SPRING 1965

The new Alumni House, it is planned, will serve as headquarters, meeting place, and social center. Located on Mayflower Hill Drive, the building stands at the entrance to the campus. The Alumni Council is currently conducting a campaign to raise funds toward the purchase price, furnishing, and endowment of the building.

ON THE COVER: After many years of wise and devoted service, CLIFFORD HAZELDINE OSBORNE retires this June as chaplain. A biography and a series of reflections on matters pressing today's students appears on pages 24.

*... for us to be able to say:
We have met the challenge of the Ford Foundation Campaign.*

PRESIDENT STRIDER, APRIL 26, 1965

The historic announcement came as a bequest of $400,000 carried the Ford Foundation Challenge Campaign to $3,951,053 — well above the $3.6 million goal originally set nearly three years ago. The bequest was left by the late Florence Elizabeth Dunn '96, the former professor of English and member of the board of trustees, and is one of the largest gifts from an individual in all of Colby's one hundred and fifty two years.

This climax to the college's greatest fund-raising campaign brought smiles of pride to all of those who had contributed, in all ways, for the effort. "The response has been tremendous," President Strider said, "and we know thousands of alumni, alumnae, parents, trustees, faculty, staff and other friends have sacrificed to make this possible."

In speaking of Miss Dunn's gift, he stated: "How fitting that the gift that put us far beyond our goal and sent us soaring toward new goals came from Miss Dunn — one of Colby's great ladies. We shall always be in her debt." Miss Dunn, who graduated summa cum laude, devoted over fifty years of her life to Colby — as a student, a teacher for twenty five years, and a trustee for another quarter of a century. She was awarded an honorary doctor of letters in 1928.

With a little less than two months remaining until the June 30 deadline, the college has no intentions of letting up. The campaign will continue, the president said, "with all vigor up to the final minute to establish the most significant fund-raising record in the annals of Colby . . . We want to achieve a goal as far as possible beyond $4 million. The more resounding this success, the more momentum will be generated for the future."

The grant, and the supporting funds it has produced, have provided a major impetus to the $20 million program announced in October 1960. In addition to significant allocations to endowments for faculty salaries and scholarships, the campaign has made possible Dana Hall, a dormitory for two hundred and ten women to be opened in the fall; the Guy P. Gannett Lecture Endowment; new science laboratories; a science museum; and an expansion of resources in Miller Library. Several other areas of the college's plant and program, including physical education facilities, are scheduled to receive support from the proceeds of the three-year effort.

Singling out, on this page, those responsible for the success of the campaign would, of course, be impossible; the fulfillment results from the participation of thousands. But the college's thanks must go particularly to those who headed the drive: national chairman Neil Leonard '21; leadership gifts chairman Ellerton M. Jette '55, hon.; general chairman Gordon B. Jones '40; and alumni chairman Ellsworth W. Millett '25. And special thanks, too, must be sent to the area chairmen in various sections of the country and their co-workers who assisted in the history-making Ford Foundation Challenge Campaign.

It is a proud day.

Reactions to visits to high schools made by three students through a few southern states in January (see The Communication Mosaic, page 11), have been uniformly positive. Guidance counsellors and other officials, in negro, white and integrated institutions alike, have commented on the precise and intelligent presentation and of the impression made upon the students. And at this writing, two applications for admission have already been received.

"But they're all made-up words, aren't they?" was one student's worried query on seeing some of the typographical experimentation done in the graphic arts workshop during January. One of the experimenters asked if she hadn't made up words herself. The perplexed student's reply: "Oh yes, but I didn't think you were allowed to."

An article on educational investments, specifically dealing with annuities, wills, bequests, estate planning, and other financial considerations, appears in this issue. Though designed to be as informative as possible, no such text can be definitive as necessary. There is one booklet available which details aspects of such planning (page 50).

The need for a student center, or community center, increasingly enters into informal campus discourse. Although there is a general consensus of agreement on the need, nearly as many schemes are afoot as to what and how it should be like as there are people in the college.

Few, however, have talked about location, preferring only that it be accessible. One unusual idea has been proposed: build the center in the grove west of the men's dormitories — roughly between the chapel and Johnson Pond.

In a day when architecture has to "show", it is refreshing to note there are those who also see other purposes for structures. Believing a center to be a place to gather apart from the direct academic influence, those proposing the grove site recognize that a college is a good place to be and, on occasion, a good place to be away from.

Though the BROWN ALUMNI MONTHLY scooped the ALUMINUS on this one, it was too good to resist. President Strider, speaking before the American Alumni Council in Portland in January, remarked that he distrusted microphones and public address systems. After some trouble at the college not long ago, he said, the electrician was called in; he made some adjustments and, turning to the president, told him what the trouble had been: "Just a screw loose in the speaker."

THE COLBY ALUMNUS is published in the spring, summer, fall, and winter by the Alumni Council of Colby College. Entered as second-class matter January 25, 1912 at the post office in Waterville, Maine, under the Act of March 2, 1879.

The Chaplain Retires

The Reverend Clifford H. Osborne, who retires this June after fifteen years as Chaplain, can trace his affiliation with Colby over more than thirty years. In the early 1930's he was often a guest speaker at chapel in Memorial Hall. While minister at the Pleasant Street Methodist Church in Waterville, he was appointed a visiting lecturer in New Testament following the death of Professor Herbert "Pop" Newman. In 1949 the college conferred on Dr. Osborne an honorary doctor of divinity degree.

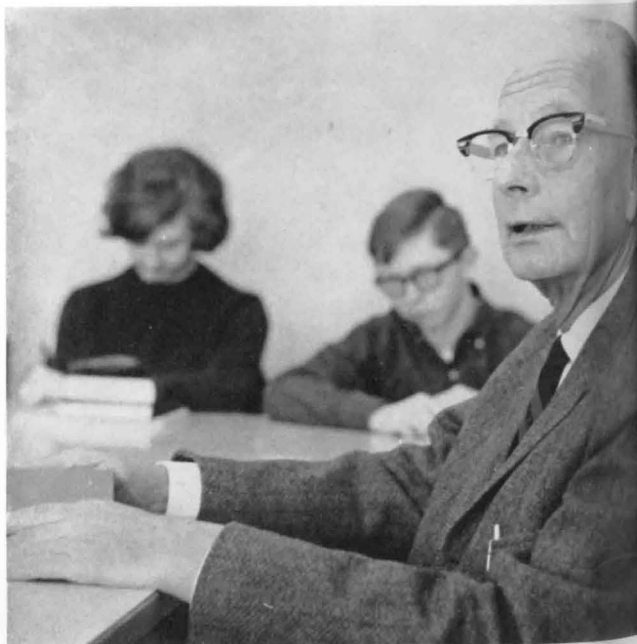

Born in London, and a graduate of London University with an honors degree in philosophy, Dr. Osborne came to United States following service in the British Navy during the first world war. He served Methodist pastorates in New York State, and in Biddeford and Portland, before coming to Waterville. He was active in religious education work, and for four years was executive secretary of the Maine Methodist Board of Education. For several years dean of the Northern New England School of Religious Education at the University of New Hampshire summer school, Dr. Osborne was one of the founders of the Maine Council of Churches and that organization's radio director from 1946-1951, broadcasting each Sunday Church School of the Air and Book of Books. In 1946 he was the state's first clergyman selected as preacher on CBS radio's Church of the Air.

Dr. Osborne has contributed to the religious press and has written a book THE RELIGION OF JOHN BURROUGHS, published by Houghton-Mifflin in 1925. A guest at Colby's second Religious Convocation (1939), he returned regularly thereafter. Appointed Chaplain and associate professor of religion, he became a full professor in 1955.

The Chaplain and Mrs. Osborne will make their home in Otisfield, in an old farmhouse they acquired and remodelled some thirty years ago. They have two children, Mavis, wife of a Denver attorney and Timothy '48, associate director of development at Rice University.

We look upon the retirement of Dr. Clifford H. Osborne as Chaplain of Colby College with very mixed feelings indeed. He has had a long and vigorous career and, as he approaches retirement age, it is obviously his due that he be permitted the leisure that retirement will afford. On the other hand, he will certainly be missed as a familiar figure on Mayflower Hill. The Colby College chapel program has been rich and rewarding under his leadership, and his fine sermons and the beautifully eloquent prayers that we have become accustomed to hearing from him on ceremonial occasions will be impossible to surpass and difficult to equal. Furthermore, the genial company of Dr. Osborne is something that all of us who know him have come to take for granted, and for a long time there will be a very conspicuous gap in that spot in our assemblies and processions that he has filled so well. We all wish Chaplain Osborne and Mrs. Osborne many long and happy years in what we know will be a vigorous and creative retirement.

In an age of no strongly-held principles

Being some observations by Chaplain Osborne on the state of culture and the predicament of man.

• For the lack of direction evident in today's generation, we cannot put all the blame on parents . . . it was the "grandfather" generation, my generation, that failed to give their children a sense of purpose and resolve. Today's youth, victims of two generations of "lostness," are for very good reason an enigma to their elders—who don't know what to do with them.

One person has called many colleges "Adolescent Reservations" and there are historical reasons why this should be the case. I cannot see any reason this late in the century for continuing this situation, much less publicizing it in order to comfort a generation of parents who were embarrassed to know how to approach their children when they were at home.

• Until the American male gives up his attitude toward sex as an exploitation of the female, promiscuity is likely to increase. We are a delayed culture, in terms of development, but not necessarily in terms of improvement. The Puritan syndrome (which reached its supreme influence in our culture) reinforced by later Victorianism, has braked this development. We are just now in the throes of the sexual revolution which swept Europe much earlier.

- Utopias have fallen apart, so far, because they have been founded and populated by individualists who couldn't stay together . . . the generation of "togetherness" is in actuality made up of the same human compound. Rules of some sort cannot be escaped; in those mediaeval universities which were run by students, some rules governing academic activity were established. Students demanded that their professors punctually keep to the lecture schedule or else forfeit their fee. They also accepted the requirements expected by their teachers for degrees.

The human being cannot be bifurcated, separated into brains and person . . . there are always some rules needed to make the grouping into a community.

- Honest experiment can only be done against a background of tradition. It cannot be carried on in a vacuum. We look back to what great men have done, and what they failed to do. They worked in ages when a combining of established values with experimental attitudes brought new meaning to human relations.

Maybe one approach to the problem of the college 'image' and changing mores is to consult the parents—who are the ones you want to reach. Ask them: do they really want the college to act in loco parentis on all matters? This could help decide on coeducation—now only in a formative stage at Colby—where there are segregated commons, men's and women's judiciaries, student associations, men's and women's unions, prizes, honors, awards. This does not begin to mention the separateness of these two factors at the college . . . these two factors—male and female—which are, after all, deeply and mutually involved in the physical-moral-ideological perpetuation of man.

- I am a short-term pessimist and long-term optimist . . . I have a deep faith in man, though I believe Western man is now suffering from dry rot. In this age of no strongly-held principles, the influence of the church is very low . . . and, though it is probably apostasy, I also believe that the colleges must forge ahead where the churches have fallen behind—as they did regarding racial segregation.

Of course, the real bases for formation of values at the home and the early school years . . . students in college do not generally change their attitudes and values between the freshman and senior years. But the college does have an influence . . .

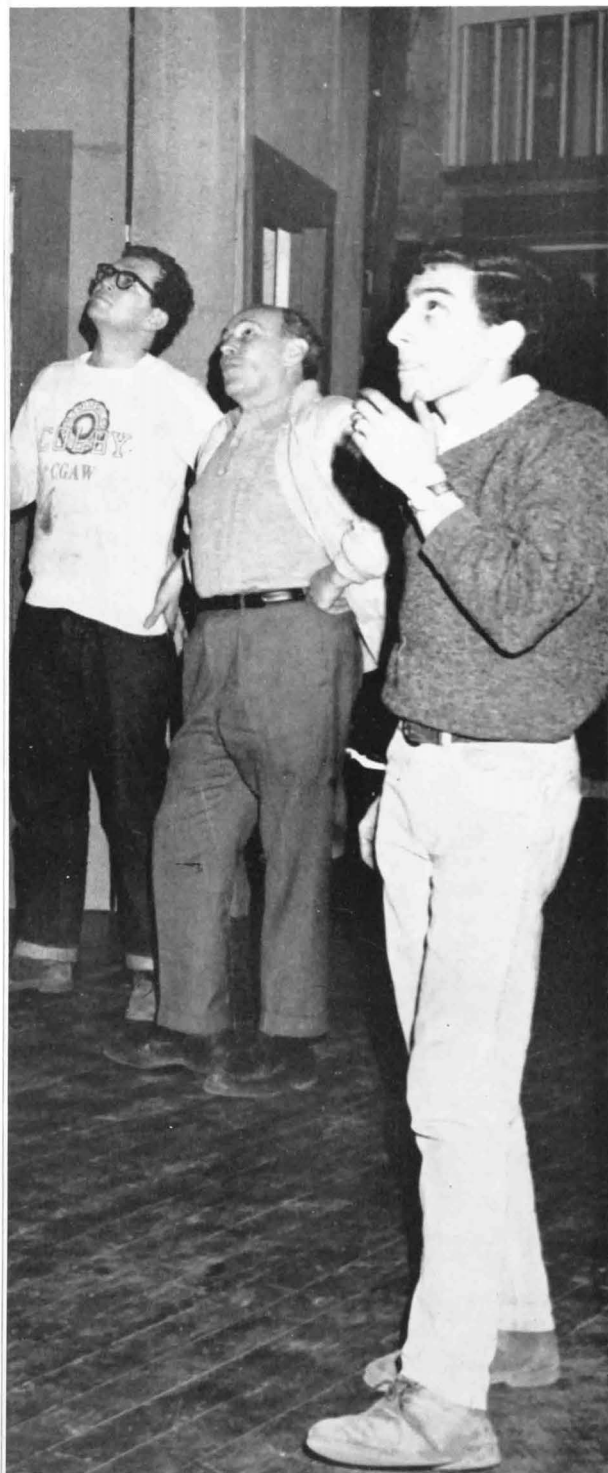

By the college I mean not the institution as an aggregate entity but those teachers whom the student seeks out, discovers, and has discourse with. . . I have often seen an outlook altered by the reading of a single book . . . and there is always the influence of one's fellow-students.

- There is no doubt that Colby is far better academically now than it was during my first years of acquaintance during the thirties and forties . . . more students are intellectually enthusiastic and the birth of the creative arts has been marvelous. Any student coming to Colby who can't find something to be excited about much of the time, ought to search himself. Maybe he or she ought to go out and work for a couple of years. . .

- I look back to the "founding fathers" — not churchmen in any strict sense of the term — who embodied passion . . . they looked back over their shoulders to the sources of the tradition of commitment: to John Locke, to the Greeks and Romans. They seem so remote, our founding fathers — Jefferson, Hamilton, Franklin, Adams — that they might have lived on another planet.

An idealistic passion — a total commitment, "willingness to die", let us say — for establishment of a just social order only occasionally glimmers in our present society. Far from being in the heart of every person, of every age-level, this passion for a good society still remains the key to the best of human life.

Building a Play begins with a plan, on paper, of the set. The concern is that the set not act as background for players, but as an integral part of the presentation. Arthur Kopit's farce, Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Mama's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feelin' So Sad, lent itself beautifully to this integrated concept — the set, including combatative venus flytraps, a piranha, and levitation devices, brings the background forward. In a way it seems to create a play of its own.

Briefly, the set is constructed and painted before it is placed and positioned, and the lighting is planned concurrently. This latter aspect, almost a "play within a play," is actually plotted as the play is plotted, and a specific technical rehearsal, sans actors, is held before the dress rehearsals.

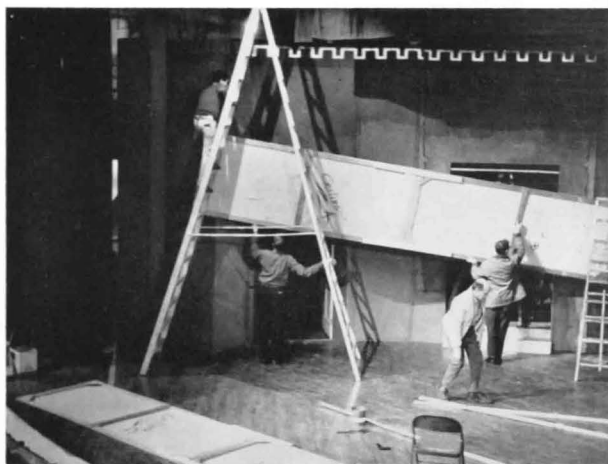

The effect, according to Powder and Wig Dramatic Society president Michael Clivner (a junior from Jamaica, N. Y.) is of piecing together a puzzle resulting from a combining of the playwright's directions and the director's, and crew's and actors' ideas and theories.

The photograph's on these pages (the work of senior Stuart Rakoff of Manchester, N. H.) can only convey a portion of the labors required of the stage crew. But their building of Kopit's play, directed by Professor Irving Suss, contributed no little quantity and quality to a most successful presentation.

The Communication Mosaic

Terry Saunders '67

I SPENT THE FIRST THREE WEEKS OF JANUARY, 1965 traveling throughout the southern United States, visiting twenty nine public high schools and two parochial schools in twelve cities. Four Colby students visited the twelve white schools and nineteen Negro schools in an attempt to distribute information to guidance counselors and students about Colby College. Our stated purpose was to attract southern students to Colby in order to develop more racial, geographical and cultural diversification within the student body.

Probably equally important to me, however, was the hope that I might discuss with southern students what college is or can be to a college student, the differences between the North and the South, and how our impressions of and prejudices toward one another affect understanding and therefore education. But I found that Negro students and guidance counselors were more receptive to information about academic and financial opportunities offered by Colby College, and that they were more likely to initiate discussions about the civil rights turmoil of recent months than were southern whites. Even more significant, I developed definite anti-white prejudice which hampered rational communication.

Conversations with Negro guidance counselors and students which developed into discussions about the problems of the American Negro arose from their questions: "How would a Negro student fit in at Colby?" and "What is the purpose of your trip?"

I carefully repeated the stated purpose of the trip and explained that the students, faculty and administration at Colby feel that greater heterogeneity within the student body would be educationally beneficial to all members of the college. Few American Negroes (perhaps five) now attend Colby, so a southern Negro would inevitably feel different not only because he is a Negro but also because he would be coming from a section of the country with which most Colby students are unfamiliar. Interracial dating is accepted; open discrimination is non-existent. But he should be prepared for some silent prejudice or curiosity in a college and town that houses no Negro community.

As a result of my answers, a discussion of civil rights often ensued, and I learned of the various attitudes among Negroes toward their problems. One man spoke about his fanatic and bitter emotional attachment to the cause of his people and specifically to Martin Luther King. "I hate white Southerners for what they have done; the way they have destroyed the dignity of the American Negro, and the way they can rob a child of his humanity." He told me of an auto trip that he made with his family through the southern states. They stopped at a filling station with a restaurant next door. His young daughter ran into the restaurant to buy some candy. He realized that Negroes were not served there, but he entered the restaurant determined to defend his child. "I was ready to die then, and I think the proprietor realized it. We bought the candy and left peacefully. But I had to explain to my child that she was somehow different in the eyes of certain people.

"And you know, I am still ready to die. If Reverend King told me to shoot you because it would help the freedom of the Negro, I would do it. If he told me to kill the President, I would do that too."

But his fanaticism was not shared by all Negroes who spoke with me. A teacher at the Governor Morehead School (for blind or deaf children) in Raleigh,

Where do you start to tell someone that you think he is incredibly stupid and prejudiced when you have become equally prejudiced toward him?

North Carolina, expressed real weariness about the segregated and unequal facilities established by the North Carolina state government. She mentioned that the school for similarly handicapped white children has a pool and better dormitory facilities. She explained that the maintenance of segregated institutions is more expensive than one integrated school would be; consequently neither school is as fully developed as it could be.

Hope characterized the attitude of many Negro students and two counselors. Several girls asked me who they could date at Colby since so few Negroes attend the school now. I said that interracial dating is acceptable although some subtle prejudice may exist. They all seem surprised but willing to consider dating white boys (much giggling at the idea). After one of these conversations, a counselor told me that those students who would seriously consider going north to college would be aware of the silent pressures that had been warned against. She suggested that perhaps I was being too pessimistic because those students who wish to tackle a foreign environment would expect the complexities of such a challenge.

THE QUESTION IS NOT WHETHER THESE CONVERSATIONS should have occurred considering my role as ambassador of Colby College because the fact remains that these people wanted to communicate with me and that they initiated the discussions. The question is rather whether or not they were merely reacting to a pre-established symbol of northern college students visiting Negro high schools in the South. I doubt it. It seemed to me that communication was a combination of highly rational thought and emotional reaction to the conversation. That is, I did represent college students from small liberal arts colleges in New England, but the possibility that I might want to understand their problems appealed to their imaginations. My sympathy could not be an assumed part of the symbol. We could communicate because we could tell one another about our respective environments without threatening a desirable status quo of either surroundings. Rationality was necessary to discuss the potential opportunities for the Negro student at a northern college because no habitual responses could serve to describe what the imagination might suggest.

But the same information and discussion represented a threat to the desirable economic, social and political status quo established for white Southerners. Consequently they avoided any communication which might suggest change. When I entered a white high school, my identity became two-fold. I was not only a visiting business representative of a college, but my presence also represented enforced integration, regardless of the information I had to offer. I was a northern student invading southern territory and therefore symbolic of much much of the civil rights turmoil in past months. These two signs permitted conversations consisting only of conventional, polite statements because moral issues could not be agreed upon. Discussions with the guidance counselors were usually about the weather, the history of the town or school, the percentage of the students in that school who go on to college, or where we would be traveling; the decorum for a business visit was impeccable.

If integration was mentioned, we were assured that the process was working smoothly within the schools, and that few people actively opposed it. One guidance counselor mentioned that only the lower socioeconomic classes are against the plan—within the schools and among the educated, integration is working. (But how hypocritical the conversation seemed when I went into the school cafeteria and saw one lone black child seated at a table by herself while the rest of the students enjoyed the lunch hour without her.) I was given a carefully worded statement about token integration, but considering my prescribed role as ambassador of Colby College, I could only smile and thereby communicate tacit agreement.

COMMUNICATION INCREASINGLY BECAME A MOSAIC of degrees of rationality. For communication is a two-way process and prejudice (or even suspected hostility) directed toward me met increasing hostility from me as the trip progressed. I became more and more wary of the attitudes of the white people and increasingly prejudiced toward them. Perhaps the development of the tendency to fight prejudice with prejudice can best be explained by an account of one afternoon's experience in Savannah, Georgia.

The appointment that afternoon was at a white high school. By that time, I dreaded interviews with white students, so I entered the school with pre-established antagonism. While I waited for students to arrive, a girl asked me what other schools we had visited in Savannah. I could not remember the name of the school I had visited that morning (Beach), so she began to name the white schools in the city. I shook my head at each name until finally she said, "But there are no other schools in Savannah." And then she realized that I was from the North, and that maybe we had gone to a Negro school. "Well, there is Beach High School." I said that I had been there, and the subject was dropped. But a barrier had been set up.

The interview was with four girls. We talked about Colby for a while, and then the conversation changed:

Girl A: I don't think I would like to go to school in the North. You do things so much differently up there. Why I've heard that students in New York City schools wouldn't think anything of picking up a chair and breaking it over a teacher's head . . . But I suppose you have certain impressions of Southerners, don't you? You must think we are all rebels.

Girl B: Well, actually we are, in a way, since the civil rights issue has come up. I mean, we have integration now, but we don't like it very well. I guess it is something we have to get used to.

Girl A: There is never any trouble though. Why there are five or six Negroes here now! Of course, we don't speak to them or eat with them, but there is no problem.

Girl B: Have you ever seen the way they live? You ought to go down to Broadway, and see the shacks they live in. They are such dirty, mean people.

Girl A: And they all have Cadillacs and still live in the slums. And they wear rings in their ears. . . They are just like gypsies.

Girl B: They aren't even human.

Communication had dissolved. Where do you start to tell someone that you think he is incredibly stupid and prejudiced when you have become equally prejudiced toward him? A rational conversation would have been impossible. I could only exchange formalities with them and leave.

The four of us left Savannah behind, and headed toward Florida. But as we pulled onto the main highway that leads out of the city, we saw a small Negro boy (7 or 8 years old) who was hitchhiking. We stopped, and a very frightened child climbed into the car. He would not look at us, and refused to let us take him more than about a mile down the road. How we dreaded to face the fear and hate for white adults that had been instilled in that child.

Communication therefore became increasingly hindered by experiences that developed my prejudice against southern whites. I began to see that the civil rights problems involve far more than the struggle of the American Negro to establish equal rights and some sort of human dignity. Every effort at integration is complicated by a maze of prejudices that make rational communication extremely difficult. Southern whites feel inherently superior to the Negro, and fear and cannot understand any efforts to establish equality. They resent the meddling of Northerners who are victims of comparable prejudice toward the southern whites. The Negro is never sure of his identity in the face of enforced superiority; he learns to despise and fear whites as he begins to demand equal opportunities. He hopes that perhaps he can find at least educational equality in the North. So rational communication can emerge, if at all, only amid a complex of hate, fear, hope and prejudice. And rational discussion about and acceptance of integration is vital to emotional acceptance. ■

Life Income Plans

Astonishment. "That's how nearly every person reacts when he discovers exactly what this program can do." The director of Colby's Financial Planning Program, Walter Hall, adds: "What is remarkable is the way one's family benefits — as does the college."

There are many cases, according to Hall, of individuals who did not think such a plan could really be of any help or interest to them. "But they were willing to listen." And he notes the instance of one alumnus who, after a revision of his long range financial planning and inclusion of a Colby Life Income Plan, remarked: "It's like having your cake here and in paradise."

Hall cites this case as typical of savings and benefits that can accrue under the program. This alumnus, with a wife and two children, has an annual income of $16,000 — or a spendable $13,740 after taxes. He figures his assets (estate) at about $160,000, including life insurance and his house which is owned jointly by his wife and himself.

The results are easily demonstrated:

- An increase in spendable income the first year from $13,740 to $14,772; the second year, to $14,944; and an average of $240 annually thereafter. All in all: an expectancy of $4,876 more in spendable income during his lifetime.
- An increase in the potential value of the estate from $146,304 (remaining after costs and taxes) to $148,480; and an increase in the children's share of $5,111.
- Establishment at the college of a $16,000 endowed scholarship, bearing his family's name.

On several occasions pure skepticism greeted Hall's description of the many benefits available under the Life Income and Annuity Plans. Hall says that he quickly pointed out that the opportunity to transfer appreciated stocks was just one benefit especially attractive to retired people. A capital gain is avoided under this plan, and it is possible to more than double immediate income from these securities.

*a way for today
plans for tomorrow . . .
and tomorrow*

"These plans are geared for the average alumnus, not just the wealthy," Hall comments. Some men and women start with an initial investment of $1,000, and then added to their plan over the years. Many have been surprised to learn that they also receive credit for a substantial actuarially computed gift to the Alumni Fund and the Ford Campaign at the time of their investment. This is so even though Colby cannot spend the principal until the income has been paid out over one or more lifetimes.

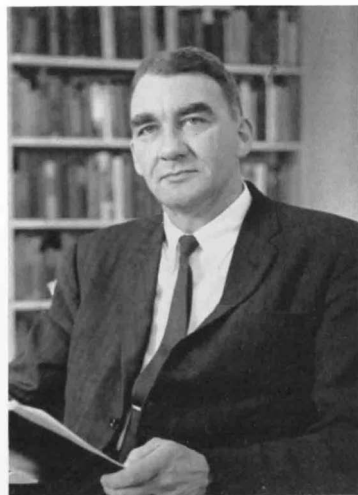

Attesting to the popularity of the Life Income Plan investment opportunities, Hall has searched the records and come up with these facts:

- During the past decade, over $1 million has been added to the college's endowment from maturing Life Income and Annuity contracts.
- There are representatives from almost every class from 1890 to 1941 benefiting from the program; and 73% of all classes between 1906 and 1927 have members who have invested during the past three years.
- Of those who have made investments during the Ford Campaign, 53% have added to their original amount — indicating definite satisfaction with the program.

Hall has received a number of letters from subscribers, and notes that one sentence from a member of the class of 1918 is typical of the reaction: "Every alumnus over 55 years of age with stock should know about these plans."

This knowledge is easily obtained. You may write to Walter K. Hall, Director of Financial Planning, at the college for a copy of the booklet LIFE INCOME AND ANNUITY PLANS. Of course, there is still no substitute for the personal visit, where a precise and defined illustration of benefits can be yours.

A graduate of Tufts, and a resident of Falmouth, Walter Hall brings fifteen years of private business experience to his job as financial program planner at the college. Active in the Ford Campaign throughout the country, he was the only New England college representative in recent national seminars on financial programs. He is married and has three children.

Recent events in a number of institutions of higher education have brought into focus a crucial question. In whose hands is the governance of a college vested? Who should make the decisions affecting such diverse matters as faculty appointments, promotion, and tenure; the size and allocation of the budget; the social life of the students; the size of the institution; priorities in the building program; architectural style in future construction; the role of intercollegiate athletics; the status of fraternities and sororities?

I should like to explore briefly the role of the trustees in respect to decisions on these matters.

Governance Roles

The Board of Trustees

ROBERT E. L. STRIDER

Let me say at the outset that, as the trustees fully agree, it is not their function to "run the college." It is rather for them to see that the college is properly run. In doing so, they can give the administration invaluable help in a multitude of ways. Their functions are carefully defined in the official by-laws of the institution.

The corporation, as provided by the charter and described in the by-laws, is called The President and Trustees of Colby College. It consists of the president for the time being and not less than twenty-four nor more than thirty-one Trustees. Not less than six nor more than nine members are elected directly by the Colby College Alumni Association. Two representatives, who participate but do not vote, are elected by the faculty from among themselves. The others are elected by the board for stated terms.

One of the most important duties that ever befalls a board of trustees is to select the president when the position becomes vacant. It is to the board that the president is always responsible, and he serves at the pleasure of the corporation. If the board approves of his leadership it gives him the support and encouragement he needs. Conversely (though I trust I will be forgiven some hesitancy in alluding to this grim possibility), if the board reaches the point of significant disapproval, it is up to the board to find another president. Fortunately (the sigh of relief you hear is mine), there is a long and happy history at Colby of harmony and mutual respect between the board and the president, and for many years the support and encouragement that are so necessary have been very evident.

The board, acting upon the president's recommendations, is called upon to give its approval of faculty appointments, promotions, and tenure; to determine the size of the college; to approve the use of the existing buildings and the location and style of new ones; to establish all charges and fees; to approve the annual operating budget and to oversee the management of the endowment; to authorize the conferring of degrees, earned and honorary; to approve far-reaching matters of educational policy, such as the faculty-student ratio or the tenure practices; to deliberate on long-range planning; and to assist the college in the fund-raising that is inevitably a major effort for every institution.

The Colby board does much of its work through committees, some of which are Educational Policy, Budget and Finance, Planning, Buildings and Grounds, Development, Investment, and Honorary Degrees. The Nominations Committee has the large responsibility of maintaining the high standard of membership as vacancies on the board occur, and the Executive Committee acts for the board between regular meetings, which take place four times a year. The regular meetings themselves are anything but perfunctory, for they almost invariably engender lively and relevant talk about the role of the college and of higher education in general. In recent years some of the more spirited discussions have concerned modifications in the curriculum, proposals for additions to the staff, discrimination in fraternities and sororities, financial commitment for educational television, the use of alcoholic beverages on campus, and withdrawal from the loan program of the National Defense Education Act because of the disclaimer affidavit.

In other less direct ways the Colby trustees have given help to the college. Some have written long and thoughtful memoranda to the president embodying ideas and opinions they have developed. Some have arranged luncheon meetings for the president with important people in the worlds of business, industry, publishing, and philanthropy. All of them are willing and ready to give their counsel in long phone conversations, to make calls for the college in their communities or elsewhere, and to assume leadership in fund-raising campaigns.

We have a fine and loyal board, and much of Colby's success can be attributed to their devotion and continuing active concern.

Dear Colby Friends:

To you who are celebrating your different reunions, the College sends best regards.

We are publishing the names of your classmates in the hope that you will encourage them to come back to join in the festivities of the Commencement Weekend. We have had some enthusiastic meetings with the reunion chairmen and nothing is being left undone to make it pleasant for you when you came back to your college.

I also want to take this opportunity to thank all of you for what you have done for the Ford Foundation Campaign. When you think that our alumni and alumnae have given over $1,250,000 — it is a tremendous showing and it speaks of the great love that our alumni have for their College. I would like to thank everyone of you personally for your gifts.

Looking forward to seeing you on June 4th through the 6th.

My best to you!

Bill Millett

Speaker

The Secretary-General of the United Nations, U Thant, will deliver the commencement address on June 6.

The 56-year-old Burmese diplomat was elected Secretary-General in November of 1962 for a four-year term. He had been serving as acting secretary since the previous year when he was chosen to complete the unexpired term of the late Dag Hammarskjöld.

The election of U Thant represented a compromise between the United States and the Soviet Union. U Thant was unanimously elected by the General Assembly by a vote of 103 to 0 which the late President John F. Kennedy hailed as "a splendid achievement in which the whole world can rejoice."

U Thant has been a permanent representative of Burma to the General Assembly since 1957. In 1959 he was vice president of the General Assembly's 14th session and in 1961 was chairman of the U. N. Congo Conciliation Commission.

Colby's Burmese ties are numerous. The college's first graduate in 1822, George Dana Boardman, went to Burma as a missionary and many have followed from Colby since.

Clark H. Carter '40, president of Walker Laboratories in Mount Vernon, New York, has been elected to the board of trustees. A native of Waterville, he attended Harvard Graduate School of Business and served as a lieutenant commander in the navy during the second world war. He is a member of Zeta Psi.

Trustee

Carter became a trainee with Richardson-Merrell, Inc. (then Vick Chemical Company) in 1945 and in ten years became the vice president of the Vicks Products Division. He transferred to the Walker Laboratories Division in 1959 as vice president and assumed his present position as president and general manager in 1960.

An active alumnus, he is a member of the Alumni Council, was chairman of the Westchester County Colby Ford Foundation Challenge Campaign, and is a member of the executive committee of the New York Colby Alumni Association. He is on the board of the Eastchester Savings Bank of Mount Vernon and has served as chairman of the trustees of the First Congregational Church in Chappaqua, where he lives.

Colby's newest trustee is married to the former Raye Winslow '40; his brother, William '38 was a Rhodes Scholar. Carter's late parents were also closely affiliated with the college: his father, Benjamin Carter, taught mathematics from 1910 until 1926, and his mother, the former Mary Helen Caswell, was a graduate in the class of 1904.

Blake

Kenneth Pond Blake, Jr., has been appointed librarian of the college, after serving since last August as acting librarian. He succeeds John R. McKenna, who resigned to take a similar position at Middlebury College.

A 1948 graduate of Brown University, Providence, R. I., Blake received master's degrees from Boston University and Simmons College. He was a member of the library staff at Yale University from 1956-59.

A member of Maine and New England Library associations, Blake has served, for the past five years, as reader's service librarian. He is married to the former Harriet A. Stowell of Phillips, Maine.

A new member of the library staff is Albert A. Howard, formerly of Providence, who is the cataloguer of special collections. A graduate of Brown University, and holder of his master's degree from the University of Kentucky, he has been a cataloguer at Brown for the past ten years, dealing with the general collection and specializing in classical literature, rare books, and manuscripts.

Howard is currently preparing a bibliography of works issued by William Pickering, a noted English publisher of the first half of the nineteenth century.

Director of placement Earle A. McKeen '29 has assumed the added duties of director of financial aid, a newly created post. A member of the administrative staff since 1935, he will oversee a program which annually exceeds half a million dollars, is constantly growing, and which dispenses help to 26% of the undergraduates.

Ten years ago, according to vice president Ralph S. Williams '35, $132,600 was spent; in 1959-60 the figure had increased to $214,226.

McKeen

During the current academic year scholarships and financial aid amounted to over $550,000.

Mr. McKeen, a former high school principal, superintendent of schools, and school plant development director with the Maine State Department of Education, served as acting director of admissions during 1963-64.

Art and Music

The Land and the Sea of Five Maine Artists (D. D. Coombs, Charles Kimball, Harrison Brown, John Hudson, George McConnell) — May 5 through June 19; Maine Craftsmen — June 25 through August 8; Icelandic Art, the first major exhibition of paintings from that country in the United States, representing the work of eighteen artists and assembled under the direction of Selma Jonsdottir, director of the National Gallery of Iceland — August 18 through October 3.

The Hungarian Quartet, faculty in residence at the third annual Colby College Summer School of Music will present three concerts during June and July, as well as three open lectures. Tickets are required for the Quartet's performances, but the lecture-demonstrations are open to the public without charge. All events begin at eight o'clock in the evening in Given Auditorium.

Concerts are scheduled for June 24, July 8 and July 22; lectures for July 1 (violinist Zoltan Szekely: Bartok in His String Quartets), July 15 (violinist Michael Kuttner: The Development of String Quartet Playing Since 1800), July 29 (violinist Denes Koromzay: Polyphony in the String Quartet Literature). 'Cellist for the Quartet is Gabriel Magyar.

Random . . . John Hay Whitney's address Challenges and Excellences continues to make news: it has been published in its entirety by Britain's Institute of Journalists' publication THE JOURNAL "in the interests of the profession of journalism" . . . Dean of women Frances Seaman received plaudits for her solo performance with the Colby Community Symphony Orchestra of Mendelssohn's virtuous piano work Capriccio Brilliant . . . Harry Carroll, dean of admissions, is chairman of the school relations committee of the New England Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers; he is past president of the association.

Scholarships

Colby, Bates, Colgate, Middlebury and Hamilton Colleges will participate in the Charles A. Dana Foundation's Dana Scholarship Program originated at the University of Bridgeport several years ago. Each institution will have about twenty Dana Scholars in the three upper classes; grants will be made on the basis of financial need, academic standing and potential leadership and will range from $100 to full tuition.

President-emeritus J. S. Bixler as he addressed the Library Associates on THE ART OF TEACHING in March. Dr. Bixler is currently conducting a seminar on William James at Bowdoin's Senior Center.

In response to a challenge from the New Hampshire Charitable Fund, alumni and alumnae have raised $15,000 to provide an endowed scholarship from that state . . . chairman of the drive was Eugene Struckhoff '44 . . . the Fund will match the sum raised and the first recipient of the scholarship will be announced before the 1966 fall semester.

Former Trustee

Sumner Sewall, former governor of Maine and for fifteen years a trustee of the college, died on January 25 in Bath. The flying ace of the first world war, who had had a colorful career, was cited in an editorial in the WATERVILLE MORNING SENTINEL as being ahead of his time for modernizing state government. Governor during the second war, he was re-elected on the theme that his efficient government was "still human and responsive to human needs."

Governor Sewall, who received an honorary L.D. in 1941, served on the board from 1945 to 1960, and at the time of his death was a member of the committee on honorary degrees. Speaking of his contribution to the college, board chairman Reginald Sturtevant said: "The death of Sumner Sewall takes from our community an able and distinguished citizen. Those of us privileged to be associated with him . . . had a unique opportunity to witness his abilities and breadth of interest.

"With the energy which typified his statesmanship, Governor Sewall contributed significantly to our decisions during the crucial days when Colby was committed to attaining, and to constructing, the new campus on Mayflower Hill."

THE PORTLAND PRESS HERALD, in commenting on Governor Sewall's career, stated: "In whatever field he chose, his record did him honor; his liking for people, coupled with a temperament that was rarely anything but good-natured and progressive, made him innumerable friends."

Dunklee

Two changes of status and two new appointments have recently been announced in the department of physical education and athletics. Former freshmen coach Verne Ullom will assume Lee Williams' duties as varsity basketball mentor while Lee takes his sabbatical leave next year. And athletic trainer and physical therapist Carl Nelson will become associate director of health services.

The new faces are Edward Burke '60, who will coach freshmen teams in basketball, football and baseball, and Silas Dunklee, as skimeister.

Ullom, formerly varsity basketball coach at Bates, is a graduate of the University of Cincinnati; he has also guided teams at several high schools, and at the University of Virginia and Columbia University.

Nelson was appointed to the college staff in 1959 and is a graduate of Boston University. Formerly assistant trainer at that institution and at MIT, he is director of the Pine Tree Camp for Crippled Children and district director of the Eastern Athletic Trainers Association.

Burke, a three-sport letterman at Colby, was teacher-coach at Waterville High School and a teacher, athletic director and football and basketball coach at Williams High School in Oakland. Currently doing graduate work in English at the University of New Hampshire, he has been affiliated with the Tilton School.

National cross-country ski champion in 1952, Dunklee has been coaching at the University of Maine. A graduate of the University of New Hampshire, and winner of 12 varsity letters, he will also be in charge of varsity soccer and varsity and freshman tennis. Dunklee is secretary treasurer of the Eastern Intercollegiate Ski Association and in 1959 coached the Junior National Ski Team in nordic events.

alumnus portrait

Donald Nicoll

The very first paid employment enjoyed by Donald E. Nicoll was prophetic. It was in Nova Scotia, where he summered with grandparents, aunts, and an uncle—a job washing out wine bottles to be used for hardware store turpentine. Even though he entered Colby as a pre-ministerial student and preached at Riverside Community Church nearby, he must have developed a healthy skepticism of the Biblical wisdom about old wine-skins and new wine—or turpentine. For he has since spent most of his post-college life helping heady new political wine into the venerable skins of Maine's Democratic Party. And his years have been vintage years.

Don's career has been as significant as it has been unorthodox: he himself as unlikely a prospect for political success as he has been a durable and effective practitioner of the political ways of life. Today, at age 37, he presides over the offices of Senator Edmund S. Muskie, as his administrative assistant. Sitting behind his desk in Washington, surrounded by a clutter of correspondence, notes, reports, books, and clippings, looking owlishly over his glasses at a visitor, he might at first glance be taken for a college intern, or graduate student doing some research for a thesis. That is, until the phone begins to ring. Then the visitor would begin to realize that before him sat not only the Senator's chief of staff, but someone deeply involved in the work of the Senate Committees on Banking and Currency, Government Operations, Public Works, the special Committee on Aging, and the Senator's own Subcommittee's on Air and Water Pollution and Intergovernmental Relations. The calls might also relate to a McClellan Committee investigation, to the New England Senator's Conference (for which he is secretary), or to some loose ends of the Johnson, Humphrey, and Muskie campaigns in Maine, where he served as coordinator. Or there might be a call from a citizen, company, association, municipal, or state official in Maine with a problem needing Washington attention.

How did he get where he is from washing bottles in Nova Scotia? The beginning contains little hint of what was to come—Boston English High in 1945 (but with some seed of the future—Don was class orator and winner of the school citizenship award); introduction to Maine at a boys' camp in Ocean Park; and at age 17, introduction to his future wife (Hilda Farnum '49), also 17. The occasion? Both were acting in Booth Tarkington's Seventeen.

At Colby, while continuing his work as student pastor, Don found his interests turning to history and government and became an American history major. His teacher, advisor, and lifetime friend was Colby's late, great Paul Fullam, who himself was later to symbolize a unique blending of scholarly excellence and practical application of idealism to the hard demands of politics.

After college years crowded with studying, tutoring, floor washing, preaching, singing, working in the library, infirmary, and biology lab—and courting—Don capped his senior year with class presidency, and, within a week of becoming a bachelor (of arts with distinction in history), he and Hilda abandoned bachelorhood for matrimony.

At this point, a future in Maine seemed remote as Don worked for his M.A. at what was then Pennsylv-

THE ALUMNUS is indebted to FRANK M. COFFIN for this portrait. An alumnus of Bates College (summa cum laude, Phi Beta Kappa), and revivifier of the Maine State Democratic Party, he is now permanent representative to the Development Assistance Committee of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development in France.

vania State College and Hilda worked in the library. Then to New York where Don neatly divided his time between driving a laundry truck and working on his thesis; and, finally, back to Maine to pick up credits for high school teaching, with sidelines of apple picking and part-time announcer, disc jockey, and copy-writer for radio station WLAM. When WLAM expanded into television, he became news editor and stopped picking apples.

In the fall of 1953, Don, having covered on his news beats, some preachments of mine about the pitiable plight of the Maine Democratic Party, suggested to me that one should practice what one preached. Within a few months, I found myself chairman of the Maine Democratic Committee, and proposed to WLAM's news editor that he leave his steady job and be Maine's first full time executive secretary of the Democratic State Committee . . . all on the strength of $1900 in pledges from party workers. With a young family to support, and with Maine at that time a seemingly eternal one party State, Don Nicoll's decision in 1954 to become a practicing politician in a party which had not won a major election in two decades — with no guarantee of future income — was a rare and even rash act of faith.

But the past eleven years have seen steady, increasing, and well merited fulfillment of the faith that moved him then. As executive secretary, Don helped prepare materials, conferences, conventions, issues, and the campaign in which Ed Muskie became Governor. Then, in 1956, with my election to Congress, I asked Don to join me as my administrative assistant.

In Washington, we opened the first Maine Democratic Congressional office in 22 years. And the bottle-washing, apple-picking, truck-driving, student pastor, and disc jockey learned the ropes of Capitol Hill.

That he learned them well is proven by the range of responsibilities entrusted to him today. With Senator Muskie beginning his second term, opportunity for service is widening almost daily.

What is the most rewarding single piece of work he has done? Helping draft and push forward the Air and Water Pollution Act. A close second is helping rescue the Passamaquoddy Tidal Power project from oblivion in 1961.

Children? Yes — four — and very enterprising: Hugh, 14; Jonathan, 11; Melissa, 8; and Jessica, 5. Their Washington home is a comfortable red brick house in the northwest section of the District of Columbia. Both Hilda and Don are active members of the All Souls (Unitarian) Church.

Hobbies: None that he would call such. But, when time allows, the family camps all over the place, from Maine to the Virgin Islands. Reading (for pleasure) and photography occasionally get their innings.

Weaknesses? Yes. In all candor I must reveal what I know. Late at night, when we would be returning, say, from Brownfield Junction to Lewiston, when fatigue would have settled over any ordinary person, Don would succumb to a chronic tendency to sing archaic Scottish ballads.

Recently, HARPER'S MAGAZINE featured an article by a former Capitol Hill administrative assistant, entitled Washington's Second Banana Politicians.* In it the author states, somewhat plaintively, "The second banana is engaged in a rat race; overworked and unsung, he can enjoy his lot if he recognizes the glories of Washington politics as peculiar and far between."

I am sure that Colby's Don Nicoll would testify differently in several respects. He would say — and he would be right — that, comparing his lot with that of his Senator, it is not a question of top banana and second banana but that of an apple and an orange. He would say that he has always overworked, even in Colby days, and enjoyed it. He would not say, but others would: that he not unsung, that in his own way he has his own wide and increasing constituency. And, finally, I am sure he would say that what he is deeply engaged in is not a rat race, but the human race.

WATERVILLE, MAINE

A collection of the works of Louise Drummond Beach was featured at the Greater Fall River Art Association in January. THE PROVIDENCE SUNDAY JOURNAL wrote that "part of the time she has a whimsical approach, part of the time it is a romantic impression she suggests, and most of the time the results communicate a pleasant sense of nostalgia."

1916

Ella Robinson Hoyt has been devoting effort to the promotion of the Wyoming County Arts Council program in Warsaw, New York.

Lawyer

Ruth Pullen '33 has associated with Mills and Mills in Farmington, Maine, after being sworn in as a member of the Maine Bar Association in February. Superintendent, for thirty years, of the Maine State Reformatory for Women, she retired in 1961, only to take a law course at Temple University in Philadelphia. Though feeling "If I'd known what I was getting in for, I wouldn't have had the courage to take this course," she stayed with it, and received her LL.B. last June.

In recognizing her success in rehabilitating women at the reformatory, Colby awarded her an honorary master's degree in 1961. Citing Miss Pullen for having "risen to a high position in one of the most difficult fields of human endeavor—that of the rehabilitating of women who find themselves unable to cope with the vagaries and complexities of human existence," the degree noted that she had dealt "with those committed to (her) charge with wisdom and compassion."

In the Farmington law office, Miss Pullen will be working with another Colby graduate, Peter Mills '34. At last report, she was enjoying her new field of endeavor, and looking forward, too, to the spring and summer season and her home on Lake Wesserunsett.

It never inspired songs as did Mory's in New Haven, but Onie's does have a special place in the memories of those who have attended Colby College during the past three decades.

The tavern on Silver Street has been an unofficial gathering place for Colby students ever since repeal of Prohibition made it legal to sell the frothy brew.

Its place in the Colby scheme of things obviously never had any official sanction and there are many who viewed it with a disapproving eye. But the names of at least two generations of Colby students are carved in its booths and for them the memories of Onie's are as poignant as are those of Mory's for Yale alumni.

Actually, it hasn't officially been Onie's for nearly a decade. The tavern changed hands in 1956 and since then has been Alice's Cafe.

But when it closed its doors finally a week ago to await the Urban Renewal wrecking shovel, the Requiem was said in its former name.

It was closed, incidentally, as Colby students left on vacation, and since it had to close, there was something right about the choice of time.

Convinced that Maine has everything, Malcolm Wilson and his family left a successful life in Edmunds, Washington, to settle in his college town. The Condon Medalist, debater, and athlete had served in many capacities in Edmunds and had been active in interests ranging from Great Books to the Seattle Symphony Orchestra to sports.

"We decided Maine has everything," he says; "We took a long look at values. My wife and I both feel this is the place to live. You've got so much here to offer . . . we are impressed with the sincerity and honesty of the people. This is a terrific state."

District manager for Investors Diversified Services in Washington, Malcolm discovered an opening for a Kennebec-Somerset county zone manager for that company. The decision to drive east was quick coming after that.

"We held a family conference . . . their (the children's) ages were right for the move. We discussed the real purposes of life . . . it was like starting life anew."

Called by NEWSWEEK (January, 1943) a "Brooklyn-born Gauguin," Frank Kleinholz '23 abandoned a successful law career at the age of forty (Gauguin gave up stockbroking at the same age) to become a painter. Winning, in 1942, the Artists for Victory prize at the Metropolitan Museum of Art he had his first one-man exhibition the following month. Now, twenty-odd years later, his works are being shown at Rome's ACA Gallery.

Shown in the Italian capital during March, Kleinholz' paintings were chosen because: "his works are a fine example of American expressionism yet universal in appeal because of the imaginative warmth and humanity with which he paints the city's people against backgrounds of skyscrapers, tenements, parks and playgrounds."

His paintings are included in a number of permanent collections (among them: Metropolitan Museum, Brooklyn Museum, Newark Museum, Phillips Memorial Gallery in Washington, Museum of Modern Art in Tel Aviv, Israel) and many have been included in national and international exhibitions. Of his late-found life work, he recalls that when he discovered the medium, he felt like saying: "Where have you been all my life?"

Emery Dunfee, professor of science at Farmington State Teachers College, has been nominated to the board of directors of the National Science Teachers Association from the New England Regional Area. . . . Dr. Donald H. Rhoades represented Colby at the inauguration of Dr. Mark Hubert

A member of the medical staffs of Sisters and Thayer hospitals, he is a Fellow in the American College of Surgeons and a member of the American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology.

Ruth Handley Price has been named a substitute third grade teacher at the Lee (Mass.) Central School.

Liberal Engineering

Dean of Boston University's College of Engineering, Arthur Thompson '40 has been instrumental in initiating a new concept in technical education. Beginning next fall, a strong liberal arts base and specifically selected options in engineering will be offered, promising, in the dean's words, "to dispel notions of engineering as a narrow, specialized field."

The student will have two years of liberal arts and the choice of changing his major in the junior year without losing credit or having to make up extra courses. Dean Thompson, in explaining his motives for implementing such a program, stated: "The academic philosophy behind engineering education at Boston University supports the liberal studies for the educated man. . . . We want our students to . . . serve society's needs with competence. . . . We want to graduate an engineer-in-training, a qualified student who will proceed from this point to gain professional status with specialized training."

Dean since 1963, Thompson began to develop the new program immediately; within a year he had a brand new engineering plan that was enthusiastically approved by the trustees as well as future "engineers-in-training".

"Important in this curriculum," Dean Thompson explains, "is that a student has a sequence of career decision points. Each point in time permits a better decision because of more maturity on the part of the student, and his possession of more experience and learning; more evidence, to base a decision.

"This program means that a student can defer a critical career decision from adolescence to the time he is a mature college graduate.

"We want, and need, a liberally educated engineering graduate who is supple, versatile and technically knowledgeable to choose among many professional fields, engineering or otherwise. This broad base means students who will be able to tackle a complex world more effectively.

"We want to prepare our students for a technologically accelerating world. We wish to prepare him for his personal struggle against technical obsolescence. We want to prepare him for life."

Robert Johnston, general plant manager at the Belding Heminway Corporation plants in Putnam and Grosvenor Dale, Connecticut, has been named industrial chairman of the 1965 Red Cross drive in Putnam.

1940

Richard L. Chasse, M.D. has been elected president of the Sisters Hospital (Waterville) medical staff. . . . Leon Tobin was elected vice-president and director of the New England Hardware Associates.

It is easier to give than to give wisely

There is no finer way to show your lasting appreciation to your Alma Mater than by making a gift either outright or in trust. In these complex times, however, it is important that the gift be made in a manner that will be most beneficial not only to your college, but to your family and business as well.

Our experienced Trust Department will be glad to work with you and your attorney on the financial and trust aspects of an educational gift that will serve as your personal memorial in the years ahead. Write or telephone for an appointment now.

We'll be glad to send you a copy of "Facts Everyone Should Know About Charitable Giving," which you may find valuable at this time. Simply drop us a card today.

Alumni Seminar

Ralph J. Bunche (hon. '50) opened the Alumni Seminar weekend in April with a lecture on Some Clear and Present World Dangers. In an informal address he outlined the role of the United Nations (of which he is Under Secretary) and detailed its work in gaining time to ease the problems in the Congo, West Iran, Suez, Cyprus, and other trouble spots. Examining the ironic concept of "peacekeeping armies," Mr. Bunche noted that the UN has "never hesitated to intervene, and if it did not intervene it would not be worth saving."

Representative Edward J. Gurney '35 (Florida, 11th District) attacked the "bullying tactics" used by the administration in getting legislation passed, contending that this was seriously limiting American freedom. In his Saturday morning lecture Gurney also stated that Congress does not now represent a true cross-section of the nation's thought.

In an afternoon seminar on the topic Let Freedom Ring, Edward J. McCormack '45, former attorney general of Massachusetts answered Gurney's charges. In a letter from Clitheroe, Lancashire, England, where he is teaching under the educational and cultural exchange program of the State Department, Bob Bruce '59 discusses the differences between British and American educational systems. Convinced that there is a tremendous need everywhere for the 'liberally educated' individual, he states: "I can not help reflecting that only a liberal arts education can make or give one a constant and growing desire to understand and come to grips with the world we live in."

"Education must be a process and not a product, for where it is regarded as a product it is conceived as something we can get, finish and forget. I think the liberal arts student will regard it as a process, as unending and as inevitable as life itself."

In a post script, Bob notes that his wife, Judy Garland Bruce '58, is "thriving as an American-English housewife" and that his children "are acquiring an English accent."

IN MEMORIAM

Martha Meserve Gould, 91, died on January 30 in Gorham. The native of Limerick, a graduate of Oak Grove School, was a member of Sigma Kappa and received her masters degree from Colby in 1910.

A teacher for fifty years, many of them spent in New York City, Mrs. Gould was former president of the Maine Writer's Research Club and editor of THE STAR IN THE EAST, journal of the Women's Christian Temperance Union in Maine. She retired from teaching in 1946 and had lived in Gorham since that time.

Mrs. Gould leaves two stepdaughters and a stepson.

Edith Maud Larrabee, 94, died on January 4 in Gardiner. A schoolteacher and librarian, she was born in that city and prepared at the local high school. Miss Larrabee was a member of Chi Omega.

She was the author of numerous stories for children and of poetry, much of which was published, and was an active member of the Maine Poetry Fellowship. For her fiftieth reunion she wrote a poem recalling those people of her college years, and how the visions of that long past commencement day "are real or unfulfilled."

Miss Larrabee concluded:

As life is what it is we might not care

For this duration, were it not to see More revelations in the earth and air,

And what the distant, unknown space may be.

Yet though our gift of years be long or few,

We need not now lie down resigned to die,

For in the world's expansion we can do

Our share to lift its aims and standards high.

A football player, he also led the glee club for two years. He received his M.D. from Jefferson in 1902, and joined the staff of that institution and Philadelphia General Hospital. He attended a number of international conferences on ophthalmology and was elected professor emeritus by the trustees of Jefferson upon his retirement in 1948.

He moved to Waterville and resumed private practice until 1958. In 1954 Colby conferred upon him a honorary doctor of science degree. Dr. Shannon is related to the late Col. Richard Cutts Shannon, a trustee and graduate of the class of 1864.

Born in Lowell, Mr. Cawley prepared at the local high school; a member of Zeta Psi, he worked out with Philadelphia Athletics in 1914, but taking Connie Mack's advice, he decided to complete his education. Following his graduation, he refused many baseball offers, choosing to join his father in their Lowell fuel business, where he remained until his death. Prominent in business, fraternal and civic affairs, he had coached the Lowell High School football team and American Legion baseball teams. Miss Mansfield leaves her parents — her father is Burleigh '13 — and two sisters.

HONORARY

Paul J. Sachs (LHD '49), 86, died on February 17 in Cambridge, Massachusetts. The famed professor of fine arts at Harvard was an internationally known expert on prints and drawings. A member of the advisory council of The Friends of Art at Colby, he was cited for "helping the tentative gropings of our generation to achieve sureness of aesthetic judgment" when he was invested with the college's honorary doctorate.

Dr. Sachs, who taught a notable museum course at Harvard — designed, as he described it, to produce the connoisseur-scholar — left a successful profession as a banker in 1914 to join Edward Forbes, founder of the Fogg Museum. His philosophy might be best summed up in these words of his: "Let us . . . resist pressure to vulgarize and cheapen our work through the mistaken idea that in such a fashion a broad public may be reached effectively. That is an especially tempting error because of the intense competition for public attention . . . In the end a lowering of tone and standards must lead to mediocrity."

Amusements

Life was not always dreary and dull in early Portland, though amusements were usually of the home-made variety. Frequent mention is made in Parson Smith's Diary of skating and sleighing parties in the winter, and of fishing, swimming and picnics in the summer. The deep hard-packed snows of winter were enjoyed particularly, with many sleighing parties organized to visit friends in outlying towns.

Household tasks such as spinning, weaving and sewing were usually made the occasion for a friendly gathering by the women of the community. Rev. Samuel Deane describes one such party at his house of more than "an hundred of the fair sex," who prepared and spun "236 seven-knotted skeins of excellent cotton and linen yarns" as a gift for their hostess.

The visit of notables such as the Governor and his retinue, or a judge coming to hold court, was hailed by the settlement as reason for celebration, mostly in the form of long and convivial dinners with rich foods, fine wines, and all the diners garbed in their gala costumes and wigs.

Dancing was frowned on as an amusement by many of the straight-laced Portlanders. We find a record of one dancing party in Mr. Smith's book, as follows:

"Theophilus Bradbury and wife, Nathaniel Deering and wife, John Wait and wife, and several others of the most respectable people in town, were indicted for dancing at Joshua Freeman's Tavern in December, 1765. Mr. Bradbury pleaded that the room where they had been dancing was hired by private individuals who were using it as a private apartment. Therefore the room was not to be considered as a public place of resort at the time. His plea was sustained."

Mr. Wells in his History of Portland says: "Theatrical performances are given occasionally by irregular, straggling companies from Boston and other places, but they have not much respectability, nor do they receive much patronage from the better classes of society. There are also occasional amateur performances of select plays, by ladies and gentlemen of the city, who are very respectable both in their character and attendance. There are numerous other amusements of various kinds, such as jugglers, minstrels, and other like exhibitors, which attract particularly the young."
