MY MOTHER.

BY HANNAH AUGUSTA.

Oh! how I loved her! though my will At times resisted her control, In every dearest wish and thought She ruled the idyl of my soul.
I grew beside her year by year, Grateful, she said, and fair and tall—Her words to me were sweet and dear, And mine to her were true and all.

Oh! how I loved her! soft her smile Shone all along the flowery way, O'er which I trod the dewy trail, Thoughtless of death or decay.
Her bosom was my place of rest,
Her arms my refuge sure and dear, Her voice could always soothe me best,
Her kiss could banish grief and fear.

Oh! how I loved her! heart to heart;
And hand to hand she bore me on;
Guarding me from every smart, Until her own young life was gone.
One day she drew me to her breast,
Her cheeks were white, her look was wild, Pale lips to mine she fondly pressed,
And whispered "We must part, my child."

Her words went crashing thro' my brain, Went cleaving thro' my shrinking heart,
And then, like death, in every vein Throbbled the dread sentence, "We must part." Oh! dreadful grief of childhood's years!
Oh! how of blackness, wrath and death, Utterly drenched and choked by tears, Wild with vain cries, and pleading breath.

My mother's presence was to me Like sunshine in a dreary land, What cooling water springs would be To one on Africa's burning sand.
Oh! how I loved her, love her yet, Though from her grave I wander far,
My mother I do not forget, Her love is still my guiding star.

I long for her and love her now;
When childhood's days and youth have fled,
As when her kisses warmed my brow, As when she held my youthful head,
And when the earth is heaved and torn,
My head, and o'er my heart is piled,
If spirits live and spirits love, My mother shall embrace her child.

MY LITTLE WHITE APRON.
BY GABRIELLE LEE.

I AM the youngest of five daughters. The rest were born with that woman's heritage—beauty; their share of it at all events. I was born, comparatively, plain.

I was the youngest daughter. But do not think I was abused and persecuted. My sisters told me of their admirers, and I listened with the most earnest attention. They consulted me, too; said "No one's taste was better than mine," and, in fact, as they could not afford a lady's maid out of their somewhat slender purses, why I converted myself into one—"crimped" hair, got them ready for parties, and held councils with them over the color of a ribbon. I was "to live" with them when they were married, each one would tell me in turn. It was a gay prospect, certainly—I knew what that meant; it would be nice to have somebody to look after the house, you see. I don't mean to be sarcastic; I hate a sarcastic woman, and my sisters were nice girls; I did love them; but then it's not fair that leaves and fishes should be given to some, and bare crumbs to another. However, I kept the thought down; wouldn't give it space in my heart a moment; listened to the praises of my pretty sisters; was glad to have them courted and admired; and if fortune had given plumes to the rest and none to me, it was no use to make sour faces over the matter—it wouldn't remedy it one bit.

"Well, Annie," said my mother, with a sigh, "I suppose we must begin to get your sisters ready for the winter campaign. I hope this year I shall be able to buy you a nice silk, and a new bonnet. I'll see how much money is left when they are fitted out. I am tired of seeing you in their cast-off things."

My mother's cheek had been bright with roses once, they were pale now; this "fitting out" business worried her awfully. It was so hard to get everything as it should be, and yet make "both ends meet."

"Never mind, dear," said I, kissing the cheek that had been very fair and fresh once, but which was somewhat worn now—a cheek dearer to me than all the world beside. You understand me better than anybody, and would call me "little violet," sometimes, adding, "You are not always to be in the corner, Annie.
Some one will find out your sweetness, and stoop to pluck you for it, when more showy flowers will be suffered to fade unnoticed."

"Never mind, dear," said I, "don't think of me. As for a new silk, I don't lift my eyes to that; a nice merino will do just as well, you know. I don't go into society. Wait, mother, nine, till my sisters make their choice, and you and I are left to keep house together, then I'll have a fine dress, and wear it to please you."

ing. Rose was fairer than I, and looked well in it; no matter; I would make it do.
I thanked my sister and took it. Would it be so always, I thought? What if I should start off, like the youngest daughter in the fairy-tale, and seek my fortune. Never mind, I would be patient—that was best and right; so I soothed myself, put on my bonnet and shawl, and went out.

I had some shopping to do on my own account. It took me but a little while, and comprised one parcel, very small, and another so small it went into my pocket. The first held a remnant of white cambric to be made into an apron, designed to cover over that brown merino; the other a bit of rose-colored ribbon, meant to brighten the same.

I made the apron with care, tacked it finely, ruffled the bib waist daintily. When I put on the brown merino, the little apron, and the bit of rose-colored ribbon that fastened a rim of white collar at the throat, I knew I looked as "neat as a pin," and farther than that I expected not.

My sisters looked pretty enough in their bright silk dresses of azure blue, crimson, and apple-green, which were finished just in time. There was to be a divine musical, as the girls sang nicely, Italian and de-mostly, and were to take leading parts, they all enjoyed the prospect amazingly.

I did, too, but only sympathetically; for I was to play "Cinderella," and stay at home.
Four sisters were enough to go into society.
For five, it was not to be dreamed of.

I could sing to be sure; but only a little—simple songs I knew by ear. My mother liked to hear me, sometimes, when the rest were all gone.

"That opera music is all very fine, Annie," she would say; "but when you sing it touches me, somehow. And 'Annie Laurie' just suits your voice. I am glad I called you Annie, it's such a sweet name."

Yes, I was to play Cinderella. Would the prince really be there? I thought to myself.
I was getting a little tired of it all. You know the old saying, "All work and no play." I felt badly, and, therefore, when my sisters had gone, began to make light of everything.

First, however, what pretty creatures they were, when they came to kiss "ma-ma" and "Annie" good by. Daisy white, and daisy-pink of skin, appeared perfectly, daintily perfumed, delicately kidded. "Good by, sisters.
You'll have a nice time, I know." What was that choking feeling in my throat for? Did I envy them?

Too much piano.—We presume there will be very many to call us barbarians, "antic" and "modern" as we declare that there is altogether too much time wasted at the piano. It is so fashionable and universal for young ladies to spend several years of their life drumming and thrumming on the piano, that it is well nigh treason for even newspapers to say anything against it. But however unpopular the idea may be, we cannot but feel that there is too much absurd throwing away of time and strength at the piano, and we shall speak plainly our reasons for such erratic belief.

When a young lady has a real taste and genius for music, it surely is an excellent thing to give her every advantage for culture in this particular direction. Such an one will be very likely to carry her musical proficiency through life, and make it a source of never-ceasing happiness to her friends. No one of the muses can more gracefully a true lady than that of music.
But in this practical country it happens that very few are born with the magic wand of genius—not one in a hundred nor one in a thousand.
Hence it becomes the greater part to turn their attention to more advantageous matters.

AN EFFECTIVE SPEECH.

"A SPEECH, a speech from Wilton," cried the thoughtless fellows.
"He can't make a speech on cold water. I defy him," said one of their number.
"My friends," began Wilton.

"Hear, hear!" he's ready in for it now," cried a young man whose flushed cheeks gave pivotal signs of his devotion to the bottle.
"Wilton is on his feet."

The comrade they called Wilton was a young man some twenty-three years of age.
Upon his face, within his eyes, a settled melancholy rested; his manners were as grave as those of an old man. He was often called "Wilton the steady," on account of his quiet adherence to principle.

The head-partner of the first in these employ Wilton was, gave a great party once a year, and it was to this gathering Wilton had been persuaded to come.

In vain his companions tempted him with the wine that flowed freely. The "firm" considered themselves good Christians, as, indeed, did the world generally. They gave largely to charities and to their church, where their seats were seldom empty. They did a great deal of good with their money, yet in placing this fiery temptation before young men, some of whom were as yet without fixed principles, they committed a gross and almost fatal error.

Looking about him, Wilton saw already many faces flushed almost to incubation; many eyes, that spite of their flash and sparkle, moved with difficulty, and that dire unconsciousness marks the incipient stage of drunkenness.

"My friends," he said and then paused, as if to give greater emphasis to what might follow, "I am going to make a confession."

Some of the company smiled at this, but by the greater number were averted at the sad yet earnest tones of his voice.

"Five years ago," he said, "I had a brother, a bright, beautiful boy, in whom the hopes of a large family circle centered. He was called a genius, and he was one. Sensitive, gentle-hearted, and generous to a fault, he also gave promise of extraordinary vigor of mind. One night, several boys in the village where I was born resolved to have a frolic. The party was to be a secret one, and we were to carry front our homes, if we could, provisions and wine. It came off with success. There was good cheer, there were bright and flowing liquors, we were all young and buoyant. My brother had never tasted wine. Whether it was a disinclination caused by natural dislike, or whether his intuitions led him to avoid it as dangerous to him, I do not know. I only know—and the recollection is at this moment burning in my brain—that we all thought if we could get Herbert drunk it would be fine fun. Friends could not have set themselves more ingeniously at work to compass this object than we did. I was foremost in the attempt. I will not excuse myself, nor in aught palliate my conduct. I knew he had a manuscript poem at home, that he had pronounced remarkably by competent critics; I knew he could improvise almost without mental effort, and expected that under the stimulus of the fiery serpent—whose sting I dread more than any other—the brain would be quickened, and we should be charmed, perhaps amazed at the exhibitions of his rare gift."

At last we prevailed, but instead of quickening the wine stupified his faculties. A few glasses reduced him to a state of utter inebriety.

The party broke up. We were all wild with drink and excitement; he alone was immovable and quite insensible. There was no rousing him from the state of deathly sleep into which he had fallen. I dared not take him home that night, fearing that our frolic might be found out in consequence of the trouble we should have in getting him to his room. So we left him there, lying as comfortably as we could place him—his handsome face flushed and almost purple, his active brain, for once, completely stupefied.

In the morning I was awakened by the sound of sobs. A white, seared face stood over me; a trembling, weak voice cried out, "O Philip, your poor brother."

OUR TABLE.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY for April presents an interesting table of contents. "The Restless" is the title of a poem by H. Rich; "Pioneering," by Caroline H. Dall, tells something more about Abraham Lincoln and his biographer, William Herndon; Edward Everett Hale gives an interesting paper on the "Sanitary Commission"; "F. W. Higginson, a story of the 'Hundred Window,' by Bayard Taylor on 'Fidelity in the United States,' and Kate Field on 'Adeleide Ristori'; James Russell Lowell puts a 'Familiar Epistle to a Friend' into verse, and Thomas Buchanan Read versifies "Timon's Soliloquy." There are also one or two tales and the usual reviews.

Published by Ticknor & Fields, Boston, at $1 a year.

THE GALAXY for April 1st, 1867, contains the chapters of the new story by Mrs. Edwards, the author of "Archie Llewellyn," entitled "Steven Lawrence, Yeoman," which, by special arrangement with the author, is printed from her own advance MS. This number also contains: Waiting for the Verdict, by Mrs.
Rebecca Harding Davis; Modern and Modified Dinners, by F. B. Plaf; Entered into rest, by Phoebe Cary; Packtrains, by W. L. Abbott; English Society, by Mrs. W. H. Palmer; Lawyers and their Traits, by Fred B. Perkins; At Peace, by Ina D. Coolbrith; Modern Poetry, by David A. Wasson; Maurice de Guerin, by Virginia Vaughan; Robinson, by Charles W. S. Osgood; Nebula, by the Editor.

Published twice a month by W. C. & F. P. Church, 30 Park Row, New York, at $5 a year.

THE RIVERSIDE MAGAZINE for Young people. The April number is one of unusual excellence, comprising great variety in its articles and illustrations, and is characterized by the prominence given to "outdoor life." The story of the "Little Red Hen" will cause many a hearty laugh, and the little children will be specially entertained with two stories about their pet, the Squirrel. Dr. Hayes, the Arctic explorer, continues his story of Philip the Greenland Hunter. Victor Man-tache's article is upon "Spring Sports." There is a capsizing story about a singular fish, the Garpike, and another concerning a new way of flying kites, while the coming of Spring is announced by an Easter Hymn with music.
The first part of the good old English ballad of Chevy-Chase takes the place of the Shakespeare story this month.

Published by Hurd & Houghton 459 Broome Street, New York, at $2.50 a year.

EVERY SATURDAY for March 30, translates from Die Gartenlaube "A few facts for the Wonders of Chignou," The Argosy furnishes it an article on Herr Juchacz, the violinist; a paper entitled "At the Play," from Teufel Dr. gives Edmund Yates's experience as a dramatic critic; "Religion in America," by E. Edward Dicey, from Macmillan's Magazine; "Woman's Heroics," is from the Saturday Review, and Swinburne's "Ode on the Insurrection in Canada" is reprinted from advance sheets of the Fortnightly Review. Besides these two serials are continued and "The Two Cadets" is finished.

Published by Ticknor & Fields, Boston, at $5 a year.

BEADLE'S MONTHLY for April opens with a second paper on "Our National Capital," illustrated with the opening chapters of "From Post to Pillar," by Mary M. Prescott; the pathetic story of "Wyckoff Jones," told in verse by Mrs. Victor; more "Autobiographic Notes," by Mrs. E. Oakes Smith; more chapters of Mrs. Victor's story, "Who was He?" a new sketch of "Skirmishing in the Shenandoah," by Jas. F. Pitts; a continuation of "Greenbow in Gotham," and many other good things, which we will not enumerate.

Published by Beadle & Co., New York, at $3 a year.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS for April is brimming with good things for the children, especially in the line of illustrations: "Going Halves," is the frontispiece; by Eytney; representing Young America, black; the three serials are continued, and many new pieces are introduced, as well as a paper on foot-ball and hockey, and plenty of charades and puzzles.

Published by Ticknor & Fields, Boston, at $2.50 a year.

THE LADY'S FRIEND for April has a fine steel engraving of "The Suit of Armor," a handsome colored fashion plate, with numerous engravings of fashionable novelties. "How a Woman had her Way," by Elizabeth Prescott, and "Orville College," by the author of "East Lynne," are continued, and there are many other stories equally interesting.

Published by Deacon & Peterson, Philadelphia, at $2.50 a year.

THE CHILDREN'S HOUR, Arthur's charming magazine for little folks, appears to improve with each succeeding number—the one for April being the best that has appeared. The editor, we notice, asks his correspondents to give the best thoughts in the best forms, to avoid the use of long words and those not in common use, and especially to avoid idioms and slang phrases. In this way he secures a pure literature for children, and he presents it in elegant style, on nice paper, and handsomely embellished.

Published by T. S. Arthur, Philadelphia, at $1.25 per number.

ARTHUR'S MAGAZINE for April presents its usual good variety of engravings, fashion plates, music and reading matter.

Published by T. S. Arthur & Co., Philadelphia, at $2.50 a year.

YOUNG AMERICA! What shall we say about it? Why, boys and girls, the best plan is to buy a copy for 15 cents, or subscribe. It would take us a long while to tell of all the good things it contains.

Published by W. Jennings Demorest, 473 Broadway,
New York, at $1.50 a year.

THE BANKRUPT LAW, in neat pamphlet form is published by James Porters, No. 45 Bible House,

RAISING LAMBS.—Wishing to compare his own practice with that of other breeders of merino sheep, Dr. Randall addressed a series of questions to quite a number of the leading farmers in New York and Vermont. We select from the Rural New Yorker the following summary of answers to these questions upon the following timely topics:—

Condition of the Udder.—All our correspondents but two express themselves in favor of examining the udder, at the time of milking, to see what its condition, and that the milk flows freely. The test is often stopped at the lower end and requires considerable pressure by the fingers, waited with milk or suture, to force out what some of our farmers term the "plug." Mr. Pitts does not examine the udder if the lamb is strong enough to suck. Wilcox waits the examination for a few hours to avoid unnecessarily disturbing or exciting the ewe. These differences are probably rather apparent and real. If the lamb helps itself at the out-set, sucking and obviously obtaining milk from both sides of the udder, and obtaining enough of it, no one would feel called on to interfere; if not, and especially if the weather is cold and the lamb's straws weakness, the examination would not be long deferred by any one. Our own views on the subject are fully given at p. 146 of the Practical Shepherd, and it is not worth while to take up room to repeat them here. We outside the objection to disturbing ewes unnecessarily, especially young ones, worthy of attention; for we have repeatedly seen a ewe with her first lamb, rich with milk and betray great indifference to it for some time afterwards; it disordered while licking it dry. We would meddle with no ewe while licking her lamb dry, and while the latter was vigorously making its first efforts to suck it, in anything like a comfortable temperature.

First Milk.—One question to our correspondents was:—If the milk is thick and gummy do you milk it out on the ground, or let the lamb take it? Baker, A. H. Clapp, Gregory, Hayne, Pitts and Pottle have the lamb take it.
Brown and Wright milk a little on the ground and then have the lamb take it.
E. O. Clapp milks it on the ground if in abundant, if not, lets the lamb take it if it will.
Elldorff milks it on the ground if very thick and gummy, so as to be difficult to draw, but if it comes easy lets the lamb take it. Hammond milks it on the ground and licks the lamb on another ewe until the milk becomes good. T. C. Marshall lets the lamb draw it if he can. Rich milks it out at once. Sanford, if it is quite thick, milks it out, but likes to have the lamb take it as soon as he can. Sax-ton first lets the lamb draw a milk, and then milks out the big clean on the ground. Wilcox lets the lamb take it if he will, but if not, after a few hours milks it out. Our practice has been to that of the Marshall's, which is substantially the same with that of Elldorff, Sanford and all those who say they let the lamb take it; for we suppose none of them mean to be understood that they draw it by hand from the udder and feed it from a spoon, or the like, to the lamb, if, as sometimes occurs, the milk has that thick, gluey consistency which renders it impossible to be drawn by the lamb. We do not think it well, however, for a weak lamb, at least, to have a continued surfeit of this thick, first milk, if it physics it too freely. It is, as Mr. Pottle remarks, "Nature's cathartic." Few ewes continue to give it too long, but we have seen instances of it.

NEAR-SIGHTED.—Persons living in cities begin to wear glasses earlier than country people, for want of opportunities of looking at things at a distance. Those who wish to put far off the evil day "speacles," should accustom themselves to long views. The eye is always relieved, and sees better, after reading awhile, we direct the sight to some far-distant object, even for a minute. Great travellers and hunters are seldom near-sighted. Humboldt, when in his eighty seventh year, could read unaided.
Sailors discern objects at a great distance with considerable distinctness, when a common eye sees nothing at all. One is reported to have such an acute sight, that he could tell when he was going to see an object. On one occasion, when the ship was in a sinking condition, and all were exceedingly anxious for a sight of land, he reported from the lookout that he could not exactly see the shore, but he could pretty near do it.—[Hall's Journal of Health.]

There is some talk in congressional circles about sending half-a-dozen good republican speakers into various sections of the south in May or June to discuss political questions from a northern point of view. Several gentlemen are understood to be ready for such a campaign, if they can be assured of personal safety.
Mr. Wilson thinks there would be no danger, and is anxious a movement of this sort should be made.

One of the colored speakers at the fraternal-ization meeting recently held in South Carolina, promised not to rest till the whites are enfranchised, but advised his brethren, when it came to voting, to "look to merit alone." Another, speaking of elections, said that the question should not be whether a candidate was black or white, but was he honest. Truly the freemen know what they are about.—[Port.
Press.]

In noticing the Adjutant General's Report, the Hallowell Gazette makes a good point when it says "the Biographical Notices" given in its pages to some few officers, if "common fame" while they were in the army be worth anything, ought not, in our opinion, to have been quite so lengthy, nor quite so laudatory. Classifying those of whose heroism there is a general doubt, with universally ac-knowledgeed brave men, is not doing full justice to the latter, however it may please the former."

According to the Maine Farmer, the Spragues propose to erect at Augusta five mills as soon as may be, each running 100,000 spindles, making 500,000, which are several thousand more than there are in the whole of Lowell. It is calculated that each mill increases directly or indirectly the population ten thousand. This proposed investment will amount to eight millions of dollars.

A NEIGHBORLY INQUIRY.

In the published report of the annual town meeting of Waterville, I noticed that the town voted the millage, raised a few years since for the purpose of freeing the Ticonic Bridge, in paying debts of the town. Now it is not my intention to dictate a course of policy for Waterville; but I would simply ask, was that a magnanimous act? Was it in good faith towards your neighbor, Winslow? Perhaps there are those who can answer these questions to the satisfaction of all in both towns.

Let us look at the facts in the past. Although Winslow and Waterville date their settlement on the same day, yet, from natural causes, Waterville was in the ascendant, and attained a much larger growth; consequently there is much more business done, and much more wealth. Waterville has several doctors; Winslow has none. Waterville has dry goods stores, hardware stores, and apothecaries; a good grist-mill, and a few liquor shops; Winslow has none of these. And it being most convenient, the people of Winslow have crossed two toll-bridges, a great many years, to get a large amount of their groceries; doctors, when their families were sick; coffins, when they died, and a horse to convey their remains to the grave. Dry and fancy goods are generally purchased at Waterville; bricks, lime, and hard ware for building; in fine, a large proportion of all we buy comes from Waterville.
And the most of us had to cross two toll-bridges to get it.

Winslow got tired of paying so much toll, and felt that it would be better for both towns to have the bridges free. Individuals of Winslow talked with individuals of Waterville about it, and the latter acknowledged that it would be equally for their advantage as for ours. Measures were taken in Winslow to free the Sa-bastock bridge, Waterville citizens uniting in endeavors to prevent the re-charter. In the mean time, individuals in Waterville subscribed liberally for the purpose of freeing the Ticonic bridge, and the town, with commendable zeal, voted to raise a sum equal to that subscribed, to accomplish the object. But it was the wish of the Waterville people to have the Sabastock bridge freed first.

At a town meeting in Winslow, a letter was read, purporting to come from a distinguished citizen of Waterville, saying, in substance, that they did not expect us to do anything towards freeing Ticonic bridge; and now an excuse is made that they do not know who will support the east end of the bridge. This does very well for an excuse; but Winslow have been asked to support the east end? We have made the Sabastock bridge free, thereby increasing the trade of Waterville; and although we have to be sick some, we manage to pay the doctor's bill over the Ticonic bridge.

Let us now look at the acts of that town, or of those individuals who felt so much interest in having our bridge free. In less than three months, instead of doing anything towards freeing the Ticonic bridge, the tolls are raised on as many as they think will bear it. Did this look like making it a free bridge? Now comes the annual town meeting, with an article in the warrant to see if the town will so direct that they may dispense of the sum assessed for the purpose of freeing the bridge in some other way.

Now we would say to those generous, magnanimous men—when you cross the Sabastock bridge, "toll free," just think of you generous act. When you cross the same to visit sick patients, think of your generosity.
When you sell coffins, don't feed anything from the dead they are to hold. When you sell hardware or fancy goods, or loan money, just think of this act of yours done March 11th, 1867.

A CITIZEN OF WINSLOW.

"An Ignorant Irishman is always crying
'Nigger!'"

Mrs. Editors.—The Irish are charged, unjustly, with entertaining an especial hatred to the African race. They have resisted, and with the greatest and best of reasons, the wicked attempt of radicals to elevate the negro in the scale of humanity by declaring that he is superior to and above the Irish race. This doctrine is peculiar to the radical party; it is entertained by no others; and when we have indignantly resented, they have pointed to the fact as an additional evidence that we especially hate the whole race. The radicals, on the other hand, claim that they entertain an especial love for the negro.

We have had frequent occasion to notice the dishonesty and inconsistency of those who are most prominent and loud-mouthed in their claims for civil and social rights and the equal standing of all men, without distinction of race or color. These are but mere catch-words, political party capital, never intended for practical use in the affairs of life. In the denominational press, and in the radical newspapers, there is a disposition constantly manifested to depreciate the Irish people as a race, and from this cause they have suffered. Prejudices born of religious differences, and sedulously incucated among the young, are hard things to live down? and who is it more proper for them to hate, to denounce, than the Irish race. Have not they been educated in prejudices against that people? Have they not been taught, from their youth up, to sneer at, ridicule, and despise them? If an Irishman is guilty of an offence, or even of slight misbehavior, the fact is heralded with every circumstantial aggravation that can be hunted up. In no case can he expect immunity from publicity if his crime is one of magnitude. The same thing cannot be said of those who are the dearies of the Irish.

That there is a prejudice against the negro race we do not deny; but are the Irish alone sinners in this respect? We have nothing to say against the efforts to elevate the negro; but we do most earnestly protest that these efforts must not be put forth in connection with a systematic, set purpose to degrade a race to which we belong. We protest against the offensive and insulting comparison of the negro and Irish, which is so frequent in the press. What is there in common with the Irish and negro that is not common with all other races of white people? Have the English, German, French or Americans produced higher types of men? Can the records of any country point to Philosophers, orators, statesmen, poets, generals, who surpass those of Irish blood? Hence we may safely assume that of all the great constituents of our mixed people, the Irish American element, in all its branches and offshoots, is the strongest in numbers and of the most industrious habits; equal, at least, to any other, in physical and mental capacities; equal in energy, enterprise and influence. But with regard to making friends for ourselves, as you remarked concerning the New York riot, there were ten thousand men in that procession and the gallant 69th led the van as they did on many occasions on the battle field, fighting for law and order. There were but very few took part in that unfortunate affair, but the "Mail" made no exception. Irishmen have done enough for this country, ever since the revolution, to entitle them to the sympathy of this government; but we don't expect much when such men as Sumner, Boutwell, and Co., stand at the head of our government. We must only wait for other men and other times to do justice to Irishmen.

Respectfully Yours,
AN IGNORANT IRISHMAN.

Our sensitive friend has appropriated to Irishmen more than we intended for them in our remarks last week; for we certainly do not regard them as alone sinners against the colored man, and only used Dr. Peck's remark to point an illustration. He acknowledges, however, that Irishmen have strong prejudice against negroes, but mistakes as to its origin. Victims of oppression at home, Irishmen came to this country, and elevated by a "political catch word," a large share ally themselves to a party whose action has ever been inimical to the negro; and not content with voting against their oppressed brother man, it is notorious that they are ever foremost in maltreating and abusing him whenever an opportunity offers. Witness the riots in all parts of the country. This inconsistency, very naturally drew the attention of the friends of humanity, ("wicked radicals," our correspondent contemptuously styles them, but that is another "political catch word") to Irishmen, and raised a question as to the superiority of their claims as men and citizens; and who is to blame if this has been sometimes settled in favor of their colored brother? Our friend complains of our mention of the riotous attack on the police in New York on St. Patrick's Day; and we agree with him in regarding it as an unfortunate affair, born of an unfortunate trait in the Irish character which led to an unprovoked attack upon the guardians of the public peace, in which more damage was done to friendly American citizens, than has been inflicted upon the enemies of Ireland in the last great demonstration in the green isle, when such a note has been made. Irishmen have done much for this country," he claims; and so they have. But has this country done nothing for Irishmen? It has taken them by the hand, fed, clothed, educated them, and given them all the rights of American citizenship—not only the ballot, which they deny to the negro, but eligibility for almost every office. Irishmen have done much for this country; did they do it as Irishmen or as American citizens? In either capacity they have been well rewarded. The sympathies of this people have gone out on all occasions for the Irish; not even excepting the late "unfortunate" attempt to fasten a foreign rule upon our Canadian neighbors. Unless our government was prepared to champion Ireland a l'outrance, and declare war against Great Britain, it did all it could in honor. The claims of the "Gallant 69th" we do not forget. We only hope, for the pride and satisfaction of our correspondent, that while, as he says, they were "fighting for law and order," he was not helping to neutralize their efforts by voting and talking against the prosecution of the war, discouraging enlistments, and, in a small way giving aid and comfort to the enemy.

JOHN MITCHELL, while in this country, was not supposed to be the wisest and most prudent man in it, as the leader or adviser of any political enterprise. But he shows unusual good sense in refusing to have anything to do with any movement for the liberation of Ireland which proposes active attempts at revolution while England is at peace. He holds that the British can suppress any such attempt with ease, and that it can end only in making the cause of Irish independence more hopeless, and the Irish people more miserable, than ever. Whenever England shall be at war with France or the United States, then, in his judgment, will be Ireland's opportunity. He advises the Fenians to maintain their organization, so as to be prepared for such a contingency, and is willing to be connected with it for that purpose—but in other. He thinks, too, that no more money should be collected for the Fenian cause than such preparation requires, and denounces the calls for money, under pretence of a rising next harvest, or next year, or any other specified time, as dishonest and cruel. The great mass of the Irish people will do well to heed Mitchell's advice this time.—[Port. Press.

AN OLD MAN KILLED BY AN IMBECILE.—Portland, Me., March 25.—George Rolfe, an infirm man, was brutally murdered on Sunday morning, in the Williams House, near College Corner, in Falmouth, by Eben Williams, 24 years of age, who shot him through the heart with a rifle and then cut off his head with an axe. Williams is an imbecile and under guardianship, but being supposed to be harmless was allowed to occupy the house with Rolfe, who was a pauper, as his servant. Williams went to the house of his guardian in the afternoon, and stated gleefully what he had done. The body was found laid out for burial, and the head in a pail of water.

Congress has placed the Supplementary Reconstruction bill on the statute book of the Republic, overruling the twelfth veto of Andrew Johnson by a vote of 40 yeas to 7 nays in the Senate and 114 yeas to 25 nays in the House—more than three-fourths of each body. There was not a word of discussion in either House.

DISTRICT NO. 1.—At the annual meeting on Monday evening, which was very small, J. Nye acted as Moderator, and the following officers were chosen:—

H. B. White, Clerk; Joseph Percival, Agent; Rev. Dr. Sheldon, Prof. M. Lyford, and Joseph Percival, Classifying Committee.

The district voted to leave the disposal of the High School pupils with the Classifying Committee, they being authorized to continue the present arrangement with the Principal of the Classical Institute, or make any other they may deem best. If the condition of the treasury would admit, it was thought best to keep these advance pupils in the Institute through the year. The Agent was authorized to purchase of James Stackpole, Esq., a lot of land adjoining the Brown School House lot, on Mill Street, the price not to exceed $150.

The report of the Agent showed that the district is indebted to the town to the amount of $91.86; having overdrawn the past year $72.92, and the year previous $18.94.

REV. L. J. FLETCHER'S LECTURE, at the Congregational Church in this village, on the evening of the 15th inst., deserved favorable notice last week, as it was a forcible and effective effort, and was listened to with good attention by a large audience. His formidable array of facts and figures probably set many people to thinking. Mr. Fletcher is the originator of the plan for enrolling the pupils of our Sabbath Schools in the Juvenile Temperance League, pledging abstinence from intoxicating drinks, tobacco and the use of profane language. He is put into the field by the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance.

CATTLE MARKETS.—There were about 300 more cattle at market this week than last, but the sheep fell off nearly two thousand. Trade was rather slow, and though prices were not materially changed, yet it was thought that the market favored the buyer. Says the reporter of the Boston Advertiser:—"Daniel Wells sold 11 good Maine oxen, 1523 lbs. live weight to H. W. Jordan for 13c, 35 sk. Mansfield & Davis sold six oxen, 1080 lbs. each, at 13 1/2c per lb. Partly to show where the premium River cattle come from, and how they are produced, we may mention the sale by Daniel Wells of an extra pair of four-year-old steers raised by Hall Burleigh of Fairfield, Me., 7 ft. 10 in. for $510, to a gentleman who intends to use what he can make of them." Extra beef sold for 13 1/2c; first quality, 13 to 13 1/4; second quality, 12 1/2 to 13; third 11 1/2 to 12. Of workers, Daniel Wells sold Maine oxen at $190, 210, 220, and a pair in good order, 7 ft. 6 in. $325.

The trade in sheep, too, was dull, and the quality of stock poor. Prices, 5 1/2 to 8 1/2c; extra, 9 to 9 1/2; in lots, $3.75 to $11.00 per head.

REV. B. F. SHAW, to whom the Baptist Church of this village extended a unanimous call, a few weeks ago, to become their pastor, has removed here, and is supplying the pulpit; but his health not being well established, he holds the acceptance of the pastorate under consideration.

Messrs. Butler and Bingham, of the U. S. House of Representatives, have had two rough words recently, not over creditable to either, nor to the other members who encouraged them with applause.

A large and very enthusiastic meeting was held at Belfast, on Saturday last, to devise measures for building the chartered railroad between that city and Moosehead Lake. Judge Dickerson presided, and delegates were present from all parts of Waldo county, and several from Somerset, Piscataquis, and Penobscot counties. Earnest speeches were made by several gentlemen, and letters were read from R. B. Dunn, Esq., President of the Maine Central Railroad, and E. Noyes, Esq., Superintendent. The convention voted to proceed immediately to inaugurate measures for building the road.

FAST DAY.—The Unitarian and Universalist Societies will unite in services at the Church of the latter; sermon by Rev. Mr. Maguire.

Union services will also be held at the Baptist Church by the Congregationalist and Baptist societies; sermon by Rev. Mr. Shaw.

WE call attention to the advertisement of "A Beautiful Home for sale." This is a rare opportunity to secure one of the most desirable residences in the environs of our village. Capt. Haynes proposes to go South for the health of his family; and for this reason his delightful home, embracing so many conveniences, either to the man doing business in the village or the retired gentleman, is offered for sale.

An accident on the Somerset and Kennebec Railroad is a rare thing, if not entirely unknown between Waterville and Skowhegan. The evening train on Tuesday smashed an engine and tender about four miles this side of Skowhegan, by their getting off the track in consequence of the spreading of the rails. They landed broadside in a ditch, after plowing several rods in the bank. Two passenger cars were off the track, but were not overturned. Mr. Henry Penney, the engineer, was thrown with violence upon the bank, but was not disabled; and strange to say, nobody else was injured. An engine and car were sent from Skowhegan to take up the passengers, and during the night the track was so far repaired that the freight train came down as usual; the passenger train following on time.

Farmers are invited to look at the advertisement of Durham Stock, by Hon. Warren Percival, of Vassalboro'. His reputation is a guarantee for the quality of what he sells, and as "blood tells" in Durhams, it is an object to get such as tells the truth.

Those who complained of the length of Gov. Chamberlain's inaugural must admire the brevity of his Fast Day Proclamation. It could not have been much shorter.

THE AUGUSTA BRIDGE was made free to the Public on the 16th inst.

CHARLES F. POTTER, Esq., a highly esteemed and energetic business man of Augusta, died very suddenly in that city on Saturday evening last, at the age of forty-six years. His disease was paralysis of the heart.

THE POSTON TRAVELLER.—We call attention to the advertisement, in another column of the Daily Evening Traveller, one of the best conducted and most reliable newspapers published in the State. It is peculiarly valuable as a newspaper at the present time, to a large proportion of the community, inasmuch as it is the only daily paper published in Boston, which squarely sustains the prohibitory Liquor Law, and is the uncompromising friend of the Temperance cause. In addition to its high literary ability, its columns are replete with the latest foreign and domestic information, the state of the market, etc., and is in all respects a model newspaper. On reference to the advertisement, the terms for the Daily, Semi-Weekly and Weekly paper may be understood.

"NORTHWESTERN RECORD."—This is the name of a newspaper, just started at Sheboygan Falls, Wisconsin, by Littlefield, Straub & Conner. The senior member of the firm, who is one of the editors, is Mr. S. D. Littlefield, a Waterville boy, who, as we learn, has deservedly come to fortune and honor in his western home. The paper is a large and handsome sheet, thoroughly Union in sentiment, and boldly advocating temperance principles.

Large liquor seizures have recently been made in Rockland, and other places. We would call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Dr. Miller's Healing Balsam, in our paper this week, and to Dr. Hooker's Croup Syrup, which will appear in our paper next week. These preparations are reported to be unrivalled for the cure of the complaints named in the advertisements.

THE FORT PHIL KEARNEY MASSACRE.—The St. Louis Republican's special correspondent at St. Joseph gives the following account of the Fort Kearney massacre, received by the commissioners sent to investigate the matter from the Sioux Indians. The Sioux drew our men out of the fort and killed them all. Our men fought like tigers and would not have been overcome so easily if they had not kept so close together. The combatants were so mixed up that the Indians killed several of their own party with their own arrows. The bravery of our bugler is much spoken of, he having killed several Indians by beating them on the head with his bugle. They say that there were only sixteen Sioux and four Cheyennes killed on the field, but after they encamped ninety-four warriors died from their wounds, and of three hundred others wound, a half of them were expected to die. One big Sioux chief was among the killed. They mention a man on a white horse who cut off an Indian's head with a single stroke of his sabre, and say that when re-enforcements left the fort for the battle ground they (the Indians) retired, having had enough of fighting. There were 2000 Indians engaged in the fight, and the strength of the concentrated tribes is reported at 2800 lodges, which are now moving toward the Yellowstone river and Missouri river.

A practical man in Louisiana has proposed a scheme for the elevation of the negro, which is extremely liberal for that latitude. Realizing that the blacks have a strong affection for their homes and a great desire to become land owners, he proposes to sell to each head of a family of negroes, and to each unmarried male negro who may be eighteen or more, a farm of twenty acres, to be allotted to him, if practicable, on the estate of his former master. The latter is to build on this farm a log cabin and cowhouse for the negro, rough it may be, but as comfortable as negro quarters ordinarily are. This is to be the negro's estate, for which he shall pay to the proprietor a certain sum—say $2000, more or less. This amount is to be furnished by the Agricultural Real Estate Company, and secured by a mortgage to one half the value of the estate, and by the United States. It is thought that in time the negro would be able to pay off the mortgage, and meanwhile he would easily keep down the interest.

This plan, which may or may not be a feasible one, is heartily endorsed by the New Orleans Times, and is chiefly significant as showing an advance in sentiment which allows the consideration of a project to give the colored man a freehold.—[Boston Adv.

OUR TABLE.

THE DIAMOND DICKENS.—Ticknor & Fields, the well known Boston publishers, have commenced the publication of a Diamond Edition of the complete works of Charles Dickens, which affords a combination of elegance and cheapness never before attempted in this author's works, and which therefore must make it very popular. The type, though necessarily small, is clearly and delicately cut, and can be read with a distinctness and ease equal to that afforded by ordinary type of a much larger cast. The paper is tinted, and of the finest quality. The illustrations are unique, suggestive, and help materially to give fashion in the mind to the characters delineated. The binding is also elegant, the size convenient, and the price $1.50 for the illustrated, and $1.25 for the plain, brings it within the reach of all and establishes it as one of the cheapest volumes for its quality ever issued.

As was fitting, the initial number of this unrivalled series is occupied with "The Pickwick Papers," and the others will follow monthly, until the whole series, embracing twelve or thirteen volumes, is completed. After commencing upon the high price of books at the present time, and the little prospect of relief in these days of high tariffs, taxes, and an expanded currency, the Boston Journal in noticing this enterprise, adds:—

For these reasons we cannot but regard such a publication, for instance, as that of the "Diamond Pickwick," by Ticknor and Fields, as constituting an era in American book-making. Before its appearance, whoever wanted to buy that standard portion of Dickens's genius had to choose between a "cheap edition" (though it is cheap after all, as this Diamond edition) of inferior workmanship, and a single larger and cumbersome copy, or one in two volumes, both of the latter quite costly. But in this new edition, we have a handy little book for the first time, containing the whole of 465 chapters in one volume, the type small to be sure, but very clear and readable, the paper good and slightly tinted, an excellent engraved head of Dickens prefacing the title-page, and the whole affording at $1.50, or, without the illustrations, at $1.25. At any time this would have been regarded as a decided achievement in book-making, but in the midst of present prices, it is certainly as surprising as it is welcome. It is a bold appeal to the portion of the reading public who have been deterred from the enjoyment of Dickens by pecuniary considerations, for of course, the wealthy will continue to purchase the high cost editions; and it shows that the public thus appealed to is very large, for nothing but a most extended sale would reward such an undertaking. These volumes as they are issued, can be obtained of our booksellers, or they will be sent free of cost on receipt of the price by the publishers.

We understand that the freight bill of the steamer Daniel Webster, on her last long trip, amounted to $800.00, and her receipts from passengers amounted to $108.00. It is a pleasure for us to record this evidence of the prosperity of our steamboat Company (as it shows that the energy of our citizens in establishing the line, is being amply rewarded.)

A reconstruction meeting of white and colored citizens was held in Montgomery, Ala., on Monday night. Resolutions favoring concurrence in the military law, enjoining colored men, declaring them entitled to political equality, and calling for a State convention, were adopted. Gen. Wager Swayne and two or three ex-reb officers addressed the meeting. Gov. Patton was appointed one of the vice-presidents.

CHOLERA ANIMABULES.—Dr. Kolb, of Vienna, has found by microscopic examination that the rice-water discharges contain countless mushroom-like insects, or "entomistic excrecences." To destroy these organisms and arrest their propagation, is the problem now before the profession.

FOR ALL THOSE DISTRESSING AND AFFLICTING MALADIES which originate in Scrofula, or an effluence or vitiated state of the blood nothing can equal the tonic and purifying effect of Dr. Anderson's Iodine Water, a pure solution of Iodine dissolved in pure water without a solvent.

Woolen goods, colored or white, and of whatever quality, washed to absolute purity, without soiling the fibre or shrinking the fabric, by the use of the STREAM REFINED SOAP. A severe test triumphantly sustained.

The Richmond Times thinks that nothing is more certain than that women will be permitted to vote in less than ten years.

A law has been passed in Pennsylvania to the effect that colored people may hereafter ride in the street cars of Philadelphia with white people, instead of cars set apart for them.

The rebel ram Virginia, or, as it is better known, the "Mermaid," is to be hoisted from its present submerged position by means of torpedoes.

It is believed that Governor Brownlow cannot live much longer. His present nervous disorder grows more and more threatening.

A new horse distemper has appeared in New Jersey which causes the death of its victims in one or two days. The disease baffles the skill of all the veterinary surgeons.

Counterfeit 20's on the National Bank, Portland, are in circulation.

A White club in a western city recently lost one of its members, and at the next meeting the cards had a mourning border around them. This is putting a very fine point on the respect due to the dead.

Ex-Governor Wise of Virginia is, if reports are true, to stump the State with Mr. Hunnicut, the editor of the radical paper in Richmond, to see which party shall control the colored vote.

The cost of the liquor annually consumed in this country, would, in six years, pay the national debt.

A proposition in the Massachusetts legislature to change the State Constitution so as to allow women to vote, was killed, 97 to 44.

The Assembly of Wisconsin, by a vote of 60 to 22, has adopted a resolution to submit to the people of that State the question of extending the suffrage to women.

Surratt will not be tried before the next term of the criminal court in June. The prisoner and his counsel are anxious for a speedy trial, but for some unassigned reason his case is thus delayed.

LOOK! LOOK!

WE wish to call the attention of all interested in having occasion to use ILLUMINATING OILS, to the advantages derived from the use of

HOYT'S IMPROVED
ILLUMINATING OIL.

First it is safe; cannot be exploded either in the lamp or can; has no offensive odor; will give twice as much light without smoke as kerosene; will keep the glass of the lamp clear and give as brilliant a light as if it were full. You can turn it down as low as you please, shut it up in a minute, and there will be no smell, thus saving you the disagreeable and very unhealthy smell that comes from kerosene when turned down low, and it costs less than any other light.

Mr. HOYT, of Stamford, Conn., has filed a Caveat in the Patent Office at Washington for this Oil.

MATTHEWS & STILES, Waterville, Me.
Own the right of Kennelbee Co., and offer Town or Store rights to make and sell the Oil at any place. They will also keep the Oil on hand at the Store. If you wish to keep the Oil at your place, also may information may be had at the same place.

OFFICE OF STATE ASSESSOR—Portland, Me., March 6, 77.
This is to certify that I have this day tested the inflammability and liability to explosion of a sample of HOYT'S IMPROVED ILLUMINATING OIL. The oil was treated as in all other trials which I have made of similar substances. At 150 deg. it was applied to the mouth of the tube, but there was not sufficient evolution of vapor to support combustion. At 160 deg. the fluid was boiling, and the vapor drawn tranquilly and quietly.

The result of this test would indicate that the Oil in question is a safe preparation for use in lamps for household illumination.

To Females in Delicate Health

(D) R. BOW, Physician and Surgeon, No 7 Endicott Street, Boston, is consulted daily for all diseases incident to the female system. Prolapsus Uteri or Falling of the Womb, Fluor Albus, Suppression and other Menstrual derangements, are cured by his treatment. He has been successful in many cases, and is guaranteed in a very few days. So invariably certain is the new mode of treatment, that most obstinate complaints yield under it, and the afflicted person soon rejoices in perfect health.

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, &c.

For the good of the afflicted, I would say that I have suffered for over forty years with pain in my side. In those years I have received the best medical treatment, and the skill of physicians. I have received no permanent cure by the use of some three boxes of Wing's Liver Pills, and I am now sure I was cured.

FARGINGTON, N. H. EUNICE DAVIS

A Mistake.

Mr. Charles White. A respectable citizen, called on me, Monday, Me. 24. A man from New England, on a second call, told me that he had himself and one box of cod liver oil (and I like to call names) for a lady. Through my fault I gave him two boxes of Wing's Liver Pills, and he took them. He was very sorry for his mistake, and would not use them; so he wanted her one favorite pill. But the lady took could not be readily recalled, and he was finally forced to try the pills. He was much surprised to find that they did him good, and found to her surprise that they did her more good.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
Late Agent of U. S. Patent Office, Washington, under the Act of 1837.
78 State Street, opposite Kidby Street, BOSTON.

AFTER an extensive practice of upwards of twenty years, I continue to secure Patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France, and other foreign countries. Clients are requested to send me Specifications, and all Papers or Drawings for Patents, executed on liberal terms, and with dispatch. Researches made into American or Foreign works, to determine the validity of the claims of Patents, inventions, and legal Copies of the claims of any Patent furnished by remitting one Dollar. Assignments recorded at Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents, or ascertaining the patentability of an invention.

During eight months of the year, I am in the course of my travels, and am to be consulted by the following States: ALABAMA, ALASKA, ARIZONA, ARKANSAS, CALIFORNIA, COLORADO, CONNECTICUT, DELAWARE, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, FLORIDA, GEORGIA, ILLINOIS, INDIANA, IOWA, KANSAS, KENTUCKY, LOUISIANA, MAINE, MARYLAND, MASSACHUSETTS, MICHIGAN, MINNESOTA, MISSISSIPPI, MISSOURI, MONTANA, NEBRASKA, NEVADA, NEW HAMPSHIRE, NEW JERSEY, NEW YORK, NORTH CAROLINA, NORTH DAKOTA, OHIO, OKLAHOMA, OREGON, PENNSYLVANIA, RHODE ISLAND, SOUTH CAROLINA, SOUTH DAKOTA, TENNESSEE, TEXAS, VERMONT, VIRGINIA, WASHINGTON, WISCONSIN, and WYOMING.

TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most CAPABLE and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse."
CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents

Given by the use of DR. JOINTVILLE'S BLIXIR, cured permanently, and at a trifling cost.

The accompanying testimonials attest that this medicine for Physical and Nervous Weakness, General Decay, Prostration, Loss of Muscular Energy, Impairment of the consequences of youthful indiscretion, cures the most valuable preparation ever discovered.

It will remove all nervous affections, depression of spirits, loss of energy and vitality, loss of memory, loss of self-struction, fears of insanity etc, will restore the appetite, renew the blood, those who decline, and be assisted by mental depression.

Young Men, be humbugged no more by "Quick Dose" and ignorant practitioners but send for "Dr. Jointville's Blixir," and be assured of more health and happiness.

Perfect Cure is guaranteed in every instance. Price of four bottles to one address, $5.

Each bottle is guaranteed to effect a cure in all ordinary and permanent cases of Nervous Weakness, Prostration, and loss of vitality.

ALSO, DR. JOINTVILLE'S SPHONIC PILLS, for the cure of all Catarrhs, and all affections of the Kidneys and Urine effected in from one to five days. They are prepared from vegetable and mineral ingredients, and never nauseate the stomach or irritate the bowels. No action of life is necessary while using them, their action is in the summer instance, by all the druggists, and sent by mail in box.

Either of the above mentioned articles will be sent on money being paid in advance, or on receipt of a receipt of price. Address all orders to—

REPARATOR CAPILLI.

For restoring hair upon bald heads (from whatever cause they have fallen out) and forcing a growth of hair upon faces it has no equal. It will force new hair to grow, if used twice a week, in from eight weeks, or if on bald heads in from two to three months. A few old practitioners have asserted, some even say that it will retard the growth of the hair or beard. The truth are false, as thousands of living witnesses (from our own experience) can testify. But many still believe that it is a medicine, and therefore the genuine from the spurious.
