ART IN MAINE

John Singleton Copley and Gilbert Stuart defined the faces of Maine's early settlers. Itinerant limners, sign-painters, wood-carvers and metalworkers wandered through the region, setting down an innocent history. Later artists — among them Homer, Hartley Marin — came to stay, for the year or for the season. The mountains, waterways, unbroken forests were all to be explored and painted or their moods cut in stone and wood. And, of course, there always was the sea.

Because, from the first days, artists have recorded Maine, there possibly exists no better revelation of the scope of American art than that inspired by its people and geography. A kind of stamina, particular to the area, in rocks and men makes strong impressions. Working from this concept, Colby has instituted a major sesquicentennial year project: the focussing the state's art legacy into a threefold study.

A large and unique exhibition comes first. A juxtaposition of Maine-inspired art works of two centuries, it will reflect constants associated with a common locale as well as present a sequential history of American painting, sculpture, and crafts. The contents of the show have been chosen by a most impressive group of artists, critics, museum and gallery curators and directors, and patrons (see inside front cover). Originating at the college's art museum in May, 1963, the exhibition will travel to art centers of the country, including the Whitney Museum of American Art, New York City (February 14 – March 14, 1964), and the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston (December 10, 1963 – January 12, 1964).

This exhibit will provide the nucleus of the book: Maine – Its Role in American Art, which will be published by Viking Press coincident with the spring opening. A text – divided into historical periods – will emphasize both the styles of the times and the relation of art works to the state's social and cultural heritage. The contributing authors (also listed on inside front cover) are specialists in these particular periods. In addition to the text, the book will have some 96 pages of monochrome reproductions and twenty full color plates.

Subtending both book and exhibition is the establishment of the Archives of Maine Art. Designed as a center for the preservation of documents and art works, the Archives now maintains a growing collection of color slides, and artists' personal data and effects; including papers, letters and diaries.

Though two generations ago considerable collecting and publication of historical material was undertaken in Maine, no comparable effort has ever been devoted specifically to art.

With the opening of new galleries in museums — and more are expected to open in the next few years — the need of a central site for an archives has become almost mandatory if an historical record is to be maintained. Location of this research material at Colby will be a boon to those institutions who must now seek out, with varying degrees of difficulty and frustration, data relating to the region's art required for study or for exhibition.

Some of the paintings and sculpture reproduced in these pages will be in the Art in Maine exhibition; some will appear in the book. This illustrated essay is intended to give a flavor of this sesquicentennial project rather than to act as an exact catalogue. The Alumnus, in future issues, will preview the exhibition, illustrating insofar as possible the works of art to be included.

IT'S QUITE SAFE TO SAY that not one of Professor Richard Cary's students, graduate or undergraduate, will be surprised to read on the jacket of his new book that he won a magna cum laude with his A.B. degree. Nor will any of his colleagues in the teaching of English at Colby or elsewhere (if they are only fortunate enough to know him!) be in the least surprised. We all recognize his worth. And all, whether students or colleagues, will most surely confer upon him a summa cum laude for his wholly admirable new book. Sarah Orne Jewett, the 19th in a series on United States authors, published by Twayne of New York City and edited by Sylvia Bowman of Indiana University. He has done a first-class piece of work. Let us bring out the orchids and the laurel wreaths! Or perhaps a sprig of fresh Maine bayberry would be even more welcome both to him and to Miss Jewett! Colby College, the State of Maine, New England, and the United States of America ought to be vastly proud of him and of his book. For it is an honour conferred upon us all.

This book, moreover, needed to be written. Former biographers and critics of Sarah Orne Jewett and of her eclectic and, at their best, incomparable literary achievements have all been unsatisfactory because they have been scanty and sparing. Richard Cary has done all those things which they ought to have done, but just didn't do. He has been painstaking and thorough, whereas they were only skimpy, exhaustive where they were but superficial. He has studied with utmost care everything which she wrote, the mediocre together with the magnificent. Now we can truly see her as she was, fumbling in uncongenial fields, rising to her highest stature — and very high it was! — in the short stories, A White Heron and Miss Tempy's Watchers, to name but two of her best, and in her inimitable masterpiece, The Country of the Pointed Firs.

The plan of his book is as admirable as is its total effect, which, of course, the plan makes possible. To me, at least, to whom Sarah Orne Jewett has been an unattainable ideal since I began to write about Maine people and places, Professor Cary's most illuminating and indispensable chapter is his second, in which he presents with utmost clearness and marked originality the background of Miss Jewett's work, that "lovely, lonely country" of the Maine coast; the innate characteristics of the people with whom she deals; and, in fine detail and thorough analysis, the "broad and fairly simple" themes, eight in number, which she subtly, yet so carefully develops. Such an examination as this is of immeasurable value.

A following chapter with equal pains considers tone and atmosphere, and those matters of technical skill and workmanship by which the atmosphere is gained. Miss Jewett's felicitous style; her singular sense of the comic; her use of pathos with, in her best work, no slightest trace of the sentimental; the universal nature of her characters, on the one hand, and, on the other, their "ingenuous" sensitiveness to the moods and the meanings of universal Nature itself; — these are the subjects to which Professor Cary gives, with constant care and obvious devotion, his fine and delicate critical powers.

The latter half of his book is a survey, complete and fascinating, of Miss Jewett's work in its entirety. Nothing is omitted. Not one of her former biographers and critics, in book or periodical, has so much as attempted such a classification, such a thorough appraisal of her sketches, short stories, writings for children, pedestrian verse, quite undistinguished history, and her final, perhaps only indisputable masterpiece, published in 1896 and known to countless readers as The Country of the Pointed Firs. A final chapter echoes and repeats the praises of other well-known writers, most of whom were also her friends; Henry James, William Dean Howells, James Russell Lowell, Willa Cather, Rudyard Kipling, Van Wyck Brooks.

To say that any book is definitive is to suggest that no other on the same subject is, or will be needed. Yet the temptation is surely to say just that about Professor Cary's presentation of Sarah Orne Jewett. For his close scrutiny is so detailed, his analyses so complete, his range so unbounded, that his subject seems at last to have received that full and final treatment which she has for half a century and more richly deserved.

And what about the author himself? Not the great lady about whom he writes, but him, the Colby professor, scholar, curator of rare books and manuscripts? How has he managed to enlighten and to entice us all? Perhaps the nicest thing I can possibly say about him in relation to his readers — and how I enjoy saying it! — is that he makes us all feel as though we knew as much as he knows. We don't, of course; but we love the compliment! In his generous clarity throughout his 175 pages he makes us feel as if we were sitting with him in Almira Todd's house at Dunnet Landing and listening to old, familiar, cherished truths, once known but perhaps forgotten, about our own State of Maine, our own people, and the immortal heritage which they have given us through the mind and the hands of our most distinguished author, whom he has made to live again in all her grace and genius.

No one should fail to read this book. Of course, only the completely unredeemable will allow themselves to miss it!

Sarah Orne Jewett, by Richard Cary. United States Authors Series, Twayne Publishers, New York City (1962).

PROFESSOR RICHARD CARY received his doctorate at Cornell, teaching there before coming to Colby in 1952. Editor of the Colby Library Quarterly and director of the Colby College Press, he has been curator of the Edwin Arlington Robinson Treasure Room since 1958 where he has concentrated on collecting the works of Maine authors — native or by adoption. Dr. Cary is a graduate of New York University.

MARY ELLEN CHASE, well-known for her novels and literary and religious studies, has also been attentive to Maine authors. A native of the state herself, she is an honorary graduate of Colby (L.H.D., 1937) and now teaches at Smith College. She has given the college many of her personal diaries, letters, and notes as well as manuscript editions of her works; the latest of the latter was The Psalms for the Common Reader published by W. W. Norton last March. The Alumnus is most indebted to Miss Chase for her gracious consent to review Professor Cary's book on Sarah Orne Jewett.

Sesquicentennial Convocation

The theme of this three-day meeting, The Heritage of Mind in a Civilization of Machines, was approached quite differently by each of the speakers.

Oscar Handlin, Winthrop Professor of History at Harvard: "In their first encounters with the machine some men, like Melville, already recognized it as a monstrous defiance of natural order and shuddered at the possible consequences. Their . . . contemporaries however were mostly dazzled by the enormous utility of the machine. But when it later lost its familiarity and became identified with the magic of science the old terror welled up; they would be punished for the use of that forbidden fire that was of such great service to them. It wells up in us still."

concern. . . What we are really afraid of is man himself. . . By becoming less-like rather than more-like the machines we have created, can we tower over [them]. . . Only then can we gain the incalculable fruits of our own scientific ingenuity and achieve the ultimate freedom they promise from dullness, drudgery, and despair."

Yet, throughout the addresses, this thought was implicit: man's realization of his creative possibilities depends entirely on his ability to achieve a relationship between himself and the aspects and creatures of his environment. When Robert Louis Stevenson wrote "Success comes while we are having fun" he voiced that belief in the joy, liveliness, thoughtfulness, creativity differentiating man from subman. The speakers intimated this. A man at one with his milieu sees the possibilities of human life.

Music School

THE NEW Colby summer school of music, beginning its first year next summer, will have the Juilliard String Quartet as resident instructors for six weeks during July and August. Violinists Robert Mann and Isidore Cohen, violist Raphael Hillyer and cellist Claus Adam have made this one of the world's most celebrated ensembles.

Called the "wunder-quartett", the Juilliard, last fall, had the distinction of being the first American quartet to go to Soviet Russia on a tour in which they visited many middle and far eastern lands. They played at Colby in November for one of the Music Associates' concerts.

Details of curriculum and enrollment in the music school are still being worked out in cooperation with the quartet and the school's director, Professor Peter Re of the Colby music faculty, but President Strider noted that they would present a series of lecture-recitals during the summer. "The availability of the Juilliard String Quartet to teach chamber music will enable Colby to offer summer students an unusually rich experience. . ." the president said in announcing this newest addition to the college's summer program.

At the panel discussion, moderated by President Strider, participants Stanton, Piel and Handlin explored the problems inspired by automation in our world.

. . . invoke the deep and diverse knowledge of the nature of matter and the forces of nature. . . A true comprehension of the heritage of science would show that much else is possible. . . Our increasing numbers, the progressive wasting of our resources and the . . . threat . . . of mass destruction compel us now to come to terms with one another and with our natural environment. . . There are already eight barren planets on orbit around the sun."

Frank Stanton, president of Columbia Broadcasting System: "To be concerned about the mind and its heritage . . . when it is displaying itself in the greatest richness of achievement seems to me a misplaced

Professor Walter Breckenridge, as he was honored at Colby Night for his many years at the college, with Professor Pullen who read the tribute to the veteran economics teacher.

Homecoming

A TASTE OF WINTER — replete with nine inches of snow — greeted homecomers on October 26. Seaverns Field, though, looked like California: the buildings and grounds men under superintendent George Whalon swept the gridiron clean and green.

The 58th annual Colby Night was dedicated to Walter Breckenridge, for thirty-five years a professor and now chairman of the economics department. Professor Robert Pullen read a testimonial to "Breck," who joins Bill Millett, Dean Marriner, Professor Chapman and Professor Weeks who have had Colby weekends of their own.

Remarking on Breckenridge's generous contribution to the life of the college, Pullen said: "Since coming to Colby . . . [he] has seen rather startling changes occur here and . . . can take honest pride in the direct part he has played in many of them. . . . To me, the basis of Breck's very substantial share in the progress of Colby as well as his tremendous influence on the students can be summed up in one word — respect. Very few . . . here have been held in such high esteem as he. . . ."

Pullen recalled Breckenridge's kind, but firm, control when he was proctor at Hedman Hall (and Pullen was a student), and stated: "As a teacher Professor Breckenridge is famous for his ability to present difficult material in a clear, concise way. . . . Perhaps the most frequent remark made by alumni as they look back on 'Ecce with Brecky' is that it was one of the toughest courses they took at Colby but one of the best."

"The story of his role in the growth of the college," Pullen continued, "[requires] reference to his long and valuable service on almost every major committee . . . some . . . appointive by the president, others elective by the faculty." Among these is the committee on standing: "It is a difficult task under the best of circumstances . . . [and] it was under these circumstances that Professor Breckenridge showed most clearly that rare combination of a deep concern for high academic standards and a very human understanding of the problems of the individual student . . . he keeps in mind our goal of excellence, tempered by a recognition that college is a complex enterprise and its people are subject to very human weaknesses."

John W. Deering, Jr. of Cape Elizabeth was elected Colby "C" Club Man of the Year at the festivities. President of the Portland Colby Alumni Club and a member of the Alumni Council, Deering was introduced by athletic director Lee Williams as a "vigorous and constant supporter of all Colby Programs."

Campaign Manager

The Ford Foundation Challenge Campaign has a general campaign manager: Gordon B. Jones, 1947. The position involves promotional work: enlisting area chairmen, encouraging their efforts, and generally overseeing the progress of the drive.

A trustee since 1956, and a member of Colby's 1940 class, Jones is vice-president of John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company in Boston. An outstanding hockey player during his college years, he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, and continued post graduate study at Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, where he earned his master's degree. Jones joined the John Hancock staff in 1948. He lives in Needham, Massachusetts, with his wife, the former Geraldine Steffko, 1941, and their six children.

Jack Deering is congratulated by athletic director Lee Williams as he is named "C" Club Man of the Year.

Three juniors at Homecoming (not Winter Carnival) sculpt a polar bear out of snow. The LCA members — Jack Gibbons (Port Washington, N. Y.), Tom Andrews (Medford, N. J.), and Don Oberg (Portland) — expressed their hopes by crowning the Bowdoin totem with a well-aimed pumpkin. But the visitors squeaked to a 13-12 win.

Thomas More Storke, recipient of the Lovejoy Award and (right), Paul Veblen with President Strider.

Lovejoy Convocation

EMPHASIZING that a newspaper must stand, openly and fearlessly, for what it believes, Paul Veblen, executive editor of the Santa Barbara News-Press accepted the annual Elijah Parish Lovejoy Award for Thomas More Storke, the paper's president and publisher.

Mr. Storke, unable to attend because of Maine's climatic rigors (he is 86), has edited the California paper since January 1, 1900. In the intervening years the News-Press has taken many outspoken stands, the latest and most celebrated being an expose of the activities of the John Birch Society in Santa Barbara. Last year he won the Lauterbach Award in the field of civil liberties by "pointing out the dangers to American freedom created by extremists of the radical right." Mr. Storke also was awarded a Pulitzer Prize for this latest campaign.

The dean of California publishers is the 11th Lovejoy Fellow, following such notable newspapermen as James S. Pope (Courier Journal and the Louisville Times), 1952; Irving Dilliard (St. Louis Post Dispatch), 1953; James Russell Wiggins (Washington Post), 1954; Charles A. Sprague (Oregon Statesman), 1955; Arthur Hays Sulzberger (The New York Times), 1956; Buford Boone (Tuscaloosa News), 1957; John N. Heiskell (Arkansas Gazette), 1958; Clark R. Mollenhoff (The Cowles Publications), 1959; Ralph McGill (Atlanta Constitution), 1960; and Bernard Kilgore (Wall Street Journal), 1961.

The convocation, named for the 1826 Colby graduate killed in 1837 for his unpopular views on slavery and other subjects, was preceded by a dinner attended by Mr.

Veblen and some ninety members of the press. At that affair, Dean Marriner addressed a few remarks to Lovejoy's memory, speaking on his direct and unswerving approaches to people and occurrences. The college historian noted that the free press martyr had avoided the obsequies and flourishes common to writing of that time before he began his undergraduate years at the college.

It was quite evident after hearing Mr. Storke's address (read by Mr. Veblen) that he and Lovejoy share, with other great journalists, a basic belief in, and adherence to, cohesive and honest expression of belief.

In honor of newsmen

The professional chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, which created the Academy of New England Journalists in 1960, voted to accept the invitation of Colby College to locate the academy on its campus after consideration of many sites throughout the six-state region.

The chapter is deeply appreciative of the energetic and positive attitude of President Strider and other officials of Colby and their readiness to cooperate in making the academy a living tribute to those New England men and women who have made a significant contribution to journalism.

WITH THESE WORDS, Thomas K. Brindley, president of the New England chapter of the national journalistic society, revealed the choice of the college as the permanent home of the Academy's archives and records. Mr. Brindley noted that the announcement coincided with National Newspaper Week and the 125th anniversary of Elijah Lovejoy's martyrdom.

In greeting this news, Dr. Strider stated "It is fitting that this college, dedicated to the pursuit of truth, should be more closely aligned with the newspaper profession. Free speech and a free press are powerful forces in human history and Colby proudly accepts any responsibility that will help them endure."

The Academy will be located in Miller Library, near the Lovejoy memorial; here will be housed the names of recipients of the Yankee Quill Award, the accompanying citations, and other pertinent data. A newspaper file from the New England states will also be maintained.

The Irish writer, Sean O'Faolain, lectured in October, replying to C. P. Snow's contention that a chasm exists between art and science today.

Of fifteen journalists elected to the Academy since its founding, seven have had Colby associations. The late Sevellon Brown (Providence Journal-Bulletin) was a charter member of the Lovejoy Fellow selection committee; Erwin Canham (Christian Science Monitor) and Herbert Brucker (Hartford Courant) are currently on that committee.

The late William J. Pape (Waterbury Republican and American) headed the newspapermen's group raising funds for the construction of the Lovejoy Building, and the late Guy P. Gannett (Portland Press Herald and Express) was a generous contributor and original member of the building committee. The late Arthur G. Staples (Lewiston Journal) also was active in this group as well as James M. Langley (Concord Monitor [N.H.]).

Other journalists elected to the Academy include the late George F. Booth (Worcester Telegram-Gazette), Minnie Ryan Dwight (Holyoke Transcript Telegram), James Morgan (Boston Globe), Norris Osborn (New Haven Journal Courier), Waldo Cook (Springfield Republican); and Henry B. Hough (Vineyard Gazette), David Brickman (Malden Evening News, Medford Mercury [MASS.]), and David Patten (Providence Journal Bulletin). Names of all these men and subsequent electees will be engraved on a plaque at the Academy's site.

✿ PRESIDENT STRIDER will serve on the advisory board to the African Student Service. A $25,000 grant from the Spaulding-Potter Charitable Trusts (New Hampshire) to the 43-year old World University Service in New York has made this new program possible. The board will offer African students counseling on cultural adjustment, and information on scholarship services, housing, part-time and summer employment.

Dr. Strider, a member of the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, has also been designated as the Association's official delegate to the College Entrance Examination Board. He will serve a two-year term until 1964.

✿ J. SEELYE BIXLER, president-emeritus of Colby, is visiting the Far East during the next seven months in a program of cultural exchange under the sponsorship of the U. S. Department of State.

Prior to leaving for overseas, Dr. and Mrs. Bixler conferred with officials at Indiana University which has had a lengthy association with Thammasart University in Bangkok, Thailand, where Dr. Bixler is a counsellor to the administration.

Founded in 1932 as a vocational institution with schools of law, public administration, business and finance and journalism Thammasart now intends to introduce a program of liberal arts, including philosophy and the humanities. Dr. Bixler is aiding in the introduction of this new program and will remain until March, when he will begin an extended speaking tour, arranged by the Department of State. His lectures will be mostly before university and college groups (in India, Japan, the Philippines, and Formosa), on topics similar to the Phi Beta Kappa lectures he presented throughout the U. S. this past year.

Grants

THE NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION has awarded $1,860 to Colby College for support of an Undergraduate Science Education Program, under the direction of Professor James L. Fozard of the college's department of education and psychology. This is this year's second NSF award to Colby for a project under Professor Fozard's direction; in May, $2,590 was granted to conduct studies in visual perception.

The most recent program will be a three-year cooperative effort between the Jackson Memorial Laboratory in Bar Harbor and Colby. Six students, two each academic year, will participate.

According to Harry C. Kelly, associate director of educational and international activities for the foundation, the grant will "offer research and independent study ex-

This exchange grant was made possible by the January Program of Independent Study, initiated last year. At that time Nancy Ela, 1963 (Wayland, Mass.) worked at Jackson Memorial Laboratory with Dr. Frank Bronson of the research center's staff.

Occasions

The wide range of theme in campus lectures, concerts, and exhibitions continues during the midwinter; some of these events are listed below. They do become occasions — for many of the visiting speakers and artists, who spend much more than just a few hours at the college, talk with faculty and students in class and informally outside the classroom.

Discrimination

In order to remain active at Colby College, either as a national affiliate or a local group, each fraternity and sorority local undergraduate chapter must, prior to the Commencement meeting in 1965, satisfy the Board that it has the right to select its members without regard to race, religion, or national origin.

THUS DID THE board of trustees on November 2 further implement its order of November 4, 1961 when it voted a motion as being "strongly opposed" to discrimination in sororities and fraternities.

Other colleges and universities in the country who have set a firm date for the ending of restrictive membership clauses are Amherst, Columbia, Cornell, Dartmouth, California, Chicago, Colorado, Connecticut, Oregon State, Washington State, Vermont and Wisconsin.

NDEA

AT THE NOVEMBER 4 MEETING, the board, in view of the repeal in Congress of the disclaimer affidavit section of the National Defense Education Act, voted to participate once again in this program. However the board made it abundantly clear they were looking forward to repeal of other conditions still implicit in that legislation: the board went on record as "opposed to the sections of the amended legislation that contains invidious restrictions on loans insofar as the act establishes discriminatory non-academic conditions for the granting of loans to college students."

Scholarship Challenge

NEW HAMPSHIRE ALUMNI of Colby College have been issued a challenge to raise $15,000, which, if met, will mean the same amount in matching funds from the Spaulding-Potter Charitable Trusts of Concord. The sum, which must be on hand before June 1, 1966, will endow scholarships at Colby for students from that state.

President Strider reports on

NDEA LOAN POLICY

I THINK THERE HAS BEEN more misunderstanding among our alumni, alumnae, and other friends, in regard to the Colby position on the loan program of the National Defense Education Act than on practically any other recent college policy. Although the matter is now in the realm of history, this page seems to me an opportune and appropriate medium for clearing up possible misapprehensions.

As a condition for eligibility for government loans in the original NDEA as enacted in 1958, a student was required to file with his application (1) an oath of loyalty to the United States, and (2) the "disclaimer affidavit", a statement that he was not a member of, did not believe in, and did not support "any organization which believes in or supports the overthrow of the United States government by forcible means". Now, few people at Colby or much of anywhere else objected to the loyalty oath, except to note its inappropriateness in legislation of this kind. But the disclaimer affidavit involved an implication that struck at the heart of an American and thoroughly democratic institution, namely, freedom of belief. Our countrymen have long fought to defend this freedom, and a college community, of all places, should feel obliged to protect it in every possible way. During his college years a student should be free, if at any time he should be free, to stretch his mind to embrace ideas of all kinds, and to believe what he chooses. The college, in presenting for his scrutiny a range of ideas far broader than he is likely to have encountered before, encourages him to do so. A college would violate its principles if it were to draw a line and declare certain kinds of beliefs out of bounds, or to encourage in any way the setting of limits upon inquiry.

There are other objections to this provision. It is invidious in that, since it is only students to whom such a stipulation applies, it singles out students as more likely to be politically suspect than other categories of recipients of federal funds. It is ineffective, in that a subversive person who might try to apply for these funds would not hesitate to sign it. It is so vaguely worded as to run the danger of subjecting an innocent student in subsequent years to an ex post facto charge of perjury.

In January, 1959, the Colby faculty, after full discussion of these issues, voted to join the large company of participating but protesting institutions, and to review the question in two years. The two years went by and Congress did not remove the affidavit. Colby thereupon joined some thirty or so other institutions in withdrawing, as of June 30, 1962, from the loan program. The action of the Board of Trustees followed recommendation by a majority of those voting in a faculty meeting, a decision endorsed by the President. We needed the money, of course, but we felt that the principle was more important. It was agreed that substantial efforts be made to provide comparable funds from our own limited resources so that no student would be penalized. We realized too that the choice of applying or not applying for the loan funds under the NDEA provisions was up to the student, but we felt that an atmosphere in which such a choice is presented to students is alien to the kind of air a college campus should breathe. This should be especially true of a college proud of the Lovejoy tradition and of the heritage of freedom bequeathed to us by our Baptist founders.

In October, 1962, both houses of Congress passed legislation repealing the disclaimer affidavit, and President Kennedy has signed it into law. Certain non-academic provisions substituted for the disclaimer affidavit are objectionable, and the relief many of us feel over the removal of the affidavit requirement is somewhat tempered. Still, the most objectionable feature, the intrusion upon a student's private belief, has been removed. On the recommendation of the faculty, with the endorsement of the President, the Board of Trustees voted on November 2 to re-enter the NDEA loan program, at the same time expressing regret that the legislation still contains invidious non-academic discriminatory provisions, and the hope that Congress will see fit in due course to remove them.

This issue was a highly controversial one, and there were good arguments on both sides. It was decided at Colby, by the usual democratic means, that principle was involved. Colby can be proud of having taken a firm stand, anticipating considerable sacrifice, on this matter of principle. It was undoubtedly the resistance of those thirty some colleges and universities, including a number of the most distinguished institutions of learning in the country, that brought about the repeal.

BECAUSE ALUMNI are often called to advise young men and women regarding qualifications for entrance to the college, the Alumnus is presenting a statistical "profile" of the class of 1966, prepared by William L. Bryan, director of admissions.

This profile is more up-to-date, by a full year, than that recently published in the College Entrance Examination Board's Manual of Freshman Profiles and distributed, with similar profiles of other colleges, to principals and guidance counselors.

In talking with prospective students any alumnus should stress, as a counselor would stress, the fact that statistics such as these do not give the real picture of a college's "admissions policy." High-ranking and high-scoring students are sometimes passed over in favor of those whose "statistics" appear less impressive — though this is never done without a reason. But tables such as these do give useful information. The boy or girl with college board scores in the 700's can observe that he will have company — and the student with lower standing will know he must demonstrate compensating virtues to win out over applicants with academic qualifications equal to or better than his own.

These "compensating virtues," however — including the intangible qualities of character and motivation — are most difficult to assess. For this reason an alumnus who knows a prospective student well owes the college a letter. He will help add these dimensions to our assessment.

Carleton D. Brown, 1933, furnished the Alumnus with the chronology and details of the railroad relocation project. Quotations in this article have been taken from his notes recalling these events.

A New Role for the Old Campus

THE DEATH WARRANT for the old campus was written the day the first ground exploded on Mayflower Hill. After that, the reduction of downtown Colby to the status of relic was academic. Vacated, and despite the efforts of the college, a continuing mark for vandals, the antique buildings stood — like wise old aunts shaking warning fingers at a lively adventurous nephew.

As long as the structures were there, they were inhabited by a ghost, a nagging one that made one feel a little guilty about the plight of his domicile. With the demolition of the old Colby campus, the enfeebled shade hardly lingers. In his place is a memory of the elm-shaded, willowed walks that for nearly one hundred and forty years was a vital part of the educational life of Maine.

This is the tale of the death of a ghost — and something of the history of a project inspired by his malingering presence.

It was prior to 1941 that President Johnson had tried to interest the Maine Central Railroad in a plan to re-route its right-of-way through the old campus. Others had pushed for acceptance of this idea; vice president Galen Eustis, for one, continued the efforts but met with no success. The buildings began to deteriorate, as the college's money went toward the construction of the new campus. The land, itself, also lost value.

At a meeting of the buildings and grounds committee of the board of trustees in 1941, Carleton D. Brown again raised the issue. New to the committee (consisting also of President Bixler, Eustis, Florence Dunn, E. Richard Drummond, Dr. Johnson, and chairman Ellerton M. Jette), Brown proposed several arguments for the plan: elimination of 24-hour guards at the grade crossings on College Avenue and Front Street, elimination of the inherent hazard of level crossings, and, of course, an opportunity for Colby to dispose of this unsold land.

Not much hope — but plenty of encouragement — marked the committee's attitude. The college had been through this before. But Brown was given its blessing to try again. He recalls the first step:

"On November 18 [1954] Willard Jennison, then Colby's superintendent of buildings and grounds, and I drove to Portland to talk with officials of the rail-

A PORTRAIT OF Raymond Sloan

IN CONFERRING an honorary doctor of humane letters degree on Raymond P. Sloan in 1946, President Bixler cited him for "his practical interest in relieving human suffering [and] a more abstract concern for the life of ideas." Colby's president-emeritus noted that this combination "was helping improve the fine arts of . . . healing and teaching."

Certainly Mr. Sloan's ideas and devotion have improved those "fine arts". And, in Waterville, they have been especially felt for here he has helped create a philosophy of use of institutional facilities.

Hospitals were once described, as Mr. Sloan points out, as places where people went to die. At the same time, academic institutions bustled through winters only to lie idle in the summer. Today the hospital has become a different place: a center of research, rehabilitation, and study of public health. And colleges and universities have instituted summer programs, schools, and institutes that keep campuses in use all year.

As this shift in emphasis relates to Colby and Waterville's fine Thayer hospital, it is in no small way due to Raymond Sloan's began Colby's year round program. Now eighteen years old, the Institute on Hospital Administration continues to acquaint hospital officials with recent developments in that field. The speakers are expert, the best to be found, and the Institute schedule allows maximal use of the conferee's time. The success of this institute, a direct result of Mr. Sloan's tireless work, led to the founding by Colby of the eighteen other summer schools now held regularly on the campus.

Mr. Sloan has participated in other aspects of college affairs. Since 1951 he has been a trustee, serving today on the board's planning and development committees. His work in the Fulfillment Campaign was vital. As chairman of the foundation committee he was responsible for planning and coordinating this important phase of the effort. And his interest in the Institute has never flagged.

A warm, enthusiastic, caring man, impassioned with a love for humanity, Raymond Sloan continues to premise his life and activity on profound wish and imaginative concept — all to help make this world a better one.

Diploma signing for conferees (opposite page) takes some of Mr. Sloan's time, as well as regular attendance at the Hospital Administration Institute functions. Below, he and Dr. Frederick Hill during a lively Institute discussion.

presence and to his ideas and implementation of them.

A long friendship with Dr. Frederick T. Hill, 1910, initiated Mr. Sloan's activity in Waterville. As editor of Modern Hospital magazine, teacher at Columbia's School of Public Health and Administrative Medicine, and author of books — among them the pioneering Hospital Color and Decoration, his was an important contribution to the development of the hospital.

The step to Colby was quite predictable. With Dr. Hill's help, Mr. Sloan established the college's first summer institute — and football Only a few hardy fans huddled in the stands at Gargelon Field several Saturdays ago as the timer's gun barked an ending to the 1962 State Series. Anyone who braved the cold, wind and water that day in Lewiston admits the weather could not have been more miserable.

A drop of rain slid off John Simpson's nose as he caught a final glimpse of the scoreboard. "The sun was pouring down on me," he said later. "I felt as if I was in Florida and the temperature was in the eighties." The score read: Colby 16, Bates 12. A player — soiled, soaked and smiling — came splattering through the mud. He grabbed Simpson. "Coach," he bubbled. "This is the beginning!"

It didn't matter that the season was over. Nor did he care that the win over the Bobcats had brought the first taste of victory all season. The Mules had come into their own.

It was a long season for first-year coach Simpson, his assistants Charlie Holt, Ken Weinbel and John Winkin. It was a long season, too, for 33 White Mules who never gave up.

Senior fullback Dave Cox of Basking Ridge, N. J., scored three touchdowns for Colby in the season's opener, but Norwich came out on top 22-19.

Yankee Conference champion New Hampshire moved to Mayflower Hill the next Saturday with its finest team in more than a decade. The Mules stood fast and had an upset nearly within their grasp, but lost in the final go seconds as the Wildcats hit on a 75-yard fourth down desperation pass to win 18-14, the closest squeak in their undefeated season.

Next was Tufts, then Springfield, and Trinity on Parents Weekend. Talented Bowdoin won a 13-12 squeaker at the Colby Homecoming to begin State Series play. The following Saturday, eventual champion University of Maine, blanked the Mules 27-0.

The Mule team, however, was not to be denied at least one victory. Favored Bates got a battle that might have come from a squad riding a win streak. Colby won, Maine college football team. Both had been named to the All-East small college team of the Eastern College Athletic Conference. Bonalewicz was All-ECAC three times in the past two years. Smith was the only unanimous All-State choice.

A pair of linemen was elected to replace Smith and Charlie Carey (Fall River, Mass.) as co-captains. Named were center Ken Palmer (Needham, Mass.) and Robert Drewes (Pelham, N. Y.).

The Paul "Ginger" Fraser award, honoring Colby's immortal grid great (1914), went to Bob Hodge, non-letterman halfback from Mountain Lakes, N. J.

President Strider spoke at the break-up dinner. He congratulated the squad for maintaining high and grabbed a one-third slice of second place series honors.

Hermon "Binky" Smith, a brilliant breakaway halfback who ran back the opening kickoff for a score against Bates, was presented the Wadsworth Award as the team's most valuable player at the season-ending dinner.

The senior co-captain from Marblehead, Mass., scampered 426 yards on six TD runs, all on punt or kickoff returns, averaging 71 yards.

For the second year, both Smith of Marblehead, Mass., and lineman Dick Bonalewicz (Fall River, Mass.) were selected for the official Portland Sunday Telegram All-spirits. "You gave a good account of yourself," he said, "and all of us at Colby are proud of you."

SOCCER Less than a decade ago, as far as Colby College was concerned, soccer was a mysterious sport played in Europe. When Gilbert "Mike" Loebs brought the game to Mayflower Hill in 1954, hardly anyone even noticed.

For five years the game was played on an informal basis. In 1959, soccer gained major status and Mike's team went undefeated. Under his direction, the soccer men went seven seasons and 29 consecutive victories before losing their first game in 1960.

This past season, Colby entered the longest campaign ever, facing an 11-game slate. But it was quite another thing that made this campaign a significant one — statewide. With Bowdoin and Bates both supporting teams, the Maine Intercollegiate Athletic Association was prepared to declare a formal championship.

Colby won six of its first seven games, losing only to powerful Springfield, before the series lid-lifter against Bates. The Mules were decisively successful in that first battle, winning 7-1. They next nipped Bowdoin in a 1-0 thriller.

The same Bates team, on their home field, upset the Mules 4-3. In Waterville, Nov. 13, Bowdoin and Colby, both sporting 2-1 records, squared off for the championship.

Colby scored the first two goals, but the Polar Bears knotted the score 2-2 before the final gun. Neither team hit in the 10-minute overtime, as the first championship was divided.

James Valhouli, a native of Greece, and Al Andrews of Westtown, Pa., were elected co-captains for 1963 when the University of Maine will have a team in the running for the MIAA title.

At last an ancient European game has achieved major status in the state, and much credit must be given to the bespectacled "father of Maine soccer," Mike Loebs.

track With the addition of a new track coach at Colby, the athletic department has actually "rolled out the red carpet" for running enthusiasts. Ken Weinbel, who recently assumed track duties at the college, is ready to give his cindermen the "royal" treatment. The 475-foot oval inside Wadsworth Fieldhouse has been reconstructed and is now the only one of its type in the state. The track was re-graded and re-shaped. Selected gravel was used for a base, covered with a layer of bituminous material. This was surfaced with a one-inch thick mixture of cork, asbestos, asphalt and sand, then covered with the "red carpet" of brilliant stucco paint.

hockey Dave Sveden, outstanding Colby forward, appears on the cover of the 1963 Official Collegiate-Scholastic Ice Hockey Guide, published by the National Collegiate Athletic Association. The Needham, Mass., native was ninth in the East with 55 points last season and was a member of the All-East Small-College first squad. Notes about the cover, inside the guide, say: "Dave Sveden of Colby, as a sophomore last season, centered the White Mule's front line which scored 219 points, just three short of the collegiate record set by a 1961 Colby trio. The slender math major netted 27 goals and assisted on 28 others. He was taught rink rudiments by his late father in grueling pre-dawn sessions at Boston Arena."

Kathryne Sturtevant Moore retired in June, completing 44 years of devoted service to teaching; for 43 of these years she taught French at Westerly (R. I.) High School. She had also served in the additional position of class advisor since 1940. A great favorite among her students, her love for France and the French language gave her pupils a real knowledge of that country and its people.

A letter from Sterling Dow, Librarian, Harvard's Widener Library, came to President Strider commending Dorothy Rounds for her work in compiling of an index of the honorific volumes in the classics. Speaking of the volume, Mr. Dow said: "It contains some 35,000 entries. . . . There is nothing comparable . . . in print. . . . Miss Rounds did all the filing and much the larger part of the indexing herself. She mastered enough Roman Law, for instance, to complete what no one else could be found to do. Miss Rounds has had no special leave, no special grant, and no compensation other than the praise which scholars are now bestowing upon her." The book, published this month by Harvard University Press, has been ten years in the making under the Arlington (Mass.) High School Latin teacher's guidance.

Ashley Bickmore has been elected a director of Marts and Lundy, a New York fund raising firm he has been associated with since 1952.

At the University of Maine's commencement exercises in June, a honorary degree was conferred on Clyde Russell. The citation accompanying that award, after summarizing his 18 years as teacher and principal of Winslow High School and his four years on the Colby faculty, spoke of his "present position as executive secretary of the Maine Teacher's association and editor of its publication, the Maine Teacher."

"In recognition of your outstanding service to Maine education as a teacher; school administrator, college faculty member, association executive, and editor during more than 40 years, for your perseverance in championing the causes which have benefited the teachers of Maine and the children in their classes, the trustees of the University of Maine are happy to confer on you the honorary degree of doctor of pedagogy."

Citing Dr. Hill's achievements, awards, and range of professional honors and services, Tol Terrell, administrator of San Angelo's Shannon West Texas Memorial Hospital, stated: "It has been said—and we believe rightly so—that Dr. Hill has probably done more in the field of medicine than any other person to bring better care to the sick in the State of Maine." He concluded the tribute, citing Dr. Hill for "exceptional contributions toward the maintenance of continued good relations between the medical profession and hospital administration . . . for his profound interest and positive action toward the improvement of the management of hospitals."

REPRODUCTION FROM A SERIES. "PORTLAND IN THE 19TH CENTURY."

COPYRIGHT 1950, THE CANAL NATIONAL BANK OF PORTLAND, MAINE

Passing of a Landmark

ONCE started on its way commercially, Portland grew apace. By 1830 there were 8 manufacturers of tin plate in the town, 3 of brass and iron, 3 furnaces for casting iron, 6 tanneries, 5 ropewalks. Besides these, there were clock and watch makers, carriage and coach builders, and many other industries, including numerous ship and boat builders.

All these activities meant prosperity for the people of Portland. Her younger citizens then wanted the outward marks of a prosperous city — modern buildings, paved streets, new hotels for travelers. Among the old buildings marked by them for replacement by a modern structure was the old First Parish Church.

Rumors were spread that decay had so weakened the spire that it was unsafe to ring the bell. For months thereafter, the beautifully-toned bell stood mute and after much discussion it was decided to raze the spire, move the old church back on the lot, and build the present stone edifice.

When men tried to saw through the immense oak beams it was learned that fears of decay had been unfounded. After sawing and chopping as much as they could, and attaching a rope to the spire, pulling the rope with a strong team of horses served only to break the rope — the spire stood unmoved. Fearless men had to climb into the spire and saw it almost completely away from the church roof before it could be downed.

One John Hall, a Portland boat-builder, was a keenly interested observer of the proceedings. About 1812 he had designed and made a breech-loading rifle. This was a revolutionary idea to most Portlanders and they scoffed at Hall's claims for its accuracy. To prove his success in designing, he had, on a wager, stood at the foot of Temple Street and aimed at the weather vane of the old church on Congress Street. Hall claimed that he put a bullet through the vane, but this was doubted by many. When the spire toppled, however, there, as proof of his claim, was the bullet hole. In the war of 1812 Hall's patent was purchased by the United States Government, and he was employed to superintend the manufacture of his rifle at Harpers Ferry.

The Fund for Continuing Achievement

A Record of Giving

As your Alumni Secretary, nothing gives me greater pleasure than to thank all of you who so generously gave support to your College during the recent Fund for Continuing Achievement campaign. Colby has a great deal to be proud of and you, her alumni and other friends, can in turn feel a great sense of pride and accomplishment for all you have done to make the hopes and dreams become reality.

The report which follows includes the names of all alumni, friends and honorary degree holders who contributed to the Fund or gave restricted gifts to the College during 1961-62. In a separate section of the report, you will find the names of those who are members of leadership clubs by virtue of having contributed designated amounts as indicated:

Presidents Club $1,000 and up
Pace Setters Club $500 to $999
Associates Club $250 to $499
Touchdown Club $100 to $249

I wish to particularly thank Dr. Sam Feldman, 1926, Alumni Fund Chairman, for the outstanding job he did and the amount of time he devoted in spite of the pressures of his busy medical practice. His efforts and those of his committee members led the way to this highly successful year during which a total of $139,297 in restricted and unrestricted funds was contributed.

Certainly my letter of appreciation would not be complete if I didn't wholeheartedly thank our Colby Class Agents for their individual efforts, not only during the fund campaign but continuously through the years. They, through their class letters, strengthen the vital bond between classmates and the College.

As we face the challenge of the Ford Foundation's tremendous grant to our College, I know that—as in past challenges—Colby alumni have the strength of purpose and devotion which has brought victories in other eras during Colby's 150-year history.

For the next three years, the Fund will be merged with the Colby Ford Foundation Challenge Campaign and your gifts and pledges will be credited to the alumni fund for continuity of giving.

I wish that I could have the opportunity to thank each of you personally for your loyalty to and generous support of your College. I'm convinced that no college has such a wonderful group of alumni and my pride in you increases each year as I work for Colby in what is truly a labor of love.
