It was past midnight, yet still the sat by herself in an open window, when a hasty knock at the door was followed by the agitated voice of Nellie's nurse.

conjectured, with a fond, quiet smile. The book was her own.

And now that her dream of long years was realized, was she happy? Was she happy even when as its acknowledged author she was fated and censored by the highest and noblest in the land? Answer long hours of midnight watching, when sleep refused to kiss those burning eyes—when they gazed upward seeking to pierce through the mysterious stars—when a never satisfied rested again on the cold earth.

In the summer succeeding the appearance of her book, Cressy visited, with Mrs. Carroll, a celebrated watering-place. A strange multitude were gathered there, and Cressy, with her keen eye and knowledge of character, loved to watch them, in their eager pursuit of pleasure.

One evening Mrs. Carroll was sitting with Cressy by an open window, at a distance from the gay groups of people who were collected in the spacious drawing-room, when a little child glided towards them, and laid on Cressy's folded hands a bunch of flowers—heart's-ease and forget-me-nots. Cressy looked down at the little one, kindly, but her head, bowed with long, loose tresses of silken hair, was slightly bowed.

"Thank you," she said, in a low, sweet tone. Slowly the child raised her head, until her eyes, bluer than the forget-me-nots, rested full and fearless on her face. It was a strange, thrilling fact that went to Cressy's heart with its confiding glance!

"What is your name?" she asked, laying her hand on the soft hair.

"Nellie Leicester," whispered the child, "I am here with papa."

"And where is your mamma?" enquired Cressy, controlling her emotion, though her cheek was white, and her lips quivered.

"Mamma is in heaven," was the almost whispered reply, as the blue eyes were reverently raised. Involuntarily Cressy drew the little motherless one closer to her, and throw her arm caressingly around her slight figure, and the child quite content, stood without speaking, staring with her soft hand, the head of her new friend, until her quick ear caught the sound of a familiar footstep.

"It is papa!" she cried joyfully, and bounded away. Cressy gazed earnestly after her. She saw her approach at last, elegant looking man, who stooped, and lifted her in his arms, and in an instant her heart told her that it was Leicester. Cressy, no longer Cressy, but Miss Carroll, had not lived the last six years in vain. The keenest eye could not have detected the slightest change of expression on her noble face, when, at the entreaties of his child Mr. Leicester suffered her to lead him quite up to the two ladies. Mrs. Carroll arose with a smile, and an outstretched, friendly hand,—she had evidently met him before. Then she presented him to Miss Carroll.

"I never mentioned Mr. Leicester to you," think, my dear," she said, "I had the pleasure of meeting him at _____, two years since, before you returned from school, and then apparently without effort she directed the conversation to him, while Nellie stood beside Cressy playing with the flowers that, still lay on her hands.

"Nellie is not well," said her father, anxiously. "I am trying the waters for her, but I cannot see that they benefit her. She seems like a fading flower to me," he added in a tremulous tone.

At the same moment a respectable elderly woman drew near, and beckoned for the child to come with her, but she looked pleadingly up in Cressy's face.

"If you would only come up stairs with me, and hear me say 'Our Father,'" she whispered, half afraid that her request would be denied, but Cressy took the proffered hand, and followed the nurse up to Nellie's quiet little room. Speedily the little one was dressed for her slumbers, and then her tiny feet pattered over the carpet to Cressy's side, where she knelt, and with clasped hands, lisped her evening prayer. Cressy felt her eyes filling with tears, as the low breathed words, from those pure young lips, fell upon her ear. "Oh, weary, weary days that had passed since she knelt at her father's knees, and whispered 'Our Father.'" Softly she laid her hand on the bowed head of the child, and felt that if a life like hers lay before her, how much better it would be, could she be taken now from the world, while the dew of innocence and love were still fresh on her young spirit. Then in a low tremulous voice, she began to sing, while Nellie held her hand fast, and looked in her face with an expression of deep affection.

"Do you love me?" she asked, after awhile.

"Very much," said Cressy.

"Will you take care of me while I stay here?"

"How long will that be?" enquired Cressy.

"Not very—I don't know—just how long—then I'm going to Heaven." "I will try and be very good and patient, if you will only hear my prayers, and sing when I go to sleep." "I do love you so much," and then laying her soft cheek on Cressy's hand, she soon fell into a troubled slumber; and as Cressy noted the feverish flush on her pale cheek, the short, and apparently painfully drawn breath, and the hot, dry hand that even in sleep clasped hers, she felt that Nellie was indeed a fading flower, and would soon bloom in the heavenly gardens.

Days passed away, and the child was almost always with Mrs. Carroll and Cressy. It was impossible not to love her, she was so affectionate and gentle, and winning in her ways. Cressy would permit no engagement to interfere with the hour given to Nellie when she retired to rest; for she was learning from those childish lips to put her faith in the Heavenly Father,—and how sweet seemed such a faith to her restless heart. The little one, loosed to talk of Jesus Christ, and often Cressy would read to her the sweet story of his life, and while the words came like balm to her own spirit.

Oh, those quiet hours passed at the bedside of that child, whose footsteps were even her pressing the threshold of Heaven, and whose pure brow was lighted by its ineffable glory, were worth her whole life time.

Mr. Leicester throwa much in the way of Cressy, acknowledged her rare loveliness, and the new charm that now lit up her face soon won his heart. "Helen," had been to him like a beautiful toy that amused him in his leisure hours, and he deeply admired her; but he felt that she had never been to him like what Cressida Carroll might be—a chamber of his inmost life, aspiring like himself towards everything good and true, and beautiful. Helen had been a petted child, basking her head in time of trouble, and leading on him for support. Cressida would be a true, firm friend, at the storm of adversity, and so he told her the story of his true and earnest love, and waited for her reply. In low, fine tones it came, and Fred Leicester went forth from her presence under the solemn stars, and threw himself down on the damp ground, his love rejected while Cressy sought her room and wept bitter tears of anguish.

It was past midnight, yet still she sat by the open window, when a hasty knock at the door was followed by the agitated voice of Nellie's nurse.

"Will you come to Nellie, Miss," she said, "I think she is dying." In an instant Cressy was at the bedside. The child looked intently on her face. "I am so glad you are here," she whispered. The father, almost heart-broken, knelt with his face buried in the pillow, but Cressy heeded him not, though she knelt beside him, and wound her arm around the child's little figure.

"Will you read to me 'The Lord is my Shepherd'?" papa can't," she whispered again, Cressy opened the Bible, but when she came to the words "When I walk through the Valley and the Shadow of Death, I will fear no evil," her voice faltered. She paused and hid her face, but Nellie's weak, sweet voice went on "for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

"Can you sing to me a little?" she asked, after a pause, and Cressy sang, but her voice faltered no longer. When she ceased, Nellie thanked her, and taking her hand she put it in her father's, and clasped them in both her own. Then silence reigned in the room for hours, broken not, until the little one whispered very faintly, "I love you." There was a fluttering of the young heart, a slight gasping for breath, and Nellie Leicester was with the angels in Heaven. Gentle fingers shut the waxen lids over the blue eyes, and laid pale blossoms in the small hands; and in after years, as in that hour of deep anguish, Cressy thanked God that the little one had lived, and been known to her.

But under this new trial the poor father sunk, and for many days lay in a delicious fever. Mrs. Carrol and Cressy watched with Beasy by his side, for Cressy had forgotten everything now, save that Leicester was the first one who was a friend to her, when she was friendless—that he had taught her first to know herself, and that after all her lonely life he loved her now, and now perhaps might die. Day and night she was beside him, holding to his lips the cooling draught, or fanning his burning brow, watching every change that passed over the face of the physician, for a ray of hope. At length the fever reached its crisis, and Leicester would recover. Then Cressy stole away to her room, and thanked God, while soft, refreshing tears rained down her pale cheeks.

"Cressy!" said Leicester, one morning, as she laid down a book from which she had been reading aloud. She started and trembled. The tone as he spoke her name brought back the old memories to her heart.

"Did you think I did not know you all this time?" he continued, fixing his eyes full on her face. "The evening little Nellie brought me to you, the first time I saw you I knew you to love me. He paused, and now Cressy came and knelt down beside him. She took his hands in hers, and bowed her face upon them, and again he felt the hot tears fall as they did years since, when Cressy stood beside him on the bridge, near the red school house. Cressy was a true woman after all, and Fred Leicester was happy once more.

worthy to receive it by the Committee, but may take a second, third or fourth, where as many are offered in their class—at the discretion of the Committee, or if unworthy of any, no premium will be awarded.

Statements will be required of those who enter yearlings and calves, as to how they have been reared and their age in months. Animals deemed worthy will receive no premiums unless satisfactory written statements are furnished where required by the rules above inserted.

In all cases where it is found that animals entitled to the first premium, have been received the same at any former Exhibition of the Society, a Diploma certifying that said animal is the best, shall be awarded instead of the premium—the Diploma of the Society shall be awarded at the discretion of the several Committees, for animals exhibited from without the limits of the Society.

Entries for premiums on Crops must be made with the Secretary on, or before the first Monday in January, and written statements furnished under oath, embracing the following particulars.

First, a description of the soil, mentioning the previous crop, and the amount of crop, with a detailed statement of the manner of cultivation with quantity and quality of manure.

Second, time and depth of plowing, with mode of cultivation preparatory to sowing or planting, time of sowing or planting, with amount and manner of preparing seed, time and method of applying manure, with quantity and quality, time and manner of weeding, cultivating and harvesting, and the amount of crop, stating what is sound, clean and merchantable and what is refuse.

Third, the entire cost of cultivation and the total value of crop.
This cost of cultivation must include the following items, viz: cost of plowing and preparing land for seed, value of all fertilizing materials used upon the land, cost of applying the same, cost of planting or sowing, of weeding, cultivating and harvesting the crop—that by a single glance the net profit of the production may be seen.

Marshals.—B. Sawtelle, Charles R. McFadden, John Parker and Ashur H. Barlow.

The Marshals are requested to be on the ground early on the morning of the Show to give directions in regard to animals, and articles, and so that they are arranged in their places by 10 o'clock A. M., so that the Committees may commence their examinations at that hour.

Committees are requested to be present early on the morning of the 2d, and receive from the Secretary, William Dyer, a list of the entries, together with the accompanying certificates.

T. S. LANG, Moderator.
JACOB W. BRITTON, Secretary.
ERIK PRAY, Treasurer.

JOSIAH MORRELL, JOSIAH MORRELL, BRADFORD SAWTELLE, and others.

ARRANGEMENTS BY THE COM. All animals must be in the places assigned them by the Marshals before 10 o'clock on the morning of the 2d, and competitors for premiums must be with the animals and remain by them, until the committees have finished their examinations.

They will furnish a number for each article, which must be permanent, attached.

3d. Ladies are particularly invited to add to the interest of the occasion by presenting specimens of their handiwork free of any charge for entry or membership.

4th. It is expected that all committees on stock will report themselves promptly to the Marshals who will show them the animals to be examined by the respective committees.

Also, the committees on articles at the Hall will be in session at 2 o'clock and close their examination on the first day of the Show and spectators will not be admitted while the committees are making their examinations.

The Hall of exhibition will be opened to the public at 9 o'clock on the morning of the 4th and an admission fee of ten cents will be charged each person, excepting members of the Society and exhibitors with their families.

The proprietors of Ticonic and Winslow Bridges have authorized us to say that stock and articles for the Show, together with the necessary drivers may pass to and from the Show free of toll.

An address will be delivered before the Society at the Baptist Meeting House at 2 o'clock Wednesday, to which the ladies are invited to listen, after which the adjoining committees will report their awards and such other business be transacted as may properly come before the Society.

May will be furnished on the Show Ground for the stock.

FIRE.—Our village had a singular escape from an extensive conflagration, on Monday evening last. The old stable in the rear of the building formerly known as the "Ticonic House," adjoining Appleton Hall, were entirely consumed; while the efficient and well directed energies of the fire department prevented the extension of the flames to the adjoining buildings.

So rapid and ravenous was the conflagration that the neighboring roofs were enveloped in a shower of coal and flames; fire having been kindled on the roof of the storehouse in the rear of Boutelle Block, and others nearly as distant. The engines were promptly at work, and their efforts began to tell.

Waterville No. 3 should be marked clear of debt, having unquestionably paid for herself in the protection of property. "Old Ticonic" fell into good hands, well maintaining her ancient renown, and giving assurance that in such hands she will find few competitors.

But the main point of danger, and one that excited strong indignation, especially among the firemen, was the fact that a large quantity of gunpowder was stored in the stable. Fortunately those who first took the alarm were made aware of this fact, and the powder was removed—when a single minute would have put it beyond reach, and insured a terrible destruction of life and property.

That such was not the result is no exculpation of the offence; and the person upon whom the guilt rests should be marked, not only legally, but socially, as too reckless of the lives and property of others to enjoy social rights and privileges like other men. The law imposes a heavy penalty for the offence, and the offender, if found, should be made an example for future security.

As a special offence against the lives of the firemen, whose duties always throw them in the front of danger, it may well excite their indignation. A combination of lay and rum, with the associates generally drawn in by the latter element, need not the aid of gunpowder to render them sufficiently dangerous to property and life. They proved so in this instance; though the result, in the hand of God, was rendered less calamitous than at first appeared inevitable.

A letter from St. Petersburg of Aug. 10th, in the Press of Vienna, says Count Nesselrode continues to manifest a strong desire for peace, and he has frequent conferences with the Emperor, whose illness is almost at an end. The report received by the Emperor, of the state of the Russian armies in the Principality, is very unfavorable. They are described as having neither subordination or discipline, and were nearly in a state of dissolution.

A letter from Varna of Aug. 9th, says that it had been finally decided, as a result of war, that the expedition to the Crimea should be proceeded with, and all Varna was in a state of excitement.

Relative to the sickness among the troops at Varna, which is the most serious matter for the Allies at present; the Varna correspondent of the London Times, under date of Varna, Aug. 1, says: "The mortality among the troops is considerable, and sometimes the victims succumb with fearful rapidity."

The hospitals are so full, the writer adds, that many die without proper medical attention, and many who desire the presence of the chaplain or priest in their dying moments are denied that consolation, the calls are so numerous.

Under date of August 4th he says: "The cholera continues." The 5th Regiment lost 9 men last night. The general officers seem also to be ailing. Prince Napoleon, it is thought, will have to return home to save his life.

The Duke of Cambridge has an attack of the gout, and Lord Ross will have to return home, being quite low from an attack of fever.

The Paris Mobilizer of the 20th, innumerable allied troops at the East, address. The influence of the epidemic makes itself felt all over.

The army of the enemy is still more severely smitten than our own; for during the retreat, towards the Pruth, the Russians convey with them 24,000 sick.

The Dobrucha is covered with the dead bodies of the Russians, the dead have become pestiferous, and the French corps was obliged to return to Varna.

AGAIN A WIFE'S TESTIMONY. RECORDED AGAINST HER HUSBAND. There is one point involved in one case, before the police court, John L. Brown was arrested, a day or two since, for a felonious assault upon Ann E. Dougherty. Since that time the complainant and accused have got married, and when the case came up this morning, Mr. Park, counsel for Mr. Brown, offered evidence of the fact, holding that a wife could not testify against her husband, and that therefore the accused should be discharged. The court was in doubt what course to pursue, and postponed the case for consultation. Finally the District Attorney came in and not pros' the case, when Mr. Brown was discharged.

A similar case occurred at Salem a few years since, where a person charged capitally with a like assault, married the complainant on the day before the trial, when the case was dismissed on the ground that a wife could not testify against her husband.—Boston Traveler, 3d inst.

TERrible ACCIDENT.—We were informed late last evening, that two ladies were instantly killed at Canastota, this side of Syracuse, by being run over by the express train which reached here at 7 o'clock last evening. It appears that a mail train was standing at Canastota, in which the two ladies were passengers, and that they got out of the cars on the wrong side, at the very moment the express train came along, under full speed. They were both horribly mangled. One of them who

FACT, FUN, AND FANCY.

A GOOD DAY'S WORK.—Messrs J. D. Lang & Son recently sawed, at their steam saw mill on their farm in Vassalboro, nineteen thousand two hundred and seventy-five feet of lumber, with a single up-and-down saw, in one day, between sunrise and sunset. The lumber was pine and sawed into door-stuff. If our lumbering friends have performed a greater feat we shall be glad to make record of the fact.

FIRE IN KATADIN.—Among the prevailing fires, we learn that at Katadin recently, the coal house of the Iron Works Company, together with several thousand barrels of coal, were consumed by the devouring element. Estimated loss $4000. The burning coals were represented as looking like a mountain of fire.

STRENGTH AND POWER OF IDEAS.—The Doctor, a great Webster hater, was sitting upon "Matt's" bench, talking about Webster, as was his custom. "Ralph," Walden Emerson's ideas said he, "will live forever, while Webster's ideas will die with him." Emerson's ideas have force, have power, but not so with Webster's. "That's a lie," said "Matt," and you know it. "If one of Daniel Webster's big thoughts got into Ralph Walden Emerson's head, it would split open like a plover with ice in it." Now get off that bench, for you can't say anything more against "Old Dan" in this shop. [Lowell Couriers.]

RESPECT TO THE DEAD IN PARIS.—A common practice in Paris, which impresses a stranger unfavorably, is that of observing or taking off the hats at funeral processions. This is observed by all classes. A little while since, (says a writer,) I noticed a small funeral train moving in the direction of the Madeleine. Evidently the one borne to burial was of the humblest class, for the body was followed only by a few workmen in blue, and women without bonnets. As it passed on, hats were taken off by the well-dressed crowd, and the pain removed. The gentlemen in carriages with footmen in gold, and liveries, and by men driving their water cars through the street. It was a touching and beautiful sight. [Exchange.]

CRAMP.—Those who may be subject in the night-time to that excruciating pain called cramp, will be doubtless glad to learn that by trying any kind of bandage very tightly round the leg immediately above the knee, this unpleasant sensation will be removed. Another remedy—excite the action of the lungs by breathing forcibly and taking long respirations; by this means the whole system will be excited, and perhaps in less than a minute the disorder will be abated and the pain removed. [Exchange.]

ENIGMA. What word is there in the English language, and is common use, which will describe a person, or thing as not to be found in any place, and yet, without any other alteration than a separation of the syllables, will describe him as being at the same place at the same moment? Answer—Nowhere! Nowhere!

BOARD OF WEST.—Travelers dismount at a tavern. "Landlord, can I get lodgings here to-night?" "Landlord—No, sir; every room in the house is engaged. Traveler—Can't you give me a blanket, and a bunch of shavings for a pillow for my horse?" "Landlord—No, sir; there's not a square foot of space unoccupied anywhere in the house."

SARAS REMINDING SER.—The Richmond Enquirer who zealously supports slavery and the domestic slave trade, is very indignant at the revival of the Gir. cause here, which it pronounces infamous and inhuman!

IN JOWA, STRANGE TO SAY, the farmers are complaining of too much rain. Crops have been injured by wet weather.

ANCIENT POSTMASTER.—Gen. Joseph Locke, of Bloomfield Me., was appointed Postmaster in 1811, and has continued in office ever since.

JULIUS CAESAR HANDBART, giving an account of his voyage, says "All was going well, and the weather, and as it was not enough, he gave orders for the ship to leave, and it has since."

SMITH O'BRIEN.—The family of Mr. W. Smith O'Brien received a letter from that gentleman, dated the last week in May, from Van Dieman's Land, when he was preparing to avail himself of Her Majesty's gracious pardon and leave the colony for Europe. Mrs. Smith O'Brien and other relatives will meet the liberated exile at Brussels, where it is probable that he will reside; and we have the pleasure of informing his countrymen that Mr. O'Brien accepted with the best feelings his sovereign's spontaneous clemency in remission of the penalty for a political offence. [Limerick Chronicle, Aug. 12.]

EVERY WORD TRUE.—The Rev. Mr. Patton of Hartford, a contributor to the N. England Herald, has the following just remarks touching the system of credit on newspapers: "It is our personal opinion that no newspaper should be sent on credit. Advance payment is the only reasonable plan, and to that it will sooner or later come. If a man is allowed to travel on a rail car, steamboat, or coach, or to enter a concert room or other public exhibition, without first paying the stipulated price, much more should subscribers, scattered all over the country, and owing a few dollars each for a paper, be required to pay the cash down."

The Capital of Nebraska has been already laid out. It is called Omaha, on the western bank of the Missouri, opposite the town of Council Bluffs, with which it is connected by a ferry. The site is arranged is about a mile and a half long, by a mile wide, and contains 1500 lots. The streets are to be over 100 ft. wide. A large square is designed as the site of the capitol. A number of streams flow through this site, and below the platform thus laid out, lies some heavily timbered ground and prairie suitable for agriculture stretch away in the distance. There are few houses in Omaha, as yet, but when the emigrants begin to arrive, it is thought the houses will be run up rapidly. [Lowell Courier.]

CAUTION IN REGARD TO CHOLERA.—Among the deaths reported to-day, of cholera, is that of a young man named George Emery. In this case it is stated that he was affected with a slight diarrhoea, for which he very incautiously took a dose of salts. With the first operation of the medicine he was attacked with cramps, and in a short time died. [Trav.]

Dr. Orestes A. Bronson has accepted the Professorship extended to him by the Irish University at Dublin. He is at present preparing his first course of Lectures. The salary is about $3,000. His "Review" will be continued. [Baltimore Sun.]

The heirs of Augustine and George Law, of Loudoun county, Va., have offered to sell free 50 slaves, valued at $300,000, provided the American Colonization Society will send them to Liberia, and make the usual provision for them after their arrival out. Some of them have husbands and wives belonging to other masters, and efforts are about being made to secure their freedom also, so that there shall be no separation of families.

Fix.—On Sunday afternoon, the dwelling house of Josiah Richardson, of Auburn, together with the barn and other buildings, all the hay and grain—a large portion of the farming utensils, and about one-half the household goods, were entirely destroyed by fire. Loss estimated at $600—no insurance.

The above was the work of an incendiary—a town charge, who has since confessed.

The Boston Mail tells a tale of a French butler in a Beacon street family, who was poisoned by drinking some wine in which the master and mistress of the house had placed tartar of antimony, with the intention of punishing those who stole the wine. The butler did not steal any, but was asked to drink some by the cook. He is now seriously ill, and has commenced a suit for $50,000.

TEXAS AND THE MAINE LAW.—At her recent election Texas decided almost unanimously for the Maine Law. This is old Sam Houston's work. He is a thorough Temperance man and a public advocate of the principles of the Maine Law.

SENATOR DOUGLAS made an unsuccessful attempt to explain away the odium of the Nebraska bill, on Saturday, among his own people at Chicago. They refused absolutely to hear him, and succeeded, without violence or riot, in compelling him to withdraw ignominiously from the gathering of the people, to meditate, in the retirement of his hotel, upon the chances of political gambling.

A PRACTICAL VIEW OF THE QUESTION.—A correspondent of the N. Y. Express gives the following estimate of the value of a picture by Raphael in the Dresden Gallery:

There is a great Raphael here, a Madonna in the Dresden gallery, which has a madonna value—I am afraid to say how much, but forty thousand dollars at the least. Now dear as this is, thought I, it is not a bad speculation for a city or State. Artists here are taken of it, on wax, composition, porcelain, and everything else. It is an investment to scatter world-wide, bringing so much to enrich, and to employ the people of Dresden. Is it a bad investment? then? I ask only as a calculating American. If it were in the rotunda of the Capitol at Washington, I have not a doubt that it would pay 10 per cent. on the investment to the City of Washington.

POSTSCRIPT.

A FINE RAIN, commencing with a heavy thunder shower about 4 o'clock yesterday, has continued with little interruption till near 8 this morning. A great amount has fallen, and everybody and everything seems to rejoice and thank God.

POLITICS. Hon. W. B. S. Moor made a brief address to the old-line democracy last evening, at Town Hall. His declared object was to bestow a castigation upon the back of Mr. Morrill; but to accomplish this he was drawn into a pretty thorough shaking of cats out of the party bag. A scene of "bargain and corruption" was disclosed from which Mr. Moor himself professed to recoil now that it was past, though he acknowledged shoring in at the time. He said he knew it to be a fact that Mr. Pillsbury received his nomination only as the postscript to a written contract in which he promised to turn Mr. Morrill out of the Land Agency and appoint a certain other man in his place. Nor was this the only removal contracted for among these self-appointed wirepullers for the people. But when Morrill's strength against Pillsbury became to show itself, it seemed expedient to trade a little further, and Mr. Moor went and submitted to Mr. Morrill the terms on which the latter was to "lay back" in his opposition. Mr. Moor did not detail to the audience these terms, but left them to infer that he proposed to strike from the Pillsbury contract the article providing for Morrill's removal from the Land Office. Morrill refused to trade, and the war has waxed hotter and hotter to the present day.

Whether Gen. Moor is aware that the disclosures he makes are the basis on which the people are rallying against the old party hacks who have heretofore led them and bargained for them, he did not say; but we assure him that while the party leaders are playing the farce of "The Cat out of the Bag" in this manner, the honest voters are quietly and noiselessly feeling for the strings, and will soon turn the filthy sack of abominations wrong side out. In the mean time they thank him for his generous aid in opening their eyes.

ATTENTION. Those persons who have agreed, in writing, to unite in forming an independent company for the purpose of working the Fire Engine "Ticonic"—namely, the D. L. Miliken, Harrison Barrett, Stephen Stark, Ben. N. Harris, F. B. Blanchard, J. M. Crocker, W. A. F. Stevens, Wm. G. Otis, William Moor, David Shorey, Stephen Frye, I. S. Craig, J. S. Carter, John L. Seavey, William Getchell, T. W. Herrick, N. R. Boutelle, H. Nourse, E. Coffin, J. P. Hill, are hereby notified to meet at Ticonic Engine House, on Friday evening, Sept. 8th, at 7 1/2 o'clock, for the purpose of organizing said company.

NOTICES.
CARD.
R. PLAISTED sends his kind respects to the Fire Department of Waterville for their prompt and efficient exertions in saving his buildings from burning on Monday night last. He has no doubt but that their great exertions secured not only his buildings, but a large part of the business part of our Village from the devouring element.
Waterville, Sept. 6, 1854. R. PLAISTED.

LYON'S KATHARON.
The Katharon neutralizes the effects of disease, climate, and old age, in preserving and restoring the human hair even after a lapse of many years. It changes the scalp from diseased and all its impurities—will cure the Nervous Headache, and all Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, and is the most desirable article for the hair. It is applied to the hair of the head, and the hair grows again, and the hair of the face, and the hair of the body, and the hair of the arms, and the hair of the legs, and the hair of the feet, and the hair of the hands, and the hair of the fingers, and the hair of the toes, and the hair of the nails, and the hair of the skin, and the hair of the face, and the hair of the body, and the hair of
