-page form & should at last be recorded,
be copied herein: ---

EASTER (Happy Day)

to hula, April 6, 1980

So it being the day it is
And I had myself sailed on the Sea of Galilee only a few weeks before,
reviewing the deeds, the life, the t
of Christ, our Savior.
(Believed in them and him too)
Or, as we say, being in the general
spirit thereof,
Called to ask sincerely how you were

I'm fine, you Aaid

Q. But you blanky, blanky, blank, why are you asking?
What do you mean telephoning me, this festive, religious day?

A. Because under the laws of the land and of our Mutual God Jehovah, I am your husband.
Further, and as such, I have the right to worry about your health and to ask politely, even sincerely how you are.

Blank you, you Said
And bang went the telephone receiver (over end)
And bang, bang went my eardrums (my end)

Bang Bang
Another Happy Easter Day
Shot to Hell
As they Say in Finland

or was it truly meant to be so.
these bright Easter Holidays,
so rich, as they are, in spiritual values and meanings.

But being patient, kindly and a gentleman
(well oiled in those old Standbyes)
I said, or thought I said:

Peace be unto you
Love thy neighbor
Glory be to the all
Prevailing Good,
including you,
my love.
Give us this day
and all future days
with nights between
May His blessings abide with you for all the days
of our lives.
Save us in Thy Mercy
Protection to you
And for you and all others within the sound of my voice

Did I not ask for you and did you not find?
Are not my prayers for you?
Did you not thereby receive?
In the name of the Father and of the Son
and of the Holy Spirit
Amen
Thy Kingdom come
For you, for you and for all yours
And did He not come to judge
the living and the dead,
including me?
including you?
Did you fail Him?
No, He did not fail you
Did I fail Him?
No, He did not fail me
For blessed is the fruit
Of thy Womb
Hail thy Mother
Prayers for you
Now and at the hour
of your death

Did you and I not beseech him?
Did we believe in the Holy Spirit?
the Holy Catholic Church
the Communion of Saints
the Forgiveness of Sins
the Resurrection of the Body
And life everlasting?

Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God
Hail Mary, full of grace
Bless thou my wife
Purify me, this wayward husband
Assist him
Assist him
Assist him

(And as for the Strasbourg conclusion there was nothing beyond I did what I did and perhaps could not stand any more)
