LIKE THE Robinson bibliography in the Colby Library Quarterly, Series VII, pp. 1-26, March 1965, this one is a further supplement to Charles Beecher Hogan's A Bibliography of Edwin Arlington Robinson (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1936) and Hogan's own supplement in the 1941 Papers of the Bibliographical Society of America. As usual, my organization and style are not that of the MLA Style Sheet but follow Hogan's. On the basis of the material listed here — and I hope I have not missed too many items — I should like to echo Brom Weber and James Woodress's comment in the 1967 annual American Literary Scholarship (Durham: Duke University Press, 1969), p. 221, that "one might tentatively predict an upturn in his [Robinson's] critical fortunes." At any rate, he is far from a wholly neglected poet, and many of us feel he will continue in favor with readers and critics of American letters.
