CONTRIBUTORS TO THIS ISSUE

JANE F. LEVEY (1960–1999) was a Ph.D. candidate in American Studies at Yale University, where she taught courses in women's and cultural history. Her article is excerpted from her nearly completed doctoral dissertation, which explored the restructuring of gender relations in the American family in the years after World War II.

MARGARET MCFADDEN is Assistant Professor of American Studies at Colby College. She has published articles on radio and film comedy, and her book "Anything Goes": Representations of Gender in 1930s Comedy is forthcoming from the University of North Carolina Press.

MATTHEW MURRAY is currently Producer at the Center for the Advancement of Distance Education at the University of Illinois at Chicago. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin-Madison and has published several articles on censorship and U.S. radio and television history.

KATHLEEN NEWMAN is an Assistant Professor in the English department at Carnegie-Mellon University. She is the author of numerous scholarly articles and writes a biweekly media analysis column for the Pittsburgh City Paper.

Her book Critical Mass: Advertising, Audiences, and Consumer Activism in the Age of Radio is forthcoming from the University of California Press.

STEPHAN PROCK received his doctorate from Cornell University and teaches composition at The College of William and Mary. Currently, he is working on a book on music and difference in American cinema of the 1950s.
