Editorial Notes

Our Magazine.

A distinguished graduate of the College, now dead, wrote a letter of protest to the ALUMNUS many years ago saying in substance that he did not approve the publication, that it was nothing but a "flash in the pen", by which he meant, because he said so in plain language, that he was only squandering the price of the subscriptions, which he enclosed, on a magazine that would not last the year through. The editor sent back the dollar with the naive rejoinder that he could be no party to receiving money under false pretenses! A few years after this felicitous exchange of letters the distinguished graduate passed away, and the ALUMNUS was called upon to announce his death and to chronicle the events of his long and useful life. Thus Fate plays havoc with human predictions. Today our magazine enters upon its eighteenth year with a larger subscription list than ever before, with more warm friends than it ever hoped to have, and with finer and clearer purposes than have hitherto guided it. Its general aims have been all through the years to keep the graduates thoroughly informed about every phase of college life, to present the pressing needs of the institution, to aid the administration in carrying on its various campaigns, and to evidence to the general public that Colby is in every sense of the term a Christian college, a safe place to which to send boys and girls. These aims have been achieved in part through editorial expression on a great variety of subjects that were of vital interest, through countless pages of matter that chronicled the achievements of the graduates, and through hundreds of pages devoted to special articles contributed by the most influential men and women counted in our graduate body. The present editor has edited and managed the magazine for the past 11 years, and prior to 1917 was closely identified with it. During these eleven years more than 2,700 pages of reading matter with over 2,000 illustrations have been printed, or a total of 1,800,000 words. If these single lines of type were placed end to end they would extend for a distance of more than 12 miles! Each volume averages a book of 250 pages, with approximately 170,000 words, which is from 25,000 to 50,000 words more than are in the average novel. For the first ten years of its existence the price of the magazine was kept at one dollar, but with the increase in the cost of printing it was found necessary to increase the price to two dollars. For every page of printed matter the price of three dollars is paid. Half-tone illustrations have proved increasingly expensive. And when it becomes necessary, as is frequently the case, to circularize the graduate body of approximately 4,000 twice and sometimes thrice, postage and labor and printing take a large part of the money received from the 600 to 800 subscribers. This year for the first time in its history the magazine will have nearly 1,000 readers, and for the first time in its long history it will be near the self-supporting stage. Like all such enterprises, it has gone through dark days and bright, the zeal of the editor has flagged and brightened, but through it all there has been no disposition otherwise than to see the enterprise go forward on its career of helpfulness to the College of which it is, it trusts, a useful part.

The Gymnasium Campaign.

Elsewhere in the ALUMNUS is printed the long list of contributors to the Gymnasium Fund. Since the last report many names have been added to the list, and a satisfactory increase made in the total amount pledged. One might well wish that it were larger, but in view of the fact that there has been no personal solicitation, and no campaign methods employed, the results are in no sense disappointing. A most gratifying response to a single letter-appeal has come from the "friends of the College". To the total amount already pledged of approximately $52,000, there can be added two hitherto unannounced pledges of $10,000 each, which brings the grand total to over $70,000. There are yet to be heard from some 700 graduates of the College and a great host of loyal friends of the institution to whom no urgent appeal has been made. Of the total amount pledged, exclusive of the two special gifts mentioned above, $30,000 has already reached the treasurer of the College and is now in the bank drawing interest. It is safe then to predict that the goal is not far off, and that an intensive campaign among a comparatively few people will bring in the sum needed to warrant the beginning of construction upon a $100,000 building.

A Forward-looking Step.

For a month and more the idea of engaging the services of a full-time man for the express work of raising money for the College has been under earnest discussion. It was felt that no man or group of men could accomplish what is desired without unrelenting toil and singleness of purpose. It was also felt that the raising of money for a new gymnasium is but incidental to a larger program of constructive effort for the College, and that the man to be engaged for the work should extend his labors over a series of years and lay a broad foundation for a larger structure. At a meeting of the special committee on the new gymnasium held recently in Boston it was unanimously voted to employ the services of such a man, and it was further voted that his salary should be paid for out of private pockets and not out of the treasury of the College. The committee immediately employed Mr. Charles S. Brown, of Augusta, and he has already entered upon his labors. Mr. Brown is eminently well qualified for this particular work, and has demonstrated his ability to carry through successfully money-raising enterprises. Within recent months he has conducted successful campaigns in Bath, Gardiner, Augusta, and Withrop, Maine, in each instance exceeding the sum set as a goal, and in each case proving that careful business methods, and a happy spirit of cooperation, and the laying of broad foundations are the correct means to the great end. The special committee has felt that it would be better to await the appointment of a financial agent for the college before going forward with raising further funds. Now that definite action has been taken it is confidently expected that the campaign will be rapidly pushed to a close. The appointment of Mr. Brown marks a long step forward in the progress of the College. The idea of the appointment of a financial agent originated in the mind of Chairman Wadsworth of the Board of Trustees, and Mr. Brown is his selection for this important task. Every graduate of the College will give the most loyal support to Chairman Wadsworth and his associates in the vastly important work that they have to do.

A Needless Defense.

Among the contributed articles to the ALUMNUS is one by Professor Carl J. Weber, of the college faculty, on the "Causes for Optimism at Colby". It was first presented at the Men's Chapel, then at the Women's chapel, and then appeared in the Colby Echo. It has, therefore, had a fairly wide hearing. It was prompted by an article appearing in the Echo and written by an undergraduate whose sole purpose was to arouse discussion and popular interest. The reply made by a faculty member had the effect of dignifying an attack on the College, but no one took the attack or the defense over-seriously. The incident may be contrasted with the reply made recently by a New England governor whose character had been impeached by a legal antagonist. This governor offered no defense, for, he said, my long life of private and public service, lived among those who know me best, is the only answer needed. The ALUMNUS is glad to give space to this article for the reason that, apart from any reply to senseless attacks, it contains information that will be read with interest by graduates who are out of touch with the progress of the College. But the ALUMNUS wants it clearly understood that no defense of the College is needed at any time or place. The Board of Trustees and the College Faculty and the student body of the College know exactly whither we are bound. And the rudder that keeps us true to our course is the experience gained through the more than one hundred years of collegiate existence—years strewn with lives well lived by countless men and women who sought and found their ideals in college halls. It is therefore desired that Professor Weber's excellent article may be read as a calm and well expressed statement of what the College is yet seeking to do, and not as the scream of an imagined nigger caught red-handed in the proverbial wood-pile.

CHAIRMAN WADSWORTH
Board of Trustees

New Members of the Faculty.

The resignation of Professor William J. Wilkinson, of the department of history during the summer, made it necessary for the committee of the Board of Trustees to act quickly if a man to head the department would be ready for work in September. The committee was most fortunate in finding available a man of recognized scholastic ability and worth of character, and the appointment of George Loveland Ridgeway, B.Litt., graduate of Princeton and of Oxford was announced. While his teaching experience has not been extensive, his excellent training well fits him for the tasks that await him here at the College. At Oxford he acted as tutor to special students of American History, and in America he prepared students at two important schools for college board examinations in history. He also taught for a year at Wesleyan University. A book by Professor Ridgeway on the subject of debt repudiations by our southern states during two critical periods of American history will come from the press very soon. Professor Ridgeway won prizes for public speaking while an undergraduate at Princeton, and while at Oxford he took part in the Oxford Union debates.—Six new members join the staff of instructors at Colby, three of them taking the places of instructors who have resigned. Walter N. Breckenridge, B.S., M.A., comes to the vacancy in the economics department. He is a graduate of Tufts in 1926 and later teaching-fellow in that college. He graduated with summa cum laude honors, and won membership in the Phi Beta Kappa Society. Alfred K. Chapman, A.B., A.M., graduate of Colby in 1925, fills a vacancy in the English department. He took his Master's degree at Harvard. Mr. Chapman was a very excellent student while in Colby. He is the son of the late Wilford G. Chapman, of the class of 1882. Another instructor in the English department is John R. Walden, a graduate of Harvard, and the recipient of his Master's degree from the same institution in 1928. These two instructors will have courses in English Composition. Because of increased enrollment in the French department, Arthur C. Wallace, A.B., has been added to the staff. He is a graduate of Harvard, with cum laude honors. For a year he was instructor in French at the Berkshire School at Sheffield, Mass. He has had excellent preparation for his work at Colby. Elmer C. Warren, B.S., a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, comes to fill a vacancy in the instructorship in the department of mathematics. Mr. Warren has had teaching experience in M. I. T. and in the Manlius School. He is the son of Ambrose B. Warren, A.B., of the class of 1899. To fill the vacancy in the instructorship in biology, Harold S. Fish, B.S., was appointed. He is a graduate of Bowdoin College in the class of 1925, and has spent two years in the Jefferson Medical College. During part of last year he assisted in the biology department of Bowdoin. Mr. Fish is a Waterville boy, the son of Dr. Edmund P. Fish, one of the city's leading physicians.—The foregoing gives but a very brief sketch of the lives of the seven new members of the teaching force. The men have been selected with great care and in the light of what their duties would be in a small college the size of Colby. Each and all of them have gone about their several tasks in most praiseworthy fashion, and excellent reports come of their classroom work. The College is most fortunate in the type of men secured.

Our Fitting Schools.

The ALUMNUS is glad to give space to reports on the opening of Colby's four fitting-schools. It rejoices with the school authorities of these four splendid Maine institutions over the progress in the making, the large registration, evidences of material growth, and, best of all, over the carefully laid plans for future up-building. While a reading of the four reports will quickly disclose that some are more prosperous than others, yet it is well to remember that schools have their ups-and-downs like the average individual, and that oftentimes the darkest days presage auspicious tomorrows. Two of the schools, namely Hebron and Ricker, have introduced radical changes. Hebron has become in recent years a boys' school, and her report of magnificent progress would seem to bear out the wisdom of those who are responsible for the change. Ricker early foresaw the need of meeting peculiar needs in a far-off section of the State, and ventured upon the plan of a Junior College. It is attracting numbers to it and seems to be meriting the hearty support of many of the school's influential graduates. The authorities have been encouraged to see the experiment through, and Colby stands ready to cooperate in every way possible. Higgins Institute is in a most healthful state, following along the old lines of co-education, and sees no reason to change. Coburn Institute has had to cut down its teaching staff and to exercise the greatest economy in order to meet current expenses. The extensive drive for funds undertaken two years ago did not reach the goal hoped for, but those in authority give the assurance that the school was never in a more hopeful condition, financially and otherwise. It is passing through one of those readjustment years which in and of themselves are full of hope and promise. Coburn has a long list of distinguished graduates who have never failed to provide for her needs. On the whole, the four sources of Colby's student wealth are in a satisfactory condition, with high achievements just ahead.

The contributions of "Eighty-Odd" to the ALUMNUS have rapidly gained a wide hearing and have become an important feature of the magazine. The first contribution that this fascinating writer sent in prompted the editor to exact from him a promise that he would continue them from time to time, either as need required or as "the spirit moved". Each year he has made his happy report of the annual Commencement, and now he has ventured to offer another article based on his experiences of a summer day's visit to the campus. It is most readable—entertaining, informing, and full of rich sentiment. It touches in its most serious vein upon an important matter; and while he takes the editor roundly to task for not following up his previously expressed suggestions, he will discover, if he looks over the editorial notes appearing in the last ten years, that attention has more than once been called to the need of campus beautification. No one will disagree with him on his conclusions. Everybody will be glad that he has presented the matter in the spirit of his sage comments, with no desire to hurt but with a deep longing for action. The ALUMNUS likes the style of Eighty-Odd's contributions. His articles are always packed full of sentiment; he does not hesitate to call a spade a spade; and yet never does he resort to the sting that leaves a smart. No one can be offended. Everybody will feel inspired. Long may his facile pen happily portray the scenes of his youth and point out the needs that seem most pressing. In this wish numberless graduates will join, for scores of them have already written the editor urging that "Eighty-Odd" be made a permanent member of the staff. His identity remains a secret except to the editor of the ALUMNUS. The writer has felt, and rightly so, that he can be freer to set forth his opinions and comments on men and matters if he is not called upon to defend his right to do so. That he is a graduate of standing and ability, deeply interested in his college, is sufficient testimonial.

"Left No Address."

The publication on another page of the ALUMNUS of the names of several hundred graduates calls attention to the very great importance of closer cooperation between graduate and college. The total number of men and women who have studied at Colby, and are now living, is approximately 4,000. They are scattered over the two hemispheres. Obviously, to keep up a mailing acquaintance with this number is an undertaking of some magnitude and only by the exercise of the greatest care and persistent endeavor can correct mailing addresses be had. The ALUMNUS has put forth every endeavor to reduce the number of unknown addresses to a minimum, but it seems in recent weeks as though with every corrected address received, five envelopes were returned marked, "Moved—Left no Address". The ALUMNUS is frank to say that many of our post offices are getting extremely lax in returning letters that are undeliverable. This has happened: In early summer over

GEORGE LOVELAND RIDGEWAY, B.L.H.
Professor of History

3,500 letters were mailed out. The card corresponding to every envelope returned was carefully removed from the index. With the printed request that letters undelivered should be returned "after five days", one would naturally think that a second mailing of letters would bring back few if any letters. And yet a second mailing in September, this time with a conspicuous notice to postmasters printed on the envelopes, brought back between one and two hundred. There is but one conclusion to draw and that is that postmasters neglected to return the first envelopes, and that they need a little more careful checking up on the part of a very large bureau in Washington that would seem to be rather inefficiently conducted. Letters have been returned three months after mailing; rarely do they come back within the prescribed "five days" or even "ten days". This negligence has added to the difficulty of getting the graduate list up-to-date. But if what the postmasters stamp upon the envelopes—"Moved—Left no Address", is true, then our graduates—at least several hundred of them—need to leave more careful instructions with the post office clerks and to notify the college whither they have gone. It is almost unthinkable that college graduates would not be sufficiently interested in having mail delivered to them that they would neglect to leave forwarding addresses. There are exceptions. The graduate who within the last twelve months borrowed a small sum from the editor of the ALUMNUS, and then found himself unable or unwilling to return the loan, had a reason, sufficient in his own eyes, to leave no forwarding-address! But he is a rare exception—one out of a thousand. While the ALUMNUS regrets exceedingly to publish the long list of those who have "Left No Address", it does so in the hope that graduates who see the list will be prompted to furnish correct addresses if such they happen to know. There is no good reason why there need be 25 unknown addresses out of the entire 4,000.

Quack-Remedies

"Quack-doctoring the Colleges" is the title of a most illuminating article in the September number of Harper's Magazine, written by Professor William B. Munro, of Harvard. It is worth reading. It is thoroughly recommended to those who are wholly out of sympathy with educational methods generally, and those who are ready and anxious to take up with panaceas for ills that are suggested. Its conclusions are sound, because they are reasonable. They are sounder because they take into account the human element. Its enumeration of the quack remedies being offered and, what is worse, being tried out for our educational ills would be alarming if it were not disheartening. That youth should be made the butt of experimentation is tragic. The best that our educational methods can give to youth is none too good, let alone putting them through the test tubes of the experimental laboratory. This review of what is going on in our tertiary institutions, so humorously pictured by Professor Munro, brings out in most striking relief the contrast that Colby offers. So far as one may be aware, no fool notions about education and educational methods are being tried out by the members of the Colby faculty. No sympathy is expended over experimental sojourns in the realm of educational fancy. This does not mean that the Colby faculty are unaware of what is transpiring in the collegiate world. The contrary is true. All these quack-remedies receive their passing attention. And almost to the individual member they would agree with the logical conclusion reached by Professor Munro, namely, the ideal results in the educational process may be expected only when wise men are selected to give instruction to seriously-minded youth. While Professor Munro does not say so in so many words, nevertheless the inference may be readily drawn that the colleges of the country that are today chasing these will-o'-the-wisp theories, styled quack remedies, are those that have overlooked the importance of giving first attention to the two elements of the desirable combination mentioned above.

Limiting Numbers.

The ALUMNUS takes exception to the statement appearing in the article on "Causes of Optimism at Colby", namely, that "our present student body has been more carefully selected than ever before", and to the inference to be drawn from the statements that any "limits" have been set on the number of students entering. The editor of the ALUMNUS has been pretty closely identified with the administration of the College for many years. For ten years and more it was one of his duties to visit the preparatory schools to seek out those who were of college grade and to encourage them to enter some Maine college. In all those years seriousness of purpose on the part of a prospective student, his physical and mental equipment, and entrance requirements as laid down by the New England Board were the bases for examination. Mistakes were made, and often frivolously-minded youth got a slight footing on the college campus, but on the whole the college could at any time boast of a clean, well equipped student body. The late President Roberts held fast to certain fixed rules, chief of which was that every boy who really desired an education should have that opportunity offered to him in Colby. To make this opportunity possible the late President would tip over precedent and knock busts from pedestals. He would go out of his way to hunt up "jobs" for incoming students, and he was never ashamed to offer such students any financial help that was within his hand to give. He was more than willing to give them a start in the race. After they were started he believed they should support themselves. That was ruggedness in the application of educational ethics. When it is said that we are selecting more carefully today it is rather important to know in just what respect. There are no more important bases for selection than that of seriousness of purpose, of giving the poor boy a fighting chance, and of encouraging more widely the desire to possess one of God's great blessings. That a few more questions may perchance be asked in the entrance examinations, or that students are required to clean up their deficient units of entrance a bit more speedily than in other years are not to be taken as revolutionary changes in favor of a heralded reputation of rigid requirements. It may sound well to say that a quintet of long-bearded educators are standing with upraised hands, palms out, at college doors, and that the old fellows are making it hard for the young fellows to get in; but as a real matter of fact the quintet do not exist and the boy of honest purpose and fair ability and ambitious soul can get into Colby as easily now as he could 25 years ago. Furthermore, the inference to be drawn from the statements of the article that any limits have been placed upon those who enter is not borne out by the facts. It is true that in the women's division dormitory accommodations limit the number of girls who come from outside the city, but there is no limit placed upon the number of those who may enter from Waterville. It is not true that laboratory or classroom accommodations restrict the number of men or women who enter. Whenever there has been an appreciable increase in our student body more laboratories and more classrooms have been provided. If 500 students should apply for entrance they would be accepted for there is no rule to bar them out, and a call would promptly go forth for more laboratories and more classrooms. And they would be forthcoming. This whole idea of "limiting numbers" is nothing but a wail of despair, provoked by the most encouraging sign in America today, namely, that more and more people desire more and more education. There will always exist that little select group of rare souls who like to hug education to themselves and deny it to others on the ground that the others are "unfit". It is not for the few. No democracy can thrive on that basis. No man gets a smattering of education who is not better for it. The editor has observed the working of a very simple law of life, namely, that those who believe that too many boys and girls are getting an education never apply the rule to their own children. It invariably applies to the children of Neighbor Jones. The prestige that comes to an educational institution that "sets a limit", and advertises this fact to a gullible world, and then fails to live up to the regulation may gain a benefit therefrom; but old Colby never did resort to this method of advertising, and it is devoutly hoped that the day is far off when she will.

Colby Night.

A number of years ago the late President Roberts conceived the idea of holding an annual gathering of students and alumni in the fall of the year. It was to supplant a season of interclass rivalry between the freshmen and sophomores that had grown, as the years advanced, into a danger-day. It was not unusual for property to be destroyed and for heads to be broken. To dignify the new institution and to make the undergraduate feel that a real change had come, the President had a holiday declared extending from Friday noon to Monday morning. On Friday evening should come the annual get-together of undergraduates, graduates, and invited friends. Speech-making, songs, cheers, apples, doughnuts, coffee, and sandwiches—all contributed to an eventful evening. On the following day Colby would play an important game in the State series, and of course all the graduates would stay over for this important event. By degrees the new institution grew until, as witnessed last Colby Night, between 800 and 1,000 people packed themselves inside the old gymnasium to witness a demonstration of loyalty to college that could not easily be surpassed. The late President presided over the Colby Night held two years ago, and lived long enough to see that he had created for the College an institution that would survive unnumbered years. From 100 to 150 graduates were present at the last Colby Night and this is a very fair indication of the increasing interest which they are taking in this annual gathering.

A Corner of the Old Library in Memorial Hall Where Students of the Present and Former Generations Studied. Akers' Famous Bust of Milton is Shown on the Pedestal

Noticeably present at these gatherings is the spirit of intense loyalty which all hands show toward the College. While the game that is scheduled for the following day receives much attention, many of the speeches deal with phases of graduate and undergraduate life, with the importance of loyalty, with reverence for those who once were here but now are gone. The speeches never drop down to the plane of commonplace. They are inspirational, informative, tinged with richest sentiment. Thus may one point to but another evidence of the far-sightedness of our lost leader who out of the abundance of his life gave the best that there was in him for the College that he loved.

The Year's Opening.

There never was a year in the whole history of the College that opened more smoothly or more auspiciously. With a year of experience behind it, the Executive Committee, now in charge of administrative affairs, was able to lay out a careful program of endeavor, to assign duties, and to insist that they be done, with much more certainty and assurance than hitherto. While at best this method of conducting college affairs through a committee is not satisfactory, yet when the members of the committee act in perfect accord, each seeking to relieve the other and each willing to render an enlarged service to the College, there is bound to result a better spirit in the institution and more real accomplishment. There is a far wholesomer spirit in the college than last year. There is no group, large or small, that is cynically hostile. There are few disgruntled members. Experience permitted the working out of simple plans for a quick resumption of classroom work. Experience taught that a meeting of all members of the faculty—protracted as it was bound to be—held before the day of registration, at which every matter touching the administration and classroom routine, would accomplish useful results. And it did. Although the meeting was held before the academic year began, every member of the faculty was present. Individually and as a unit it was ready for duty. Professor Marriner, the chairman of the committee, had put in an intensive summer in passing upon the qualification of the members of the incoming class, and when registration day came there were no loose ends and consequently no irksome details to go through. This entering class was in every sense an excellent one, and they easily found their places in the undergraduate life. The attendance at the chapel services—an attendance that is expected but not compulsorily so—has been most satisfactory, and full chapels, with inspiring leaders and variety of programs, has contributed very largely to the splendid spirit that is manifest on every side. The physical and moral life of the undergraduates is receiving constant attention by members of the Committee. Contributing factors to the good feeling about the College have been the memorable celebration of "Colby Night" and the happy outcome of the Colby-Bowdoin game. While the College enrollment is not quite so large as last year, it is large enough for the best work to be done by the present staff of teachers. The extensive material improvements that are going on in the women's division, and the prospects that before another summer a new building will be rising on the campus gives additional reason for thankfulness, and contributes appreciably to the feeling of good will that is so noticeably prevalent.

Onward!

During the time the college is without a president, and this situation is likely to continue until another academic year, there is no reason why the college cannot swing rapidly onward in its career. Nothing is holding it back. Every duty that a president would perform is being carried forward, perhaps not so rapidly but certainly as faithfully. Now and then a graduate is heard to lament the fact that the college is "without a head", that things will certainly go to the bad, and that day by day the college is slipping behind in the collegiate race. No one need be alarmed. Nothing of the kind is happening. Curiously enough, little by little, a great lesson is becoming impressed upon all members of the faculty, namely, that this task of being president is altogether too much for one man to assume, and that in the days of future administration there is bound to be a wider distribution of powers. These graduates who now complain because there is no head may perchance have been those who carried their every burden to the president with the full expectation that he would turn aside from his onerous duties to give careful attention to the trifling things of life. How truly considerate was the late President of the College in respect to every demand made upon him. And he sleeps quietly from his long labors in the beautiful Pine Grove Cemetery today simply because he wore himself out in meeting the exacting demands of a most unreasonable public. And so, after all, this interregnum may be the turning-point in a new and better form of administration, where labors will be distributed, responsibilities placed, and where no one man shall serve as a target for every complaining soul. In the meantime let the old College march straight onward, never doubting clouds will break.

A Dean Wanted.

With the exception of a year or two that the late President Roberts served as dean of the men's division, the college has been without this very useful official. The late President never wanted a dean. He did not want authority divided, and while he was in possession of his physical vigor he preferred to have the closest possible touch with the student body, and thus to serve both as president and as dean. He had no other objections to the creation of this office. So long as he could carry the burdens physically, he preferred it that way. But no sooner did weakness begin to overcome him and he found it utterly beyond his strength to carry all the burdens that fell to the office he had created for himself than the need of a dean became urgently necessary. It was always necessary. A dean is a shock-absorber, and as such serves a president well. No man should be asked to do the work of the two offices. It is clearly apparent that one of the first duties of the board of trustees after it has named a new president is to select a dean for the men's division, and at the same time to insist that the new president give his strength to the administrative affairs of the college. There is no gainsaying the fact that the right type of dean can serve the college most effectively. But he must know youth, he must be in sympathy with youth's serious problems, and he must know how to point the way for wayward feet. Long office hours for conference, where each student shall be an individual and not one of a mass, must be the dean's to keep, and his life and his home must be the open seashore for the student who needs the best advice that human ingenuity and human love can give. A dean of the right kind can mould the future of a college exactly as he moulds the lives of those with whom he comes in contact. He can be the source of great power and influence. Such there have been in the world of deans and we need such a man here in Colby.

The Second Quarter Alumnus.

In the Second Quarter ALUMNUS the first attempt to group the 4,000 graduates of the College geographically will be made. The second, and final, installment of the full list of graduates, arranged alphabetically, will also appear. Scores of news-items about our graduates must await publication in the Second Quarter.

The Campus Re-visited

BY EIGHTY-ODD

The rank and file of ALUMNUS readers must have a high opinion of my word. Some week's ago I complained because the persuasive editor inveigled me into contributing another account of the annual Commencement; now I am volunteering to send an article for publication! That's consistency for you. But the boys back in my day will remember (if they could identify me) that I was noted for inconsistency—especially in the Old Roman's classroom. I was high rank one day, low rank, next. Not unlike some other college-mates whose names I could set forth here. I forbear. Put it differently, the horse I used had different gaits, and the Latin professor knew all too well whether I was going at the 2:30 or the 5:15 clip. I did not always agree with the free translations; neither did the professor. When he didn't, I dropped. There were some of the boys who could fool the good doctor sweetly. They could look so wise as they translated, pause so eloquently, and speak with such utter abandon to the high purpose in hand! I was cut out for a lawyer; I could never make believe!

I am sending this article to the ALUMNUS because I want to. If the editor doesn't care to print it, or dare to print it, that's his judgment, not mine. I am sending it in because I happen to have something to say, in my own way, and that's reason enough. Most lawyers aren't so well off. I'm not writing to tickle anybody's ribs. I went back to the campus this summer and spent a few hours roaming about to my own sweet will. Tried to look upon things material just as an ordinary business chap would appraise things. Tried to do it without getting sentiment mixed into it. Ever try that? Do. You'll learn a lesson from the experience. It can't be done—not this looking upon sentimental scenes. No one wants to tell me, a man who has been out for more years than I like to confess, that a fellow can go back to the old college campus, and spend a few hours traveling over the old paths, and not get plain silly from the wealth of sentiment that comes gushing up. It gushed. I confess it. Proud of it, too. I'm not throwing perfumed roses at myself, but show me the man who can keep a dry eye, and a steady step, and a normal pulse when he looks upon the scenes of his youth—treads places that echo romance, contrasts the years, sees himself in the mirror as a man of 60 against a background of 19—well, if such can keep an even keel when sailing such waters, he's a dangerous mariner for me. Why? Because he lacks a heart or a soul or a warmth-organ or whatever you care to call that little bit of human anatomy that steams up at the sight of youthful visions.

Yes, I went back. I want to tell you about it. Got off an early morning train, of a summer day, walked over to the campus, just as I had walked more than 40 years ago, passed along the college walks, looked out through the trees at old familiar scenes, passed down through the Willows, to the river, trod the old path up to the northeast corner of the campus, then came back to the lower end of the campus, then across the field to sit for a long time on the north steps of Memorial Hall. And sitting there, I dreamed dreams, and saw visions, and reached conclusions, and before I get through with this poor pen of mine I want to state one or two thoughts for the good that they may do. I just want to go back for a little while to those dreams. You will, I know, indulge an old graduate in a bit of sentimentalizing.

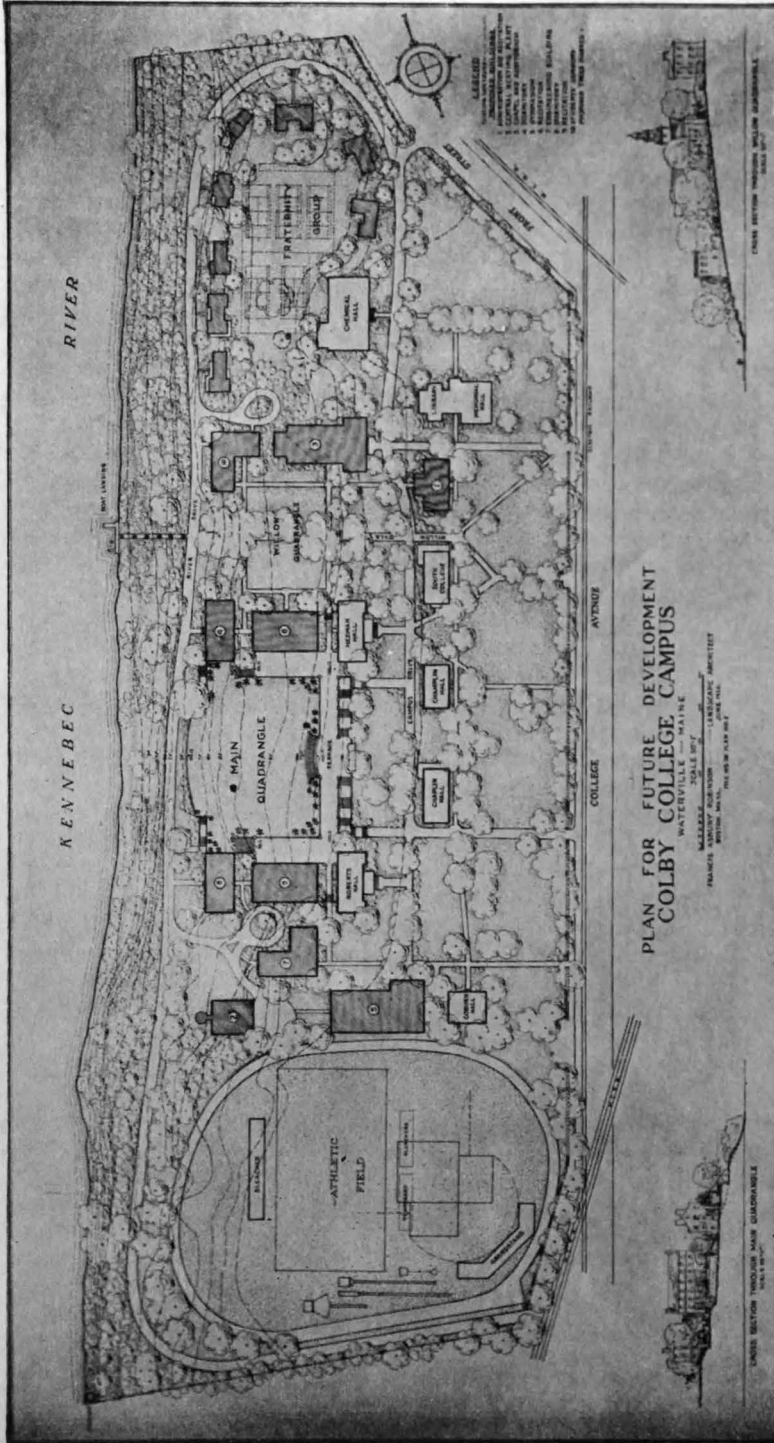

They were dreams re-dreamed, if such there are. Curious thing! Never had just the same kind of an experience before. Wordsworth or Tennyson or some versifier has said something about heaven lying about us in our infancy, and of the shades of a jail closing in upon a growing boy. He wrote what he wrote and doubtless meant what he said. But I am going to tell to the world that while I sat there on those stone steps on this summer morning of 1928 there weren't any hells about me and there weren't any prison-houses. I was youth again—free as an uncaged canary. I saw, felt myself as I once was—young, full of fancyings, ready to fly on untried wings, keenly alive to Nature's gifts, happy, care-free. All the old love-longings came flooding back, and the sixty years dropped away as a mantle. Some of the ALUMNUS readers have had similar experiences. Ever hear the song of a bird—a wood thrush or a meadow lark or a bobolink or a common robin or the raucous crow—and, for a fleeting moment feel youth again, the memories of other distant years? Sure you have—if you will admit it.

Well, there you have a picture of Eighty-Odd that summer's morning sitting on the old stone steps, gazing out through eyes a-mist. I remembered that I fell in love when I was in college, and never really got over it. I knew other college-mates who fell in love, and were promptly healed—for all time. But I succumbed. And I now recalled the day she came on some festive occasion—and they were rare in those days—to the campus, and how we walked together down through the Willows, and gazed out across the river to the green fields beyond. I didn't say much, and she didn't, and our thoughts were the long, long thoughts. And I remembered this day that always thereafter on my visits back to the campus I found myself, instinctively or otherwise, walking over the same paths that she and I tramped in the dear dead days. The pathways were strewn with sentiment; and this morning of 1928 that sentiment was just as strong as it was in the distant years.

And again I recalled with astounding vividness the week of mental torture that I went through when, in the readjustments that youth must make, I found myself cynical of all things good. And I had to fight my own way out of that state. It was no everyday scrimmage. It took moral gumption to face that foe. He was armed to the teeth. I have never met his equal since. Night after night I slipped away from my room in the old dormitory, and went meandering over the campus, in the dark places, along the old river walk, crying aloud for help that did not want to come. And one night, in late spring it was, as I lay stretched out on the green-sward, looking up through the trees at the stars, and seeking to thread the mysteries, and longing to know, someone over in old North College struck up a tune. The tune wasn't well carried, and the words had no striking meaning and all that, but, do you know, that little bit of rhythm, produced by a college boy, in the old "dorm", set my fancies free, and brought me nearer to the stars and to the Great Invisible than all the symphonies I have enjoyed since. And on this early morning of summer in 1928—more than 40 years afterward—the words of that song, came floating over the campus, and the eastern sky seemed richer in its morning tints.

And when the last class had been dismissed in my senior year, and I was about to get my sheepskin, and the campus began to be littered with people, I recalled again, and with miraculous ease, the long hour of perplexities and near-despair with which I faced the life of after-college days, I was in debt—head over heels. Had to borrow about all I had used. Only a few dollars left in my pocket, and my borrowing power gone. Only a few plans made for the future. I did not know whether on the morrow I would travel east or west. I did have a fairly accurate idea that if I went at all it would be by foot. The end of the road had come. And of a beautiful night in June I again took myself in hand, and out I went over the campus to find the path that should lead me on. And as I walked, a shadow fell a-slant the path, and an arm was locked into mine, and, in figurative phrase, a Tennyson had found an Arthur Hallam. He was a college senior, too. We had never known each other intimately, not until this night. For a long time we walked; neither said much. After a time we came back to sit down just where I was sitting this summer. And there, gazing out across the moon-lit campus he told me in simple fashion how he had thought things through, and how he had been drawn to me but had never told me of the promptings of his heart. As he talked I found my own horizon lifting, and the sun came streaming over the hills, and the valleys were lighted up, and the rough places were made plain. That boy entered my life never to leave it. And you can but commend me for walking down to the beautiful cemetery in the lower section of the city, for seeking out his grave, and for whispering above the spot where he lies buried a prayer of passionate friendship and of simple human love.

No, sir! Nobody wants to tell me that just as soon as age creeps on then hells get abroad and prison-houses coop sentimental cusses in. They don't. I've proved it. That poet was all to the bad. He hasn't told all the truth about all of us poor mortals. He didn't know me! What a lot he missed out of his young life!

But to the point of my story: One of the things I want to say is that somebody should forthwith enter upon the important work of beautifying the college campus. Nothing new in that suggestion. I've heard it before. I've talked about it myself before. I've heard others discuss it, and re-discuss it, and that's one reason why I'm venturing to touch upon it in the pages of the ALUMNUS. A beautiful campus, in some respects, now; I admit it. But in some respects it has not improved one iota in 40-odd years. A good deal of it was in primitive state in the 80's; and that was not an unmixed evil. If there is anything on the face of this great orb on which we dwell that unsettles me and irritates me and vexes me and makes me generally worse than a border Mexican it is to see something half completed. I never see a mowing-machine in the snows, or a roof half boarded in, that the impression doesn't creep down my spine that somebody began something and never finished it! It gets me going. I would prefer that nothing at all be attempted if it must be left in unfinished state. I would prefer to see the campus in primitive state than as it is now or has been for, lo, too many years. I don't like to see a front campus well laid out, and grassed, and fine granolithic walks in place, and the back campus not laid out at all, and part of it resembling mud flats. In much the same way I don't care to see a lady with face washed, but with a back-neck dirty. The waiter who serves me mustn't present a hand that is clean only to the wrist-band. I'm fussy. But you get the point.

I don't like to see a college gate stuck right up in the middle of a campus with neither wall nor shrubbery on either side of it. Of course I am not criticising the class that put it there. I know why they put it where they did. I mingled with the members of '02 the day they presented it to the College. Their idea was to put it right out front, all by itself, in the hope that it would look so much like a sore-thumb that someone would get active and have a beautiful wall built. That may be a class secret. It was good diplomacy. I approve their action. Some day that gate—when that wall is built and other gates are presented and the woodbine or the ivy covers all—will look like a million dollars. It's worth waiting for.

And I don't like to see the trees dying out for lack of proper care. Do you? I don't like to walk down through the old Willows and find the trunks so knarled and rotten that they can no longer support the branches—no shade, ashes strewn along the way, and gutters made by the passage of a plow—all so forlorn that it is pathetic if it were not so tragic. There's a sacred spot—that Willow Walk. It has been woven into song and story and tradition. It commemorates the life of the first graduate of the college who surrendered all on distant fields that the Father might re-claim a people. How can I retain my sentimental promptings without the overhanging boughs and the scent of the early willow blossoms, and the dank smell of rain-soaked leaves? The magnificent sum of $25 would replace all the Willows lost. That sum would produce a miniature willow forest.

And that back-campus driveway is a perfect eye-sore to an old graduate. It had rained the day before I visited the campus, and there were puddles, and ashes, and stumps, and what-not. The driveway is unlined, poorly grassed along the way, and it didn't look right or smell right or seem right, and it isn't right—not for a 20th century campus. I'm fussy. That's why I am penning these thorny sentences.

Then, too, I like to see the ivy-mantled walls and towers. If ivy could be made to grow from plinth to eaves on the old dormitories and the recitation haunts, the whole aspect of the place would change. I have visited many campuses in my day, and, say what you will, the ivy-covered walls give character, and coloring, and stateliness, and genuine beauty, and a touch of the real classic to a campus. It suggests song and story. The utilitarian idea is lost for the nonce, and what a glorious feeling to be well rid of it. Plant the ivy! The cost is small. A little care and results will be forthcoming. Dig some trenches about the buildings, fertilize the ground well, and drop down the ivy roots snugly. Imagine the picture some day to be—bare walls concealed by the soft green of summer and by the variegated colors of glorious autumn. Add to that picture a six-foot wall the length of the campus, it, too, covered with ivy, with beautiful gates at the several entrances, and a back campus as attractive as the front—and you have a campus.

I don't know who is supposed to have this work done, whether it is a matter for the members of the board of trustees, or for the superintendent of buildings, or for the alumni—but it is a work that needs to be done by somebody. Not knowing where responsibility rests, I am free to say what I choose. I have on several occasions told the editor of the ALUMNUS how I feel about this matter, in the hope that he, too, would speak out his mind, but I suspect he does not want to offend, and remains discreetly silent. Eighty-Odd will speak for him. And if what I say gets him into trouble, I have infinite faith in the editor to believe that he will speedily get himself out again. He's versatile enough to publish a first-rate magazine out of pretty scant material that is furnished him. If the Board should find some fault with him for this little tirade of mine, I'll defend him. Like nothing better than to face the board. Never saw them in action. I would make some of those old trustees—"old"?—ye gods! Up until this minute I always thought of them as old, and yet they are no older than the writer of these poor lines. That's a shock, indeed. There's George Smith. He was long after my time. And Norman Bassett. I recall that I helped to—. As he is a member of the Court this sentence may as well be left unfinished. And Frank Padelford. Nowhere near the eighties. And Charlie Barnes (likewise a justice), who was in the nineties. And Bert Wadsworth—only a young sprout back in my day. And Charlie Gurney and John Nelson, just babes in the woods. Old, indeed! Warren Philbrook, who used to sing so beautifully, and Charlie Owen, and Hart Page, and Carey Whittemore, and Ran Condon, and George Murray—not so bad, as to years; they are nearer my ancient day and generation. But, young or old, I'm willing to defend the editor.

Far be it from me to cast aspersions upon so eminent a body as the honorable Board of Trustees—even if they do move with slow stride. I wouldn't do it for the world. Not I. I know what they are obliged to do as members of that Board. Voluntary service. Their trusteeship means for them labor and thought and plans and agitation and money and accomplishments. No snap. If ever men were called to render faithful stewardship of a great trust, they have been. I wouldn't be a trustee with the responsibilities of the office as I see them for a thousand ducats. I honor the fellows who are willing to stand for election, and thereafter for re-election and re-re-election, ad infinitum.

It wasn't until last year that any move was made toward having a little tree-surgery done. And who is responsible for it? I am told, I do not know authoritatively, that someone who isn't a graduate of the College, but whose heart is all wrapped up in the College, the same someone who gave the splendid Stadium and the granolithic walks, also gives money for the tree surgery. If I should ever have the happy privilege of meeting this generous benefactress I should promptly doff my hat, swing slowly my left arm across my manly chest, bow profoundly low, and, if she were not averse, I should touch my lips to this worthy lady's hand in humble recognition of the good that she has done. And then I would right about face and make wry faces at editor, alumni, faculty, and trustees for waiting for a woman to do what we men should have done long ago.

The morning of 1928 when I went slowly down through the old decaying stumps of Willows to the river bank, I stood there for long minutes looking up and down, round and about me, and was impressed all the while by the thought that other colleges would give untold treasure for a river such as the Kennebec, —clean, broad-swollen, swift, majestic in its sweep and power, bringing the store of distant forests to mill and factory, never ceasing. Along its bank the college campus stretches for a half mile and more, and to the best of my knowledge and belief nobody in authority seems to appreciate its worth. With the expenditure of a few thousand dollars in successive years that bank could be made a thing of beauty and a joy forever. If I had my way, I would start out some bright morning in May with an axe and a scythe and a spade and with a kit full of determination, and I would whack and mow and dig, and dig, and mow and whack, until the weeds were gone, and the old stumps removed, and the poisonous weeds no more, and the holes filled up, and new trees set out, and flower beds, and shrubbery scattered here and there. Then I would begin proceedings to get a speaker's rostrum erected for the Commencement Exercises, not out in the sun's red glare, but under the shade of the campus trees. Then I would say to the athletic authorities: Move off to your part of the campus and leave this expanse of field for the touch of the landscape architect. I would even up things a little. The whole campus isn't for sport. Some of it must be left for sentimental old fellows like Eighty-Odd who is tied up to the College not because he once played on the teams but because of the sentiment attached to the campus and its buildings and the stars that shine above them and the moon that lights them up and the sun that warms them.

I would get busy. I wouldn't wait until death claims us all before having a front campus and a river bank that people would travel miles to see, whose very appearance would make better men and women for the appearance of nature at her best, whose care and tidiness and beauty would make more friends for the old College than almost anything else.

I forego saying more. I've probably said too much. I have slandered nobody. I've just told you how I felt on a summer day in 1928 while sitting on the old stone steps of the Chapel looking out through misty eyes at the familiar scenes of my youth. And I've a notion to say some other things some time provided material is lacking for a future ALUMNUS—not that I can say it better than somebody else, but for the simple plain reason that nobody else seems to say it.

AMONG THE GRADUATES

BY THE EDITOR

"Book of Stories", published by Allyn and Bacon Company, and edited by Emily Hanson O'Bear, '14, is a 1928 publication, and one of the series of the "Academy Classics for Junior High Schools". It is a handy little volume, well printed, and excellently well edited. The selections, not over-long, comprise excerpts from the works of many of our present-day writers. The purpose of the volume is well set forth in a preface by the editor: "The object of this Book of Stories will be accomplished if it helps boys and girls of junior high school age to travel with eager pleasure far into the land of good books."

Rev. John E. Case, '80, formerly of South Acton, Mass., is reported to be in a Massachusetts hospital for treatment.

F. Christine Booth, '26, of Chelmsford, Mass., attended Boston University Summer School.

Harris B. McIntyre, '18, has been for the past two years Division Commercial Engineer of the Southern Division of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company with headquarters in Providence. Mr. McIntyre was married in 1926 to Miss Eleanor M. Sumner of Chicago, graduate of Wellesley College in the class of 1922. They have one son, Charles Sumner McIntyre.

Gilbert Muir, '28, is principal of the high school in Wells River, Vt.

George W. Currier, '22, is headmaster of the West Lebanon, N. H., high school. Mr. Currier reports the birth of a daughter, Eloise Beamon Currier, on May 15, 1928.

Everett Flood, '79, has retired after 40 years as superintendent of a Massachusetts hospital. His summers he spends in Friendship, Maine, his winters in Mt. Dora, Florida. His home address is 12 Davenport St., Augusta, Maine.

Sheppard Butler, '03, is executive editor of Liberty Weekly. Mr. Butler visited the campus early in September for the first time in 21 years.

Harvard H. Crabtree, '06, is practicing urological surgery in Boston. His address is 270 Commonwealth avenue.

Fenwicke L. Holmes, '06, sends good wishes to the ALUMNUS from his home at 380 Riverside Drive, New York.

Guy W. Chipman, '02, is most happily engaged in conducting the Friends School, Brooklyn, N. Y. He is Principal of the School, with a staff of 35 teachers, and 400 students. During the past summer Mr. Chipman conducted a party through eight European countries, and he is now organizing a similar party, making the International Conference at Copenhagen an important objective of the trip. Of the ALUMNUS he writes: "May the magazine enroll many, many more of the graduates this year. Once a subscriber, always a subscriber."

Edward R. Frude, '23, is head of the science department and athletic director at Kimball Union Academy, Meriden, Conn.

Edmund F. Merriam, '68, is located at 33 Day St., Norwood, Mass. Dr. Merriam was for many years the editor of a Baptist publication.

Gladys P. Twitchell, '18, has completed her second summer's work at Columbia University toward a Master's degree. Miss Twitchell is teaching in Orford, N. H.

Arthur A. Begin, '25, graduated from the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery, of the University of Maryland, in 1926. He has passed both the Maryland and Maine State boards, and has established his first dental office at 4 Main Street, Lisbon Falls, Me.

William E. Garabedian, '26, is a student at Newton Theological Institution.

Eugene S. Philbrook, '98, is at present pastor of the First Baptist Church, Randolph, Mass. His previous pastorates were at Belfast, Sanford, and Augusta.

Russell H. Lord, '12, is completing his fifth year as General Secretary of the Northampton, Mass., Y. M. C. A. Mr. Lord is the father of two "husky boys who may some day be on old Colby's rolls."

Harry M. Connors, '93, has a daughter, Florence Josephine, enrolled as a sophomore in Colby. Mr. Connors is judge of the Municipal Court of Bar Harbor.

Fred S. Martin, '14, has recently been promoted to an assistant superintendent's position in the Colonial Life Insurance Company, and is located at Allentown, Pa.

H. A. McLellan, '09, is principal of the Franklin, Maine, high school. He was president of the Hancock County Teachers' Association for 1927-1928.

Walter J. Rideout, '12, attended Teachers' College of Columbia University during the past summer, majoring in supervision courses.

"No births, marriages, or deaths in the Gower family during the past year", so writes Cornelius A. Gower, '67, from his home in Lansing, Mich. Mr. Gower keeps up a lively interest in all matters that have to do with the life of the College.

Albert G. Hurd, '92, is serving as school physician for the town of Sutton, Mass. "A fine number" is the way Dr. Hurd characterizes the last issue of the ALUMNUS.

Ira E. Creelman, '19, of Seymour, Conn., received his Master's degree in high school administration from Teachers' College, Columbia University, this past summer.

Harold E. Donnell, '12, writes from Loch Raven, Md., where he is at the head of the Maryland Training School for Boys, to express his high appreciation of the value of the ALUMNUS as a means of keeping the graduates informed of the activities of the College.

Wilbur B. McAllister, '26, is a construction engineer with the Vermont Highway Commission. Since the disastrous flood of last year he has been active in bridge and road re-construction work throughout the state. He makes his home in Montpelier.

Dorothy I. Hannaford, '27, is senior assistant and cataloger in the Public Library of Attleboro, Mass. In a word to the ALUMNUS she says: "If the 1928-1929 issues are as good as the present issue they certainly will be splendid".

KARL R. KENNISON, B.S., '06
Designing Engineer, Metropolitan District Water Supply Commission

Burton E. Small, '19, is in the life insurance business, connected with Moore & Summers, General Agents for the New England Mutual, with offices at 97 Milk Street, Boston.

Paul M. Edmunds, '26, is in the life insurance business in New York. He has recently graduated from the Life Insurance Training Course of New York University.

Adelaide S. Gordon, '26, is now teaching history in the Lisbon, N. H., high school.

James Lord Howe, '13, writes from his home in Kingfield, Maine: "Have recently bought a rocky side hill farm on which I keep a flock of sheep and a small lot of poultry". Many a Colby man will envy him this location among the granite hills of Maine.

Writes Henry M. Heywood, '75, from his home in Philadelphia: "With gratitude to my heavenly Father I can again report myself in the enjoyment of continued good health, although I am in my 85th year, and as my strength is not yet 'labor and sorrow' I am able to perform a good amount of work in our home garden each day. The value of the ALUMNUS increases. This last number is par excellence. That portrait of Roberts is very fine. Colby is greatly indebted to the class of '28 for its acquisition".

Helen Beede Breneman, '93, writes from her home in Columbia, Pa.: "I'm all inspired after reading the Commencement number of the ALUMNUS. It will become one of the treasures of my library".

George C. Wing, trustee, and an honorary graduate of the College, writes to say that he was never so proud of Colby as today. "I greatly appreciate the services of President Roberts—his great ability as a teacher and his wonderful services for Colby, yet better than anything else, everyone who knew him loved him".

Bertis A. Pease, '82, of Nashua, N. H., reports "No news. Just having a glorious time living".

Robie G. Frye, '82, of Boston, writes,—“I wish we could return to the Dix Plan of re-unioning classes. If I go, say, to my 45th reunion, I find that '81 had its 45th last year, and '83 will meet next year, and I never see the men of '79, '80, '81, and '83, '84, and '85, all of whom were in college with me. I enjoy the ALUMNUS. It keeps me in touch with the college. I can't understand why every one should not subscribe".

"Your number 4, of volume 17, of the Colby ALUMNUS is a corker. Congratulations!"—This from George P. Fall, New York, of the class of '92.

Retta Carter, '20, is personal secretary to President Ernest H. Hopkins, of Dartmouth College.

Eugene H. Stover, '92, is pastor of a church in Sedgwick, Maine.

William M. Harriman, '17, is general agent of the State Mutual Life Assurance Company of Worcester, Mass., with offices at 100 State Street, Albany, N. Y.

Vera Nash Locke, '02, is associate principal of the University School for Girls, Chicago. She reports the arrival of a grandson, Charles Lord Hitchcock, and queries if this isn't the first grandson of the class. Her daughter, Elizabeth, was the class baby. She speaks enthusiastically of the ALUMNUS.

Mabel Freese Dennett, '04, a teacher in the Bangor schools, observed new methods in education at the Horace Mann School, Columbia University, during a part of last summer. Her son, Prescott, was one of two who last year in the junior year School of Journalism of Columbia received a Faculty Scholarship of $300 for high marks.

Fred F. Lawrence, '00, is now located at 195 Middle Street, Portland. "Every alumnus should not only subscribe to the graduates' magazine, but should read it from cover to cover".

At the annual meeting of the Squirrel Island Chapel Association held last August, two Colby men declined to serve longer as officers: Charles F. Meserve, '77, as president, after a service of ten years; and Albion Hale Brainerd, '88, secretary-treasurer, after a long service. Dr. Meserve was elected president emeritus of the Association.

Professor Woodman Bradbury, '87, of Newton Theological Institution, was chaplain the past summer at Camp Allegro, a high-grade camp for girls, at Silver Lake, N. H.

Elizabeth Larrabee, '23, attended the summer session at the University of Michigan, majoring in English. Catherine Larrabee, '22, took Latin courses at the same institution.

Thomas G. Grace, '21, is to be addressed at 26 Court Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

DR. LIBBY PULSIFER, A.B., '21
Locates in Rochester, N. Y.

EDNA M. CHAMBERLAIN, A.B., '22
Teacher in Los Angeles Schools

Mrs. Thompson (Carolyn Stevens, '16,) spent the summer at Five Islands, Maine, with the three children.

Malcolm B. O'Brien, '16, is physical director and coach at the Belfast high school. He is married and has five children, two boys and three girls.

"We have just built a new home", writes Merle Davis Hamilton, '21, from 627 Twin Palms Drive, San Gabriel, California, "and welcome all Colby graduates coming this way".

George P. Phenix, '86, was a recent visitor to the Colby campus. His stay was brief, and only a few of his old friends had an opportunity to greet him.

Edgar P. Neal, '93, is supervisor of the academic department, of the Worcester Boys' Trade School, with more than 1,000 boys in the various trades. "Every graduate", he writes, "should be on the ALUMNUS subscription lists. It is worth the price just for the news of those in college with me".

"The ALUMNUS is a splendid magazine", so writes Drew T. Harthorn, '94, principal of Coburn Classical Institute.

Colby friends of Ruth Brackett Spear, '16, will be sorry to learn that for over two years she has been confined to a wheel-chair because of paralysis. When taken ill she was a teacher in the Rockland high school.

E. K. Maxfield, '05, reports an extensive building program at Washington and Jefferson College where he is head of the English department. This "oldest college west of the Alleghanies" is a Class A small college for men with selective registration limited to 500 students. Recently the historic "Old Main" building has been completely remodelled, together with the Administrative building, the library, and the gymnasium. A new chemistry laboratory and a stadium are going up this year; and plans are being drawn for a new memorial auditorium and little theatre. Professor Maxfield was at one time a member of the teaching staff, and his strong work in the department of English is well remembered.

Alta E. Davis, '18, is vice principal in the Bar Harbor high school.

ANGIER L. GOODWIN, A.B., '02, STATE SENATOR

A new honor has come to Angier L. Goodwin, '02, a practising attorney of Boston, in his election as a Republican candidate for Senator in the Fourth Middlesex district. He defeated Alvin E. Bliss, floor leader of the Senate, by the narrow margin of 137 votes in the Primaries.

Representative Goodwin received a flattering vote in his home city of Melrose, which gave him a plurality of 2635 and although Senator Bliss carried Malden and Everett he could not overcome the lead which Mr. Goodwin received in his home city.

Senator Bliss has served nine years in the Senate and previously had been in the House of Representatives several years. His defeat came as a big surprise to his supporters in the district. There is no Democratic candidate for Senator in the district and the Republican nomination is equivalent to election. Representative Goodwin is serving his second term in the Legislature. He served two years as Mayor of Melrose and also was on the Board of Alderman several years, being formerly president of the board.

ANGIER L. GOODWIN, A.B., '02
Elected Massachusetts Senator

Dr. E. P. Barrell, '88, sends greetings to the College and to the ALUMNUS. He is beginning his twelfth year as head of the department of chemistry of the John B. Stetson University. He spent much of his vacation in research work in the Library of Congress.

Judge John Day Smith, '72, of Minneapolis, Minn., has been seriously ill for several weeks. He is now in his eighty-third year. All of his Colby acquaintances will wish for him rapid recovery.

Dr. Richard A. Metcalf, Colby, '86, is the Director and Manager of the High School and College Department of the Johnson Publishing Company.

A WELL KNOWN COLBY GRADUATE

One of the best known of Colby graduates who have entered the teaching profession is Clio M. Chilcott, of the class of 1895. The ALUMNUS has been able to secure some facts about her work as a teacher and gives them to the readers of the ALUMNUS. After graduating from Colby, she taught French in Ellsworth, Maine, Newburyport, Mass., Boston, Mass., and for the last fifteen years in the Washington Irving High School, of New York. In preparation for her work in French she took a one year's Normal Course in Harvard College. In addition to this she has studied in France at five different periods, taking a course at the Institut français and doing research work in the old French records of Champlain and of other French explorers in the New World. She is interested in having American students made familiar with such local history. She relates that during her own student days she was able to make a fair recitation on the treaty of Utrecht, but all the time was in entire ignorance of the fact that only a few miles from her girlhood home in Ellsworth, Maine, was land included in the Treaty of Utrecht. It was only eight years ago that she became aware of this fact. Miss Chilcott for a few years past has been lecturing in New York and elsewhere on "Lafayette National Park and its French Traditions". Co-author with her friend, Miss Nancy Gary Blackwell, of two French books the manuscript of which is now in the hands of the Johnson Publishing Co., of Richmond, Va. Miss Blackwell, until her retirement a short time ago, was Head of the French Department of Washington Irving High School, New York City. Both of these new books are so arranged that they may be adapted to any method, including the socialized recitation. Live material is given, so wherever that method is preferred the pupils themselves may conduct their own recitation entirely in French. The teacher may become a member of the "social group." The authors believe that in a beginners' class in foreign language, when developing the new material for the next day, it is essential that it be done under the leadership of the teacher; but when it is a question of covering the lesson developed the preceding day, that there is no reason why the "recitation" should not be thrown into the hands of the students, provided teacher and students together desire it.

The vocabulary of the first book is that of the activities of every day life, as the authors have observed it in France. The geography of France is also made prominent and a picture vocabulary is one of the high points.

In the second book the student will become acquainted with La Fontaine, Victor Hugo, Hector Malot and other French writers, as well as with some of the history of France and with some French art. The second book also contains much material which the authors have acquired through their experiences in France. Many clever illustrations in both books have been made by advanced art students in the class of Commercial Design at Washington Irving.

Verb forms in both books are developed by thought processes.

M. C. Moore, '07, is president of the Franklin County Teachers' Association of Massachusetts.

Ernest L. Chaney, '92, writes from Washington, D. C., "Charlie Ross, Reuben Ilsley, and I hold occasional reunions here in the capital. We wish you all kinds of success with the gym".

H. M. Gerry, '98, was recently elected a deacon in the Old Cambridge Baptist Church where he has promoted and supervised a school of Missions with an average attendance of 245. He has been chosen Y. M. C. A. secretary and representative on the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Industrial Council which considers ways and means of bettering human relations in industry.

NEW BOOK BY SHAILER MATHEWS, '84

The Macmillan Company makes announcement of the publication of a new book by Shailer Mathews, '84, entitled "Jesus on Social Institutions", which is a new estimate of the social teachings of Jesus from the point of view of the revolutionary psychology of his times.

The announcement by the publishers explains the contents of the book and has something to say of the author, as follows:

"His years of study of the Gospels as well as of the contemporary history have convinced Dean Mathews that treating Jesus as an academic lecturer on ethics is not the way to get at the truth about Him. He ought to be looked upon as one who was endeavoring to direct the lives of people who were living under the strain of a burning conviction that God was about to set up a new social order. The proper approach to Jesus' teachings therefore is an approach from the angle of the messianic hope, i.e., of revolutionary mindedness, and the effort which Jesus made to run the seething floods of energy pent up in this revolutionary mindedness off into channels of brotherliness.

"Jesus on Social Obligations" makes a fresh contribution to the question whether Jesus ever intended His teachings to apply to slow and gradual social processes, whether they were not what the scholars call interim ethics; that is to say, directions which presuppose that no attempts to transform society will be made by those who expect the world to come to an end in a short time. At this point, Dean Mathews distinguishes sharply between program-making and attitude building, attributing social significance to the teaching of Jesus in the field of attitudes but not in that of Utopian programs.

"This volume marks an advance on his earlier work on 'The Social Teaching of Jesus,' which renders the appeal of Jesus' teaching for social transformation even more stimulating. By making Jesus' own religious experience the touchstone to be used in extracting the permanent elements in the psychology of the revolutionary hopes of his people, the individuality of Jesus is preserved and the social gospel for our own times is grounded in a policy of fidelity to similar attitudes on the part of the American Christian."

From the Administrative Office

BY ERNEST CUMMINGS MARRINER, A.B., '13

This is in no sense an official report of Colby's new year. It is just a news chat with the alumni, all of whom are interested in the progress of the college. Though without a president, the college is not blundering along. There is a definite policy, emanating from the board of trustees under the efficient leadership of Hon. Herbert E. Wadsworth of the Class of 1892, and this policy is being put into operation on the campus by an executive committee appointed by the trustees at their annual meeting last June. This committee is composed of Professor Ernest C. Marriner, librarian of the college, as chairman, Professor Julian D. Taylor, head of the department of Latin, Professor George F. Parmenter, head of the department of Chemistry, Professor Herbert C. Libby, head of the department of Public Speaking and Journalism, Professor Thomas B. Ashcraft, head of the department of Mathematics, Professor Carl J. Weber, head of the department of English, and Miss Nettie M. Runnals, Dean of the Women.

The work of the committee has been thoroughly organized. The chairman holds daily office hours at the administrative office and the committee meets as a whole each week. The chairman is Adviser to the Freshmen and has charge of all problems concerning the first-year men. Professor Parmenter, in cooperation with Dean Runnals, directs all student social activities. Professor Ashcraft is the chapel officer, having supervision of chapel programs, attendance, and other matters concerning this important college exercise. Professor Weber has charge of the dormitories, Professor Libby attends to the engagement and entertainment of visiting lecturers. Dean Runnals is secretary of the committee. While Professor Taylor has been assigned no special duties, he is a very important member of the committee. Regretting that his health would not permit him to retain the chairmanship, his fellow members of the committee are nevertheless grateful that he consented to remain a member of the committee, on which his judgment is indispensable.

The administrative offices have been open daily during the summer, during which time the chairman of the committee, the registrar, and the office secretary were in constant attendance except for an occasional week-end holiday. A voluminous correspondence was carried on during the vacation, so that everything might be ready for a good start in the fall. The brunt of the work of enrolling the new students was borne by Malcolm B. Mower, the registrar and Mrs. Edith Childs, the office secretary, both of whom had acceptably performed this task during the summer of 1927. Their efficient work and the competent direction of the material plant from the office of Treasurer Hubbard rendered the summer task of the committee chairman much easier than it otherwise would have been.

The 1928-29 enrollment at the college totals 631. These are divided as follows: Seniors, Men 83, Women 62; Juniors, Men 89, Women 53; Sophomores, Men 92, Women 63; Freshmen, Men 102, Women 58; Special Students, Men 16, Women 10; Graduate Students, Men 2, Women 2. While this number is forty fewer than last year, the administration feels no alarm. The college is equipped to care well for six hundred students. To accommodate more than that number we need increased physical equipment that is very costly. Additional instructors can be engaged from increase in current funds, but those funds will not provide new classrooms, new laboratories, or adequate library facilities. Students can always be housed in the city, but they must have facilities for their college work. This is the reason why Colby must launch out upon a building program of some proportions or definitely limit the number of students. This year the trustees limited the number of women, and late applicants in the women's division had to be refused admission. Every male applicant, who could present full entrance credentials, has been admitted.

A source of gratification to all Colby folk is the return of Miss Nettie Runnals as Dean of the Women. Although unacquainted with the present undergraduates except the Seniors, Miss Runnals has already won the confidence and esteem of the entire women's division. That division, by the way, is acquiring a physical plant of beauty and distinction. During the summer several dwelling houses, recently acquired, have been razed or moved, so as to provide a beautiful quadrangle between College Avenue and Main Street, with Foss Hall and the new Alumnae Building as the principal units. Work on the new building is progressing so rapidly that it is expected to be ready for use early in the second semester. Besides Foss Hall and Alumnae Building the women's division now has four dormitories—Mary Low Hall, Dutton House, Foster House, and Mower House.

While the death of President Roberts, the unfortunate fire publicity of last spring, and other circumstances slowed up the campaign for a new gymnasium, that campaign is decidedly active. Professor Herbert C. Libby, secretary to the campaign committee, worked all summer developing the campaign among the alumni. A reorganization of the campaign is now under way, concerning which the trustees will soon make announcement. While financial support for the new gymnasium is not yet fully assured, that assurance will certainly come before the 1929 commencement.

One innovation voted by the Executive Committee has been a change in the chapel program. Until this year we have had chapel for the men at ten o'clock each morning, and for the women at noon. For some time the chapel attendance and the chapel programs have been unsatisfactory. Chapel is now conducted on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday for the men, and on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday for the women, each exercise coming at the ten o'clock hour. The chapel period has been slightly lengthened and a varied program has been instituted. Every fortnight the Y. M. C. A. conducts the program, usually with an outside speaker, and frequently the musical clubs present a distinctly musical program. At the first chapel of the year, on registration day, the Chairman of the Executive Committee gave an address of welcome to the new students. On the following day Chairman Wadsworth of the Board of Trustees, after speaking briefly, himself, introduced the Governor-elect, William Tudor Gardiner, who gave a splendid address. On October 12, the chapel date nearest the first anniversary of the death of President Roberts, a memorial service was held, at which two of the President's famous prayers were read by Professor Clarence H. White, and the Chairman of the Executive Committee gave an address.

Other chapel speakers from outside the college have been Rev. Ernest McGregor of Norwalk, Conn., District-Governor of Kiwanis International; Dr. Artman of Chicago, director of the Religious Education Association of America; Professor Martin of Bangor Theological Seminary, and Rev. I. B. Mower, D.D., of the board of trustees.

The committee on visiting lecturers, Professors Libby, Weber and Eustis, is organizing an interesting program of speakers, several of them under the Arthur Jeremiah Roberts Lecture Foundation. The first of these speakers addressed a student and faculty audience that packed the chapel on October 16. On that occasion Rollo Walter Brown, author of "Dean Briggs", "How the French Boy Learns to Write", "The Creative Spirit", and other distinguished books, gave a loudly applauded lecture on "The Romance of Being a Student".

The work of the college year is starting well. Students and faculty are cooperating with zeal and enthusiasm to make this a progressive year for Colby. The Student Council, headed by Horace Maxcy, 1929, is a business-like and respected organization, whose members are imbued with a fine loyalty to Colby. The sophomore class, headed by a real student leader, Richard Williamson, have done more than any preceding class to make the entrance of Freshmen into Colby an interesting and dignified experience and not the chamber of horrors that it used to be. When some trouble-maker, probably not a Freshman at all, painted Freshmen numerals on a wall of the Shannon Building, the sophomores showed their fine Colby spirit by refusing to commit similar acts in reprisal. The result of such an attitude has been a respect for college property that every true Colby man appreciates.

The new members of the faculty have all proved so competent and so adaptable to Colby ways that the classroom work has started without interruption. It happened this year that several of the younger instructors planned on graduate work at the same time, with the result that an unusual number of new faces appeared in the classrooms this fall. Alfred K. Chapman, Colby, 1925, takes the place of John B.

Allin as Instructor in English, and another English instructorship made vacant by the resignation of Howard P. Kelsey, has been filled by the appointment of John R. Walden, a Harvard graduate. Elmer C. Warren, a graduate of M. I. T., takes the place of Philip M. Richardson in the Mathematics department, and Walter N. Breckenridge becomes Instructor in Economics in place of Claude L. Stineford. Harold P. Fish takes the place of Theodore Clark in the Department of Biology. Increased enrollment in the Department of Romance Languages necessitated the employment of an additional instructor, and for this position Arthur C. Wallace, a graduate of Harvard, has been engaged. It was with deep regret that the trustees accepted the resignation of Dr. William J. Wilkinson, for four years head of the Department of History. They were exceedingly fortunate, however, in securing Professor George L. Ridgeway, a graduate of Princeton and Oxford. Already Professor Ridgeway has won the respect and admiration of his students, and the trustees are assured that he will carry on the notable traditions of historical study which were started at Colby by Dr. Shailer Mathews, and continued by Dr. J. William Black and Dr. Wilkinson.

The atmosphere at Colby this fall is right. There is no air of defeatism. Students and faculty alike are here for work. They are optimistic and enthusiastic. They are confident that, as a small liberal arts college, Colby has a contribution to render to the educational world, and that such a contribution can best be rendered by trustees, faculty, students and alumni working together for progress and improvement.

The Dean's Report

BY NETTIE M. RUNNALS, A.M., '08, Dean of the Women's Division

As I return to Colby after having been away two years, I find it hard to express in words just the sense of loneliness and loss I feel in the absence of my long-time teacher, friend and president, Arthur J. Roberts. Even in his absence I am profoundly conscious that his influence is alive in the college, and that, in the hearts of his associates there will never die the memory of "that best portion of a good man's life—his little, nameless, unremembered acts of kindness and of love". Deeds better than words will express to the Colby students of today and tomorrow how potent and how lasting are the life and influence of President Roberts.

For the women of Colby the year 1928-29 opens under happy auspices. The hopes and dreams of many years are being fulfilled,—our Alumnae Building is under construction! The contract is up to schedule time, and we expect to be using the gymnasium the second semester. How much more we can use this year depends upon the expediency with which we can secure money for furnishings. We are sure the alumnae associations are going to bend all their energies this year towards this happy task, to the end that we may dedicate next June our new Alumnae Building which shall be not only architecturally complete but which shall be adequately and appropriately furnished in all essentials of efficiency and in good taste. Besides the gymnasium there are, in one wing on the first floor, the good-sized social room, small dining-room and kitchen, and in the other wing the physical director's office and a room for corrective gymnastic work. These two wings are occupied, on the second floor, by the Young Women's Christian Association room and a large class room. Having achieved splendid success in securing the building itself, we know the alumnae are not going to be satisfied till the furnishings are complete. The different associations will work this year with even increased enthusiasm, since they can see their labors crowned with success.

A recent visit to a meeting of the Boston Alumnae Association held at the home of Mrs. Gertrude Illsley Padelford, '96, Newton Centre, found this loyal group earnest and enthusiastic over the present and future plans of their Alma Mater. An activities committee, consisting of Mrs. Helen Hanscom Hill, '97, of Wellesley, Mrs. Ruby Carver Emerson, '04, of Cambridge, and Mrs. Padelford, was elected to have charge of the raising of funds for furnishing the new building. Many are planning to be present at the dedication at commencement time. The other groups we are sure will not fall behind.

As the alumnae work to furnish their building they are to strive most earnestly also to secure $10,000 for the swimming pool. No one could possibly see the ideal setting for this pool planned by the architect without a big thrill at the potential perfection of the plan. While the pool itself is in the basement it is covered by a skylight, and air and sunshine will abound. The director's room and visitors' gallery are placed just right, and with tiling in the Colby gray and blue, the whole equipment can be ideal. Someone can surely be found to make this investment in increased joy and health.

To make room for our new building, the residence of Dr. I. B. Mower on College Place was purchased and moved. This house and Dutton House were moved to the north side of the driveway running out to Main Street, and placed in line with the new building. These three buildings on the north and Foss Hall and Foster House at the east form the beginning of a very attractive quadrangle for the Women's Division. The new residence which we call Mower House has been remodeled to make a most attractive and homelike residence for seventeen girls. It is newly furnished throughout and easily rates next to Foss Hall in attractiveness. Dutton and Mower Houses are heated by a common plant which is located in the building formerly used as the Mower garage, but situated now between the two houses.

But buildings are not all we have acquired. We are again overwhelmed by the generosity of Miss Florence Dunn, '96, who has purchased for the college the two houses and garage adjacent to our hockey field. These houses will be removed in the spring and will make room for two new tennis courts. There will then be space within our quadrangle for a driveway and lawns in front of the houses. In this last gift of Miss Dunn's the longings of many years have been fulfilled. Let us rejoice!

Early in November a telephone call from Mrs. Grace Coburn Smith, '93, of Skowhegan, brought the glad news that she was contributing an additional gift of a thousand dollars towards the furnishing and equipment of the new building. This new evidence of Mrs. Smith's generosity will inspire alumnae groups to work together to raise the money they cannot offer as individuals.

Colby women have always sought to make as nearly one as possible their health league and their department of physical education. We feel that health and physical education are not to be separated. As our advantages for physical education are increasing our health program is also being reinforced. Colby's true and loyal friend, Mrs. Eleanora S. Woodman of Winthrop Centre, has, through her unfailing generosity, made possible a big step forward in this program. She is maintaining a resident nurse in whose presence among Colby undergraduates all alumnae will heartily rejoice. The fact that we had not where for a nurse to lay her head did not daunt us with Mrs. Woodman's enthusiastic generosity back of us. At her expense a cosy corner was partitioned off in the southwest corner of the assembly room on the third floor of Foss Hall. From this nucleus we hope later to transform the assembly room into an infirmary with two bedrooms, nurse's room and bath. We can hold our meetings soon in the new building.

With all these good things happening to us this fall, Colby Day could not fail to express great enthusiasm and high hopes. As tables were cleared out and our dining room made ready to seat its full capacity of undergraduates, returning alumnae, and friends, we could not help entering into the labor and confusion with hearts a bit lighter and joy a bit higher as we realized that this would be the last general upheaval of this kind. From various directions could be heard, "We shan't have to do this next year", and, "Well, this is the last time for all this work." The class speeches all rang true to Colby's best ideals, and the songs were strong and merry. It was with deep appreciation of her charm and great loyalty that we listened to Mrs. Grace Coburn Smith, who was our alumnae speaker. Mrs. Mary Farr Bradbury of the class of 1888 of Newton Centre was called upon and very graciously expressed the greetings of the Boston group of alumnae.

Professor Ernest C. Marriner, chairman of the Executive Committee, sent the following greetings from the Men's Division: "The men graduates and undergraduates of Colby College, assembled in the gymnasium for their annual celebration of Colby Night, send you heartiest greetings as you also observe your Colby Night celebration. May we always realize that we are but two divisions of the same body, the sons and daughters of a common Mother Colby, whose honor we jointly uphold and whose welfare we unanimously have at heart."

The dramatic club presented a three-act comedy, "O, Didn't It Rain!" Every one was in the mood for fun and laughter and the cast received enthusiastic and well deserved praise. As we rose to sing Alma Mater all voices expressed the increased love and loyalty which such happy get-togethers can always inspire. Much visiting ensued as the baskets piled with big red apples were passed and then another Colby Day was over.

No report for the Women's Division would be quite complete without the good news that our chapel exercises are now held on alternate days at the same hour as the men's—Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 9:50 A.M. All alumnae who have fretted under the inconvenient 12 o'clock regime will rejoice with us in this happier hour.

And so Colby women press on—"not as though" they "had already attained" but "with hearts beating strong" and with high hopes and unswerving loyalty. They realize many needs, the greatest of which, perhaps, is more dormitory space. They know we are too crowded and that we should be prepared to accommodate at least from twenty-five to forty more girls.

To these needs they will turn the same kind of devoted attention which has characterized their long and tireless campaign for the Alumnae Building. They will do their share to make Colby a place where the young women of Maine and other states can secure, at minimum expense, but under excellent physical and moral conditions, a liberal arts education of the highest order.

The Graduate List

BY THE EDITOR

Below is the first of two installments of the complete list of men and women graduates of the College. The second installment will appear in the Second Quarter ALUMNUS published in January.

Since undertaking the preparation of the list for publication, a great many changes have been made in the addresses. Every effort has been put forth to make the list complete and accurate, but the Editor is well aware of the fact that numerous errors will occur. This list will be kept standing and corrections made in it until it is as near complete and accurate as such lists can be.

Readers of the ALUMNUS are earnestly requested to send in any corrections that should be made. Such cooperation will be deeply appreciated.

Opening of Colby's Preparatory Schools

AT COBURN

BY DREW T. HARTHORN, L.H.D., '94

Coburn began the new school year of 1928-29 on September 11, under most favorable circumstances. The enrollment was about as usual, with students, who have been selected with great care, coming from a wide extent of territory.

Coburn has had a fine record of service given to boys and girls who have graduated from high school or who have been out of school for one reason or another and need another year to complete preparation for college. This year there are several students of this class. One very pleasing and important feature of the opening of school this year is the fact that there is a much larger group of younger boys and girls than has entered the school for some years. This means much in the future life of the school.

Coburn is fortunate in retaining the majority of her faculty for periods of considerable length. This year there is but one new member, Mr. Keith F. Killam is the new teacher of History and Athletic Coach. Mr. Killam is a graduate of Tufts in the class of 1924, where he had a fine record as a student and as a member of all the college athletic teams.

Financially, Coburn enters upon the new year in better condition than for several years. Successful effort has been made and is still being made to improve the school and to make needed additions to her resources.

The various departments and activities are well organized and each is filling its place in the life of the school. The high standard of scholarship and of character that have always been characteristic of Coburn are still maintained.

Coburn is fortunate in her location. There is no better part of the world in which to live and to study than the State of Maine. Her climate is unsurpassed. She stands among the first educationally. Waterville is most conveniently situated and easy of access from all parts of Maine and of New England.

Coburn is giving careful attention to the physical side of student life. Every boy and girl takes part in one or more forms of outdoor sport under wise direction. Good teams will represent the school this year in the various sports beginning with football this fall and continuing in basket ball, hockey, tennis, and baseball as the year advances.

The girls have their physical work and out of door sports render helpful and wholesome direction. The Recreation and Outing Clubs supplement the other phases of athletics in most helpful and pleasant ways. Every student must select one or more of these activities for himself and thus is sure to get some suitable sport out of doors.

The Y. M. C. A. and Girl Reserves are already at work. The religious interests of the school are maintained by these organizations. The regular work in the department of Religious Education, required of all students is a most helpful and interesting part of the school life.

To summarize—Coburn opens the new year auspiciously. She expects the year to be filled with hard but pleasant work. All the departments, every activity, students, and faculty are ready, as in the past, to make this year another in the already long list of successful years.

AT HEBRON

BY RALPH L. HUNT, A.B.

The opening of a new school year brings many cares. In spite of our one hundred and twenty-four years of service we still have them. It is always a relief when our registration is complete, and when the systematic work of the year is fairly started.

How many boys will actually register? How many will be homesick and leave? Have we selected any undesirable students? What quality of scholarship may we find? Are our students boys of character, and boys with college vision? These are some of the opening questions of vital importance to the school. What a pleasant school year when these can be answered satisfactorily!

The splendid Commencement of last June was a forerunner of a prosperous year at Hebron. We wish to extend our appreciation to Miss Nellie Whitman, to Miss Anna Parsons, to Pres. F. O. Stanley, and to George W. Treat, for the part they played in making the exercises the very best of recent years.

Over four hundred sat at the Alumni Dinner.

The graduates were seated by classes, and the Class of 1888 had the largest attendance. Miss Whitman's fine talk to her boys and girls was a classic. The announcement of a liberal donation by George W. Treat of Braintree, Mass., was enthusiastically received. Plans by Pres. F. O. Stanley for a bigger and better Hebron were approved by all.

As we open the next school year, with our buildings filled to capacity, and with a selected class of boys, everything points to the best year in Hebron history.

Our faculty for this year has been strengthened by the addition of three new men.

Mr. George H. Keough, a graduate of New Hampshire State University, is in charge of Sturtevant Home, and has classes in Elementary English, and English History. He has had experience at Colby Academy, at New London, N. H.

Mr. Arthur B. Scott, a graduate of Bates College, Class of 1924, is in charge of the Gymnasium dormitory, and has classes in Science, Mathematics, and English Grammar. He will also assist Coach Dwyer in football, and coach our hockey teams. He was captain of the Bates football team in 1924, and he has had four years of experience teaching and coaching at Orange, Mass.

Mr. Kenneth W. Moffatt, a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music, devotes his entire time to developing musical organizations among our boys. He offers instruction in Piano and Vocal Music, and directs the Church Choir, Band, Glee Club, and Orchestra.

Many changes have been made in our campus during the summer. Much of the work is uncompleted at present. All construction work will be finished by the opening of the winter term in January, however. We hope to have the grading completed, and everything in readiness for our one hundred and twenty-fifth Commencement in June.

The Academy has purchased the property known as the "Turner Place." These buildings have been demolished, and the Hebron Trading Company's store, now operated by the Academy, occupies this site. A large boiler room in the rear furnishes heat for the new gymnasium and for the store.

The "Melcher" property has been recently purchased, and the buildings will be torn down to make room for the new gymnasium, which is located on the south end of the "Dunham" property, facing the square between the roads to South Paris and Buckfield:—a fine location for this large and beautiful building, designed by our President, Mr. F. O. Stanley of Newton, Mass.

The Sargent Memorial Gymnasium, now under construction, will be one of the finest buildings of its kind in New England. It is constructed of tapestry brick, laid Flemish bond, and measures 120 feet by 130 feet. The building is complete in every detail. The gymnasium proper is of tile brick in two colors, and the dressing room, shower room and pool are of white tile. An infirmary, trophy room, stage, picture machine room, visiting team rooms, cage, and auxiliary gymnasium room, gives Coach C. C. Dwyer the complete equipment he has needed for so many years.

Barrows Lodge has been moved to a new location—across the street, by the side of Howe Cottage. This has been repaired and improved, and furnishes much-needed quarters for Academy help.

Our new Infirmary, of tapestry brick, is located south of Sturtevant Home, on the South Paris road, and faces the athletic field. This will be completed in about a month, and will be the most beautiful building on our campus. This building furnishes quarters for a local doctor, for our resident nurse, and for twelve patients. Undoubtedly, this is the best school infirmary in New England.

Many smaller repairs and improvements have been made during the summer. Our equipment is in first-class condition. Our registration is complete. We have a very desirable class of boys. The school year of 1928-1929 should be a banner year at Hebron.

AT HIGGINS

BY WILLIAM A. TRACY, A.B., '14

Higgins Classical Institute opened September 13, 1928, with a registration of 126 students. Thirty-two of this number come from Charleston, ninety-four are from other Maine towns, Massachusetts and Canada.

Five members of last year's faculty returned this year. William A. Tracy, A.B., principal, Philip Keith, B.S., physical director, Miss Eva Alley, A.B., Dean of Women, Miss Emmie Whitaker, Teachers' Training, and Miss Marjorie Daggett, Music.

Mr. Clarence Emery, B.S., Colby '26, will teach Science, Mathematics, and assist in coaching. He has had three years' teaching experience and comes to us very highly recommended.

Miss Margaret Salmond, A.B., Colby, '28, will be our new French instructor. Miss Salmond is not an experienced teacher, but her college work leads us to expect that she will be a strong teacher.

Construction on the Gymnasium has been somewhat retarded by weather conditions. The brickwork, however, will be completed within a few days. We expect to use the building this winter.

The Gymnasium is constructed of steel and concrete brick. It is 52 x 90 feet, and contains a basket ball court 38 x 70 feet, a running track, and a stage. The basement will be used for locker rooms, showers, and bowling alleys.

The outlook in athletics is better than it has been for several years. We have some good men left from all of our last year's teams, and some very good material has entered from other schools.

Higgins is looking forward to a very prosperous year. Her dormitories are full. Requests for information for another year are already coming in. The type of student enrolled this year is up to the Higgins standard. We are very pleased to bear this good news to our alumni and friends of Higgins.

AT RICKER

BY ROY M. HAYES, A.B., '18

On September 4th, Ricker Classical Institute began its eighty-first year as a Secondary School, and its third year as a Junior College. The registration for both departments was 119 and 16 respectively. Since that time the Secondary School has grown to 128 and the Junior College to 19, a total of 147. While the registration is only slightly larger than in former years, there are nearly twice as many resident students. This situation is due largely to the purchase of a beautiful home for the girls. This house is situated near the campus, and accommodates thirty girls and two teachers. The beautiful quartered oak and black walnut finish, the beds specially constructed and equipped with DeLuxe springs and comfortable mattresses, the mahogany colored chests of drawers and wardrobes, all combine to make one of the best student dormitories in the state.

The boys' dormitory now accommodates 42 boys and three teachers. The dining room is in this building and amply takes care of the students.

It is interesting to note that the enrollment includes representatives from thirty-three different towns.

The Junior College department began three years ago with ten students, two of whom went on to Colby College with partial Sophomore standing. Last year the class numbered sixteen, five of whom are in Colby College at present with full Sophomore standing. The present class of nineteen represents a ninety per cent increase. The future of this department seems assured.

The rapid strides that Ricker has made toward a larger and more efficient school is due almost wholly to a Faculty composed of efficient and experienced instructors.

Principal Roy M. Hayes will begin his third year as the head of this school. Mr. Hayes graduated from North Berwick High School in 1910 and Colby College in 1918. He was instructor in Biology and French and Athletic Director at Oak Grove Seminary in 1919-20; from 1920-24 he was Principal at Unity High School; from 1924-26 he was Principal at Washburn High School. He also attended the University of Maine Summer School in 1924.

ROY MITCHELL HAYES, A.B., '18
Principal Ricker Classical Institute

Sub-Master Hugh A. Smith graduated from Ricker in 1915 and from Colby College in 1920 with a B.A. degree. From 1920-27 he was Sub-Master at Higgins Classical Institute. He attended summer sessions at Harvard in 1922 and 1927 and University of Maine summer sessions in 1925 and 1928. Mr. Smith is the Instructor in Physics and Chemistry in both the secondary and college departments.

Roy A. Bither, instructor in Science and History, graduated from Ricker in 1922 and from Colby College in 1926. He has proven his ability as a teacher in the two years he has been at Ricker.

Mlle. Anna Dreyfus, instructor in Spanish and French, was born in France where she fitted herself as a teacher of foreign languages. She came to this country where she first taught in the college for women at Columbia, S. C. Mlle. Dreyfus has travelled in many of the countries of the world and has a wide acquaintance with many prominent people. Her first year at Ricker demonstrated that she is a master of the teaching profession. Ricker is exceedingly fortunate to have on its staff a teacher of her ability and experience.

Miss Irene Dwellley, head of the Latin department, is a graduate of Biddeford High School and Bates College, 1926. During the year 1926-27 she taught at Bowdoinham High. She is about to begin her second year at Ricker. During her course at Columbia this summer she took special work in Latin.

Mr. Walter P. Morse, who is to teach Mathematics, graduated from Newton High School, Newton, Mass., in 1922 and the University of Maine in 1926. From 1925-28 he was an Instructor in Mathematics in that institution. This spring he received his Master of Arts degree from that college. Mr. Morse's preparation and experience makes him a particularly valuable addition to our faculty. While at Maine he was a member of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity and the Kappa Phi Kappa Honorary Society.

Ricker was fortunate to secure for the department of Physical Education Leland S. March, who graduated from Old Town High School in 1918, from the University of Maine in 1923, and from Springfield College in 1928. While at the University of Maine Mr. March was a member of the Sigma Nu Fraternity and the Kappa Phi Kappa Honorary Society. From 1920-23 he was coach of basket-ball and baseball at the Old Town Junior High School. From 1923-26 he was Physical Director and coach of Foxcroft Academy and Director of Physical Education in the Public Schools. During 1927-28 he was student tutor of football, gymnastics and baseball at Springfield College. He has been an approved basket-ball official since 1919. With such a man at the helm Ricker's teams will be well coached and should make a fine showing in athletics.

Mrs. Leland S. March, Physical Director and Coach for the girls, graduated from Gardiner, Maine, high school in 1924 and from the Sargent School for Physical Education in 1927. She spent four months at the Sargent Camp, Peterboro, N. H., and one year practice teaching in the Highland School, Somerville, Mass. She has also been a teacher of recreational gymnasium classes for the girls and women of the Emmanuel Congregational Church in Springfield, Mass. Mrs. March will be an able assistant to Mr. March.

Miss Mary Burpee will return as music teacher. Miss Burpee has trained under some of the finest music masters and is prepared in every respect for her work in the music department. Miss Burpee is prepared to give either vocal or piano lessons. Under her direction this department is bound to be one of the most successful of the year.

The Rev. William B. Chase of the Court Street Baptist church will continue with his classes in Bible study.

A campaign is under way for $100,000.00, fifty per cent of which is to go for endowment and the rest for new construction and equipment. To date more than $50,000 of this amount has been pledged.

The Olympic Games

BY MICHAEL J. RYAN, Track Coach

The ninth revival of the Olympic Games held in Amsterdam, Holland, has passed into history and the representatives of the United States, as had been the custom in the eight previous revivals, emerged victorious in most of the competitive sports in which they engaged in spite of the stiffest and highest caliber of competition which they ever encountered.

Contrary to some reports which have been spread by certain of the Press in this country, the United States won the Olympiad as a whole and was supreme in such important and exacting sports as Track and Field, Swimming and Rowing.

The representatives of your Uncle Sam accounted for a grand total of 24 first places, 21 second places and 17 third places, which, figured on a basis of five points for each first place, three points for each second place and one point for each third place, the most common method employed in America, gives the Yanks a point score of 200 against their nearest competitors, 93. Any other system of scoring would accentuate America's margin of success.

Finland was the runner up with ten first places, eleven second places and ten third places to her credit for a total of 93 points. Germany came third with 86 points gained through the medium of ten first places, seven second places and fifteen third places. Sweden's nine first places, eight second places and twelve third places gave her fourth place with 81 points and France was fifth with 70 points, taking seven first places, ten second places and five third places. This tabulation includes every activity which was a part of the Olympiad, viz: Track and Field, Swimming, Boxing, Wrestling, Rowing, Football, Fencing, Winter Sports, Weight Lifting, Art, Sculpture, etc.

Track and Field Sports, which is the most ancient form of Olympic activity and the most important branch of the modern Olympiads was the target for most of the criticism on the part of some correspondents as far as the American participation in and preparation for the games was concerned. The criticism was wholly unjust, not being based on fact and in order to correct any erroneous opinions which may have been formulated by readers of the ALUMNUS because of reading such misleading statements in the press, I wish to state here and now that as in all previous Olympiads, the representatives of the United States won the Track and Field championship, not only for men but also for women.

In the men's championship America won eight places, six second places and six third places for a total of 64 points out of a possible 189 against her nearest competitors (Finland) 38. In the five events which were on the program for women, the American girls won one first place, two second places and one third place for a total of 12 points against Canada's 11 points gained through a medium of two first places and a third place.

Let it be here understood also, that in the Olympic Games, no official score is kept and there is no official system of scoring. Winners, really are the only ones that count and the purpose of the revivers of the Ancient Games was not to determine the athletic supremacy of the earth, but rather to bring the representatives of the various Nations of the world together on common grounds in friendly sport, so that they would grow to understand one another and promote the idea of Universal peace.

The standards of success of previous American Olympic Teams have been very high. The American Olympic Team of 1928 proved itself a worthy successor of its brilliant predecessors. True there were some radical upsets and in some instances, we Americans had to swallow the bitter pill of disappointment. However, the uncertainty of sport is the very element which makes sport interesting and when in the history of International sport or events of Universal interest, hasn't there been upsets and disappointments?

The so-called upsets and disappointments suffered by the American team were not the result of lack of careful preparation, lack of courage on the part of the individual, lack of interest on the part of the American Olympic Committee or other officials or the lack of proper care for our teams, but rather was the result of superior competition on the part of our foreign cousins, for the most part.

This evidences one of the most noteworthy features of the games, namely, the great advance being made throughout the world in competitive athletic excellence. This general improvement is further testified by the more general distribution of triumphs among the various nations. You will have a better understanding of this general distribution of honors when you know that 33 of the fifty odd nations which participated in the games, scored points figured on the basis of three places being counted in each event.

The showing made by Germany, taking part in her first Olympiad since 1912, was remarkable. Her stalwart sons and daughters were very conspicuous in the finals of nearly every event on the program and it was the consensus of opinion of most American sport followers who were present at the games that the Germans will be a real menace to America's Olympic supremacy in the future. Germany does not foster compulsory military training as a part of her National life any longer. Instead she is fostering a program of compulsory competitive athletic training for her young men and women and it was said prior to the 1928 Olympiad that 2,500,000 young men and women were taking regular training throughout Germany for the purpose of trying out for places on the German Olympic Team.

Another nation that made rapid advancement in competitive sport during the period intervening between the eighth and ninth Olympiads was Japan. Her athletes were very conspicuous in several of the Track and Field contests and in the swimming events. They scored a total of seventeen points, including two first places, being the first time that the Japanese Flag was ever raised to the staff in recognition of honors won in Olympic competition. The Japs have made more advancement in sport in the past five years than any other nation in the world, figuring of course on Olympic standards.

It has been the privilege of the writer to be officially connected with every American Olympic Team for the past twenty years, twice as a competing athlete and three times as a member of the staff of coaches and trainers and in his humble opinion the American Olympic Team of 1928 ably represented the best traditions of American sportsmanship and chivalry. Its conduct was of the best, its preparation serious and careful. It typified fair play, courtesy and courage. It was modest in victory and supreme in defeat.

In achieving victory in the Ninth Olympiad, the American athletes made seventeen new Olympic records, seven of which are world's records. This represents the greatest number of Olympic and world's records ever made in one meet, either Olympic or otherwise, by any nation, in the history of athletics.

To make an appropriate pen picture of that remarkable spectacle known as the Ninth Olympiad which was held in that beautiful and convenient Olympic city, in Amsterdam is far beyond my powers. No words of mine can even remotely portray the great moments of the greatest modern Olympiad, such as the indomitable will for victory exhibited by Ray Parbuti in taking America's only first place in a running event when he captured the 400 meters run,, that sparkling combination of speed and grace by Elizabeth Robinson in winning the 100 meters dash for women or the superhuman performance of Willie Ritola, the flying Finn, in running the superman of the track "Paava Nurmi" the so-called Phantom Finn, into the ground in the 5000 meters race, one of the greatest long distance races ever run. Every event on the program was a classic in itself and the participants were all human thoroughbreds, the flower of the manhood and womanhood of the civilized world, trained to the minute and determined to do or die for the Honor and Glory of their respective countries.

The organization of the Olympic games at Amsterdam by the Dutch Olympic Committee was of the highest state of efficiency and the conduct of the games by the International Olympic Committee was fair and impartial at all times and both bodies are deserving of high commendation.

The spirit displayed by the competitors representing the various nations was the best and the feeling at all times was friendly. The spectators while ready at all times to cheer the achievements of their own countrymen were very fair and impartial and ever ready to give recognition to a worthy performance or exhibition of courage or sportmanship regardless of who the recipient might be.

The Dutch people were very hospitable and friendly proving themselves to be good and worthy hosts to the tens of thousands of visiting athletes and ardent sports followers who came to Holland expressly to witness the games. The City of Amsterdam is an interesting and commodious place and was well able to handle the big games and provide recreation and diversion for the cosmopolitan visitors during the Olympiad.

Last but not least the seven thousand mile trip of the American team and officials, numbering some 500 persons, to and from the games on the Steamship President Roosevelt was a very pleasant one. Absolute harmony and co-operation reigned at all time and all those who were fortunate enough to be a member of the party will have cause in after life to look back with pleasant recollection on their experiences of the Ninth Olympiad held in Amsterdam, Holland in 1928.

GEORGE LORA DUNHAM, '82

In previous issues of the ALUMNUS all too little mention was made of the life-service and of the death of one of Colby's most distinguished sons, George Lora Dunham, member of the class of 1882. With material at hand concerning Mr. Dunham, the ALUMNUS is now able to pay tribute to this son of the College who worked his way up from lowly beginnings to a position of great influence and power in the State of Vermont.

Mr. Dunham passed away on December 11, at his home in Brattleboro, Vt., and the Daily Reformer on the following day contained extensive tributes to his worth as a man and to his value to the community. The sketch of his life which it published is given here. It is a story of faithfulness to business and of abiding interest in all community endeavors:

George Lora Dunham was born in North Paris, Me., June 15, 1859. He was one of the ten children of the late Samuel W. Dunham and Rachel E (Andrews) Dunham, and was of the ninth generation in lineal descent from Deacon John Duncan of Plymouth. Hard work was a necessity with him from early boyhood on his father's hill farm.

He attended the district school and at the age of 18 graduated from Hebron academy at the head of his class. In 1882 he graduated from Colby College, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, again at the head of his class, after working his way through. In college he became a member of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity and later he was elected to the honorary society of Phi Beta Kappa. He was principal of Paris Academy a short time and then for three years was at the head of the classical department of the Portland high school. Within that period Colby College conferred upon him the degree of Master of Arts.

On July 1, 1885, Mr. Dunham came to Brattleboro with his brother, Charles W. Dunham, the latter wishing to look over the ground with a view to going into business. George L. Dunham had no intention of remaining in town, but a favorable business opportunity was presented and the two brothers bought Henry W. Simonds's shoe store, which was the south section of their present retail store on the east side of Main street. They started in business under the firm name of Dunham Brothers. George L. Dunham, having been a capable instructor in languages, at different times substituted in the Brattleboro high school.

Ten years after the business was started, in order to accommodate the rapidly growing trade, the adjoining store on the north was leased and a wholesale business was started in a small way, the firm supplying shoes and rubbers to the small dealers about the county. Meanwhile, in 1893, Dunham Brothers bought a retail store in Bellows Falls, and Lyndon L. Dunham, a younger brother, became associated with the business and took charge of the Bellows Falls store. He came to Brattleboro in 1900 to take charge of the retail department and a brother-in-law, Harry E. Hamilton, took charge of the Bellows Falls store. A few years later the store at Bellows Falls was disposed of and Mr. Hamilton went to Greenfield to engage in business.

The business continued to increase, necessitating the erection of two six-story brick buildings, the first in 1901, for the firm's exclusive use, in the rear of its retail department, after it had occupied all the available space in Hooker block. In March, 1916, arrangements were made for the firm to occupy, beginning April 1, the entire top floor of Hooker block as an office for the wholesale department, the quarters having been occupied up to then by the Odd Fellows, who vacated in order to occupy their new temple. Some five years ago the firm bought the Hooker block, together with the Ryther building on the south, owned by R. C. Averill.

The business was incorporated as the Dunham Brothers Co. January 1, 1909, and on April 5 of the following year Charles W. Dunham, treasurer, died. George L. Dunham then became both president and treasurer of the company, in which capacities he has served ever since. Lyndon L. Dunham is vice president and sales Manager and Harold W. Mason, George L. Dunham's son-in-law, who came into the firm in 1919, is assistant treasurer and secretary.

Thirty years ago the Dunham Brothers Co. became distributors for the New England states and Greater New York of the Ball Band line of rubber and woolen footwear manufactured by the Mishawaka Woolen Manufacturing Co. of Mishawaka, Ind. Aside from manufacturers, the company has for some time been the largest distributor of rubber footwear in the country. Its business the past year aggregated approximately $4,000,000. For the past 27 years the company's salesmen have assembled at the office here for a two-days' school. Following the recent Vermont flood disaster the company contributed $5,000 toward the relief fund being raised by the Brattleboro club.

For two years Mr. Dunham was president of the New England Shoe Wholesalers' Association and later was a member of the executive committee of the National Shoe Wholesalers' Association. He has been president, since its organization, of the Brattleboro Memorial hospital. Formerly he was a director of the Peoples National Bank, continuing as a director after that institution was merged with the Vermont National Bank until he resigned three years ago. At the time of his death he was a corporator of the Vermont Savings Bank. He was a member of Wantastiquet Lodge of Odd Fellows, Columbian Lodge of Masons, Webster Lodge of Perfection, William Vinton Council of Princes of Jerusalem, Marsh O. Perkins Chapter, Rose Croix, the Brattleboro Club, the Brattleboro Outing Club, the Brattleboro Country Club, and the Windham County Fish and Game Club. Formerly he was a member of the board of governors of the Country Club, and he always was a large contributor toward its support. In 1914 he was elected president of the Board of Trade, a predecessor of the Brattleboro Club, having previously served for some time as a director.

Mr. Dunham served as representative from Brattleboro in two sessions of the legislature and as one of the Windham county senators in one session. He was first elected representative in November, 1916. At that session he was chairman of the Windham county delegation and besides having important standing committee positions he was a member of the committee to escort ex-President William H. Taft before the assembly on the occasion of Mr. Taft's visit to Montpelier. He introduced the joint resolution assuring President Woodrow Wilson of the unwavering support of the state in the critical period of the world's history, the World War. Vermont was the first state to offer such support. One of his bills, which was enacted into law, was the act requiring five-days' notice of marriage intentions for persons marrying in towns in which neither party resides. He was appointed in 1917 chairman of the state board of charities and probation. Mr. Dunham was re-elected representative in 1918 and was elected a state senator in 1920, serving with distinction equal to that which characterized his first term in the House.

It was largely through Mr. Dunham's instrumentality that the White River Chair Co. was brought to Brattleboro, he being chairman of the committee which secured the necessary funds. He was one of the largest subscribers to the stock of the Fort Dummer Mills, subscriptions to which by Brattleboro men were necessary to secure the cotton mill for this town. At one time he was president of that corporation. He took stock in the Fort Dummer Realty Co. and the Cascade Realty Co. to furnish homes for employees of the Fort Dummer mills. After the failure of the National Novelty Co. of New York the existence of the S. A. Smith Co. now the Smith Wood Products Co. was threatened and Mr. Dunham was one of the few men who came forward and saved the industry to the town.

On July 2, 1889, Mr. Dunham married Miss Grace Evelyn Hawley, daughter of the late Newton I. Hawley and of Frances M. (McKnight) Hawley of 21 Putney road. Mr. Hawley was a prominent drygoods merchant, his store being where the Thomas pharmacy is now located. Three daughters were born to Mr. and Mrs. Dunham, one of whom died at birth. Another, Marion Hawley Dunham, died June 14, 1912, at the age of 13 years. Mrs. Dunham survives with one daughter, Evelyn Hawley, wife of Harold W. Mason. There is also one grandchild, George Dunham Mason. Mr. Dunham also leaves three brothers and a sister, Hiram W. of West Paris, Me., Horatio R. of Los Angeles, Calif., Lyndon L. of Brattleboro and Fannie F., wife of Harry E. Hamilton of Greenfield, Mass.

In memory of their daughter, Marion Hawley, Mr. and Mrs. Dunham gave the Marion Hawley Dunham nurses' home, a beautiful structure on the grounds of the Brattleboro Memorial hospital.

They had traveled widely in recent years, at times accompanied by other members of the family, visiting Europe, Bermuda, Florida, California, Canal Zone and other places.

Outside his home circle and his business the interest lying nearest to Mr. Dunham's heart was that of the Centre Congregational church and of the denomination as a whole. Mr. and Mrs. Dunham united with the Centre church in 1888 and they have ever since been particularly active and generous in its maintenance. When it was desired to buy the Goodhue property on Main street for parish house purposes they made a large contribution to the fund and later when new plans were formulated Mr. Dunham bought the property and afterwards gave it to the town as a site for the present Memorial armory, to which structure he also gave liberally. He and Mrs. Dunham were the largest contributors to the fund for erecting the Centre church memorial chapel and to the fund for buying the new Estey pipe organ, which recently was destroyed by fire. He always attended church service when in town and was one of the most outspoken in appreciation of the pulpit messages and music. For a long period he was a member of the prudential committee, the official board of the church, being a member of the board of religious education. He was superintendent of the Sunday School 10 years, from 1908 to 1918, and after the death of Edward C. Crosby he served as president of the school until January, 1926. He took a leading part in the discussions in the school until January, 1926. He took a leading part in the discussions in the men's class, where he will be greatly missed. It was through his generosity that the junior choir was organized and maintained.

Mr. Dunham served one term as president of the Vermont Congregational Conference and he had attended the National Council of Congregational Churches as a delegate and had served as moderator of the Windham Association of Congregational Churches. To the work of these organizations he gave liberally.

A strong editorial in the Reformer voiced the kindly feeling of countless people toward Mr. Dunham, and this editorial is reproduced here in full.

"George L. Dunham came to Brattleboro 42 years ago last July, a young schoolmaster in his middle twenties, to open a retail shoe store with his elder brother. When he died yesterday morning he was the town's foremost citizen, not only because of the success he had achieved in business, great as it was, but because of the many and varied services he had rendered in a public way, the generosity of his contributions to local institutions, his never flagging interest in everything that had to do with the welfare of the town which was so long his home and his conspicuous example of upright, Christian manhood.

"Since the death of his brother in 1907 he had been head of a concern whose business had grown rapidly in the face of conditions that required constant study—a concern so much in the nature of a New England-wide institution that its chief executive might have been pardoned if he had taken but indirect part in matters of a purely local nature. The thought of such a course, however, apparently never occurred to George Dunham. His willingness to help Brattleboro was as keen as if his business welfare was solely dependent on local prosperity. Not only did he never refuse public service in which he believed he could be useful, but what is more to the point he never shirked it. His work as an official in various mercantile, philanthropic and religious organizations, and as a member of three Vermont legislatures, was intelligent, conscientious and thorough. Once convinced of the merit of any project, he would work for it with a courage and determination that made light of all obstacles.

"As a member of the house in the sessions of 1917 and 1919 and of the senate in the session of 1921, Mr. Dunham made a name for himself as a level-headed, broad-minded legislator. Possibly the two measures in whose passage he took the greatest satisfaction were that providing for a five-day notice of marriage intentions and the bill legalizing Sunday recreation.

"Of Mr. Dunham's capacity as a business executive the success of the business of which he was so many years the directing force is sufficient example. By nature cautious, he was at the same time far-sighted in his judgment and unerringly accurate in his estimates of conditions. By his business associates, as well as those with whom his relations were those of employer, he was acknowledged to be scrupulously honest and fair-minded in every transaction.

"Reared in a home where thrift was inspired by stern necessity Mr. Dunham always cherished the homely virtues of his New England forbears, but as success came to him in a material way he quickly learned the satisfaction of well directed philanthropy. His contributions were made without ostentation, but they were always substantial and in direction where he believed they would do the most good. To the church with which he was so long and so actively connected he was an open-hearted, open-handed benefactor; likewise to the Memorial hospital, which owes its nurses' home to him. He gave the site for the Brattleboro Memorial armory and contributed generously to the cost of the construction. When calamity overtook the state recently his firm was among those to give largely to meet a public need.

"To those who knew him in an intimate social way George Dunham was a delightful companion. He drew his pleasure from the simple things but much of it came from sharing with others. In golf he found a recreation that had for him a never-ending zest, yet in spite of his ardor for the game itself he was never unmindful of the fact that after all it was a recreation. His wit was never failing, his outlook broad and wholesome, his precepts those of constant practice. He loved life itself. And up to the time he was stricken a week ago he was granted the supreme privilege of being able to enjoy it in the ways he liked best."

All Colby graduates will mourn the passing of this outstanding son of the College.

EDWARD HAWES SMILEY, '75

The death of Edward Hawes Smiley, of the class of 1875, on Thursday, October 4, will be sincerely mourned by a great company of Colby men and women as it will by countless students who have sat under his wise instruction. He gave a life time to the class room, chiefly in the teaching of the Latin Language and Literature, and his monument is the genuine affection which his students, young and old, feel for him because of the wholesome influence which he exerted over their lives. He began teaching in 1876 and continued actively at work in his profession for the long period of 52 years. He was principal of the Waterville High school from 1876 to 1884, after which he was the classical teacher in the Springfield, Mass., high school for six years, and then he became vice principal of the Hartford, Conn., high school for five years or until 1895, when he was elected principal, a position he held for 16 years. In 1911 he was made principal emeritus and as such he continued to teach in the school. For the full teaching period of 52 years he presided over but three schools, a circumstance which in itself is a remarkable record.

EDWARD HAWES SMILEY, LL.D., '75
A High School Teacher for 52 Years

The death of Dr. Smiley marks another break in the famous class of 1875. The members of this class assembled on the campus in 1925 to celebrate their 50th anniversary. At that time Judge Cornish was ill at his home in Augusta, but he was able to receive the members of his class at his bedside. Almost before the men of '75 had returned to their homes, Judge Cornish had passed away. Soon thereafter George W. Hall died, then Henry Hudson, and now Dr. Smiley. There are but few survivors of the class.

The Hartford paper contains the following sketch of Dr. Smiley's life:

Edward H. Smiley, '76, principal emeritus of the Hartford Public High School, died at his home at 12 North Marshall Street shortly before nine o'clock Thursday night after an illness of three days.

Dr. Smiley, who has taught Latin at the Hartford Public High School since he resigned as principal in 1911, attended his classes Monday but complained of a bad cold which had settled in his lungs. He remained away from school the following three days but shortly before his death Thursday night he appeared to be improving and was planning to return to school Monday. He suffered a relapse shortly after dinner and died soon after his physician Dr. Edward A. Dewing, reached his bedside.

The former principal of the Hartford high school was graduated from Colby College in 1875 with a degree of B.A. Shortly afterwards he was awarded an M.A. degree and entered the teaching profession in Maine, his native State. A few years later he went to the old Springfield High School, now the Central High School of that city, and remained there until he came to Hartford in 1890 as vice-principal.

In 1895 he succeeded as principal Charles H. Douglas and continued in this office until 1911 when ill health forced him to resign. He was appointed principal emeritus and continued his contact with the high school as teacher of Latin. A few years ago Colby College awarded him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

During his administration and subsequent to his resignation he was actively interested in all school problems. A member of the Twentieth Century Club which he attended regularly for 25 years and of the University Club, Dr. Smiley was recognized as a scholar and an administrator of outstanding abilities.

His standing as a principal is evidenced by his membership in the Headmasters' Association, comprising 100 principals of public and private high schools throughout the United States. As an example of his extreme popularity with his pupils, many of whom in this city have attested his ability to inspire them both in and after school years, the local chapter of the National Honor Society was named the Smiley Chapter when it was organized here.

Dr. Smiley leaves his son, Ralph W. Smiley, formerly connected with the Aetna Life Insurance Company of this city but now a resident of Verona, N. J., and a brother in California. His wife died several years ago. He was a Mason, and a member of the Phi Beta Kappa honorary fraternity.

A graduate of the Hartford high school, now living in Cambridge, Mass., wrote for the Hartford Times an appreciation of Dr. Smiley, which is printed below:

"As a former pupil of Mr. Smiley, might I add a few words of humble tribute to his hallowed memory?

"I have never had a teacher who had a greater love for his pupils. He would lie awake until one and two o'clock in the morning thinking of ways in which he could interest us in the writings of Cicero. Though he was in his seventieth year, he would get to school at eight o'clock to conduct a volunteer class for reading Latin. No pupil ever found him too busy to take a half hour or more after school to explain the difficult passages of the Latin text. He was the counselor and friend of scores of pupils who sought advice concerning their later studies and future careers.

"In 1921 many students resorted to the unethical and futile system of using English translations for their Latin texts. Mr. Smiley asked his classes to forego this practice. Such was the affection he had aroused in his students that they gave up the use of these translations.

"Few who were privileged to sit in the classes will forget his acuteness of analysis. To read Cicero with him was a lesson in thoroughness.

"Just as a life guided by the will of God is the greatest witness of the power of religion, so is a man whose character represents the best in the classical tradition the strongest argument for the study of Latin. Mr. Smiley was a true humanist. Moderation, precision and true proportion were truly his. He detested excess in every form. He was one of those fine old schoolmasters who transmitted to his pupils not only a knowledge of his subject but the essentials of a philosophy of life as well.

"Hundreds and probably thousands, of men and women in Hartford will bear witness to his influence in their lives. I had the privilege of speaking with him last Christmas vacation about the future of Hartford High school. He seemed worried that the study of Classics might be lessened. He hoped no other qualifications than those of character and ability would enter into the selection of high school teachers.

"Perhaps our most sincere tribute to Mr. Smiley can be our continued loyalty to the kind of a school to which he devoted his life—one where the faculty would be not only teachers of subjects but also builders of men and women. He knew no distinction of color, race or creed. He respected every pupil for his individual worth. We can think of him as the father in Longfellow's 'Evangeline'.

'Stately and stalwart was he An oak that was covered with snowflakes.'

"The teacher's desk in Room 25 can be furnished with another person. Mr. Smiley can never be replaced."

ALFRED C. WHITE, '22

The ALUMNUS finds that no mention has ever been made of the death of Alfred C. White, of the class of 1922 who died in Montreal, June 18, 1926.

He was born in the town of Lisbon Falls, Me., May 4, 1898, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. O. White and was a graduate of the Lisbon Falls high school in 1918. He took a course in the Maine School of Commerce. In September, 1925, he accepted a position as instructor and coach in a boys' private school in Gladstone, N. J., and letters from that school prove how well he was appreciated there.

It was while teaching in this school that Mr. White was taken ill and later returned home. Since that time he underwent two surgical operations at the Royal Victoria hospital, Montreal. After the first one he returned home and seemed to recover rapidly. It was known, however, that he had to submit to another and more serious operation, and a few weeks later he returned and submitted to the more serious and major operation.

Besides his parents he leaves two brothers, Alvah White of Lewiston and Freeman of Lisbon Falls.

CHARLES FREDERIC SMITH, '93

Charles Frederic Smith, of the class of 1893, died in Milo, Me., August 8, 1928, after a long illness. The following account of his life has been furnished the ALUMNUS by Mrs. Smith:

"In the death of Rev. Charles F. Smith of Milo, which occurred on Wednesday of last week after a long and painful illness, the Maine Conference has lost one of its most faithful members. Through all his suffering he remained brave and courageous, and kept a perfect faith in God.

"Mr. Smith was born in Dixmont, Me., January 24, 1870, the son of Walter G. and Anna (Powlesland) Smith. He graduated from Hampden Academy in 1889, Colby College in 1893, and Boston University School of Theology in 1897. He joined the East Maine Conference in 1899, holding important offices in that body, and in the Maine Conference after the two were united.

"He was a trustee of East Maine Conference Seminary from 1907 until his death, being secretary most of that time. He served the following charges: Palermo and Montville, Georgetown and Arrowsic, Sheepscott Circuit, Rockport and Lincolnville Beach, Dover-Foxcroft, Vinalhaven, Camden, Union and Washington; Milo, Brownville Junction and Derby, and for the last three years Milo alone

"In all the places where he labored there are loving memories of this Christian gentleman who won many souls to Christ. He took the retired relation at the last session of the Conference, and since that time had remained among his Milo friends.

"April 14, 1897, Mr. Smith was united in marriage to Miss Myrtilla A. Smith of Corinna, Me. He is survived by his wife, an adopted daughter, Mrs. Royce Bartlett of Camden, his aged father and mother, two sisters, Mrs. James Taylor of Cornish and Mrs. Charles Hamilton of Portland, and three brothers, Arthur Smith of Portland, Rev. F. Ernest Smith of Camden, and Earl G. Smith, a local preacher residing at Dixmont.

"The funeral service was in charge of Rev. Ralph F. Lowe, superintendent of Augusta District, assisted by Rev. T. C. Chapman, Rev. L. G. March, Rev. C. W. Lowell, Rev. Frank H. Hall, Rev. Job R. Howse, and Rev. Hayward S. Thomas. Interment was at Dixmont.

ADDIE IMOGENE BENNETT, '10

The news of the death of Addie Imogene Bennett, '10, will be received with very great regret by the many Colby students who were college-mates of Miss Bennett. The ALUMNUS is in possession of nothing except the press announcement of Miss Bennett's death, which is here given, under a Danforth, Maine, date-line:

The death of Addie Imogene, only child of Horace A. and Mae A. Bennett, occurred Friday, August 10th at her home in Danforth after an illness of several months. She was born in Danforth, Me., May 4th, 1889, attended the public schools there until her entrance as a freshman at Coburn Classical Institute, Waterville, Me. After her graduation as an honor student, she spent a year at Bradford Academy. Aside from regular boarding school activities, Miss Bennett played on the basketball and hockey teams, excelling equally in these sports.

She entered Colby College for one year and finished her course as an advanced standing student at Smith College, Northampton, Mass., June, 1910. She also studied pipe organ under the direction of Prof. Moog, now head of the music department.

Miss Bennett taught English and history in the high school at Brunswick, Me., 1910-1911 and in Danforth high school 1911-1912.

A few years later she took a course in Home Economics at Columbia University.

The deceased won the love and admiration of those with whom she came in contact, showing a kindly, happy disposition, a friendly loyalty, a spirit of fair mindedness combined with a keen intellect and unusual executive ability.

Many friends attended the funeral services held Sunday afternoon at her home on Maple street under the direction of P. W. Lyon. Rev. I. H. Lidstone officiated. Two vocal selections were rendered by Dr. S. D. Springer and Fred Jones. There were many beautiful floral tributes. Sympathy is extended to her mother who survives her.

GEORGE WESTON YOUNG, '77

"Prof. George W. Young passed away very suddenly on July 10", is the only information that the ALUMNUS has received about the death of this graduate. It may be inferred that he died in Bristol, Maine, where he had a summer home and where he spent much of his time.

Mr. Young, according to the General Catalogue, was born in Corinna, Maine, October 18, 1854. He entered the teaching profession and taught schools in Maine, Washington, D. C., Iowa; for a time was superintendent of schools in Manson, Iowa, and in Pipestone, Minn. He was principal of a private school in Boston, Mass., in 1907 and on. He made his home at 41 Rutland Square, Boston.

HERBERT WILDER HALL, '01

Dr. Herbert Wilder Hall, '01, died on Friday, November 2, 1928, at the Augusta General Hospital. The following sketch of his life appeared in the Daily Kennebec Journal under date of November 3:

Dr. Hall was born September 27, 1882 at Eliot, Maine, the son of William Mitchell and Ella Boynton Hall. The widow, two sisters, Mrs. Ada Folsom and Miss Annie Hall and two nieces and one nephew, all of Plymouth, Mass., survive him.

His early education was received at Erskine Academy and Coburn Classical Institute. Twenty years ago he married Mabel Goodwin and one son, Herbert Wilder, Jr., was born who died in infancy. Following his graduation from Bowdoin Medical college in 1908 he served as an intern at the Augusta State Hospital and later was promoted to physician and pathologist, which office he filled efficiently for six years. In 1916 he took post-graduate work in the X-ray department at the Massachusetts General Hospital and the Boston City Hospital connected with the Harvard Medical school. Under the direction of Dr. George of Boston, one of the country's most famous and best known leaders of the profession he also took post graduate work as well as at Cornell Medical School in New York. He attained more post graduate work in physiotherapy under Major Sampson of New York. In September, 1917, he was commissioned a 1st Lieutenant of the U. S. Army Medical Corps, and was engaged in X-ray work at Evacuation hospitals No. 2 and 49 in France and Germany. Since 1919 he has been engaged in X-ray and physiotherapy work in Augusta in the Augusta General Hospital.

He applied himself to his task at hand with a thoroughness and a whole hearted interest that was characteristic of his whole life. He used the same methods in his friendship and in his daily life and he was quiet and unassuming withal. Those who were closest to him professionally and in the work-a-day world loved him for the sterling character and the noble and kind soul that he was. He had his niche in the general scheme of things which he endeavored to fill well and efficiently and he went about his work with a singleness of purpose that won the highest respect and admiration of all.

Dr. George of Boston, who was his teacher and who perhaps understood the rare qualities of the professional man as well as anyone, when hearing that Dr. Hall was to be at the Augusta General Hospital said, "How fortunate you are to have Herbert Hall on your staff."

In his years of service at the Augusta General Hospital, Dr. Hall had built up a department that is excelled by few of its kind. He put into his work his very best efforts, was untiring in his endeavors to keep the work at a top-notch standard; was always ready and willing and eager to help his associates and any and all that he could in his own unobtrusive way, he went about his work and the helping of others that bespeak highly for his make-up.

For the past year Dr. Hall had been in poor health. During the past winter he had a severe illness and during the summer was considerably better. Constant application to his task at hand, ambitious endeavor and untiring efforts that taxed the physical man beyond his strength added in tearing down human body and laying it liable to human ills which he could not throw off. He had been a patient at the Augusta General Hospital since September 20.

MY STATE OF MAINE

BY EARLE HURD DAVIS, '14

The first of the states to the eastward,
The last of the states to the west,
Her emblems—the spruce and the pine-tree,
Her standard—the truth is the best.
Lake-dotted, indented and charming,
Pine-studded, with forest and fen
Maine is the Mother of Mountains
Maine is the Mother of Men.

Her rivers flow fast to the ocean
Her ships float staunch on the sea,
In tradition her history is grounded
From corruption her annals are free.
When war clouds descend on the nation
Quickly she answers again
Maine is the Mother of Mountains
Maine is the Mother of Men.

Rock-ribbed, unchanging and steady
Hospitable, cool-minded and calm
A sentinel state in the Northland
Her children from forest and farm
Strong in the strength of their vigor

Still young at three-score and ten
Maine is the Mother of Mountains
Maine is the Mother of Men.

The first of the states in the sunrise
The last of the states in its time,
In summer a nation's wide playground
Green-swarded, majestic, sublime.
Pine-jewelled, sea-bounded and hoary Proud parent as always she's been
Maine is the Mother of Mountains
Maine is the Mother of Men.

FOR THE CLASS OF '88*

BY BENJAMIN PLINY HOLBROOK, A.B., '88

When an "old grad", at reunion, looks back over forty years,
Seems the total half that number, or an epoch it appears,
For to some life's been a struggle and to others it's been play,
In a happy occupation spending every busy day.

*NOTE:—Given at the dinner of the Colby Alumni Association. Commencement, 1928.

Some have toiled for every mouthful, some have loitered half the way,
But at length all rest together, in December and in May.

Has one earned his rest eternal or his task beyond the grave?

That's the question that confronts him as he sees the grasses wave
Over faces that he cherished when the world and love were young,
Over forms as graceful as his who the Grecian discus flung,
Over brains that thought in lyrics, over poems yet unsung,
Over hearts that loved each other far beyond my feeble tongue.

Bear with me, my younger hearers, and awhile forbear
to snarl,
For I spoke of Gibbs and Suckling and my own dear brother Carl.
Yes, they died before three-score, to say nothing of the ten,
And yet they had earned the plaudits both of women
and of men,
And they may be only resting till the incarnation when
The Great Master calls them forward to perform his work again.

But we others who have lingered and have toiled and struggled on
Have seen things that made us wonder; some of the illusions gone.
We have watched old Nature's process through inexorable years,
Ever rising evolution thinning out the nubbin ears, Wars and worries weeding weaklings out in spite of all their tears,
And mistaken agitation of the "forward-looking seers."

We have seen a despotism fester in a sunny isle,
Next door neighbor to us southward, in the tropics'
friendliest smile;
Read polite notes without number that to Spain became a bore;
Till the distant wardrum's beating banished rest along our shore;
Seen McKinley to the leaguéd Europe Nations show
the door,
And four hundred years of horrors ended in a half-year more.

We have learned, except our parsons, that a nation will not starve
From excessive population if its neighbor it can carve;
We have seen but scraps of paper of most sacred treaties made;
Watched an unoffending Belgium spitted on a Teuton blade;
Heard for years the roar of cannon never for an instant fade
Till exhaustion made the Germans end their "warfare with the spade."

So I'm very pessimistic of the world's outlawing war;
I have heard world peace predictions in a dozen forms before.
Always has its Jonus Temple had its brazen gates ajar;
Not a year without its conflict, not a head without its scar,

BENJAMIN PLINY HOLBROOK, A.B., '88
On Boston Globe Staff

Not a wealthy home but's envied, no rich Nation but afar
Stands its bitter commerce-rival, eager for its spoils in war.

So, dear boys, when your predictions of millenium I hear,
Please forgive me if I smile within, or if I dread and fear
My Messiah's not Isaiah's; I have hearkened to the Lord
Who declared to me "I came not to bring peace; I bring the sword."
Yes, it ends peace-compromising, voids each wrong-intending word
And advances justice faster than a cycle of accord.

They say the Chrysler 70 has a very speedy gait;
List to me sing the praises of our Colby, '88.
It is not the latest model; some speak of it as old;
It has lost its peppy sparking due to timings manifold;
It has ceased to cut in often, as it did when we were bold,
But we're not prepared to junk it, no, not for all your gold.

It has carried us in comfort over many a hill and dale,
And unlocked as many pleasures as if 'twere made by Yale.
There may be one two-car owner with a Hardpan
made in France,
But the rest of us were satisfied upon its springs to dance.
In many a fearsome tourney we've been wont to shake a lance
With our Colby Rosinante 'gainst the face of Ignorance.

Now the years are growing shorter, though the days are growing long,
And an end must come to all things, even to this silly song.
Shall we spend what's left of living mourning for our wasted hours?
Shall we seek by Duco finish to pretend we've pristine powers?
No; we'll strive to run each minute of the time that still is ours
'Till we go into dead storage, when the last black night-cloud lowers.

GOOD MORNING

BY ARTHUR BARDWELL PATTEN, D.D., '90

I would kneel at the Morning's gate of hope
With a measureless sense of need,
Yet arise to the new day's call of God
With a heart His love had freed.

I would find forgiveness a breath of life,
And a pledge of self made whole;
I would enter the heaven of grace and truth
Thro' the wonder of the soul.

I would climb by a stairway of surprise
To the vision of larger light;
Yet aspire to the final epic goal
Thro' the common quest of the right.

I would pause at the threshold reverently,
But with faith august and high;
I would lift my head, I would bathe my brow
In the cleansing deep of the sky.

But the sky should be near as well as far,
And the vast Beyond within,
While the boundless kingdom of God should come
In the love that makes men kin.

ON THE EDITOR'S APPEAL

BY HARRY H. UPTON, A.B., '17

(NOTE—The Editor of the ALUMNUS appealed to the graduates to send in corrected addresses, and incidentally their subscriptions to the ALUMNUS. The appeal was headed, "An Appeal—On Bended Knee". The reply by Mr. Upton appears below.)

On bended knee, with hands applied,
And far away look in his eye,
The lone ALUMNUS editor

ARTHUR B. PATTEN, D.D., '90

Last eve I did espy;
Oh never till Will Rogers wins
The Presidential race,
Can I forget the look of pain,
Upon H. C. L.'s face.

And even as I gazed, he spoke—
"I ask but your address;
"'Tis surely such a little thing,
"You'll send it me, I guess;
"And oh"—the kneeling figure moaned—
As pained his kneeling knee—
"For Colby's graduate magazine
"Two dollars send to me".

I cannot keep thee kneeling there,
Thou pleading editor,
Begone thy far-off heavenly look,
Arise thou from the floor!
Two dollars find enclosed as prayed,
Long may your job hold out!
Such answers should increase both list
And faith in prayer, no doubt.

Causes for Optimism at Colby

BY CARL JEFFERSON WEBER, M.A.

If I were a clergyman, I might preach a sermon on the familiar text of Phillippians IV, 8: "Brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, Think on These Things."

But this is not a sermon,—merely a plain statement of a few simple facts. Let me try to tell you as briefly as possible why I think that

PROF. CARL JEFFERSON WEBER, M.A., (Oxon)
Roberts Professor of English Literature

Colby is alive today with new life. You can check off the reasons on your ten fingers.

In the first place, I think that it is a sign of real life that we maintain the idea here that men are more important than buildings. I have been to colleges where the belief was held that unless you have marble halls with elevator service to recitation rooms with Turkish rugs and frescoed walls, you don't have a college. As a member of the Executive Committee I can testify to the fact that throughout the time of my connection with the college administration, far more attention has been paid to questions of personality, knowledge, and intelligence, than to matters of equipment and buildings. When a man is alive and well, he spends little time thinking about his tomb.

As a second sign of real life, I point to the fact that brains are here rated higher than brawn. Mere athletes are not gods at Colby, as they are reputed to be in some institutions. We do not hire athletes to win victories for us. We have never paid an athletic coach more than our president. When one of our graduates was appealed to for a contribution to the gymnasium fund, he replied that to his mind the only things a college need be ashamed of are its faculty and its library; that he was therefore not so much interested in a gymnasium, but would be glad to contribute to a book fund, and enclosed a generous check for that purpose.

A third sign of life is the fact that the college has never had a more carefully selected faculty than at present. We have been making steady progress toward the possession of the best faculty our funds will provide. Especially in the quality of instructors for Freshmen, the college is showing unquestionable vitality. Seven new men were added to the faculty last fall, not a one of whom was appointed without the most conscientious scrutiny and comparison. When a college is dying, its faculty deteriorates.

A fourth sign of genuine life in the college is the fact that our faculty are generally and genuinely more interested in students than in research. We have no Ph.D. idolatry here. As far as I know, we no longer have professors who could begin the morning lecture by remarking: "A few more pearls, gentlemen, a few more pearls!"—To the faculty, students are more important than subjects.

A fifth sign of vitality is the fact that he have here no craze for mere antiquity. Traditions gain no respect merely because they are old.—I once attended a university in which the rules were printed in Latin, in which an oral examination was a "Viva", and when you reported yourself as sick to the Excuse Office, you said you were "Aeger." Sanskrit, Anglo-Saxon, and astrology are not taught here as the keys to the modern world.

Nor is our vitality a mere mushroom growth. A sixth fact that I shall call to your attention is the absence of any craze for mere modernity. When you hear of H. L. Mencken's poking fun at the college that offered a course in "The Teaching Values of the Book of Jonah," you know it is not Colby College. We offer no courses in the Psychology of Automobile Salesmanship, or in English Composition for Radio-Advertisement Writers.

A seventh indication of life is the fact that our present student body has been more carefully selected than ever before. As we have approached and at times passed the limits of our ability to take proper care of those who have applied for admission, we have been able to pick and choose. Entrance examination standards have been raised. The numerical limit set by the Trustees on the number of women, and the limit set by our classroom and laboratory facilities on the number of men we can handle, have made it possible to insist year after year on more rigorous intellectual standards. The chief and welcome product of this care in selection of students is an extremely low mortality rate. Colby College shows an almost astounding equality among the numbers in its four classes. Our Senior class this year is the largest in the whole history of the college. There are among the men only six less Seniors than Juniors, and the Sophomores outnumber the Juniors by only two. It isn't a huge Freshman class that indicates real intellectual life in a college, but how large a proportion of the class last through to the Senior year. The close approach to equality among our four classes is an excellent condition.

An eighth sign of life is the direct result of this improvement in our student body,—namely an improvement in the intellectual atmosphere of the college. I think we have the largest circulation of books of all the Maine colleges. Colby is one of the few colleges that I have ever heard of, where the preference expressed by the students themselves on written ballots rated a Phi Beta Kappa key as of higher value to them than an athletic "C". The number of our students going on to graduate work is constantly increasing. We had a greater number of applicants for the Rhodes Scholarship this year than ever before. And above all, this improvement in the scholarly atmosphere of the college shows itself in the intellectual independence and integrity of many of our students. More of them, I believe, than ever before, are refusing to be stampeded into mob activities by mere emotional appeal. There are still those who tear their hair and rave about showing "college spirit," but I for one am rejoicing at the indication of the presence among us of ever larger numbers of students who are not fooled into thinking that "college spirit" means grandstand yells, and who have caught the idea that the real college spirit is a zeal for working one's way into the company of the scholars of all ages, and a genuine desire for the culture that can make social refinements a familiar pleasure. We have fewer students who are here in pursuit of the "movie" idea of college spirit. The American college is growing up; it is putting away childish things.

A ninth and very important sign of life in this college is the steady and persistent and commendable progress in the raising of our graduation standards. This progress has been amazingly rapid since the war and has not stopped. I invite any of you to compare our requirements for admission, or for graduation, or for graduate work, with those of other colleges of our size. I think none of you need fear that the quality of the education you are receiving in this easternmost liberal college of America is inferior to what you would receive in the great majority of similar institutions. Ask any of our graduates who have gone on to further study at Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Clark, Brown, Pennsylvania, or Oxford, whether they have found themselves satisfactorily prepared, in comparison with students from other institutions. I have no worry about their reply.

My tenth and final reason for believing that Colby is acquiring new life is that she is among those alert and progressive colleges which are directing attention to the problem of providing better training for our better students. We have definitely limited the amount of merely passing work that we accept for a degree; we have increased the preparation demanded in a Major Subject; we have given special recognition to "A" students, by excuse from normal requirements and by double cancellation of "D's"; and the inauguration of general or comprehensive examinations for Seniors, which was proposed here over five years ago, has been again brought up for consideration this year.

For these ten reasons, I submit that we have cause to be optimistic. The truly live college of these days is a collection of young men and older men who are eager to use their heads. I think we have that here.

Signs of a Better Day

New York City,
October 27, 1928.

Dear Mr. Libby

I had such a delightful and interesting experience the other evening that I would like to share it with as many Colby friends as possible and so I am writing to you in a letter which, if you find it sufficiently interesting, you might like to publish in the ALUMNUS.

By way of introduction, I am secretary to the Director of the Department of Religious Education and Psychology at Union Theological Seminary, New York City. Many people think that Union is a part of Columbia University not only because of its location, but also on account of its close association and co-operation with the University, yet Union is a separate institution—an institution where there are no ecclesiastical restrictions either as to faculty or students and where the whole spirit is the promotion of brotherly love and democratic ideals.

We hear a great deal these days about "changing religion" and often I think we are quite at a loss to understand the meaning of the words. It seems to me that the account which follows is a concrete example of what is happening to a certain extent and what ought to happen far more widely.

Some weeks ago, Professor Harrison Elliott of the Department of Religious Education at Union decided to give a joint dinner to the members of his own department and the Department of Religious Education at Teachers' College and it is this delightful and unique affair that I want to tell you about.

There were eighteen people present at the dinner which was given in the apartment of Professor and Mrs. Elliott. Among them were Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians. There was a Roman Catholic priest, member of the order of Paulist Fathers and lecturer at both Teachers' College and Yale University. There was a Jewish rabbi from one of the well-known synagogues of New York, also a lecturer at Teachers' College. There was a negro girl from New England who is secretary to the head of the Department of Religious Education at Teachers' College. There was a missionary who has spent many years in China; two Princeton men, both ex-Presidents of the Triangle Club, one of whom has been teaching for three years in the American University at Cairo, Egypt; a young psychologist of great promise whose book "Experimentation and Measurement in Religious Education" is known wherever religious education is taught. There was Professor Elliott, father of the group thinking process, who is known both nationally and internationally; there was the President of the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association; the head of the Union School of Religion, and others.

And how did this cosmopolitan gathering get along? What did they talk about? Did anyone feel out of place? If so, it was not apparent for a moment during the entire evening. Someone—a man, of course,—started the evening off with a story about a Chinese barber-shop which displayed a sign: "Silent barber-shop. Separate room for ladies." Someone else related the gist of a church notice which he had recently seen in the paper about Reverend B—. The notice read in part: "The Reverend B—will preach on 'Thirty Years of Service'. The choir will sing 'O my God, how great art Thou'." One spoke about Christian missions in the Orient; another gave his ideas on the prohibition question. This lead up to the present campaign and to the amusement of everyone, the rabbi announced that he had never intended to vote for Al Smith until he happened to hear over the radio that Smith's middle name was Emanuel and that settled it. On the other hand, the priest is voting for Hoover and it was at his suggestion that a straw vote was taken of those present as to their political preference. Contrary to all practice, it was not taken until the young man who has been in Egypt had given a campaign speech on a hitherto unknown candidate. As he is a very clever impersonator, the speech was greeted with shouts of laughter, but was not very convincing since he was the only one who voted for that candidate.

The dinner itself was informal and original. The guests were seated at small tables and after each course the men removed the plates, went to the kitchen for the next course, and changed partners. By this means, everyone became acquainted.

After dinner someone suggested music and our young impersonator, who has been offered big money on Broadway, but prefers Religious Education, played for us a "Sectional Patriotic Number", that is, he played "Yankee Doodle" with his left hand and "Dixie" with his right. A case of not letting the left hand know what the right hand doeth. Try this if you think it is easy. For a half an hour we were entertained by and joined in such elevating songs as "Tulip Time in Sing Sing", "It Ain't Goin' to Rain No More". A prime favorite, suggested by the priest, was

"Please check your chewing gum and raisins at the door
And you'll hear some Bible stories such as you never heard before."

And we did, supplied mostly by the young psychologist who has also been head of the Union School of Religion. Everyone—Jew and Gentile, Protestant and Catholic, black and white joined in the chorus whenever laughter would permit. Finally the radio was turned on and we all listened to the Boston speech of Alfred Emanuel Smith and we all stayed to the end. All? No, the Roman Catholic priest left in the midst—someone said because he couldn't stand any more criticism of Hoover, but it really was for another reason.

During the evening practically every topic of current interest was touched upon and discussed without animus, without prejudice, by that cosmopolitan group: religion, politics, prohibition, war, peace, industrial problems, race. Through it all was a spirit of cooperation and helpfulness and whether the topic was serious or humorous, everyone entered into it wholeheartedly.

This account, it seems to me, of what forward-looking people in this section are trying to do to break down the barriers of prejudice and narrow-mindedness is one to be given serious thought wherever people are interested in bringing about a closer union in the church. The whole thing was so simple and informal, yet it left a feeling of goodwill and fellowship with all who were present.

Sincerely yours,

IDA PHOEBE KEEN.

With the College Faculty

Professor Carl J. Weber conducted three graduate courses in English Literature at the Johns Hopkins University Summer School, 1928; he has reviewed Two American Pioneers (Wyman) for "Modern Language Notes"; he attended the 16th National Council of Phi Beta Kappa, as delegate of the Colby Chapter, held at Ohio Wesleyan (Deleware, Ohio) September 11-12, 1928; he was a speaker at a meeting of the College Section of the Maine Teachers' Association, Bangor, October 26.

Professor Curtis H. Morrow, Ph.D., is the author of a pamphlet entitled, "The Preparation of Social Science Papers".

Professor Arthur G. Eustis was employed during the first part of his summer vacation in the Financial Department of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. His work was in connection with handling the Company's recent stock issue. Professor Eustis did some accounting work at the Summer School of Boston University.

Professor Edward H. Perkins is contributor to the American Journal of Science, Volume XIV. His subject is "Contributions to the Geology of Maine". Professor Perkins' contribution dealt with "The Evolution of the Drainage of the Waterville Region".

Professor E. J. Colgan taught this summer at the University of Vermont Summer School with courses in the field of "Intelligence and Educational Measurements".

PROF. EDWARD H. PERKINS, PH.D.
Head of Department of Geology

Professor Cecil A. Rollins has been engaged for the last two summers in preparing the text for a Course in English Composition. He is this year using the text for his freshman classes in a mimeographed edition. Prof. Rollins is on the list of speakers for the Waterville Woman's Club, his subject, "The American Drama Since 1900".

Professor Nathaniel E. Wheeler and Professor Winthrop H. Stanley attended the session on Physics at the Summer School for Engineering Teachers at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, July 9-27. This session was under the auspices of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education in cooperation with M.I.T. The attendance was limited to 40, but included professors from about 35 colleges in various parts of the United States.

A new committee of the Faculty is that on "Visiting Lectureres", with Professor Herbert C.

Libby, as chairman. The first to lecture under the auspices of the College was Rollo Walter Brown, of Cambridge, Mass., who lectured on "The Romance of Being a Student". The Chapel was completely filled. A reading of Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac", by Edward Abner Thompson, M.A., of Boston, was given on November 20. Another lecturer who will address the students on "The Writing of Historical Novels", is Hugh Pendexter, known to thousands of men and women in America for his historical books. A fourth lecturer will be General Herbert M. Lord, of the class of 1884, Director of the Bureau of the Budget. General Lord has already accepted an invitation to address the student body, probably in January, next.

Professor Webster Chester continues this fall his series of lectures on "Evolution" before the students of Bangor Theological Seminary.

A Bit of History

BY THE EDITOR

In the years to come inquiry will be made as to what prompted the Board of Trustees to inaugurate a campaign for a fund with which to build a new athletic building. Of course the records will be found in the large book belonging to the Secretary of the Board, but as that book is not easily accessible and is usually tucked away in a bank vault that it may escape prying eyes, other sources will need to be found.

The two documents given below tell the story fairly well. They do not tell of any meetings that were held by the students, or of any later campaign among the students for the raising of the fund; they simply give the large facts of petition and reply.

Document Number One.

"To the President and Members of the Board of Trustees of Colby College, Gentlemen:

"I beg to present the following petition unanimously adopted by the Men's Division in mass meeting assembled on the thirteenth day of April, nineteen hundred and twenty-six.

"WHEREAS, the present gymnasium at Colby College is woefully inadequate in size to accommodate the student body, is sadly lacking in proper equipment for the training of our athletic teams and for the physical development of the whole student body, and is so antiquated in construction and appointment as to offer a positive menace to the health of its users,

"WHEREAS, our college is at a distinct and unfair advantage in being forced to compete athletically with its three rival Maine colleges now possessing modern gymnasiums,

"WHEREAS, we, the entire men's division of Colby College, desire to promote the welfare of the institution,

"Be it Resolved, that we hereby petition the President and the Board of Trustees of Colby College to appoint a committee which will conduct an immediate and vigorous drive for the

Document Number Two:

Waterville, Me., April 22, 1926.

"Mr. Stephen Berry, Representing the Men of Colby College:

"My dear Sir:

"At the meeting of the Board of Trustees of Colby College, held in Portland, April 17, the Secretary presented a petition signed by you in behalf of the men of the College, asking that immediate steps be taken to provide an adequate and suitable gymnasium, and rehearsing the disadvantages of the present situation, and the difficult condition which it imposed upon the athletic teams of the College, also the unfavorable comparisons that were drawn between Colby and her competitors in athletics.

"It was unanimously voted that the Secretary acknowledge the receipt of the petition and express to the petitioners the entire sympathy of the Trustees with the spirit and object of the petition. They will take the matter up in good faith at the June meeting, to consider and

Colby Night

BY LESTER F. WEEKS, A.M., '15

Students, alumni and friends, in larger numbers than ever before, celebrated Colby Night on October 26th in the Gymnasium.

Professor Ernest C. Marriner, '13, chairman of the committee on arrangements, presided.

The college band awakened the spirit of youth and the love of the game in the "old grad". John Richardson, '29, the college cheer leader, received good support in his efforts to synchronize eight hundred vibrations into one blast of vocal enthusiasm.

The program was more varied than in past years and was received with interest and attention.

The first speaker of the evening was Judge Warren C. Philbrook, '82, president of the Colby Alumni Association. Judge Philbrook declined to qualify as an expert witness on football in the case of White Mule versus Polar Bear, and continued his remarks to the game of life. Principal Ralph L. Hunt brought greetings from Hebron Academy and told of the rise to fame of past football heroes who had followed the road marked "Work".

Interspersed with the speaking program were two boxing bouts between members of the Waterville Boys' Club. These boys were trained by Frank Goodrich, '26, and George Bernhardt, '28, supervisors of the Club.

Another unusual and interesting feature of the program was an exhibition of fencing between Thomas Record, '30, and Arthur Snyder, '29. These men had been trained by Professor Viles of the German Department.

The next speaker, Judge James Hudson, '00, showed that success in football as well as in life is the result of will and perseverance. T. Raymond Pierce, '98, the man who first made the Colby Echo a weekly paper, read an interesting original poem dealing with college life.

Mayor Harold Dubord, '14, brought greeting and best wishes from the city. C. Harry Edwards spoke for the faculty, and Horace Maxey, '29, president of the Student Council, for the students.

Hon. Herbert E. Wadsworth, '92, chairman of the Board of Trustees, introduced Charles S. Brown of Augusta who is to take charge of the financial drive for a new gymnasium.

The victory catalyser, Hon. Benedict Maher of Augusta, furnished the psychological background for a winning team. Mr. Maher was here last year and the demand for his return was universal. He predicted victory by three touchdowns—we won by two.

The program closed with a few words from Captain Robert Scott, '29, and Coach Edward Roundy. With his customary conservatism Coach Roundy analysed the situation and closed with his prediction of a year ago. "I believe that we will win"—We did.

Cheers, songs and the characteristic Colby Night refreshments of sandwiches, coffee, and apples brought to a close one of the best Colby Day celebrations.

The Gymnasium Campaign

BY THE COMMITTEE

A total of $71,430 has been pledged toward the new Colby Gymnasium. This includes $48,320 pledged by graduates of the College, $470 pledged by members of the Faculty, exclusive of those not counted among the graduates, $1940 pledged by friends of the College, and $700 pledged and paid in by undergraduates of the College. This also includes two pledges of $10,000 each, previously unannounced, the names of the donors to be given out later. While the total amount pledged falls considerably short of the goal set, namely, $100,000, no one of the Special Committee feels discouraged. The Committee is confident that a short intensive drive will bring in the full sum and that before another Commencement work will have been begun upon the long-needed buildings.

A long stride forward has been made by the Committee in its selection of a full-time man whose duty will be to raise money for the College. The man selected is Charles S. Brown, of Augusta, Maine, whose experience here in Maine in raising several large funds for hospitals and other organizations justified the Committee in selecting him. It is announced that the salary of this man will be paid for out of private purses and not out of the college treasury. It is also announced that his services are likely to extend over a period of time and that the raising of this particular fund for the gymnasium is but one of several such projects. The Committee realizes that Colby is in need of a much larger fund than $100,000, that other new buildings are almost imperatively necessary. In other words, the Committee is looking far ahead, and this is as it should be.

The plans for raising further funds for the College will await the action of Mr. Brown. Whenever these plans are announced, it is urgently hoped that every form of cooperation will be offered him by graduates and friends of the College.

Colby Books That Every Graduate Should Own

THE HISTORY OF COLBY COLLEGE, 1820-1925, it being an account of its beginnings, progress and service. Published by the Board of Trustees of the College, and written by Edwin Carey Whittemore, D.D., of the class of 1879, long Secretary of the Board.

Three dollars per volume (275 pages). Order of the College Librarian.

FOOTPRINTS OF ARTHUR J. ROBERTS, containing selections from the writings of the late President Roberts. Published by the Board of Trustees, and edited by Professor Carl Jefferson Weber, of the College Faculty.

Two dollars per volume (223 pages). Order of the College Librarian.

UNDER THE WILLOWS, a book of verse contributed to college publications by Colby students over a period of 40 years. An introduction by the late Honorable Asher C. Hinds, of the class of '83. Compiled and edited by Professor Herbert Carlyle Libby, Litt.D., of the class of 1902.

One dollar per volume (98 pages). Order of the COLBY ALUMNUS.

The Fifteenth President of Colby College

FRANKLIN WINSLOW JOHNSON, A.M., L.H.D.

OF THE CLASS OF 1891

By THE EDITOR

AT the regular meeting of the Board of Trustees of the College, held in Portland, Maine, on Saturday, November 17, Franklin Winslow Johnson, A.M., L.H.D., of the class of 1891, Associate Professor of Education in Teachers' College, of Columbia University, was the unanimous choice of the Trustees as the fifteenth president of Colby College.

Since the death of President Arthur J. Roberts in October, 1927, the College has been without a president, and the work of administration has been carried on by an Executive Committee that was first appointed by President Roberts, and then reappointed by the Board of Trustees. While the Committee has been clothed with full powers of administration and has received the hearty cooperation of all those connected with the College, the arrangement has not been ideal, and the election of a new President will be received with unfeigned delight. As President-elect Johnson will not take office until after Commencement in June, 1929, the Committee will continue to administer the affairs of the College, until that time.

Speculation over the election of a new president has been unusually active for many months. No word came from the special committee charged with finding an executive except that it was generally known that Professor Johnson had been urged to accept the Colby presidency but that he felt he could not do so. The report therefore made by the special committee to the Board that Professor Johnson had reconsidered and would be willing to accept the office came as a surprise to all of its members. The vote electing Professor Johnson to the presidency was unanimous, a fact in itself that augurs well for the future administration of the College.

In the next issue of the ALUMNUS a sketch of President-elect Johnson's career as an educator will be given in full. It will suffice now to record only this: that his selection will meet with the heartiest approval of all Colby men and women, that he is eminently well qualified to take up the burdens laid down by the late President Roberts, and that his election will give new life to the institution and new courage and faith to those who are in charge of administering the affairs of this growing New England College.
